FY18 Planning Budget Aired, Celia Craze to Retire June 30

by Diane Oberg

On May 1, the Greenbelt City Council reviewed City Manager Nicole Ard's proposed Fiscal Year 2018 budget for the Department of Planning and Community Development. That budget calls for spending $974,000 for the department, a 1.3 percent decrease from Fiscal Year 2017's budget of $987,200. The department is also budgeted to receive $235,000 for animal control, which is in the public safety budget category. Together, they account for 4.3 percent of the city budget.

Farewell

But first, it was time to mark the end of an era as this was council's final budget worksession with Department Director Celia Craze. It has been 31 years since then Celia Wilson was hired as Greenbelt's sole city planner. During those years she has overseen the expansion of that position to a full department covering a broad swath of responsibilities from animal control to zoning. Craze will be retiring on June 30.

Councilmembers offered Craze their congratulations and expressed their appreciation for all she has done for the city. She recalled that when she began, Greenway Center had just opened, with most of Greenbelt East yet to be developed. She said that she had planned to stay until the location of the Federal Bureau of Investigation headquarters was selected but now that there is no announced schedule for this decision she decided the time to go had come.

Budget

The planning division accounts for $549,900 of the budget and is responsible for overseeing all physical development in the city. This includes reviewing development proposals, coordinating and managing capital projects, coordinating planning and development activities with other public bodies and drafting legislation, among other duties. The proposed budget for this area is 1.8 percent less than FY17's budget.

Community Development is budgeted to spend $424,100 in FY18, a 0.7 percent decrease from the FY17 budget. This division is responsible for enforcement of housing, building, sediment control and construction codes, along with burglar alarm licensing and handbill and noise ordinance enforcement.

Ard did not request any change in department staffing. The budget comments, however, identify workload and staffing as the primary issue facing the department. Craze agreed with the request that Councilmember Silke Pope made at an earlier meeting for an additional part-time staffer for animal control. Craze noted that with the current 2.5 full-time equivalents the staff is really stretched thin whenever one person takes leave. While the number of inspectors has not changed in the past couple of years, Craze said that it is down by two from its maximum staffing six or seven years ago.

Council Comments

Most of the meeting focused on a review of the mission, goals and FY17 accomplishments detailed in the budget report. Among other topics, the status of the Greenbelt Station shuttle was discussed. Planner Jessica Bellah said that it is her understanding that the homebuilders (NV Ryan Homes) want to provide the shuttle service, but that it would only service the homes they had built, not the apartments also on site. It is not yet clear how reviving the shuttle would affect the "The

by Mary Moien

The Greenbelt Advisory Committee on Education (ACE) awards ceremony was a highlight of the May 8 meeting of the Greenbelt City Council. All available seats were filled for this annual event as parents, students, principals and teachers celebrated the selection of outstanding students.

ACE committee member Melinda Brady opened the presentation, mentioning that these awards have been given out every year since 1996. Recipients of the ACE Student Awards must be residents of Greenbelt enrolled in the highest grade level at a Greenbelt school. This year, Turning Point Academy did not have any students eligible for the award.

In addition to council, some local dignitaries were present and congratulated the awardees: State Senator Paul Pinsky, Delegates Tawanna Gaines and Anne Healey, and Tomeka Bumbry who represented County Councilmember Todd Turner. A number of school principals and ACE committee members also attended.

ACE was formed in 1994 and its charter was revised in 2007. ACE works with council, school principals, parent-teacher organizations and the community to address education issues and policies that affect the people of Greenbelt.

