Women in Greenbelt

Danielle McKinney: Greenbelt's First Black Woman on Council

by Melissa Sites

Danielle McKinney, Greenbelt's first African American woman elected to city council, is familiar with firsts in her family. Her mother was the first Black woman in the first class of women at St. John Fisher University, and became the first Black woman dean of students at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute. Her brother became the first Black assistant general manager in the National Hockey League for the Florida Panthers.

Danielle McKinney

Growing up in Albany, N.Y., McKinney had no Black teachers before college, but having two college-educated parents opened doors for her. As an eighth grader, McKinney attended Space Camp in Huntsville, Ala., and went to Spain as an exchange student at the age of 15. These experiences taught McKinney how to get to know people from different backgrounds. She studied educational leadership and policy at the University of Maryland, and thought, "If I'm going to be doing policy work I need to understand some of the issues that are going on in our urban schools." So she taught fifth grade with Teach for America in Long Beach, Calif., where she had 35 students, with two thirds as second-language learners. Her husband is a teacher at DuVal High School. McKinney currently works in training and development for Marriott and has lived in Greenbelt for five years.

McKinney's top priority is to be a consensus builder and

Charlestowne North Receiver Appointed; Tenants Notified

The Prince George's County Circuit Court appointed Tarantino Properties of Texas as receiver for the Charlestowne North apartment building on February 26, and Tarantino staff began working at the building on February 28. This occurred within one month of Freddie Mac's February 2 receivership filing in Prince George's County Circuit Court.

Charlestowne North tenants described receivership as "the best thing that can happen to us." (See Greenbelt News Review, February 8, 2024.) A receiver is a custodian responsible to the court to care for the property and resolve its many code violations. Receivers are often property management companies experienced in managing rental properties and authorized to collect rent. Tarantino's website says their business is focused on commercial and apartment properties, including services for property management, brokerage, leasing, renovation and receivership.

Crime Trends, Youth Offenders Discussed at Police Meeting

by Deb Daniel

More than 20 residents joined officers at the community meeting to discuss local crime.

On February 27, more than 20 residents joined Greenbelt police officers in a community meeting at the Community Center to discuss crime trends and prevention, juvenile crime and upcoming events. Other topics raised included traffic problems during road repair, dangerous vehicle exhibitions and funding bottlenecks.

Juvenile Offenders

Much discussion focused on juveniles who repeatedly break the law and receive only light consequences for their actions (usually the maximum sentence for a juvenile offender is probation with the family).

Some bills pending before the Maryland General Assembly seek to address the problem of repeat juvenile offenders (HB814, SB744, SB0792). However, the legislation leaves many issues unresolved, for example, at what age juveniles can understand the consequences of their actions and what environment would foster

City and Franklin Park Ponder Maintenance and Finances

by Cathie Meetre

On February 21, the Greenbelt City Council held a worksession with Franklin Park management. Part of that meeting is described in a separate article on public safety (see the February 29 issue). In the meeting, Laurie Bonner, operations manager for Fieldstone Properties (owner of Franklin Park), and Franklin Park Manager Denise Knight fielded questions from council and attendees on multiple topics. To set the scene, Bonner described the massive complex of 153 acres, 246 buildings and 2,877 rental units, stating multiple times during the meeting that Fieldstone's goal is to house people in quality, affordable properties. Franklin Park is divided into nine phases, each with its own boiler plant. In an interesting historical note, each of these phases was individually owned when the original Springhill Lake was built in the early 1960s.

Improvement Projects

Bonner commented that the replacement windows project is ahead of schedule and Fieldstone will shortly have completed three of the nine phases. Each window and sliding door must be individually measured and built. The remaining six phases, however, are on hold and will need to be paced with cash flow. Even so, they expect to complete them within the original three-year target. Following the windows, interior hallways are to be updated.

Fieldstone has been following a program to install new roofs and high efficiency boilers. With one boiler section already

Don't Cut Bus Service

One of the first things I learned when I moved here was that the public transit was appalling. Not just WMATA, the county-run buses and UMD too. I made a list of ways to improve transit; cutting service was not on that list.

At a time when, for so many reasons, public transit should be encouraging more riders, cutting service is not an environmentally sound choice.

One example of the current service: to get to a venue in Montgomery County on a Saturday afternoon, a distance of perhaps 10 miles, the combination bus/train trip as directed would have taken me two hours each way, and the train portion took me out of the way, sending me south first to go north, wasting my time. The trip planning on the website is often like that, so I spend hours trying to figure out the real best way to get to places I want to go.

Another example, going to the post office on a weekday. I just missed the return bus and had to wait an hour for the next one. I don't want to stand around at bus stops, particularly in wet or hot weather, but infrequent service means I've had to.

We are blessed here in Greenbelt to have, for those eligible, GIVES and the Greenbelt Connection. I doubt others in the DMV have such service available.

Having the consequences of mismanagement fall on already badly served riders by cutting service, giving them even fewer options, is not the answer

Do We Need a New School Building?

To piggyback off the idea expressed in recent News Review letters to move the municipal offices to empty office space instead of spending millions of dollars for a new municipal building, the same should be considered for the Dora Kennedy French Immersion School.

