

Multitude of Projects Occupies City Council for Many Hours

by Kathleen Gallagher

The Greenbelt City Council's regular meeting was dominated by legislation on February 24: the city's, the county's and the state's. Other business included referral of a matter to the Greenbelt Ethics Commission, theater funding and receipt on the consent agenda of reports for discussion at future meetings from the Greenbelt Advisory Committee on Environmental Sustainability and the Public Safety Advisory Committee. Another item was the appointment of individuals to city advisory boards and committees.

This issue of how to proceed in maintaining boundaries for the community gardens within the Greenbelt Forest Preserve was reported in an article in last week's paper.

City Charter

A resolution was adopted to amend the city charter to expand the list of justifications from which a councilmember may state as a reason to abstain from voting on an action item before council. In the past, the only acceptable reasons for not voting were if the matter concerned the councilmember's own official conduct or if the councilmember had a financial interest in the outcome of the vote.

Acceptable justifications for not voting were intentionally limited in number since voting on legislation is a main component of what a legislative body is elected to do.

Recent changes in ethics laws have moved in the opposite direction, however, with the idea of making it easier for a legislator to avoid being put in a position of conflict of interest. The revised law would state that a councilmember could abstain if (1) casting a vote would be improper under current ethics laws; (2) casting a vote might reveal bias for or against someone with whom the councilmember has a close personal relationship; or (3) if for any reason the councilmember "is not comfortable voting and has given the chair a reason for requesting to abstain so long as excused by the chair or council by vote."

Although council had already adopted these changes in its standing rules by resolution in January, Councilmember Rodney Roberts objected to the third situation as being too permissive. Asked if the state law required this language, City Manager Michael McLaughlin said it did not; rather it represented an opinion of the city solicitor. Councilmember Edward Putens agreed with Roberts that the statement of the third justification was problematic. Although it appeared that not all councilmembers were in agreement about what "so long as excused by the chair or council by vote" meant in practice, the majority felt comfortable going ahead with that language. The charter amendment resolution thus

Community Foundation Holds Winter Tea at Greenbelt Marriott

by Altoria Bell Ross

As people filed into the ballroom of the Greenbelt Marriott on February 23, classical guitar and piano music greeted them, performed by students from Eleanor Roosevelt High School's music program, a former Greenbelt Community Foundation (GCF) grant recipient.

Once Dorrie Bates welcomed guests, Suzette Agans told a story about the power of community giving using a theoretical situation that if the 100 people in attendance would donate 5 percent of the hypothetical value of their homes, $200,000, the resulting funds could be used for GCF to build a bridge to tomorrow.

In keeping with GCF's theme of the youth, the arts and education, Anthony DiMeglio of Taproots joined by two students, Brennan Bathauer and Jay Gonzalez, talked about the purchase of a soil monitor with $2,000 in GCF seed money in 2012. DiMeglio uses this tool to measure the temperature of the soil and hopes to conduct pilot environmental projects at Greenbelt Middle School.

To present the 2013 fall awardees, Lois Rosado introduced Kim Walsh of the Chesapeake Education, Arts and Research Society (CHEARS) and Angella Foster of the Alight Dance Theater who performed a spoken word piece. After being presented with a $5,000 check, a gleeful six-month old, Adelina Foster, waved it to the delight of the giggling audience.

CHEARS is in partnership with the dance theater which will guide audiences through an active exploration of the Three Sisters Demonstration Gardens. These gardens are located in the historic city center, Schrom Hills Park and Springhill Lake Recreation Center. Between April and October 2014, each location will be the site of a performance installation created and performed by Alight.

After the presentation, Rosado introduced Joan Jacobs of the Greenbelt Arts Center for its Dry at Last project. The goal of this project is to reduce the amount of humidity present throughout the theater and its work spaces. The installation of a $2,500 permanent dehumidifier will improve the experience of theater goers and provide a safer area for set construction and storage.

Also during the program, Jim

Suzette Agans Relates Her Varied and Interesting Career

by Jim Link

Suzette Agans is one of those self-effacing, observant, thoughtful, hardworking Greenbelters whose positive impact is palpable.

The former president and treasurer of Greenbelt Homes Inc. (GHI) works fulltime for the U.S. Department of Agriculture as a rural development specialist. Earlier she was a Peace Corps volunteer, with a stint in Russia that was fraught with ambiguity. Now she pursues a fistful of interesting hobbies.

Born in Albany, N.Y., Agans began working in retail for Sears Roebuck after graduating from high school.

Snowfall Taken in Stride

Greenbelt's latest collision with the Polar Vortex was taken in stride by Public Works. We had a couple of truck breakdowns, normal for snowstorms, Director Kenny Hall remarked – but they quickly got them back up and running. "We have good mechanics and we like to get them right back on the road."