The purpose of the ACE awards is to recognize Greenbelt students who honor the city's traditions of citizenship, leadership and academic achievement. While many students achieve academically, this year's recipients have uniquely impressed their principals, teachers and the wider community and exemplify

Museum Reopens June 4

by Clodagh Johnston

Of the many summer community activities dedicated to celebrating Greenbelt's 80th anniversary, the Grand Reopening of the Greenbelt Museum Historic House on Sunday, June 4 will certainly be one of the most authentic and community-driven events of the season. The free, family-friendly event kicks off at 11 a.m. with the 4th annual Roosevelt Ride: a short, vintage-themed bike ride that begins and ends at the Historic House at 10-B Crescent Road. Spinning off the well-known "tweed ride" theme, community members are encouraged to arrive in 1930s-

1950s period garb, such as a classic suit or Rosie the Riveter ensemble, to celebrate the rich history of Greenbelt. Additionally, fun vintage accessories will be provided before the event for bicycle decoration, though riders should feel free to decorate their bikes before arriving. Vintage clothing is optional, but participants should make sure to bring a helmet. Rain or shine, community members are invited to join Greenbelt City Council members at 1 p.m. for the ceremonial ribbon cutting, and will be among the first to see the restored

Meals at New Deal

I just had delicious decaf at 8 a.m. this past Sunday morning at the New Deal Café, and also enjoyed the new furniture, the elegant new food service containers, the calming background music, as well as the friendly service by local personnel in training. I'll go there often, for now, hoping this will continue.

They are experimenting with adding early hours – opening with a simple menu at 7 a.m. Tuesday through Friday (and maybe Monday soon) and at 8 a.m. weekends. This morning the menu was, at least, coffee and decaf (with exotic creamers also available), bananas, apples, croissants, bagels and muffins.

But they had only a light turnout this past week, which threatens these early hours. The Café, due to its limited hours while transitioning to new management and fixing up the facility, has lost business, even in the afternoons.

Some of us could easily walk, or quickly drive to the Café in the early morning, sparing us the added inconvenience and hazard of traffic on local highways.

We could consider attending as individuals, with friends, with pets (on patio), with family, or treating our beloved. Or, one could make a gift of a Café visit. Or, we might skip making our own coffee for a few days or weeks.

Perhaps your club could have early morning meetings there.

We might even attend frequently just long enough to restore a good turnout, and then revert to enjoying the Café whenever...

We could lose this accommodation without even knowing that it was piloted, and none of us wants a chain business to pop up there.

Bus" route now serving Greenbelt Station. Councilmembers still had concerns about the route and the hours for these transportation options.

Councilmember Konrad Herling asked about the cryptic "Local Info" signs posted at various locations around Greenbelt. Assistant Director of Planning Terri Hruby explained that the staff had tried to get more meaningful content on the signs but did not have that flexibility under the program. The signs must say "Local Info" and must stay up permanently.

Another issue, raised by Councilmember Judith Davis, concerns areas such as Crescent Road that are lacking sidewalks, forcing people to walk in the roadway. Craze said that staff has abided by an unwritten rule dating back to when the late Thomas X. White was on council, that sidewalks should not be placed where they would undermine use of the inner walkways. Changing that would be a matter of council giving staff direction to do so. There is also another issue with putting sidewalks in the area of Crescent near the white brick apartments in that there would be no place for the sidewalk to connect to, forcing users back out into the streets when the sidewalk ends.

Other issues discussed included the status of the bikeshare feasibility study, the lake dam repairs and the gateway signage plans. Most of these items will be presented to council in the near future.

Mayor Emmett Jordan suggested writing to the General Services Administration to push for a decision regarding the FBI headquarters location. He found little support for this suggestion from other councilmembers who expressed concern that such correspondence could backfire, leading to Greenbelt being eliminated as a possible headquarters location or could come across as negative or whining.

Jordan also raised an issue about the stated goal to "Continue operation of a no-kill shelter..." saying that he did not want to get arguments over wording but that there are some people who say that the city shelter is not no-kill.

Craze objected strongly. She said that this statement is based on "faulty information and inappropriate conclusions." Animals coming from Greenbelt are not sent to the county and are kept until adopted. However, she noted that the city shelter does not accept animals from outside of the city and sends such animals to the county shelter.

Issues

The budget book lists the major issues facing the department in each of its primary areas of responsibility (expressed as goals). Several notable issues are discussed below.