Pros:

1) The school will remain in Greenbelt; transportation would remain the same.

2) A new school would not need to be built, saving millions of dollars.

3) An existing old school would not have to be extensively rehabbed.

Origin

This film is Director Ava DuVernay's adaptation of journalist Isabel Wilkerson's nonfiction work Caste: The Origins of Our Discontents. While grappling with tremendous personal tragedy, Isabel sets herself on a path of global investigation and discovery. Despite the colossal scope of her project, she finds beauty and bravery while crafting one of the defining American books of our time. Starring Aunjanue Ellis-Taylor, Jon Bernthal, Niecy Nash, Vera Farmiga, Audra McDonald and Nick Offerman. Said Sergio Burstein of the Los Angeles Times about the film, "Origin is a sincere, passionate and excellently acted film that takes us on a discovery, with wonder, of fascinating historical situations."

Bob Marley: One Love

This biographical drama celebrates the life and music of an icon who inspired generations through his message of love and unity. On the big screen for the first time, discover Bob's powerful story of overcoming adversity and the journey behind his revolutionary music.

The Taste of Things

Cook Eugénie (Juliette Binoche) and her boss Dodin (Benoît Magimel) grow fond of one another over 20 years, and their romance gives rise to dishes that impress even the world's most illustrious chefs. When Dodin is faced with Eugénie's reluctance to commit to him, he begins to cook for her. Said critic Max Weiss of Baltimore Magazine, "The Taste of Things is not just a sensual experience for the characters, but for the viewer as well. And it goes beyond the food."

Turn Every Page

This documentary chronicles the remarkable 50-year relationship between two literary legends, writer Robert Caro and his longtime editor Robert Gottlieb. Now 86, Caro is working to complete the final volume of his masterwork, The Years of Lyndon Johnson; Gottlieb, 90, waits to edit it. The task of finishing their life's work looms before them. The film is an intimate look into artistry, mortality, antagonism and the transformative power of creative collaboration.

Howl's Moving Castle

Exquisitely illustrated by master animator Hayao Miyazaki, the film is a delight to children and adults alike. Sophie (Emily Mortimer) has an uneventful life at her late father's hat shop, but all that changes when she befriends wizard Howl (Christian Bale), who lives in a magical flying castle. However, the evil Witch of Waste (Lauren Bacall) takes issue with their budding relationship and casts a spell on young Sophie, which ages her prematurely. Now Howl must use all his magical talents to battle the jealous hag and return Sophie to her former youth and beauty.

Harry "Hank" Irving

Hank Irving

Harry "Hank" Gerald Irving of Greenbelt died in his home on Sunday, March 3. Born on January 4, 1945, in Mt. Rainier, Hank's life journey was one of dedication, service and love.

During his formative years, Hank attended St. Ambrose Catholic Elementary School, followed by Bladensburg High School and St. John's College High School, where he was on the varsity football and wrestling teams. He was a dedicated member of the JROTC. Following graduation he enlisted in the Army, eventually becoming a drill sergeant during the Vietnam era, where he dedicated himself to training and mentoring other young soldiers.

Upon his return from service, Hank earned both bachelor's and master's degrees in Recreation and Parks Administration from the University of Maryland, College Park, the field which would become his life's work. During those summers away from school he enjoyed serving as a part-time police officer in Ocean City.

It was at the University of Maryland where Hank found the love of his life and wife of 45 years, Maureen "Moe." They were married on February 26, 1976, and in 1978 they welcomed identical twin daughters Christy and Kelly.

Hank's 38 years of service as director of the Greenbelt Recreation Department began in 1971, and he left an impression on the community that will never be forgotten. His tireless efforts led to numerous additions and improvements to the city's recreational facilities and programs, including the development of the indoor Aquatic & Fitness Center, Schrom Hills Park, the Springhill Lake Recreation Center, the Skate Park, the Community Center and much more. His efforts along with his unwavering support and mentorship of his staff earned him the admiration of his beloved work family for 38 years. He was also an active member of both the Maryland and National Recreation and Parks Associations throughout his career.

Hank took delight in bringing laughter to family and friends with his jokes and silly gags. He loved annual St. Patrick's Day parade celebrations and shenanigans, summers eating crabs, vacations on Cape Cod with Moe's family, who he held dear, and taking weekend trips with his wife and daughters. He enjoyed British TV, old movies, University of Maryland football and the Washington Redskins. He was a lifetime member of the Greenbelt American Legion where he and Moe enjoyed many Labor Day and 4th of July celebrations.

But Hank's greatest joy in life

New Ways Ministry Speaks

Francis DeBernardo and Sister Jeannine Gramick with Worship Associates Carol Boston and Carol Carter Walker

In 1976, a Catholic Bishop wrote a pastoral letter, Sexuality: God's Gift, one of the first statements to contain a compassionate and encouraging message to gay and lesbian people. He addressed the GLBTQ+ community directly, saying, "We pledge our willingness...to try to find new ways to communicate the truth of Christ because we believe it will make you free." That passage and the term, new ways, caught the attention of a priest and nun team who were already ministering to the gay and lesbian community. A series of workshops then gave rise to New Ways Ministry, a non-profit advocating for Catholic gay and lesbian concerns. Today, we will hear from its Executive Director, Francis DeBernardo and Co-Founder Jeannine Gramick about this work and see its intersectionality with ours.

was playing golf alongside his wife Moe. They took up the sport later in life and fell in love with it immediately. Hank often tried to figure out a way to outscore Moe, who had a natural gift for the game, but he rarely was able. And that was more than alright with him.