After the snowfall the weather got very cold. "It's hard to remove once it freezes," Hall said. When asked about the salt supply, he said "We haven't got much. We use it sparingly." He commented that it's hard to find salt anywhere in the country right now.

Public Works is out of what Hall calls "sidewalk salt," the de-icer used for sidewalks around the city.

There were no downed trees reported to Public Works.

Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI) maintenance staff did their usual "due diligence" cleaning inner courtways and parking lots, according to Supervisor George Bachman. "We were proactive" in seeking de-icer salt and "fortunate" to have a supplier that could provide enough salt to last for this winter season, he said. Selective types of salt that are "less damaging" to concrete were ordered.

Only one "very large" tree had to be removed after the snowstorm was over, but Bachman believes it was not storm-related. GHI uses "specially licensed" 120-ton cranes to take large trees out.

Beaver Math As We Sleep...

As we sleep the beavers at the lake in Buddy Attick Park, are gnawing away at five trees every night.

Shall we do the math? Five trees every night equals 150 trees in one month. 150 trees down in one month equals 1,800 trees down in one year.

Let us not forget the occasional wind storm, tornado and hurricane which bring down about 20 trees on average per year.

Shall we do the math? In three short years, the trees around the lake in Buddy Attick Park, of Greenbelt, will all be gone.

3 years X 1,820 = 5,460 trees
No trees, no beauty, no shade. Just beavers in search of new trees, in new neighborhoods.

Shall we do the math? No trees around the lake will most likely bring down property values. The lake with its fabulous trees providing all of us with shade and beauty is, most probably, a very strong reason why people wish to purchase homes and live in this part of old Greenbelt. Additionally, once the trees are gone so are the birds, squirrels and other creatures of the ecosystem.

Beavers need a natural environment with vast resources for their natural instincts to build dams and to contribute to wetlands, not a limited and artificial environment such as the lake in Greenbelt.

How many more healthy, beautiful trees need to be felled before action is taken?

As we sleep, another five trees are targeted. It is time to wake up, do the math and move the beavers to large forests.

Appreciates FPAB

The article "Forest Board and Gardeners Duke it Out over Maintenance" in last week's News Review is misleading and presents only one side of the story.

I attended the work session described in last week's article. It was not hostile and everyone had an opportunity to speak. Yet the article doesn't include a single quote or opinion from a member of the Forest Preserve Advisory Board (FPAB) or from one of their many supporters at the work session. Those who came to show support for FPAB are labeled as "unaffiliated" even though they identified themselves and their affiliation before speaking in favor of FPAB.

Last week's article is the third one to be published by the News Review, and the second attributed to the same author, that appears to be critical of FPAB. The first two articles contained several inaccurate statements and required extensive corrections from the chairman of the FPAB and, the second article didn't even identify the author, which seems inappropriate to me.

It is clearly stated in the Forest Preserve Maintenance and Management Guidelines that the primary goal is the preservation of the wooded areas and the wildlife habitats within the Forest Preserve. The citizens of Greenbelt are the stewards of the Forest Preserve and the members of FPAB are their representatives. Therefore, on behalf of all citizens of Greenbelt, FPAB is expected to provide recommendations to council that protect and conserve the forest in its existing natural state. The citizens of Greenbelt do not have to lose precious wooded areas and wildlife habitat to appease special interest groups. If the Greenbelt Community Garden (GCGC) wants additional space then council should work with them to identify open areas in Greenbelt that are more suitable for gardens.

As a gardener and a forest enthusiast, I greatly appreciate the FPAB for working hard to protect the Forest Preserve on behalf of all citizens of Greenbelt. FPAB meetings are open to all members of the community and I encourage people to come and ask questions about these important issues.

Proper Procedure?

The series of letters regarding the New Deal Café is interesting to me, as I have been active with this organization for quite a while, and am currently a member of the Café's Audit Committee. In this letter I am expressing my opinions as an individual member; the Audit Committee will provide a consensus report to the annual meeting that will surely address the current situation.

I have two points. The first is that Mr. Rall is entirely correct in that the food is still being served, beer is still being poured and music is still being played. I would add that the Café's taxes are done, and the books are being brought up to date. There will be no gap in understanding the Café's financial position by the board and the treasurer.

My second point in that the "concerned members" regard for proper procedure is a recent development for several of the signers of their letter. As an example the board, with Ms. Rutledge as president, wrote the position description for the general manager job and advertised the job immediately after the February 2011 annual meeting at which the budget presented did not account

12 Years a Slave Comes Here

The award-laden, star-studded 12 Years a Slave comes to the Old Greenbelt Theatre Friday, March 7. The searing story is about the 1841 brutal abduction into slavery and eventual release of Solomon Northup, a free black man from upstate New York. The movie is becoming a catalyst for an examination of our national conscience regarding race relations.