Franklin Park inspection – while Craze and her staff are pleased with the cooperation they have been getting from Fieldstone Properties, including completion of the annual inspection in record time, there are still concerns including the overall condition of the infrastructure and the status of the abandoned laundry rooms. They call on Fieldstone to "implement a long-term maintenance and facility upgrade plan to address the inherent problems with an aging property."

The pedestrian and bicycle master plan and bus stop safety and accessibility study are moving slowly due to the department's workload. Prince George's County has completed its bike sharing feasibility study and the city is looking at whether to go in with the county or determine if there are ways to bring bike sharing to Greenbelt sooner.

The Forest Preserve Advisory Board has been reviewing the Forest preserve health assessment for most of the fiscal year. This process is expected to continue into the next fiscal year before being presented to council for review.

Fight For Space is a somber yet inspiring documentary which celebrates the past glories of the USA's space program in the 60s and 70s, as it laments its recent steady decline.

It "stars" various politicians, astronomers, physicists, activists and schoolteachers, including Neil deGrasse Tyson (astrophysicist), James Lovell (astronaut) and Bill Nye (The Science Guy).

Not quite an elegy, Fight For Space, coming to the Old Greenbelt Theatre this Friday, May 19, urges us to reinvigorate our space program, to reawaken our sense of wonder and mystery.

The meeting will be held in the planetarium of the Howard B. Owens Science Center, 9601 Greenbelt Road (adjacent to Du Val High School). All are welcome and there is no charge.

Linux Install Day At MakerSpace

In the early days of computer programming, sharing software was a common practice. Unlike hardware, programs could be copied at no cost. This concept lives on in the form of open-source software, shareware and freeware, such as Linux, a free open-source operating system.

Originally considered not very accessible, Linux has long been a viable option for home computers with familiar icons for common tasks like creating documents (even Microsoft-compatible documents), web browsing and photo editing. There is an online Software Center with tens of thousands of free and paid apps. Once people try it (which can be done from a thumb drive without altering the computer's existing system), they are amazed they had never heard about it.

Curious? Greenbelt's MakerSpace is hosting a Linux Install Day on Saturday, May 20 from 1 to 4 p.m. Volunteers will be on hand to help install Linux and answer questions. So bring an old computer and stop by 125 Centerway.

Bedtime Story Ballet Showcases Local Talent

Star Party Saturday

The Astronomical Society of Greenbelt will host a star party, free and open to the public, on Saturday evening, May 20 at the Observatory located at Northway Fields. Attendees may observe Jupiter first and Saturn later in the evening. Also observed are galaxies, such as the Whirlpool Galaxy, the Sombrero Galaxy and others as time permits. Attendees are welcome to set up personal telescopes on the hill. The Moon will not be up until midnight, so it will be dark.

Observing will begin at around 8:30 p.m. and continue for about two hours. Attendees are asked to park in the ball field lot, not up on the hill, unless bringing a telescope. The star party will be canceled without notice if it is hopelessly cloudy.

Mishkan Torah Memorial Day Dedication of Holocaust Torah

A sofer repairing Vlašim scroll, a Torah that will be rededicated at Mishkan Torah on Memorial Day weekend.

On Memorial Day, May 29 starting at 3 p.m. Mishkan Torah will have a once-in-a-lifetime ceremony rededicating a survivor of the Holocaust, the destruction of the European Jewish Community by Nazi Germany from 1939-1945. The survivor is a Torah scroll once used by the vanished Jewish community of Vlašim in the Czech Republic. A Torah is the most sacred object in Judaism. It is a scroll in Hebrew containing the first five books of the Bible (the Five Books of Moses) hand lettered by a specially trained scribe called a sofer. Mishkan Torah received the Torah on loan from the Memorial Scrolls Trust in January 1967.

The scroll was recently evaluated and repaired by a sofer, as seen above. The scroll is now kosher and can be read as part of religious services.

Mishkan Torah's agreement with the Memorial Scrolls Trust obligates the Synagogue now to have a rededication ceremony to stimulate renewed awareness of the scroll's significance and its special place as a symbol of survival, heritage and loss. Given the key role played by the United States in WW II, the upcoming Memorial Day, a day of remembrance for those who died protecting the liberties and freedoms that Americans enjoy and at times take for granted is an ideal day for a rededication ceremony for the precious Holocaust Torah.