Hank's legacy of dedication, service and love will continue to inspire all who were fortunate enough to know him. He will be deeply missed and fondly remembered.

In his passing, Hank is reunited with his beloved Maureen and departed loved ones, including his parents Emily and Henry Irving, his sister Patricia Wildman (Ted) and brother Timothy Irving (Linda). Sue Johnson

Born in December of 1947, Sue Marie Johnson (née Vradenburg) died on December 19, 2023.

Sue graduated from St. Mary's College of Maryland in 1966 and later obtained a law degree from the University of Maryland. She was an industry leader for women in the construction industry. She served as the publicity chairperson for the Greater Washington D.C. Chapter of the National Association of Women in Construction and attained the titles of comptroller and IBM Systems 32 data processing manager in the 1970s while at Standard Electric Company. In those capacities, she worked on widely ranging projects from the D.C. Metro Subway Farecard Collection System to residential condo/apartments at Greenbriar/Glen Oaks in Greenbelt.

Sue also had a consulting business for seniors as well as a private catering service. She is remembered for her flair for decorating and entertaining, her unique sense of humor and her eye for order and efficiency. She loved shopping at thrift stores, collecting turtle artwork and clocks, conducting yard sales and taking walks with her best friend Tiger, a Shih-Poo.

Sue grew up all over the world, including Italy, Japan and several states, living wherever her father, Brady Vradenburg, a captain in the Army, was stationed. Among those, her favorite home was Williamsburg, Va., where her mother, Nancy Vradenburg, was a character-docent in the village. She lived in College Park and Greenbelt (Glen Oaks and Westchester Park) for over 20 years and would host "porch socials" with her neighbors. Her last months were spent in Venice, Calif., with her family.

Sue is survived by her niece, Rebecca Chou (daughter of Sue's sister, Kathryn Hoover), and her two great-nieces, Juniper and Ivy Chou. Donations can be made to the COPD Foundation in her memory at copdfoundation.org.

4) The drinking water problem would be solved.

Obviously, there are security issues to consider. For example: locking security entry doors on the floor(s) the school would be on, proximity readers for entry by students and personnel, resource officer(s) and perhaps a dedicated elevator that would go only to the floor(s) the school is on. These things are already done for businesses that deal with classified, protected or confidential information. It shouldn't be too difficult to implement for DKFI.

News Review Plans Update To Its Old Online Presence

With much fanfare, the News Review implemented its new website in 2015. Former Member Joan Falcao had pioneered the first site in the early 2000s, but the new one was built by Diamante, a start-up born in Greenbelt's own MakerSpace. The design is relatively simple and appealing, especially given we're a newspaper and not primarily web-oriented, but like Fibber McGee's closet, it's long overdue for a cleaning out.

Enter 2024 and a grant from ARPA funds from the city to refresh the site and extend some of its capabilities. The News Review has put together a request for proposals (RFP) from web developers to find a vendor that can bring new life to our small but crucial enterprise. The RFP sets out what the newspaper needs and asks how the developer would address it. It asks for an estimate of cost. But it is flexible in nature, and discussion is expected before award.

If you or someone you know has experience developing small website applications, we'd be delighted to see this news passed on. The RFP is available at greenbeltnewsreview.com/RFP/2024GNR-RFP.pdf. Questions should be emailed to GNRWebRFP@gmail.com.

listener. She values bringing underheard voices to the table, and suggests that more flexibility, such as holding council meetings in different locations around the city, could help residents bring their issues before council. "People might have transportation or childcare issues or work conflicts," she said. McKinney commends the city manager for putting council meetings on Facebook live, Zoom and Instagram. "We need to do a little more digging," she said, "to find where those channels are, and figure out how to frame the story and collect stories that are representative of all the different people. One of the reasons I started getting involved in the community was that there was not a lot of information coming to the newest part of Greenbelt in Greenbelt Station" (where McKinney resides). McKinney wants to bring more young people onto the youth advisory committees. "We have to think differently about how to reach out to the kids. The application process may not work," McKinney said. "Maybe we go to kids' night at the Youth Center. I would love to include kids from 7th and 8th grades." McKinney admires the Boys and Girls Club, which holds basketball games every Saturday at Greenbelt Middle School, stating, "It's important that we connect with the people who are already doing the work."

McKinney has a passion for gardening. On her balcony she has grown Brussels sprouts, Swiss chard, romaine, arugula and herbs, and she loves to make salad dressings with what she grows. Her grandfather, who grew up in South Carolina, shared the love of gardening with her. After being on a waitlist for four years, she managed to get a garden plot on Gardenway. In the 10 x 50-foot space she put in six 4 x 6 raised beds. "My father came down and helped me put up a shed," she said. She plans to put in a rain barrel with solar timed drip irrigation. Growing food to increase our local food supply is important for McKinney. "We have the space to grow," she said, describing space-conscious ways to grow food without impacting Greenbelt's tree canopy.