Directed by Steve McQueen (nominated for Best Director) and written by John Ridley (winner – Best Adapted Screenplay), it stars Chiwetel Ejiofor (nominated for Best Actor). The cast includes Lupita Nyong'o (winner – Best Supporting Actress), Michael Fassbender, Paul Giamatti, Alfre Woodard, Brad Pitt and Benedict Cumberbatch. Running time 2 hours 14 minutes. Rated R.

Clarification

In a letter from Neil McConlogue in last week's paper, a web address was given as the site of a letter written to the New Deal Café board by a number of New Deal members. Because of the length of the URL, a hyphen was introduced into the address in a location that looked authentic. The correct address is www.sites.google.com/site/newdealcafe/watch.

In this brilliantly written, fast-paced book, based on three years of uncompromising reporting, a bewildering age of global change and inequality is made human. Anyone who has read this book, and wants to discuss it, feel free to participate. Obituaries

Diane Kaye Hostetler

Diane Kaye Hostetler, 80, died peacefully at Gilchrist Hospice in Towson, Md., on Monday, February 24, surrounded by her family. She had lymphoma and lung cancer.

Born in Cleveland, Ohio, on June 30, 1933, during the height of the Depression to L. Merle Hostetler of Trail, Ohio, and Kathleen Mae Stewart of Ravenna, Ohio, she spent the majority of her childhood in the town of Brecksville, Ohio.

Diane reflected an early love of nature study and the outdoors, winning butterfly identification contests and following her naturalist mother Kaye on bird walks and nature trails through the Cleveland Metro Parks.

Ms. Hostetler loved returning to her father's early home and farmland. Her roots with farming, nature and birding were lifelong interests and passions.

In high school, she helped establish the first library in her school that encompassed all 12 grades. She also participated in Future Teachers of America, never entering the classroom professionally, but teaching throughout her life through art, music, homemaking, history, environmentalism, editing and politics.

An English major, Ms. Hostetler attended Denison University from 1951-1955, helping found its literary magazine, Exile, which is still in publication. Despite thinking her education was over at age 21, she went on to become a lifelong learner, avid reader and newshound. She worked at Follett Publishing Company in Chicago the next three years, first as secretary to the president and later as a textbook editor. She had a remarkable knack of capturing the essence of a photograph or situation with brevity, accuracy and often wit.

Ms. Hostetler married Newton (Bud) Smith Foster, Jr., in 1958 (divorced in 1984), and moved to St. Louis, Mo., where she continued her career as an editor with Webster's Publishing Company. Her first child, Kathleen, was born in 1959. At this point, she began her second career as a homemaker.

Ms. Hostetler cherished her time as a homemaker-mother during her time in St. Louis, Mo., and Oakland, N.J. Additional children arrived, Alexander in 1962 and Ariel in 1967. She had keen interests in the environment and gardening, as well as the local historical society, giving open-hearth cooking lessons at a local colonial home.

As a member of the Unitarian Church, she was active in the women's movement in the 1970s and with services for low-income families in Patterson, N.J. She also helped found the Human Relations Society, a group that endeavored to make Oakland a welcoming community for families of diverse backgrounds and ethnicities.

With the arrival of grandchildren in 1992, Ms. Hostetler transitioned into the next phase of her career as grandmother. She dove into this phase of her life with gusto, visiting her grandchildren as frequently as possible (or when needed). Her interests in world politics and economics grew. She also continued to be a passionate advocate of the environment and spent a great deal of time providing childcare services for various organizations in New Jersey.

After a life-threatening surgery in 1999, she decided she needed a smaller home, and Greenbelt was the obvious and perfect choice. She was a devoted reader of the history of Greenbelt and felt proud to be part of a community that had been supported in the earliest years by Eleanor Roosevelt. She thrived in this close-knit community, enjoying Explorations Unlimited, Meal & Reel and senior travels to various historic sites and shopping/restaurant destinations.

Neighbors could find her swimming her usual 16 laps five days per week at the Greenbelt Aquatic Center. She valued the fact that she could walk to these activities and do her food shopping. Ms. Hostetler continued to be passionate about environmental concerns, and Greenbelt made it possible to live a life that was in alignment with her personal beliefs on a number of levels. Additionally, one of her proudest moments was being selected for the House & Garden Tour. Indeed, the Greenbelt years were among Ms. Hostetler's happiest.

When she was not enjoying activities and daily life in Greenbelt, she was with her children and grandchildren. She would pop on a train or in her car at the drop of a hat to help out, whether it was folding laundry or walking grandchildren to school. As a mother and grandmother, she was a dedicated audience, carefully listening to and helping each member of her family. She listened with an open heart and shared her perspectives in a quiet, gentle and sometimes very humorous way.