Weather permitting, the ceremony will begin with a celebratory parade to Roosevelt Center and back. The parade will begin outside the Synagogue at 3:00 p.m.

At 4 p.m., there will be a ceremony at the Synagogue under the chuppah, the traditional Jewish wedding canopy, to be followed by short speeches by Rabbi Jonathan Cohen and Ralph Mollerick, who escaped Nazi Germany through Kindertransport. Mishkan Torah will then have a mincha service featuring readings from the Vlašim scroll. The day's events will conclude with light refreshments and an informal get together.

This unprecedented ceremony promises to be a truly memorable event. It is free and the public is invited to attend what may literally never happen again in this area; the dedication of a Holocaust Torah. Mishkan Torah is located at 10 Ridge Road.

We were sorry to hear of the death on March 20, 2017, of Greenbelt pioneer Virginia Sowell Wyant, 81, of College Park and Coral Gables, Fla. She was the daughter of original residents Mr. and Mrs. Ray Sowell and graduated from Northwestern High School in 1953. Her husband of over 61 years, David N. Wyant (Greenbelt High School class of 1947), preceded her in death. Mrs. Wyant was retired from the University of Maryland, where she worked for many years in Admissions and the School of Music. A memorial service was held May 13 in Florida.

Congratulations to The Sally Wagner Foundation for successfully starting up. Wagner is the retired, long-term band director at Eleanor Roosevelt High School. Congratulations also to the inaugural year scholarship recipients Phillip McWithey and Avinash Singh. For more information about the foundation visit sallywagnerfoundation.org.

Congratulations to Eleanor Roosevelt High School senior Ruth White, who was awarded the 2017 David Craig Memorial Scholarship.

School Board Hears Opponents Of Cell Towers, Other Issues

by Matt Arbach

Health and safety were the two issues that engendered the greatest public response at the Prince George's County Board of Education meeting on May 11. Comments also criticized the efficacy of the board in developing an inclusive and universally supported school system.

Recently, the cell tower initiative, brought about by an agreement between the county and Milestone Communications, was thwarted at a proposed site at Eleanor Roosevelt High School. However, there are still 72 sites approved "as possible future locations" (pgcabs.org) at schools all across the county. There are currently cell towers at Carroll Middle School, Flowers High School, Green Valley Academy, Kenmoor Middle School and Oxon Hill Middle School. Refer to milestonecommunications.com/locations for a complete list.

Three speakers from Greenbelt brought the cell tower issue to bear: residents Bill Manico and Desan Bobo and Nicole Powell-Farrow, on the administrative staff at Eleanor Roosevelt. All three cited similar points in their argument. A central point was the health threat resulting from close proximity to electromagnetic radiation, cancer being the worst case scenario. All three cited scientific studies indicating this. The other major issue was the resulting loss in property values found in areas where cell towers have been located, which would be a detriment to the economic health of the county.

All three speakers stressed the need to situate towers in areas isolated from residential and school grounds. Bobo emphasized the need to "cancel" the contract with Milestone due to this "unacceptable threat" to the community at large and the questionable and possibly "criminal" business practices.

This contention will certainly be a persistent one in the foreseeable future with the decision at Roosevelt being just the beginning, a point raised by Powell-Farrow. Upon reflection after the board meeting, Powell-Farrow stated her continued and deep concern on the threat that the contract with Milestone poses for the county. She recommends a "full termination of the contract" and that "our district deserves better than to do business with such an organization." She quoted Prince George's County Public School CEO Kevin Maxwell, who recently remarked that "Milestone has not met our county's desired standards of transparency, communication and community engagement."