McKinney is determined to make the most of green spaces around Greenbelt Station. "The Neighborhood Design Center in Hyattsville partnered to do a green space master plan," she said. "We did community walks and mapped out how to bring more facilities onto that side of town: basketball courts, pickleball, dog parks, gardens. I want to figure out from a budgetary standpoint when we can move forward, and bring in foundation partners to help fund it."

McKinney continues to be inspired by the memory of Ric Gordon and his support when she ran for council. "He was truly an amazing person - his sense of optimism; it was truly about bringing the people together," said McKinney. "There's nobody that could ever replace or fill his footsteps, but I do feel an obligation to do my very best because that's what he would have done."

Luminis Health Offers Free Diabetes Classes

As part of its community outreach program to serve vulnerable populations and to prevent and manage chronic conditions, Luminis Health is offering a nine-month diabetes prevention program. The free virtual classes for people who have been diagnosed with pre-diabetes or are at risk for diabetes will meet on a weekly basis for the first four months, then once per month for the next five months. Beginning on Monday, March 11, the classes will meet on Mondays from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m.

The evidence-based program is targeted to individuals with pre-diabetes with the goal of weight loss and behavior change. A specially trained lifestyle coach will lead the program, which will include a support group of people with similar goals and challenges. The classes will focus on how to eat healthy, be active, self-monitor, problem solve, manage stress, stay motivated, be positive and change participants' lifestyle.

Register for the free classes using the Eventbrite link at eventbrite.com/e/diabetes-prevention-program-dpp-tickets-807173516717 or call 443-481-5555. Additional details and instructions will be sent after registration.

Greenbelt City Manager Josué Salmerón notified tenants of the receivership approval by email on February 27. He said lender Freddie Mac, Tarantino and the city were preparing a work plan to prioritize the building's code violations and expected the building's office phone and email to be established within days for resident communication with Tarantino staff. Salmerón said residents should expect direct communications from Tarantino Property Management.

Rental License, Rent Collection

Terri Hruby, the city's Planning and Community Development director, explained that her office issued a three-month conditional, temporary license to Tarantino. The license will remain valid as long as Tarantino makes acceptable progress toward addressing property maintenance violations that her office identified for immediate and priority action. Tarantino was to provide payment instructions to residents and begin collecting rents effective March 1. When all open violations are abated, the city will issue a non-conditional license, valid until the property's annual license renewal date in August 2024.

Utilities and Trash

WSSC issued a February 22 notice for water and sewer charges unpaid since August 2023, upon which the city negotiated a hold on disconnecting water and sewer service. Tarantino is addressing unpaid bills from WSSC, Pepco, Washington Gas and the waste collection service. On February 28, Greenbelt Public Works staff cleared the building's trash chute which was full up to the eighth floor, the building's top floor.

City Commitment

Mayor Emmett Jordan said, "We are relieved that the ongoing issues with Charlestowne North ... are being resolved. Our residents can now begin to return to a sense of normalcy and stability with their living arrangements. We are also thankful that, as a team, we were able to help our constituents in their time of need." Salmerón said, "This is a crucial step toward resuming normal operations and ensuring the safety and well-being of our residents at Charlestowne North Apartments, but much work remains to ensure the long-term sustainability of the property. We remain committed to supporting the residents and working with the lenders, property management and residents during this process." He emphasized the city's continuing commitment to communicate prompt updates to residents to ensure they have legitimate information throughout this process.

Pool, Fields and Charlestowne North Occupy the City Council

by Maurice Crawford

The Greenbelt City Council met on Monday, February 26 and discussed a range of topics, including the status of the Charlestowne North apartments, equipment purchases for ballfield maintenance, repairs to the indoor pool at the Greenbelt Aquatic & Fitness Center, the Dora Kennedy French Immersion (DFKI) school and Metro's plans to reduce services.

Charlestowne North

City Manager Josué Salmerón updated council on the status of the Charlestowne North Apartments and was happy to report that as of February 26, a judge had approved the receivership motion. The legal and property management teams will be working to address the code violations and other immediate issues facing the property. Freddie Mac has provided an advance of funds to help stabilize the property and water and electric providers have placed a hold on disconnections. There is no disconnect notice for gas but there are outstanding bills. Salmerón stated that there is much that remains to be done, including the foreclosure process, but the long-term goal is to find a new property owner.

Salmerón felt that some lessons learned from this situation that should be explored include developing a robust right of first refusal which would prioritize the renters' offer to purchase a property if it is for sale. Also, learning what more can be done from a code enforcement perspective that will provide better protection for residents.

Councilmember Jenni Pompei asked if any legal action was going to take place. Salmerón said they were looking into this with the state but that the residents have filed complaints with the Attorney General's Office. Councilmember Silke Pope wanted to make sure that council remained informed and asked if there was a process for this. Salmerón made it clear that the city intends to remain involved until a new property owner is identified.