Her kind heart and wise presence will be sorely missed by her friends, her community and her family.

Toward the end of her life, she embraced faith in God and Jesus Christ.

Ms. Hostetler's brother, Judd Merle Hostetler died in 2001. She is survived by her children Kathleen (Foster) and David Kitchin of Laurel, Md, and their children Anna and Schuyler; Alexander and Kathleen Foster of Sherborn, Mass., and their children Kaylee and Patrick; and Ariel Foster and Emile Wamsteker of West Orange, N.J., and their children Isabel and Eli. She is also survived by her aunt, Betty Zarney, of Medina, Ohio, and her children and their families.

A memorial service will be held on Saturday, March 15, at 2 p.m., at Countryside Fellowship Church, 8850 Baltimore Street, Savage, MD 20763. A light reception will follow in the fellowship hall.

In lieu of flowers, the family is asking that donations be made to the American Lung Association or to the Preservation of Social Security, an organization that seeks to protect the Social Security safety net.

Greenbelt Star Party On Sat. Evening

Members of the public are invited to a star party Saturday evening, March 8 at the City of Greenbelt Observatory, located at Northway field. In addition to the telescope in the observatory, several members will set up their personal telescopes and binoculars for the enjoyment of all. Observing will begin as soon as it is dark enough, probably around 7 p.m.

Come and enjoy a view of our planet's waxing gibbous moon, now just past first quarter, through our 14" Schmidt-Cassegrain telescope. Other observing targets include Jupiter, with its four Galilean satellites, and the magnificent Orion nebula. Several nice star clusters may also be seen. ASG members will be available to answer questions and provide advice about getting started in this fascinating hobby.

The star party will be canceled without notice if it is hopelessly cloudy or incredibly cold. Attendees are asked to park in ball field lot, not up on the hill, unless bringing a telescope.

Copies may also be requested of the City Clerk. It will become effective on April 25, 2014, unless a proper petition to submit the amendment to the voters on a referendum is filed as permitted by law. GREENBELT ANIMAL SHELTER

Eddie is a 1-yr-old Coon-Hound mix pup. He is extremely affectionate and thinks he is a lap dog, even though he is about 45 lbs. Eddie learns VERY quickly. He knows all his basic commands. Eddie is a little nervous, and feels more confident around other dogs. He would do best in a home that has another dog. Eddie is currently in foster care but is waiting for his forever home!

The Animal Shelter really needs help with fostering dogs and cats. There are several animals in the shelter that could use some focused attention to flourish. Are you willing, but are concerned about long work days, travel conflicts, supplies, etc? The Shelter does its best to work with potential foster parents. Please come in and talk with Lauren or Susie, the Animal Control Officers at the Shelter, about any questions you might have. Fostering is a wonderful way to help an animal while they find their forever home!

The shelter is in need of laundry detergent, wet and dry dog food and wet and dry cat food. Thank you very much!

carried 6 to 1, with Roberts opposed.

Police Benefits

Three years ago, the Maryland General Assembly modified state law regarding the Workers Compensation death benefits paid to dependents of an employee who died in a work-related accident or because of an occupational disease. These modifications were intended to correct disparities in formulas for calculating benefits in varying situations. The bill applied to all employees except for public safety workers.

During negotiations for the most recent collective bargaining agreement, city management agreed to the request of the bargaining unit to have police officers included in the new benefit. The resolution, adopted unanimously at this meeting, will notify the state that the city has elected to include the city's police officers in the plan.

At its January 13 meeting, Greenbelt resident Joe Murray submitted a request to the city council to review whether or not he is in a position of conflict of interest with regard to deliberations and actions taken by the city's Forest Preserve Advisory Board (FPAB) in matters affecting Ancestral Knowledge (AK), a 501(c)3 educational organization. Murray, an appointed member of FPAB, is also paid by AK to teach classes that include walks and activities in the Forest Preserve.

When AK submitted an application to commence its activities in the Forest Preserve in late 2012 and Murray's dual roles were recognized, the then-chair of FPAB requested either that he resign from the board or recuse himself from speaking or voting on AK considerations. Since that time, Murray has recused himself.

Much of Murray's written petition to council describes what he believes to be either misunderstandings or falsehoods about programs he conducts on AK's behalf in the Preserve, as well as his and AK's reasons for wanting to conduct programs in the Preserve rather than taking them elsewhere. With regard to the specific charge of conflict of interest, he says that the amount of his remuneration from AK is not enough either to influence him or to create a conflict.

Council voted to refer the matter to the city's Ethics Commission, but questions raised by Councilmember Rodney Roberts highlighted that it was not entirely clear whether the commission could be asked to give an advisory opinion to council or whether the commission itself would have the final say.

