Council Hears Update on Post Office; Problems of Zipper Use

by Barbara Hopkins

In addition to celebrating the ACE student award winners as reported in a recent issue of the News Review and honoring city employees with the ACE Award, the Greenbelt City Council focused its attention Monday, May 12, on reviewing the final site plan for the new post office and discussing changes to the Zipcar program.

Post Office Update

Present at the meeting to go over the final site plan for the new post office were Jack Gustafsson, project manager and Constantine Seremetis, architect, from the firm of Burt Hill Kosar Gustafsson, project manager and Constantine Seremetis, architect, from the firm of Burt Hill Kosar Rittelmann Associates and Kirsten Ward of the city’s planning department. The plan has received all necessary approvals but was brought before council to update members on the plan and provide an opportunity for discussion of any remaining concerns with Postal Service representatives. Council had objected to the initial use of some of the developed area on the buffer zone between the post office and the adjacent community of Windsor Green that had been in the previous site plan.

While the final site plan showed a completely undeveloped buffer of trees between the post office and Windsor Green, Mayor Judith Davis asked for an explanation on the necessity of removing the trees that would be covered. Seremetis explained that the site contains a steep hillside that should be graded to stabilize the soil and protect the adjacent parking lot. The alternative, building a retaining wall, was deemed too expensive by the Postal Service.

In response to concerns expressed by Councilmember Alan Turnbull about protecting the bioretention areas from future changes, Gustafsson said the Postal Service would provide training so that employees would know that the vegetation serves to absorb rainwater. Seremetis said that the vegetation through the project has been chosen for its ability to survive without care. Gustafsson added that it is their plan “to leave the area better than we found it.”

Gustafsson noted that the Postal Service had some concerns in the beginning that “too many trees” were required and that people would have trouble finding the post office. Davis assured him with a smile that “people are standing on the corner right now with mail in their hands,” ready to use the new postal facility.

When asked about a projected completion date, Gustafsson responded that the plans were approved by the Postal Service, construction had not yet begun and the budget for the project was at headquarters pending.

Parent Pack the Houses to See School Kids' Creative Projects

by Mary Molen

The Greenbelt Elementary School staff and PTA hosted the annual multi-cultural dinner at the school on April 9. In addition each class displayed Expeditionary Learning Outward Bound projects they had been working on. To encourage parents and students to come out and see the displays, a Bingo card was designed. Bingo squares contained a block for each exhibit and families had to get a stamp at each exhibit before lining up for dinner.

The president of the PTA, Tara Twibell informed families that 350 adults and children participated in the event. The buffet tables were groaning with food and people were eating at tables, on the stage and on the floor, while the line to get in snaked around the halls.

The school halls were also packed with children and parents examining projects at each class room. Posters and tables were signed. Bingo squares contained the names of students to visit all of the displays.

First graders were working on recycling and how they can help the earth. When asked what first graders know about recycling, Deborah Kendall, a first grade teacher, commented that children are “born with it (recycling knowledge) these days.” We used to have to teach it, but now we just enrich it.” Their displays included the use of recycled paper and recycled paper, turned into cutout pictures as well as writing papers that began with “I can do things to help save the earth . . . .”

Director Carol Leventhal Retires from CARES Post

by Judy Bell

Karen Leventhal, CARES first director, psychologist and longtime Greenbelt resident, announced in a recent issue of the News Review that she is retiring. Leventhal will retire on June 30.

CARIES first director, psychologist and longtime Greenbelt resident, Leo Walder brought Leventhal into the program on September 5, 1973, a date she recalls easily since it’s the same date as her wedding anniversary. Leventhal and her husband, Allan, had met Walder at the University of Iowa in the 1950s where Walder was teaching and the Leventhals were both students. Leventhal received a masters in social work in May of 1973. Walder subsequently recruited her for CARES for a 20-year career in the human services.

History

During the sixty years Walder developed a parent-training program that has been the subject of published research done by Don Pomeroy at the University of Maryland. Meanwhile Allan Leventhal had moved on from Iowa to the University of Maryland to do postgraduate work. He and Pomeroy recruited Walder to come to Maryland.

Soon after coming east Walder began to test out his training program at Crownsville State Hospital. When federal money became available for a prevention program, Walder wrote a proposal to develop a program based on the research done by Pomeroy. And top off Friday evening with the Greenbelt Arts Center with a...
THANKS!