Ballfields

Public Works staff sought approval to spend $352K of American Rescue Plan Act (ARPA) funds for equipment used to maintain ballfields including a tractor, batwing mower, ballfield groomer and other items. Some of these equipment pieces were purchased in 1995 but now need to be replaced. Councilmember Rodney Roberts felt that the ARPA funds should be invested in Greenbelt West to develop play areas for children, and not on equipment that the city will purchase over the years. This led to a discussion on what areas of Greenbelt have been most supported by ARPA funds. That point of discussion was not resolved but council approved the expenditure.

Indoor Pool

Council approved a request to spend $38K on pre-construction engineering services to assess the cause of water pooling on the interior pool deck surface. Assistant Director of Public Works Brian Kim said the problem is that at the deep end of the indoor pool, water is settling between two layers and not flowing into the drain. It is a serious issue that needs to be addressed immediately.

Public Works staff have proposed that engineers be hired to investigate the problem and recommend how to repair it. There were some questions about when the assessment would begin and how it would affect pool operations. Salmerón thought the team could be onsite in two weeks, and that their work would have a minimal impact on pool hours. He said, however, that this is the first step in the process and the second step would involve repairs to the pool, which will likely affect pool operations. More will be learned after the initial assessment is completed.

State Legislative Bills

There were two bills discussed during the meeting. The first bill (SB0654, HB0821) would create a student support specialist network with specified membership in each public high school in Prince George's County, and requires each network to develop, complete and implement a student support success action plan. There were several questions regarding implementation of the bill and the associated costs. Salmerón mentioned that all bills are supposed to be assessed for fiscal impact and ensuring that a bill works at the local level can be challenging.

The second bill (HB095) would require the governor to include in the annual budget bill an appropriation from the Transportation Trust Fund of at least $80,533,314 to the Locally Operated Transit System Grant Program for statewide program operations. For both bills, council decided to wait for more information before taking any action.

Dora Kennedy School

Council agreed to send a letter to the county historical commission asking that a historic site evaluation be made of the DKFI building. Council felt that such a designation would provide some level of protection for the building.

Metro Services

Council discussed the proposed changes to Metro services (see the February 29 issue). Mayor Emmett Jordan said that Metro has been challenged since the pandemic. Pompei believed that Metro has been historically underfunded which has exacerbated the current situation. Roberts pointed out that we spend far more on roads than public transit. The council agreed to write a letter to Metro opposing the changes.

Petitions and Requests

Resident Leon Schachter requested that council lift the current rule limiting service on advisory committees and boards to one at a time per individual when the additional committee or board meets only as needed. He noted that understanding of consequences if not the home or detention environment. It was generally agreed that besides the police enforcing the law, schools must confront rising truancy, legislation and parents need support in holding their children accountable for their actions.

Rising Crime Rates

Police Chief Richard Bowers identified as an especially concerning issue: the rising assaults on law enforcement officers during service calls. There were 12 assaults in 2023, up from two or three assaults in 2022. In 2023 the department had 33,000 calls for service and 500 arrests and only 10 use-of-force actions in all those calls. Across Maryland, the rate for most types of crime is rising. In Greenbelt, there was an overall 43 percent increase in crime in 2023 citywide. Leading the increase is automobile theft which was up 263 percent over 2022. In 2023, robberies were up 46 percent. Juvenile arrests were up 212 percent. All these incidents are included in the Uniform Crime Reporting (UCR) data which include theft, rape, robbery, murder and aggravated assault and totaled over 1,700 crimes in 2023. The city's population has increased but not enough to account for those high numbers.

This year, only six weeks in, compared to the same six-week period last year, automobile theft is down 50 percent and theft is down 254 percent but robberies are up 600 percent. These increasing calls for service and crime put additional work on police officers. Fortunately, the police department has additional support through partnership with the Prince George's County Police Department and the Maryland State Police. With extra patrols and partnerships, the toll on the city's police staff is heavy but the crime numbers are coming down. One problem that remains is theft and armed robbery taking place around Greenbelt Middle School, frequently for items like shoes.

Crisis Intervention

The police Crisis Intervention Team (CIT) managed 500 crisis calls last year with 20 staff, not counting follow-up calls. Bowers considers this co-responder program, where police are paired with a crisis intervention staff person, to be a success. When appropriate, CIT partners with the city's CARES program to help find or provide interventions for the families, but CIT Supervisor Rachel Tobin reported a lack of systemwide resources for parents.

CARES provides a Youth Services Bureau, but funding for it from the state has been reduced. In this Maryland General Assembly session, bill HB1136, if passed, would restore some of the needed funding for the Youth Services Bureau.

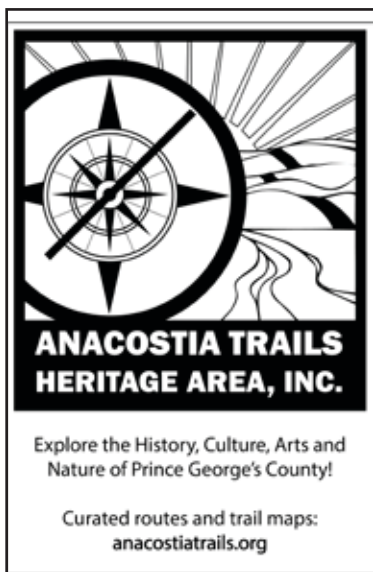

Department Composition

Eunice Pierre from the Public Safety Advisory Committee (PSAC) asked Bowers to discuss diversity hiring in the police department. Bowers and Deputy Chief Tim White produced the following statistics for the 53 sworn police officers: 58 percent are people of color, 42 percent are white, and by gender, 84 percent are male and 16 percent female. Front-line supervisors are 33 percent white and 66 percent people of color (breakdown by gender was not shared).