City Clerk Cindy Murray said she believed the commission would have the final say but also concurred with Councilmember Judith Davis, who suggested the commission also could turn the matter back to council as not being within the commission's purview.

Theater Funding

The city currently is holding $300,000 in bond bill funding from the State of Maryland for renovations to the Greenbelt Theater building. These funds must be encumbered or spent by June 1. While the city anticipates encumbering the funds by then, it proceeded cautiously and also chose to meet a deadline for requesting an extension for use of the funds.

In the meantime, to meet another deadline, the city applied for an additional $200,000 in bond bill funding for the theater. Assistant City Manager David Moran said a question had been raised informally regarding whether both could be funded.

Davis had asked to add this item to the agenda because of concern that the two requests might compete against one another. She suggested that council discuss in advance of the question's coming up formally what it would do if it appeared more prudent to withdraw one of the city's funding requests. She said her own preference would be to protect the request to extend the existing funding.

Councilmembers Leta Mach and Ed Putens said they agreed, not only because the existing funding involves more money but also because it would give the city greater credibility in terms of spending the already-awarded funding. The vote was unanimous to request withdrawal of the new funding request if doing so proved advisable.

In response to a question from Mayor Emmett Jordan, McLaughlin said his best estimate was that work would begin on the project in April or May.

Other Legislation

Council voted unanimously to support three bills that had been introduced in this year's session of the General Assembly. The Community Cleanup and Greening Act would establish a statewide bag fee in those counties, including Prince George's, that have not already done so. As formulated, the fee would be five cents per bag, with stores keeping one or two cents if they already have a reusable bag credit program. The county would keep the balance, with the monies earmarked for various environmental and recycling programs. State Senator Paul Pinsky, who represents Greenbelt, is a co-sponsor of the bill.

The Maryland Municipal League (MML) supports this bill with the amendment that revenues collected within a municipality be returned to the municipality. The city council voted to support it with the same stipulation.

Also supported by MML is the Highway User Revenue Funding bill, which has been supported by MML and by Greenbelt since the user fees returned to local government had been reduced during state budget problems years ago. This bill would restore full highway user funding to local governments.

The third bill was the Community Renewable Energy Pilot Program, which city resident John Mason asked the council to consider. Similar to legislation supported by the city last year, the bill would establish a pilot program conducted by the Public Service Commission to allow for community renewable-energy generating facilities. Senator Pinsky also is a co-sponsor of this bill.

Sci/Tech District

Earlier this month County Councilmembers Eric Olson, Mary Lehman and Ingrid Turner introduced a resolution to the Prince George's County Council to create a Science and Technology District comprising the Beltsville, College Park, Riverdale, Riverdale Park and Greenbelt areas. Included in the legislation are an investment tax credit, an expedited permit review and approval process and promotion of the district by the county's Economic Development Corporation.

Roberts asked staff to seek confirmation that this designation would have no negative impact on BARC. Other councilmembers thought it would fit nicely with the presence of both BARC and the University of Maryland. Davis added that it might also be another way to make the area attractive as a location for the FBI.

Moran explained that the resolution's only purpose was to express the county council's intention to create a district. Other steps would be necessary to carry it out and other opportunities would be available as well to comment on more detailed plans.

Advisory Reports

Three reports received from advisory groups will be scheduled for discussion on future agendas. One report from the Greenbelt Advisory Committee on Environmental Sustainability (GreenACES) asks that the city involve it in making recommendations on alternative fuel vehicles that might be considered when vehicle purchases need to be made.

A second GreenACES report responds to a request from council to comment on the viability of the Greenbriar Stream Restoration Project as a possible mitigation for the Jara property development elsewhere in the county.

A report from the Public Safety Advisory Committee responds to a council request that it review a resident's suggestions on how the community should deal with persons who have been accused of actions involving child pornography.

In other actions, the city council reappointed 16 members of four of its boards and committees. It also appointed two new members, Sophie Bernheisel and Katia Cavigelli, to the city's Youth Advisory Committee.

a lot," she says.

She came to Washington, D.C. 15 years ago because "the city appealed to me – the marble, the monuments, stone, brick and greenery all appealed to me. But then I had a mild crisis – the big three-oh (30) hit me and I needed to make a decision about what to do with my life. So I finished my bachelor's at American University, got a master's degree in International Development and joined the Peace Corps."

Russia Experience

Her experience in Russia was rewarding but bizarre, to say the least, she says. With a hint of a smile Agans is serenely blunt: "They kicked us out."

Agans had been posted in 2001 to Togliatti, a small Russian town named after an Italian Communist, a place 18 hours by train southeast of Moscow. There she was trained "in country" by Russians and Americans to teach business education and business planning to college students ages 17 to 24.