On a positive note, board members cited several programs highlighting student achievements. Hillside Works Scholarships Connections celebrated 93 graduating seniors this year. The Student Built House program, begun in 1981, completed its 41st house; all properties are for sale and all proceeds go towards the next project. There was also an inspirational video concerning Declarations of Independence, an initiative that provides full college scholarships to seniors. Two schools that were highlighted were Oxon Hill High School and Flowers High School. The program worked from a combined fund of $5 million. The awarded students were encouraged to sign an agreement to see their dreams of higher education to its completion.

The legislative portion of the meeting, presented by Demetria Tobias, associative general counsel for the board, focused on some major bills. These included HB 1568, a work bill which concerns the transportation partnership with WMATA; HB 270, concerning lead testing in school; HB 1, dealing with sick leave for substitutes; Protect Our Schools Act, which seeks to enhance student success; More Learning, Less Testing Act; and School Security Suspensions and Expulsions. Tobias emphasized the trend whereupon suspensions often lead to eventual student dropout. Refer to mgaleg.maryland.gov and mgaleg.maryland.gov/Pubs/LegisLegal/2017-90-day-report.pdf for more complete information on these bills.

Representatives from Imagine Foundations that operates the Leland Charter School, offered a brief synopsis of the programs that have been successful and that can be applied to the public schools in the county. They stress not just dynamic academic measures but also character development, with both traits necessary to create valuable and responsible scholars. This school alone has a waiting list of over 2,000 students beyond their current roster of 488.

The meeting presented a fairly equal record of successes achieved and work yet to do. There was a measured yet clear criticism of the effectiveness of the board on the issues of health, insufficient school textbook availability and commitment to creating an equal environment across the county where students can achieve their potential. The board was receptive to these views and expressed a desire to face these challenges step-by-step, daunting and frustrating as they are at times to both the public and the board members themselves.

historic house since its closure for water damage repairs in October 2016. Following the ribbon cutting, all house tours will be free until the residence closes at 5 p.m. On the house tour, visitors will be able to observe restored furnishings and household objects that reflect the lifestyle of an average American family during the Great Depression and World War II. Interactive areas allow children to touch and play with time-period household objects, while providing visitors with the opportunity to kinesthetically experience the lives of the families who used to reside in the Greenbelt community. Since the reconstruction commenced last October, a few dramatic changes have been made, such as the walls of the historic home which have been carefully repainted in colors appropriate to the time period. The event, which is sponsored by Friends of the Greenbelt Museum, will be providing light refreshments, and families are encouraged to bring picnic lunches or browse the Farmers Market so they can eat on the beautiful lawns outside the house. Free craft activities will honor the artist, Lenore Thomas Straus, who sculpted many well-known historic pieces seen around Greenbelt, and children can play safely on the playground. Dogs can even join in on the fun, as long as they remain on a leash. Those who can't make it on June 4, can visit the Historic House on Sundays between 1 to 5 p.m., or can schedule a visit or walking tour during the week. General admission $3, children under 12 free, FOGM members free. The Greenbelt Museum greatly appreciates volunteers, and any individuals who are passionate about the unique history of the Greenbelt community are encouraged to contact the Museum. the values that make Greenbelt a great community.

The Student Awards complement the ACE Educator Awards, which ACE presented to teachers and staff members from Greenbelt schools at a council meeting in March. Together, ACE awards and programs highlight the exemplary educational program of the schools that Greenbelt children attend, and the people who make it happen.

Each student received a number of gifts and certificates to commemorate his or her success. From ACE, each of the elementary and middle school students received a $25 Amazon gift card. The graduating ACE Student Award winners from Eleanor Roosevelt High School will each receive a $2000 scholarship to help them with some of the expenses associated with the next part of their education.

Each student was presented with an ACE T-shirt and invited to wear it and walk with ACE in the Labor Day Festival Parade in September. All student winners received certificates of recognition from the city, the county and the state.

Bumbry, Councilmember Turner's chief of staff, presented a donation of $2000 to the ACE Scholarship Fund from the county council through the assistance of Turner.

Delegate Healey awarded one of her House of Delegates Scholarships following the ACE awards.