Vehicle Exhibitions

Resident John Mills asked about the incident on Hanover Parkway where a mass of cars came together and would not disperse (see Street Takeover by Cars in the February 15 issue). Police from all over had to come to disperse the cars but no one was arrested. Greenbelt police officer Captain Jermaine Gullledge explained that in a crisis, the best response is to ensure safety. He noted there were cars doing dangerous stunts and

Three More Teens Arrested In Murder of DuVal Student

by Anna Bedford-Dillow

Last week Prince George's County Police arrested three more suspects in connection with the murder of DuVal High School student Jayda Medrano-Moore, whom police have identified as a Greenbelt resident (see the September 14, 2023, issue).

A 17-year-old male, who is accused of being the shooter, was arrested in the days following Medrano-Moore's murder. Three additional suspects have now been arrested and are accused of planning the fight and coordinating it via group chat and text messages. They are 18-year-old Ramon Richardson of Lanham, 18-year-old Cameron Anderson of Landover and a 17-year-old male from Lanham who is being charged as an adult. All those arrested were high school students at either Charles Herbert Flowers High School or DuVal.

On September 11, 2023, at approximately 3:45 p.m., officers believe 16-year-old Medrano-Moore was walking on Palamar Drive with friends after leaving school when a fight ensued between two groups as part of an ongoing dispute. A witness said the group had been followed by a suspect in a ski mask and further suspects arrived, getting out of a car. During the fight, one suspect produced a gun. Detectives believe Medrano-Moore was attempting to intervene when she was shot.

State's Attorney for Prince George's County Aisha Braveboy said that although Medrano-Moore was not the intended victim, the fight was planned and the teens also planned to use weapons.

Richardson, Anderson and the two 17-year-olds are facing first- and second-degree murder charges. They are being held without bond.

endangering people by shooting fireworks. The police did get everyone out safely and cleared the area – the nuisance cars then went into Anne Arundel County. Bills in the Maryland General Assembly (HB0601/SB0442) are addressing exhibition behavior and loud, dangerous driving.

Greenbelt East Paving

Mary Thomas from PSAC spoke about the lack of traffic control during the paving and construction on Greenbelt Road. She shared that four-way gridlock caused traffic to wait for an excessive amount of time. She had waited 10 minutes at an intersection to get from Greenway Center to Hanover Parkway. Greenbelt Police Department has been in touch with the state police about the traffic situation but noted the priority for the state police is ensuring the safety and protection of the highway workers. Mayor Emmett Jordan expressed optimism that the work will be completed soon as the street is now completely ground down and ready for paving.

Funding for Legislation

City Manager Josué Salmerón appreciated the police department holding community meetings. He stressed that legislation with full funding was critical to keep Greenbelt safe and juveniles protected as they grow.

Attendee Questions

Resident and former city councilmember Judith Davis asked if calls for service included every call, both emergency and non-emergency calls. Bowers confirmed the calls included every kind of call, including traffic stops and animal control. Bowers did not have statistics on repeat offenders per a question from Davis.

Resident Connie Davis asked what the times for peak crime activity are. Bowers responded 3 to 11 p.m. are high crime hours.

Answering a question from PSAC Chair Peggy Higgins, Bowers noted that 3,300 of the 33,000 calls for service were traffic stops.

Resident Carolyn Lambright-Davis asked if police are engaging with the community by getting out of their cars and talking with residents. Bowers mentioned the work of Franklin Park Partnership Officer Erick Alvarez in running a one-week program for mentoring children. Other officers spend their own money to buy food and school supplies for kids as they head home after school, he added.

replaced, that plus the window replacement has shown considerable savings in energy. In addition, 14 buildings have replaced water heaters and the grounds have recently received $100K in improvements to landscaping.

Pool Conversion

Since Covid, the second of the two pools in the complex has remained closed and Bonner and Knight confirmed that the remaining pool has not reached capacity usage during the last few summers. The plan for the coming year is to fill in the closed pool and develop the area for a variety of purposes: sports facilities, a second dog park, a grilling area and an updated play area, with the hope of an 18-month turnaround with work potentially starting this April. Bonner explained that running the pool is very expensive, especially since it only gets used three months of the year, and that Fieldstone believes a more extensively used area that costs less money is a sound strategy.

They have recently done resident surveys to identify the most-wanted improvements. Residents continued to express concern over lack of ballfields and the poor state of the Springhill Lake Recreation Center.