She learned conversational Russian, she says, but taught in English.

Her students and the Russian populace were lovely, she added, but there was a streak of distrust in the Russian authorities against the U.S., akin to our distrust of Russia during the McCarthy era at the height of the Cold War.

"Remember when we had civil defense drills and ducked under school desks practicing for (non-existent) Russian attacks?" Agans reminded me.

"They felt they no longer needed us," Agans explained patiently, calmly.

"It became a case of Survivor – who was going to get kicked off the island of Russia first," she smiled.

She returned to Albany for Christmas, then was called back to Russia to face "the big boot" in 2003. "Fifty of us (American Peace Corps volunteers) packed up, went to Moscow, turned in our keys and said our goodbyes to the American ambassadors. We left on Valentine's Day – From Russia Without Love," she laughed merrily.

Sign in English

One of her vivid memories is a huge sign in English put up near her training site in Zelograd (which means Green City) after the terrorist attacks on September 11, 2001, one month after Agans arrived. "We understand," it said. The people were very sympathetic but also somber, maybe fatalistic.

In 2004 Agans got a job with the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) and moved to Greenbelt when her friend Jeanette Grotke invited her to try our planned "utopia."

Her job as a rural development specialist took her to high-poverty places like western Nevada and the American West – Indian country.

"My job is to help local residents design economic development plans, then let them implement them; they roll up their sleeves and do the work. Each rural area has its own problems – "characteristics" is a better word," she says.

Unfortunately this "capacity-building" work often doesn't show immediate results "because in rural areas it's mostly the same five people, or just three or four, who do all the volunteering, all the work."

Agans compares working in Greenbelt favorably to her work with the USDA. In Greenbelt we have a "Yes, we can do it" attitude, she says. Twenty or 30 people might volunteer for a project, not a mere handful. During the year-long 75th anniversary celebration, scores of people volunteered for committee work.

"The Farmers Market is another example of our 'can do' attitude. It took a few years to figure out how to get it here but we figured it out."

She pointed proudly to President Obama's recent White House Promise Zone Policy (five zones), which was "agency-led" – brought to fruition by the USDA to help rural and tribal areas.

Woodlands Committee

Agans joined GHI's Woodlands Committee around 2006, saw how the housing co-op worked and when someone resigned, was appointed treasurer. "Then I ran successfully. They made me treasurer. Can you believe it? Then they made me president! Then I ran out of energy." Hardly the voice of a power-hungry politician!

"Being president was a bit scary but I loved it." Agans "helped to increase transparency," she said. "We implemented the policy of providing 30-day notices to GHI members to get feedback before making major changes. I'm happy they still do that."

She also wrote a series of articles in The Communicator explaining the Replacement Reserve Program or savings account for new roofs, plumbing and siding on GHI homes.

Agans is an explorer, constantly renewing herself with different hobbies. She loves gardening and cooking and looked into studying horticulture and being a chef. "But hiring a woman chef? Phhttt!"

Translation: "Not likely!"

She even tried acting in a one-act play festival at the Greenbelt Arts Center. "I was nervous. Acting is very hard work; I don't do it anymore except in my daily life," she chuckles.

Many Paths

Her sage advice is not to "get stuck in any one niche. There are many paths in life – explore them all! But not all at once – our 'hurry up and go' culture doesn't help. Yogi Berra said it nicely – 'When you get to a fork in the road, take it.'"

Photography has captured Agans' interest now and "studying wildlife, not people. I'm exploring different ideas for my next career – maybe a naturalist. I'll let you know when I go down that path."

Robert Frost wrote of "The Road Not Taken," but Suzette Agans clearly could write about "The Roads Taken."

Letters to the Editor

for the cost of paying a general manager. Ms. Rutledge voted on the job description, which was approved by a 4 to 1 vote in an open meeting. The actual hiring decision was made in executive session. Many of the meeting notices in that time frame mentioned executive session without presenting an agenda.

This letter is difficult for me to write because the Café community owes a debt of gratitude for the time and sweat that most of the signers of the "concerned members" have put into making the Café what it is today. In particular, Bill Wilkerson, Peter May and Terri Rutledge were instrumental in bringing Karim to the Café. But the selective memory exhibited by the "concerned members" reminds me of the late Senator Moynihan's aphorism that one is entitled to one's own opinions, but not one's own facts.

School Superintendent Responds to City

February 12, 2014

Mayor Emmett V. Jordan
City of Greenbelt
25 Crescent Road
Greenbelt, MD 20770

Dear Mayor Jordan,

Thank you for your letter of January 30 expressing the City of Greenbelt's preference that children residing in Greenbelt attend a school located in Greenbelt. By policy, the Board of Education has expressed its commitment to making the most economical and practical use of its physical resources in the implementation of its educational programs. We share your interest in building upon neighborhood and community boundaries to strengthen our schools. As acknowledged in your letter, that objective is sometimes constrained by other considerations such as building capacity.