I wanted to take a few moments to say goodbye to all those that I have served with for over the last 25 plus years in the Greenbelt Police Department. I have tried to serve all with dignity and with compassion with an eye toward the future of our great city. I am retiring as of May 31, 2003.

I thank all of you for your support, not only myself but our great police department. It is appreciated. I am also hoping the remaining members of the department will continue to serve in an exemplary manner so that they continue to earn that support.

I will miss my fellow officers as well as the citizens. Most especially I will miss the special feeling this city has inspired in us all. I will carry the memories of my time here in my heart and in my mind forever and will cherish these thoughts.

I will be leaving, if all goes well. I am sure, and for now I want to thank all the citizens that have had to serve you and wish all of you happiness and prosperity in the future.

May God bless you all.

Obituaries

Joan Conway
Joan Marie Heffner Conway died on May 21, 2003. Born on September 8, 1912 in Baltimore to Mildred and Lawrence Heffner, she grew up in Larchmont and Sudbrook Park, suburbs outside of Baltimore City. Joan graduated from Franklin High School in Reisterstown and from George Washington University with a B.A. in sociology.

While working at Mount Wilson Observatory, she met and married Jerry Conway, who was a patient there. In 1958 she married Jerry and they moved to Greenbelt. Jerry died in 1995. Throughout her life in Greenbelt, Joan took part in and was active in many community activities, most recently the Golden Agers. She also enjoyed gathering with her many Greenbelt friends at Joe’s in the Green Mill Road. During the 1950s, she taught at Greenbelt Center School for several years and in the 1960s, she substituted there.

Joan had a beautiful voice and sang with several choirs as a young woman. She also sang at the Cherry Blossom Festival in Washington. She especially enjoyed the out of doors and nature, particularly her azaleas on their property. They returned to Greenbelt and lived at 1D Woodland Way. Her daughter remembers that her mother had a hard time adjusting to the weather and temperature in Damascus, Maryland where she lived.

Joan attended Greenbelt Community Church, where she was a member for many years. She was active in the church and her daughter remembers that her mother looked out the window and saying, “not a leaf moved!”

Mrs. Newton did secretarial work for the Navy Department and for the Department of Agriculture in the 1940s.

In 1951 the family moved to Silver Spring. For two years in the 1960s they lived in Bonn, West Germany where her husband was posted by the State Department. The Newtons had recently celebrated their 71st wedding anniversary.

Mrs. Newton is survived by her husband Earl, 91, of Goodwin House; three children, Connie Randolph of Herndon, James Newton of Bakerton, W.V., and Robert Newton of Berlin; five grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Interment was at King David Memorial Gardens.

Riverdale Cookery Features Preserves

Mrs. Benton, author of the definitive 19th century cookery book, stressed “fruit is a most important item in the economy of health, the epicurean can scarcely be said to have any luxuries without it, therefore, as it is so invaluable, when we cannot have it fresh, it must be preserved.” In the days before modern transportation and food preservation, the mistress of an estate such as Riverdale had to plan carefully to preserve fresh fruits as they came into season. On June 1 from noon to 3:30 p.m., members of the Riverdale Kitchen Guild will explain how to prepare strawberries using a variety of period recipes and the open hearth of the re-created dependency kitchen.

There is a fee which includes a guided tour of the house. Riverdale is located at 4811 Riverside Road, Riverdale Park. For more information, call 301-864-0420,TTY 301-699-2544, website www.pgparks.com.

The Greenbelt News Review
proposal for funding and went to the county government, they were unwill- ing to get their backing. The county executive refused to sign a letter detailing the "money" for signing; some time later the executive went to jail.

Around the same time a juve- nile was involved in a crime committed at the former Twin Nile. Walder, Greenbelters James Cuscel and John Kroebbler implored him to get involved in something different” to help this young person and others like him. Walder cast the application for federal funds to which he was entitled. The County Com- mittee was interested in supplemental funds.

The county making up the remainder of the bulk of the funding for the program was to be the newly-formed Juvenile Services Bureau. The Bureau became a city agency when the City of Greenbelt was incorporated in the middle of the summer building addition where they are currently housed, was being built. They moved into their present home in 1978.

When Leventhal was first in- troduced to the program’s concept – many families meeting on a regular basis in the same room – she was “shocked” by it. She now says that for many people to hear others who have brought a child in for help “laugh in a proactive way – that there was an opportunity to learn.”

Leventhal remembered Walder saying, “If you go for treatment for a broken arm, why not go for the broken heart? What’s the shame?” Of Leventhal, Walder says, “She’s a classy human being with a high profile, warm, soft touch. She’s held on to the scientific basis of the program and has done a wonderful, wonderful job.”