Finances, Rent Stabilization Cap

At several points in the discussion, costs and cashflow came into focus. Prince George's County capped rent increases in new rentals to three percent, in temporary legislation being considered for permanent legislation. Bonner spoke of the pressures this creates when some of their costs, particularly insurance, have gone up by as much as 20 to 30 percent. She explained they can't afford to upgrade a vacated apartment when the new rent is so little above the earlier one and that this inevitably gradually impacts the quality of what they offer.

Delinquencies, some stemming from Covid, remain a problem with approximately 20 percent of tenants in arrears, of whom perhaps 80 to 90 percent are behind by 90 days or more. Bonner and Knight described how they work with tenants to enable them to retain their leases. Strategies focused on helping residents pay their way going forward and helping them reduce prior indebtedness by, for example, removing a late fee incurred earlier each time they complete a current month's payment on time. So far, there has been one eviction this year.

Future Development

Mayor Emmett Jordan asked what impact the planned FBI building would have. Bonner repeated that they aimed to provide good quality and affordable housing and she thought this would resonate with FBI employees. She stated that it was, "balance between shiny and new and providing what people can afford." She reiterated that they would continue to upgrade units (noting that approximately 1,000 or one-third of the apartments now had washers and dryers).

With the anticipated Beltway Plaza redevelopment, Bonner stated that all issues are resolved with the shopping center and they were just waiting for a start date for the redevelopment.

Code Violations

City Director of Planning and Community Development Terri Hruby commented on city inspections and code issues. She said that the annual inspection is in the spring, and as Franklin Park's rental license expires in May, city inspections are starting early and are increasing to 50 percent of apartments checked (up from 20 percent in previous years). The city is back to, and prefers to do, in-person inspections.

When asked about the penalties for infractions, Hruby stated that the owners have 10 days to remedy and to schedule reinspection and that additional time may be granted depending on what has to be done. She did note that if the matter went to court, backups there make it a multiple-month process to get a resolution. Fines are $200 up to $1,000.

In terms of Franklin Park, the city has received 74 complaints since July 1, 2023. A major area has been the scourge of rodents which, Hruby said, have been especially prevalent throughout the region this year and not only for Franklin Park. Knight was positive about working on their process to prevent infestation, describing how, in the case of persistent problems, tracking down the source often led to the people who didn't complain about infestations, with whom Franklin Park would work on issues like hoarding or hygiene.

Maintenance Issues

Residents attending the meeting brought up some extensive concerns, particularly about routine and emergency maintenance tickets that didn't get attended to, in some cases for months. Concerns included a persistent roof leak, exterior lights being out for months and graffiti in playgrounds. A resident described the ticket system as "broken."

Franklin Park management appeared concerned to resolve these issues – especially with the contractor that fields nighttime and weekend emergency calls – and requested contact information from those at the meeting or contributing electronically to expedite the process.

Trash collection was also a concern, with dumpsters sometimes overflowing. Knight described how their maintenance crews trailed the trash trucks to clean up after the dumpsters were emptied. A discussion ensued about recycling (which is not currently provided) and Knight and Bonner were referred to the city's recycling coordinator,

Luisa Robles.

Looking Ahead

Jordan noted that applications are again being accepted for the county's Emergency Rental Assistance Program, funds designated to help those still impacted by Covid, and offered city help in applying. Fifteen-year resident Kevin Lockhart suggested a tenants' association could provide a useful source of input to Franklin Park management. Knight was quick to promote the idea of a team approach to garnering resident input rather than an association. Jordan wondered whether there were plans for electric vehicle charging stations, to which Bonner replied that Fieldstone was evaluating how to roll out a consistent program across all its Maryland and New Jersey properties.

that for some such bodies an entire year could elapse without a meeting.

Concerned community member Malaika Nji-Kerber asked the council to do what they can to prevent the students at DKFI from being moved and to protect the historic building, which she described as "well-built and beautiful." The DKFI school itself brings families to this area, she said. "It is one of the main attractions for a lot of families that want to move here," she said, describing it as a top-notch public school and adding that, "It may be a specialized school, it may be a magnet school with a specialty in French Immersion, but it is full of public school students who live in this area." She felt that most of the students live here, they are community members and that they matter. The decision to move the school had been made without consulting faculty or staff; and families found out from the Greenbelt News Review (see the February 1 issue). "It is one of the schools that raises our test scores countywide, statewide as well ... We need to do the best that we can to get PGCPs to turn back from what was, in their own words, a bad decision," she said.

Jordan responded that they had been shocked to find out about this proposal and are working with their sister municipalities.

Council accepted a check from Guillermo Guerrero on behalf of the Eleanor & Franklin Roosevelt Democratic Club in the amount of $250 for the city's Emergency Assistance Fund. Jordan thanked them for the contribution to the fund that assists displaced families.

Greenbelt Youth Musical: Buried Treasure Enters Final Weekend

Three young adventurers explore themes of bravery, knowledge and perfection, digging deeper to get to the heart of these virtues that lie beneath the surface of what may seem obvious at first glance. With Buried Treasure: An Underground Musical Adventure, writer and director Christopher Cherry proves himself a master of clever words and catchy melodies, but just as impressive is his storytelling and development of themes across intersecting storylines.