In considering the potential impact of the development on area schools, we have examined the pupil yield from similar developments and observed that the number of students resulting from similar developments is very modest when compared with pupil yields from older garden style apartments.

While Greenbelt Station is unlikely to have a significant impact on enrollment in the near-term, capacity issues already exist at the area schools as you noted in your letter. The district has not yet adopted a strategy for resolving the overcrowding but is examining the range of options, which might include adjustment of boundaries, resizing or relocation of specialized programs, the creation of additional seats through additions to existing facilities, and/or accelerating the location and construction of a middle school anticipated in the "out" years of the current Capital Improvement Program (CIP). Because of proximity and the limited number of students expected from the first phase of the program, students from Greenbelt Station will likely to be initially assigned to Greenbelt Middle and Springhill Lake Elementary while a longer range solution is being developed. While we cannot commit to assigning all city residents to schools within the City of Greenbelt, we acknowledge and appreciate your input to our consideration of the possible solutions.

Sincerely,

Kevin M. Maxwell, Ph.D.

Condolences to the family and friends of Diane Hostetler, who died Monday, February 24. Ms. Hostetler had lived in Greenbelt since 1999.

Congratulations to Greenbelt Doctors David S. Granite, Peter M. Schissler, Stephanie Trifoglio, Angela J. Lotsikas and Ronald Katz who were selected by Washingtonian magazine as "Top Docs" in family medicine, geriatric medicine, internal medicine and dermatology for 2014. They are five of the few physicians in Prince George's County so honored. "Top Doc" rankings are based upon nominations by other physicians. Dr. Granite of Physicians Family Practice at 115 Centerway, has not only practiced in Greenbelt since 1975 but is also "our neighbor" as a longtime Greenbelt resident. Dr. Schissler, of 7500 Greenway Center Drive, has practiced in Greenbelt since 1981. Dr. Katz of 7701 Greenbelt Road, who spent most of his 40 years of solo practice in Berwyn Heights, is now semi-retired. In 2011 he joined Dermatogology and Cosmetic Surgery Associated. Dr. Lopsikas has been a member of that group since 2006.

It was nice to see our own Frank Taylor of Capitol Cadillac featured as one of the snow-blower "heroes" in a March 4 Washington Post article. Frank grew up in the Lakewood section of Greenbelt; his wife, the former Jeanne Hensel, is also a native Greenbelter. “Perseus and the Gorgon” Amuses, Moves and Delights

by Rebecca Winner

The 2014 Greenbelt Youth Musical production of “Perseus and the Gorgon” is a fantasy adventure tale complete with shipwrecks, swordfights, gods, monsters, a magic mirror, royalty in disguise and the cutest flock of bats ever to grace a stage. It is also a wise reflection on the destructive influence of fear on our lives and the redeeming power of love. But most of all, it is a fantastically enjoyable show.

The play, written and directed by Christopher Cherry, opens with two royal weddings, between Acrisius (Abram Shaw) and Danaë (Allison Lehman) of the North Kingdom, and Cepheus (Walter Commins) and Cassiopeia (Sara Guerrieri) of the South Kingdom. Each royal couple soon has a child, but the new arrivals cause friction in the marriages. Acrisius fears losing his wife’s love to his newborn son, while vain Cassiopeia fears growing old and having her beauty eventually surpassed by her daughter’s.

After a trip to the Oracle (Isobel Springer) reveals that his son will someday supplant him on the throne, Acrisius tries to throw baby Perseus into the sea as a sacrifice. Lehman is particularly impressive in this scene as Danaë protects the infant Perseus from his father’s paranoia, conveying Danaë’s terrified confusion and fury. The anguished Acrisius ends up pushing both Danaë and the baby overboard. After washing ashore on the island of Seriphos, the castaways are rescued by a kindly fisherman.

Meanwhile, Queen Cassiopeia has turned to magic spells to preserve her beauty, and baby princess Andromeda disappears. King Cepheus dies of a broken heart, and Cassiopeia takes the throne, thanking heaven that she looks good in black.

Seventeen years has passed and Acrisius learns that Perseus (Isaac Solomon) has survived and is living as a fisherman. Acrisius sends the unwitting prince on a quest guaranteed to get him out of the way for good: find and defeat the monstrous Gorgon, a creature so repulsive that a single glance at it is enough to turn one to stone. To his surprise, Perseus finds in the Gorgon (Megan Winner) not the monster he expected, but a person who is betrayed, suffering and terribly lonely. Perseus proves that he is a hero not by cutting off the monster’s head, but by becoming the Gorgon’s friend. That friendship proves critical to the happy ending (with a clever twist) that joyfully ends the show.