The following is a summary of the presentation for each student:

Springhill Lake Elementary Christiana Alapa

Christiana is a fifth-grade student who is a role model of academia's highest standing. She has consistently received the award for a straight A average throughout the school year. Christiana has a keen interest in science, technology, engineering and math and is an active member of the robotics club. Recently, she was selected by the STEM coach and her peers to represent the SHL Robotics Club in a programming competition.

Christiana is a member of the Springhill Lake Chorus and performs regularly in school concerts and at community events. She is her class representative on the school's Student Government Association. She demonstrates her care for others by volunteering as a Reading Together Tutor. As a tutor, she arrives at school 20 minutes before the scheduled day to receive training and review reading lessons that she then teaches to second- or third-grade students at the end of the day. She is an outstanding scholar who exhibits the temperament and caring attributes worthy of an ACE award.

Braylon Martin

Braylon is a very dedicated, friendly, respectful, patient and committed student. He is a member of the Helping Hands Club that works year-round in activities like the Spring Stream Clean-Up project. He is also a member of the Springhill Lake basketball team.

Braylon participates in the Talented and Gifted pull-out program and is often called on to tutor his classmates. His sincere spirit and work ethic led his classmates to elect him as class president of the Student Government Association that works to develop community outreach projects.

Every Thanksgiving, Braylon and his father volunteer at the B. Getty Homeless Shelter in Baltimore, serving food to the homeless. Braylon shared that "When I serve people who need food on Thanksgiving, it makes my food at home taste that much better." He is a bright student who strives to maintain his quarterly Honor Roll/Principal's Honor Roll status.

Magnolia Elementary Guadalupe Cardenas

Guadalupe has been selected as the ACE Student because she is an example of a model student. Guadalupe comes in every morning ready to learn. She is never afraid to ask for help when she is confused, and is an individual amongst her peers. She readily assists her peers when they are in need, or if asked. She is well respected by other students, and they value her opinions.

Her team and her classmates can always count on her to conduct herself with dignity and respect. This not only shows that Guadalupe is responsible, it shows that she has a strong understanding of teamwork and integrity. Her mother reports that Guadalupe displays the same characteristics at home.

George Ford III

"What we, at Magnolia, wouldn't give to have an entire classroom of Georges!" He is the student who brings a smile to your face when he walks into a room. It is difficult to imagine that he knows what a bad day is – he seems eager and full of joy every day. George is extremely kind and always sees the best in any situation. Teachers can depend on him to complete his assignments to the best of his ability and to ask questions when he is in doubt. No challenge thus far has deterred George from giving his all. Small in stature, he does not let this bother him. His peers respect him even more because he is unaffected by the "short" jokes they throw his way. At home, George's parents say he is a joy. He is conscientious, a great brother to his siblings and the one who avoids all arguments and disagreements.

Dora Kennedy French Immersion School Yoshi Ramesh Chettri

Yoshi Chettri was born in Greenbelt and has lived here ever since. He started the French Immersion program at the age of five. Yoshi loves science. He was selected to represent the school last year at the County STEM Fair where he placed second in Chemistry. He is a well-rounded eighth grader, a fluent French speaker and an honor roll student with a 3.8 GPA. Yoshi is very respectful and humble. He helps redirect other students when they are off-task and is always willing to offer his peers his assistance. Yoshi also makes a great contribution to the lives in his community by delivering newspapers for the Greenbelt News Review.

Sean David Mungin

Sean is an exceptional trilingual (English, French, Russian), straight-A student with a GPA of 4.06. Since starting the French Immersion program, Sean has never missed Honor Roll. He is a leader, well-organized and very focused. His teachers describe him as a model student.

One of Sean's most outstanding qualities is his work ethic, which he applies to both academics and athletics. His integrity and ability to be honest with himself helps him succeed in the classroom and on the baseball diamond.

Sean has played for several baseball teams, including his middle school, PG Select and the Rawlings High Heat. He was a Youth Ambassador for the Negro League Hall of Fame. Once a year, he also participates in Comcast Cares Day activities at the Boys and Girls Club in Annapolis because he cares about others and has the ability to guide them in a positive direction.