Each of the heroes is devoted to a particular virtue, laid out clearly in the song Brave as a Lion, Wise as an Owl, Good as Gold. Josh (Donovan Amin) tries to prove his bravery to a gang called the Wildcats, and meets warriors underground, including Leopards and Tigers. Harriet (Kira Wilkinson), a young scholar who values knowledge above all else, learns to share her intellectual skills. Miranda (Hannah Baker) prizes perfection, but eventually comes to realize that a golden exterior may not reflect true virtue. All the leads deliver outstanding performances, inciting enthusiastic applause from the packed house.

Sometimes one actor will play more than one role. Jacob Royle provides the adventurers with advice as the mythological figures of Cerberus and Coyote, as well as puzzling mythographer Cato McSage. Nyle Karamat menaces the heroes as both a green dragon and a red dragon who's a little too fond of burning down libraries. These obvious doublings prepare the audience to look deeper within other characters, reinforcing the overall theme of the show: to try to perceive hidden truths beneath surface appearances. Choruses of warriors, ragamuffins, "Dunstans" and more allow actors to transform between roles and take on fun elements of movement, skipping, leaping and dancing. Water, fire and an amazing flight of bats are exciting theatrical elements.

With Greenbelt Recreation's Nicole DeWald heading up production design, costumes and sets are simple but evocative. Costumes ranging from drab to shimmering, including gorgeous headpieces on the dragons, remind us again not to place too much value on appearances. Just a few well-designed set pieces bring the entire underworld to life. Beautifully rendered stagelights evoke the cave setting, while two rolling screens come together to depict the facade of an ideal public library. The sets are then easily transformed into a girl's bedroom, a roaring river and a princely palace.

Buried Treasure will show again on Saturday, March 9 at 2 and 7 p.m. at the Community Center. Get tickets soon because this entertaining production is sure to sell out.

Labor Day Festival Marks Big Anniversary, Needs Volunteers

by Melissa Sites

This year will mark the 70th Greenbelt Labor Day Festival. The volunteer organizing committee will meet to kick off planning for the Festival on Tuesday, March 12. Linda Ivy, who has been on the committee for 31 years and has served as president for the last 17, said, "We would like to see more volunteers from the community. If they don't want to make a commitment for the entire year, they could volunteer at the Festival for bingo or the photo show, just to name two."

Jon Gardner first joined the committee in 2004 and has seen some changes over the years. The Craft Fair has become a big part of the Festival, and the Rising Stars talent show provides an opportunity for community participation. Adding a community art installation was new last year, and Gardner would like to see such projects continue. He added, "We're hoping to make T-shirts for the 70th Festival. We'll run a design contest, and then get shirts made up with the winning entry."

Davina Johnson, who joined in 2008, said, "We have tried to keep the same feel to the Festival with similar rides, art show, Community Center games, parade, music and bingo. Although we have more food choices, we have vendors that have been with the Festival for many years."

To involve Greenbelters who live outside the city center, a shuttle bus rotates continuously during the entire weekend. Ivy suggests, "The entire community can get involved by volunteering or entering the photo show, art show or craft fair."

Ivy says the greatest reward of being on the committee is "keeping a 70-year-old Festival that is all-volunteer going. To be part of a weekend that many call 'Greenbelt's Homecoming.' To see the kids' smiling faces when they get their wrist bands for an afternoon of carnival rides. To walk through and hear 'bingo!' To visit the craft fair to pick out unique gifts, or the photo and art shows that showcase the talent we have in Greenbelt. Businesses and groups can hand out flyers and talk to people and share community information. There are so many free things to do, like a day of kids' fun on Braden Field. Bring a blanket or lawn chair and listen to some amazing music groups."

"My greatest reward is watching it all come together year after year and see the smiles on all the faces of the people who attend as well as all the volunteers who make this happen!"

The Festival was started in 1955 as a way of raising funds to build a Youth Center, and is considered "one of Maryland's largest all-volunteer organized events." For more information, visit greenbeltlaborday.com.

Upgraded Spaces and Café Planned for Greenbelt Library

Planned improvements to allocation of space in the Greenbelt Library, aimed at greater convenience, security and enjoyment for visitors, were discussed in a February 14 meeting of city staff, city council and representatives of the Prince George's County Memorial Library System. Plans to relocate and reshelve the Tugwell Collection in the Library, and other community concerns, had prompted the meeting. Renovations should improve conservation of the Tugwell historical collection, upgrade security for Passport Services and provide a refreshment space for visitors.

A new café space with vending machines is planned to refresh visitors during long study sessions and provide a relaxed venue for lively discussions.

Passport Services, now on the lower level of the Library, will move into the former Tugwell space for safety and security reasons.

The new Tugwell Room is larger, more centrally located and better ventilated, Library staff emphasized. It will better conserve the historical collection and also improve seating and provide tables for visitors.

A celebration of the Tugwell Room is being planned to reacquaint the community with the collection in its new home and showcase the value and convenience of Greenbelt's historical archive.

All the meeting participants reaffirmed their partnership, commitments and formal agreement about the Tugwell Room's importance to Greenbelt.

During the transition, the Tugwell Collection is still available; Library staff will retrieve materials on request.

For more on the Tugwell Collection and its move, see last week's issue.