Lehman and Shaw are both perfectly cast in their roles. Shaw plays the complex, tragically flawed Acrisius with empathy and skill, rendering a character who is tender and menacing by turns. He does an excellent job with his powerful solo numbers and duets. Lehman’s Danaë is passionate and strong. Her voice shows to wonderful effect in the moving ballad “Once Upon a Time.”

Guerrieri delivers a great comic performance as the shallow, scheming Cassiopeia. Solomon plays Perseus with impetuous charm as he advances from rebellious teenager to compassionate hero, with some terrific turns along the way. Winner’s Gor-gon is appealing and vulnerable despite her headdress of moving snakes (a masterwork from the stagecraft circle).

Every young actor in the sizeable cast turns in a great performance. Jonas Ventimiglia and Christin Wright shine as the voices of wisdom and common sense for their respective kingdoms. Aaron Goldstein delivers a warm and playful performance as Dactys, the fisherman whose unexpected gift from the sea includes a queen and a baby prince. The talented ensemble brings every scene to life.

The tense and heartbreaking elements of the show are generously leavened by comic production numbers. The “Hallowed Hall of Handsome Heroes” had some laugh-out-loud moments for the audience, as did a sequence involving Sara Guerrieri, Charles Fahey, Mitchel Noone-Meng and a hand truck. Younger children particularly enjoyed the large production numbers with the bats (“I Can See With My Ears”) and the moles (“I Can See With My Nose”), sightless creatures who are the Gorgon’s only companions.

The Gorgon’s lifelong imprisonment in a dark cave has left it ignorant of the existence of colors, a deprivation the audience feels all the more keenly because the production is so beautiful to look at. Gorgeous costumes influenced by Indian culture create an exotic atmosphere, aided by the evocative accompaniment from musical director Stefan Brodd and choreography by Angella Foster. The stagecraft circle, led by production designer Nicole DeWald, also created the beautiful masks and props.

“Perseus and the Gorgon” will be performed again at the Community Center on Saturday March 8 at 2 and 7 p.m. Tickets may be purchased in person or by phone (301-397-2208) from the Community Center main office during business hours or, if still available, thirty minutes before show time. After the sell-out opening night performance, which had center staffers scavenging chairs from the dressing rooms to accommodate an overflow audience, the Oracle would advise an early ticket purchase.

On their wedding night, Danaë (Allison Lehman) and Acrisius (Abram Shaw) discover that their outlooks on life are fundamentally opposed.

“Perseus and the Gorgon” Delights a Packed House

by Lamar Johnson

On Saturday, March 1, Greenbelt youth performed Perseus and the Gorgon, the 2014 Greenbelt Recreation Department Youth Musical, in front of a packed gymnasium.

Written and directed by Christopher Cherry, the musical follows the story of a prince abandoned at sea as a baby. He is cast aside by the king. The prince, Perseus, grows up under the care of his mother and a fisherman who took them in from the sea.

As Perseus grows, he becomes aware that something is missing. The king finds out that he did not die and then sends him on a quest to prove his worth. On the quest, Perseus learns about himself and the Gorgon, the monster he was sent to defeat.

“I fell in love with Greek myths as a kid,” said Cherry. “I opened a book when I was eight and the world enchanted me. I tried to use the basis of Greek mythology and change the story into something uplifting.”

The actors and actresses performed masterfully and the writing sprinkled in enough humor to keep everyone interested as the story unraveled. Perseus and the Gorgon entertained everyone from young children to the elderly.

Kimberly Brackett, a student at St. Vincent Pallotti High School, came to support her friend Allison Lehman. Lehman played the role of Danaë, the queen and mother of Perseus. “I thought it was amazing,” said Brackett. “I haven’t seen acting like that in a long time. It was nice to see,” she said.

Local residents and relatives all came to support the program. So many people came that more chairs had to be put out twice in order to accommodate everybody.

“Greenbelt is a wonderful community,” said Cherry. “It supports the arts. It’s really gratifying. I’m so grateful for Greenbelt.”

David Candey, whose son and grandson, Bobby and Scott, respectively, are both Greenbelt residents, had nothing but good things to say about the program.

“They did a fantastic job,” exclaimed Candey, Sr. “We’ve seen a lot of plays but this was a really amazing job. There had to be a couple of hundred people that really enjoyed it,” he said.

Not only spectators enjoyed the show. Aaron Goldstein, who played Dactys, the fisherman who took in Perseus and Danaë, also enjoyed being a part of the program.

“It felt wonderful,” Goldstein excitedly explained. “I’ve done this the last five years and it’s been a wonderful and different experience each time.”

A video of the performance is available for purchase at the Greenbelt Community Center.