Greenbelt Elementary Alyssa Bailey

Alyssa is truly a delightful student who always displays a positive attitude. Her teachers and administrators felt she would be a great candidate to represent GES as the Generating Outstanding Leadership Development (GOLD) student for the 2016-2017 school year. Alyssa welcomed this challenge.

She has developed her leadership skills and embraced the growth mindset that is cultivated at GES. Alyssa serves as a safety patrol and works closely with the Student Council on community service projects like the canned food drive, Toys for Tots and Pennies for Patients.

In October, she and her mother created and distributed Breast Cancer Awareness tote bags to her teachers and staff. Alyssa is a leader who helps set high standards for learning in her class and school community. She is hard-working and tries to achieve academic excellence. She is a role model for other students and most deserving of an ACE Award.

Favor Bate

Favor is an ambitious and capable student. He works very hard in school to earn the highest grades possible. He turns every assignment into an opportunity to increase his knowledge and is eager to participate in class activities. He has consistently been on the Honor Roll. Favor is a creative thinker, and he regularly shares his thoughts and ideas with the class.

In addition to being an excellent student, Favor is also a good citizen in the school. He is a safety patrol. He has also participated in activities such as the Greenbelt Elementary Chorus. He consistently demonstrates a genuine understanding of other children's backgrounds. He is sensitive to cultural differences and really tries to build bridges of understanding between his classmates. Favor consistently sets an example for other students. He exemplifies the school expectations of being responsible, reliable, safe and prepared.

Drug Drop Box Inaugurated

by Stan Zirkin

Members of city council and the police department celebrate the opening of the Drug Drop Box outside Greenbelt Police Station.

On May 12, with several city councilmembers present, the police department and the Public Safety Advisory Committee (PSAC) officially opened for public use the Drug Drop Box on the outside of the police station. As noted in last week's News Review, the box is a free service to citizens where, with certain exceptions, prescription and over-the-counter medications may be turned in anonymously, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week for safe disposal.

Mayor Emmett Jordan began the ceremony by introducing Councilmembers Judith Davis, Silke Pope and Leta Mach and thanking both the police department and PSAC for their efforts in making the drug disposal box a reality. He was followed at the podium by Acting Police Chief Thomas Kemp, PSAC Chair Cindy Comproni and PSAC Vice-Chair Laura Kressler, each of whom described the process which culminated in the installation of the box. Kressler was given special thanks for taking the lead in researching the issue on behalf of PSAC.

After the ribbon-cutting Davis made the inauguration complete by disposing of several bags of prescription drugs in the box.

31 Future Ted Talkers Shine At ERHS AP Capstone Colloquium

by Renauta York

The Eleanor Roosevelt High School AP Capstone program held its second annual research colloquium on Friday, April 28. Thirty-one students in the AP Research class, who have been taking the AP Seminar Class as a part of the two-year AP Capstone program, presented their projects to the public. Four students, selected by their peers, gave Ted Talk style presentations on their research projects to family members, first year students and their fellow classmates.

Troy Bradbury, the AP Capstone Seminar teacher and AP Capstone coordinator, began the colloquium by giving a short history of the program, highlighting the growth of the program as well as the outcome for the students. "AP Capstone is in its fourth year. It started out with 17 pilot schools nationwide and ERHS was one of them. There are currently 650 schools worldwide." Schools that want to participate in the program go through a one-year vetting process. Ten schools in Maryland are currently participating in the program. When the program started at ERHS, it started with 15 hand-picked students. This year 35 students are participating. There will be 55 next year. Eighth-grade students who are interested in the program will be able to apply to the program next year.

Bradbury noted that he had just gotten back from a College Board Conference in Chicago. In the feedback from the College Board, students "were more prepared for college," and "confident they can meet [college level] standards." He noted in relation to the students, "It's fantastic what these students can do." He concluded with telling the AP Research students, "it's been an honor to work with you. I'm incredibly proud of you."