School Counseling

CARES’ staff was always interested in running groups and began early on doing in-school therapy groups. At some point, either the school system sought CARES out or vice versa. Leventhal couldn’t recall which event caused which. She remembers the elementary school and the local schools love us,” she explained. Leventhal wants CARES to continue to thrive. She reports there has been little turnover since she replaced her former Director. The City now provides the bulk of the funding for CARES, with the state and county making up the remainder in support and "much stronger”

When asked how the depart- ment has changed over the years, Leventhal stated that it is a “much stronger program, more organized and efficient.” It has always been a knowledge and resource program with the basic concept being “to help people understand how behaviour gets them into trouble and how to change it.” She said the goal was “to increase positive be- haviour and decrease negative behav- iour,” has not changed, Leventhal claimed.

Giese, commented “Once Leventhal became director, the CARES program became a smooth-running operation. While Leo Walder’s professional reputation was founded on the enthusiasm of many professionally-trained vol- unteers who support the counseling program, Leventhal’s own professional capability has en- abled the program to continue surviving and utilizing quality pro- fessionals.

A Greenbelt Gardener

May be the main time to plant the sum- mer garden. This year’s prolonged cool weather and fre- quent rains have slowed the planting process.

Some people don’t like all this rain as it makes much more to plant than usual.

Last year at this time

I decided to greatly reduce what I planted because of the dryness that turned into a drought as the season progressed. Drought

A week longer and a lot of plant would not have made it through the season.

Gardening by the Calendar

A new season means a test for many people who are trying to get their gardens started. The local climate (and maybe even the local gardener) can be a surprise to many. Many people who moved here from the southern states are in for a shock when they look at their own gardens and see nothing is starting to grow. The fact is that in most climates, although there may be some exceptions, it is better to start the garden later and not try to get it started too early. The climate is still too cold or the soil is still too wet. It is better to start the garden later in the season when the weather is more settled and the soil is more settled.

Gardening by the Calendar

The rainy weather provides the homeowner with the opportunity to see where drainage problems and low spots need to be fixed. Some people may think that it is too late to start the garden but this is not true. It is much easier to start the garden when it is dry and easy to work with. The garden can be started in the fall and the plants will need to be started in the spring.

A new season means a test for many people who are trying to get their gardens started. The local climate (and maybe even the local gardener) can be a surprise to many. Many people who moved here from the southern states are in for a shock when they look at their own gardens and see nothing is starting to grow. The fact is that in most climates, although there may be some exceptions, it is better to start the garden later and not try to get it started too early. The climate is still too cold or the soil is still too wet. It is better to start the garden later in the season when the weather is more settled and the soil is more settled.

New Member on GHI Board; All Elections Are Uncontested

by Mary Moen

Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI) held its annual meeting on May 21. A very large crowd was present perhaps due to the anticipated discussion of changes in the manner in which monthly charges are calculated. In an uncontested race, incumbents Joyce Ahel, Julia Glick, Chuck Hess and Susan Ready were re-elected in the GHI Board of Directors. Newcomer Barry Byers was also elected to the board.

Monica Auerbach, James Breyer and Darlene Romanowski were elected to the Audit Committee. Longtime board member Betty Deitch and audit committee member Sheila Alpers were recognized for their dedication to the cooperative.

Candidates

Although all candidates were assured of election, each was still given time to speak to the members. Byers, a Greenbelt policeman, emphasized that his “door is always open” to members to discuss either GHI or law enforcement issues. Eichhorst, who has been the president of the board, emphasized GHI’s good financial standing.

Several expressed concern about the upcoming retirement of the 25-year-old rehab loan. About one-third of the audience raised their hands indicating that they had lived in GHI at the time rehab began. Ready indicated that she was the last to declare her candidacy. She had not planned on running again, stating “I am not ready to battle for the seat.”

Deitch mentioned that their guard patch was “hit the beach” on D-Day. He indicated that the 29th was the only National Guard division to survive.” Many members were thanked for their work and others were “inequitable ... and impossible to explain.”

Lewis indicated that GHI will be holding town meetings during the summer to discuss these changes with members. Although the total fees collected will not change, the distribution for some members may change significantly. GHI members were available to give those members present an estimate of what their monthly fee would have been in 2003 if it were based on the new formula.