Alex Kinder, the AP Research teacher, talked more about the AP Research class. Research is a one-year process, where "students choose a topic they're interested in, research and review the literature, then create a quality valid project based on their findings." He goes over methods with the students, who then write a literature review, conduct research on their topic, develop their arguments and write a five-section research paper. They also put on a 15- to 20-minute presentation along with a question and answer session.

After the four student presentations, the students were asked to come up to receive their Capstone certificates and pins. Principal Reginald McNeill congratulated the students on their success in the AP Capstone program and the depth of their projects. He left them with these words: "If you can do something you're interested in and you can do the work . . . I guarantee your first term of college . . . you are prepared and you're going to be able to handle it, congratulations."

Presentations

The first speaker was Ashna Mahmud, whose research was on The Effects of Romantic Movies on Teenagers. She researched if watching romantic movies affect teenager's perceptions of love and relationships. Her participants consisted of teenagers aged 13 to 19 that she chose through a survey sent out by school email. After obtaining data from the survey and researching previous works through a meta-analysis, she concluded that teenagers were influenced by watching romantic movies.

The second speaker, Timothy Jones, discussed his research on The Best Fire Protection for Residential Buildings. He conducted a meta-analysis of previous works that analyzed the fire safety of different building materials. After comparing the benefits and drawbacks of different building materials, he came up with a compilation of the best fire resistant materials for residential construction.

The third speaker was Gina Chung, who looked at The Relationship Between Social Perception and Reality. Her project researched what factors influenced teenaged girls' fashion choices. She did a survey with almost 200 responses and a meta-analysis to determine how teenage girls choose their clothes. The factors she investigated were social media, peers, parents and culture. She concluded that social media affected fashion choices the most.

The fourth speaker was Edward Brennan, who discussed The 5th Wave book series and The Hero's Journey. He investigated whether the book series fits in the framework of The Hero's Journey by Joseph Campbell. He defined the hero's journey as an arc that characters follow in 10 specific stages. He determined that the character in The 5th Wave series follows the hero's journey using literary analysis.

Reflections on Capstone

Linda Watson, the Technology Coordinator, commented, "they're just so passionate about their topic and you'll see when you hear them speak about their topic they are speaking as if they are experts, so it's really a wonderful program. Mrs. Peterson and I met with a group of Japanese visitors that were visiting our school.

Just at the time that they were coming through the library in lab we were finishing up the last few posters for the students. They were so impressed with the level of research and with the posters that they wanted to know how we did it? Where did we start, and [what was] the name of the program?"

Sieglinde Peterson, whose daughter, Catherine Peterson, is in the program, had the following observations: "It hones critical thinking skills. Kids have been growing up in this era where somebody can turn on the computer and Google anything they want and sometimes they believe whatever pops on the screen is [true]. [They] don't think or critically analyze it. I'm very grateful that Catherine's had a program that allowed her to delve deeply into a topic, read and learn how to critically (think). I think it will help her when she gets to college, writing papers. I think it will make college a lot easier."

Anna Kay Murray, Research Project: Black Women in Film: "These classes helped me so much, because before I started this I had no idea about research. I was good at writing papers. I was able to formulate arguments but . . . now I feel more confident in what I'm saying and what I'm doing and how, and how I express myself."

Deborah Whaley: My daughter's name is Maya Whaley and it [the AP Capstone program] has been awesome for her. Her research, her thoughts, the questions she's bringing home, what they have been talking about in [Research and Seminar] are great. She's going to go to Morgan State, and she got accepted to the honors college, which is something that we didn't even apply for . . . she got a scholarship [as well]."

Kinder, on the type of research paper they create: "We go over initially how to create a solid research project. They submit a formal proposal after we talk a little bit about what methods they can use, what types of questions are researchable, what method would best align with the approach. Once we do that then they start getting into the actual research. They do some preliminary research via a literature review. That's something that many colleges require someone to do, but not many students get exposure to. Then they get into their actual research using the method that they chose so the skills they learned in the seminar build on that."

He stressed the importance of the program in preparing students for college, "heading to college, learning those skills is really going to carry them through the college and their career." He also added, "It gives them a competency and the confidence to stay in college."