Woodlands Committee

The Woodlands Committee presented a slide show on “stewardship forests.” A stewardship forest is a forest for which the owners received a tax deduction for taking certain steps to care for it. The slides depicted the competition among animals, trees and other types of greenery. The committee is working to weed out invasive species to “give our forest a fighting chance to survive.” Many members were thanked for their work in the forest. The committee hopes to put on an educational class in the summer. It will be announced in the News Review.

MURDER SUSPECT ARRESTED IN VIRGINIA AFTER SEARCH

After Greenbelt police put out a nationwide all-points bulletin, Michael Wayne Sears, 54, was arrested on May 26 at about 1 p.m. on Route 181, north of Roanoke and charged with murdering his girlfriend in a Hanover, Va., pay phone. The victim was a 21-year-old black male about 16, 5’8”, medium build and hair in braids, wearing a white t-shirt and blue shorts.

Following his arrest for his first-degree murder of Darlene William Court, 33, Sears was taken to nearby Augusta Medical Center for treatment of what appeared to be self-inflicted stab wounds,” Mathews said. His injuries were serious and he was being held without bond in the Augusta County, Va. jail as this story was being written. The number of Williamson children is not clear at this writing; TV-4 news reporter Pat Collins said the woman was a mother of four.

According to a Washington Post report, Sears fatally shot his estranged wife in March 1992 after she and their three children went to his Clinton home to pick up furniture. Apparently she was packing when she was shot three times. Sears pleaded guilty to second-degree murder and was sentenced to 30 years, of which he served nine before his release last year, Mathews said.

At the time of the arrest, Virginia State Police were acting on a tip they had received from the repeat offenders unit of Prince George’s County Police. Mathews noted. Thereafter, detectives from Greenbelt and the county police department went to Virginia to interview Sears. Also involved in the investigation is the U.S. Marshals Service.

The following vehicles were reported stolen: a black 1999 Toyota Camry sedan, M.I.D. tags M618205, May 18, from 100 block Cherywood Lane; a brown 1990 Toyota Camry four-door; D.C. temporary tags 5695330D, May 21, from the 6100 block Greenbelt Road; a grey 2001 Volkswagen Jetta four-door, Calif. tags 4SV778, May 22, from the 9100 block Edmonston Court; a blue 1995 Honda Accord two-door with black hood, unknown D.C. temporary tags, May 22, from the 6000 block Springhill Drive; a maroon 1999 Acura Legend two-door, Md. tags HX656, May 22, from the 6400 block Springhill Drive.

Four vehicles stolen prior to the period of this report were recovered; two arrests were made relating to one vehicle in Union City, Ga.

Vandalism to, thefts from and attempted thefts of vehicles were reported in the following areas: 8000 block Manadon Road (three incidents); 6200 block Springhill Drive; 10 Court Dr.; 6200 block Springhill Drive; 9100 block Edmonston Terrace; 7500 block Greenbelt; 2350 Metro Drive (12 incidents); 7400 block Greenbelt Road; 6100 block Edmonston Court; 7800 block Manadon Road.

The Department is offering a reward of up to $500 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of a suspect in any of the unsolved crimes reported in the blotter. Citizens may anonymously report suspected drug activity by calling the Drug Tip Line at 301-507-6532. Victims of the theft of lawn ornaments, tools, lawn mowers, etc., should contact Criminal Investigations at 301-654-3555. Some items have been recovered and police would like to return them to owners.

Bus Bike Racks Are Now Available

Bike racks are now being seen on buses in the Metro area. Nearly all of the buses have racks. According to the College Park Airport Bicycle Coalition not many racks have bikes on them. The following information and buy answer questions potential users have concerning bikes on buses.

There is no charge besides the regular bus fare. To use the rack on the outside of the bus, hold the bike with one hand and grasp the “D” handle with the other hand, pull up and the rack will fold out flat. Pick up the bike and place the front wheel in the marked loop. Reach down and pull up the “J” hook and let the spring-loaded “J” hook come down through the front wheel, securely locking the bike in place. All that’s left to do is fit the bike and out you go. Check www.cpbac.org for more information.

Demonstration Project Will Restore Old Windows

by Mary Moien

At its April 14 meeting the Greenbelt City Council agreed to restore one set of original 1937 windows in the Greenbelt Community Center. This demonstration project will cost over $36,000, with a grant of up to $20,000 from the Maryland Historical Trust to be matched by the city. The Senior Game room windows were selected for the demonstration project.

Getting work started on the Community Center windows project has taken many years because of the unique nature of the work. With this proposal, there is an agreement between the Maryland Historic Trust and the Vitetta Architects, the city's consulting architect for this work, to restore this window as a means of determining the best way to restore all of the original windows. MacKich Construction was recommended for the work based on its reputation for sensitive historic work and because of the consulting architect's familiarity with the company.

When the proposal was read, Mayor Judith Davis let out a sigh of "Finally." Although the proposal was slated for first reading only, Councilmember Thomas White called for suspension of the rules to allow for a final vote at the meeting. Since the Community Center windows have been discussed for over five years, he was anticipating a quick approval to get the process started. Although it was finally approved with discussion andreshaping of issues held the floor.

Councilmember Alan Turnbull started off the discussion by stating that people to whom he mentioned the cost are "open-mouthed" when they hear it. He commented that this is a "first step in a direction that may become inevitable." And, he continued, the extraordinary cost is for single-glazed windows. Tunbull commented that many people think he is always in favor of keeping and restoring historic items, but in this case he feels that replacement windows should be used. Joe McNeil, assistant director for Recreation and Parks, recommended council questions as the process started. It was revealed that "one window" actually means the whole set of windows in the Senior Game room. This set of windows covers most of the wall and contains 20 large panes – five panes across and four panes high. The restoration includes the windows, the frames, the sills and surrounding area. These windows are in fairly bad shape, so restoring them could give an idea of the final cost, however, these particular windows are close to ground level and will not require scaffolding.

It is anticipated that the project could begin in May. The game room will only be closed for a short time while the window area is enclosed. Then the room can be used while the restoration is underway.

Rotten Weather Fails to Deter Volunteers

Despite the cool and drizzly morning, many residents participated in the 15th Annual Potomac Watershed Cleanup last Saturday. The theme this year is "Take Pride in the Potomac: It's Time to Take Out the Trash!" People are encouraged to protect and take pride in the natural resources in their community.

The City of Greenbelt hosted two cleanup sites at Greenbelt Lake and Springhill Lake stream. Twenty volunteers removed over 600 pounds of trash and recyclables from the shoreline of Greenbelt Lake and the Springhill Lake stream. The volunteers included seven members of Girl Scout Troop 4816 from Springhill Lake, four members of the Recycling and Environment Advisory Committee and three students from Eleanor Roosevelt High School.

Citizens to Conserve Indian Creek (CCRIC) hosted a cleanup site on the Metro property. Eighteen volunteers removed over 1,200 pounds of trash and recyclables from this site. CCRIC volunteers also helped over 100 students and staff from Springhill Lake Elementary School remove 900 pounds of trash last Thursday from the area behind their school.

Throughout the watershed about 2,600 volunteers removed 72 tons of trash and recyclables at the 138 cleanup sites in Maryland, D.C., Pennsylvania, Virginia and West Virginia.

Joanna Stelter, second grade teacher at the school for three years, was displaying “Butterflies and their impact on our environment.” Pictures and models of butterflies were everywhere. Stelter stated that the children learned about caterpillars, and butterflies from movies, and the internet. They practiced writing by composing letters to their parents asking for contributions to help them understand the fact that they will be raising this spring. The students and their friends will culminate late in the spring with a picnic and butterfly release.

Some schools were studying healthy minds and healthy bodies while others studied recycling. After Ms. Zukauskas’ class studied recycling issues, they persuaded the whole school to participate in a newspaper recycling project called “Recycling is Fun.”

Fourth grade Scott Burnett was helping out at his classroom. The principal, healthy teeth and students had made clay models of their faces, including teeth. In addition, the students had designed abstract pictures using symmetry, based on the “Abstract art of Kandinsky, father of modernism.” Other fourth graders built birds indigenous to Maryland.

Fifth grade teachers Pam Bauer and Beth Novick described ambitious projects that their students and teachers undertook. The students picked a topic of “biome” and had to obtain information on it, as well as describe it. (Biomes are areas of the world with similar tropical and desert conditions. They have a specific climate, set of animals, plants, soils and climate. Students looking up information on various biomes created and designed graphics on the computer using Excel. To improve writing, Bauer said students wrote two level brochures and created scripts that were used when students video-taped each other describing their work. Many children stopped to see the exhibits, and they were shown in the videos, shown on a television in the hallway.

Jasmine Harper, a fifth grader, described how she researched rabbit for a non-fiction book on the topic of wildlife, one of many produced by the fifth graders and published last spring. Her love of rabbits began when she was young and her family had to care for a class rabbit over a holiday. Now, she confides, she would rather have a greeter pet. At the same display area, former Greenbelt school board member Suzanne Ploegman was seen looking through the fifth-grade work portfolio of her daughter, Hannal Michelle. Sixth graders were learning about themselves in “Who are we and where do we come From?” BreAnna Ferguson was helping there, pointing out the silhouettes and color self-portraits each student had completed. There were also time lines where students had pictures and events from various points in their young lives.

Background

Greenbelt Elementary School has been participating in “experiential” projects for several years. Previous expeditions have included “What makes a culture strong?” “Math in real world,” and “Scents of fun.” Meeting in the summer of 2002, school staff decided on the topic of “Strong Minds, Strong Bodies” for this year’s theme. Teams of teachers at the various grade levels planned expeditions for their students. These projects are correlated with the Maryland State Content Standards.

The staff decided to showcase the work of students and teachers during the school’s annual multi-grade fair. It gave students and community members an opportunity to share in the expeditions with the school. Novick, one of the key staff working on these projects, noted that a fifth grade student had stated, “I will always remember how much fun I had. I also remember that Expeditions are much more fun than usual school.” Novick added, “That is what our goal is, to make learning meaningful, but also fun.”

Search Is Still on to Fill Bank Space in Center

by Peter Curtis

More than 18 months have passed since the Bank of America (BOA) branch in Roosevelt Center closed its doors. Despite complaints from citizens, with over a thousand persons per day asking that the branch remain open, and pressure from city officials, BOA closed its doors on November 18, 2001. Later it removed its ATM at the Roosevelt Center location but installed an ATM in the Co-op Supermarket. This change did little to keep the branch that is located for a full service bank in the Center, a need felt particularly by local seniors. BOA has made it clear that due to the low volume of transactions generated by the now-closed branch, and with three other locations within Greenbelt, it has no interest in re-opening at that site.

Since November 2001 the City has been seeking another bank branch in taking over the Roosevelt Center location, which is owned by George Christacos. At first City Manager Noel McLain reported that Gaston worked with officials from the Governor’s Office of Business Administration and Small Business Assistance in this effort. After the tornadoes struck College Park later that fall, McLain noted, these state officials were diverted to assist with the massive relief and reconstruction efforts.

Another Bank

Since then the city has largely been on its own. McLain said he had made contacts with a number of banks, most recently Provident Bank of Maryland. He met with Provident representatives last January who expressed serious interest. They want to expand their business in the Washington area. In February they were shown the space in the Center. Nothing has developed, however. Recently when McLain called Provident Bank, he was told that they had been given one figure for the rent on the site in early March and a much higher one later that month. Because the final figure was more than they wished to pay, they terminated their interest in the site.

Although posted signs have indicated that the property is being shown and leased through Realty One, a call to that office determined that this is no longer the case. It is now being shown and leased directly by the property owner, Christacos.

In a brief telephone call, Christacos informed the News Review that he was “negotiating with a bank.” He declined to identify which one or speculate on how long it might take before a bank would reopen at the Roosevelt Center location. So the long wait continues.

Agriculture Center Holds Field Day for the Public

The world’s foremost agriculture research facility is inviting all of its neighbors in to show off everything from cutting edge science to the chance to climb aboard the big machinery of farming – tractors, combines and planters. Beltville Agricultural Research Center’s (BARC) Public Field Day will be Saturday, June 7 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

With more than 300 scientists and 6,500 acres BARC is the largest facility of its type in the world. It is located on Route 1, just north of the Beltway exit. Field Day will offer more than 50 exhibits filled with demonstrations, activities and games about BARC’s cutting edge research in sustainable agriculture, plant and animal production, food safety, water quality, including the Chesapeake Bay watershed, and many other aspects of agriculture. Visitors will learn how BARC research touches their daily lives.

Especially for children will be a petting zoo of farm animals, hay rides and the famous USDA Beagle Brigade, those cute but nosy canines that help protect agriculture from for- eign pests and diseases.

A highlight of the open house will be a chance for people to ask the experts from the University of Maryland Home and Garden Information Center about lawn and garden care.

Tours will also be given of BARC’s modern dairy with 175 milking cows. BARC is one of the world leaders in dairy research. Its dairy herd improvement research program has increased milk yield by as much as 30 gallons per cow each year.

All events, games and parking are free. Refreshments will be on sale. Signing for hearing impaired and handicapped visitors is available. For more information and directions, visit the website www.ba.ars.usda.gov/field_day or call 301-504-9595.
