Employee Concerns Arise at Grocery Store Board Meeting

by Erica Johns

The member comment portion of the Greenbelt Co-op's December 11 board meeting raised concerns about employee working conditions, which also had been raised by several employees at the August board meeting. Board Vice Chair Steven Bernheisel led the meeting.

Concerns of current and former employees who spoke at the August meeting, after General Manager Dan Gillotte was asked to leave the room, included reported lack of raises for most employees for four years, lack of job descriptions, annual reviews or transparency around raises and assignments, as well as poor fiscal decisions in other areas (such as accruing late fees on bills). Employees also complained in August of being unable to chat with customers, even when not busy, and lack of support for employees during incidents of harassment by customers, which have included threats and being spat on.

GHI Members Meet to Discuss Pipe Replacement, Budget, Handbook

GHI Budget for 2025

On Thursday, December 12, the Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI) Board of Directors held a town hall meeting to inform members about revisions to the member handbook, the 2025 budget and the next steps in the Pipe Replacement Project.

Pipe Replacement

Director of Technical Services Thomas Williams gave an update on the Pilot Pipe Replacement Project which replaced pipes in about 25 units. The eventual goal is to replace aging pipes in all GHI units but the effort will begin in framed homes where pipes have been found to be in worse condition.

From the pilot project GHI learned that members vacated their homes for six to eight business days. Members were allowed to return to use their home offices as long as they remained in the safe zones of their home (zones in which renovations were not occurring). Some members needed assistance in finding temporary housing. In response to

City Council Publicly Rebukes Councilmember Rodney Roberts

by Michael Zeliff

On December 9, Greenbelt City Council addressed “unbecoming conduct of a councilmember” following a staff complaint of allegedly abusive language directed at city staff by Councilmember Rodney Roberts. Councilmember Kristen Weaver had placed the item on the agenda, an item postponed from previous meetings at the request of Roberts and some residents (see the November 7 News Review).

A number of individuals wished to comment on the complaint submitted weeks ago by the Justice, Equality, Diversity and Inclusion (JEDI) Action Team, the city’s internal advisory group on JEDI issues, and Weaver’s move to publicly rebuke Roberts. This was not a trial or formal procedure, Mayor Emmett Jordan and Weaver explained, but an agenda item to be discussed and voted on by council as authorized in the city charter.

Residents Weigh In

listened to the city’s recording of Roberts’ exchanges with others on the date in question, August 12, 2024, and, while recognizing that this was only part of a larger history of council’s alleged problems with Roberts, she had found nothing egregious or worthy of censure on the date in question.

Canter felt that enforcing the rule limiting any individual to three minutes in commenting during council meetings would largely solve problems of misconduct.

Resident Clara Kuehn expressed her appreciation that, on August 12, Roberts had used his considerable expertise with vehicle maintenance to question the cost of a proposed repair and stated, “I watched the video and didn’t hear anything abusive, disrespectful or demeaning directed at [city] employees.”

Councilmember Silke Pope read a letter by resident Scott Legendre who questioned the present proceeding in part because the names of members of the JEDI group have not been shared publicly and the complaint is based to some extent on implied allegations of a history of abusive language directed toward city staff by Roberts.

Resident Bob Rand expressed

City Perseveres with Legal Fight Over Withdrawal of Firefighters

by Anna Bedford-Dillow

At the December 9 Greenbelt City Council meeting, City Manager Josué Salmerón spoke about the city’s renewed legal efforts to challenge the removal of career firefighters from the Greenbelt Fire Department in June. Salmerón also shared the news that the city will now have a paramedic ambulance 24/7 effective December 29 (for more on the fire department staffing changes coming at the end of this month see last week’s issue of the News Review).

“Our legal efforts are moving forward,” said Mayor Emmett Jordan. The city, along with Berwyn Heights and College Park, took legal action in June after learning of the planned removal of career staff. Their temporary restraining order was rejected on July 1 (see the July 4 issue) and a circuit court judge dismissed the larger case on October 21 (see the October 24 issue).

The city has now filed a Motion to Amend to include new evidence the city has been able to gather, said Salmerón. That new evidence includes the city providing funding to support incentivizing volunteers to cover shifts at the Greenbelt and Berwyn Heights stations. That’s resulted in improvements, said Salmerón, particularly in coverage at Berwyn Heights, where they’ve been able to increase staffing to respond to emergencies in Greenbelt. He added, “We’ve also filed a Motion for Reconsideration and an appeal to the state on the matter.”

Jordan said he wanted to meet with the leadership of the Greenbelt Fire Department before the holidays. Salmerón agreed that a meeting should take place, especially since the city has $70,000 of funding encumbered and not yet disbursed. Council previously approved $100,000 of American Rescue Plan Act funding to support the Greenbelt Volunteer Fire Department (GVFD) and

Rebuke of Tone

At the Monday December 9 City Council meeting, Mayor Pro-Tem Weaver re-introduced a motion to rebuke Councilmember Roberts for being disrespectful to city staff. Council discussion brought out that Councilmember Roberts was being rebuked as much for his tone as for his words. By this standard, the mayor pro-tem deserves rebuke as well. On this evening, her voice was the loudest, her tone the harshest, and her request that council set the example of respectful disagreement the most hypocritical; she gave this observer the strong impression that she harbors personal animus against Councilmember Roberts. Members of the public in attendance who had viewed the video of the only specific incident cited by the mayor pro-tem found Councilmember Roberts' words and tone unobjectionable.

Roberts Rebuke Is Undemocratic

Council voted at the December 9 meeting to rebuke Councilmember Rodney Roberts. The vote was 5-2 in favor of rebuke with Councilmembers Silke Pope and Roberts voting against the motion. The process that council used was clearly undemocratic. Roberts was never provided with an opportunity to question his accusers prior to being rebuked. He is part of the team to which City Manager Josué Salmerón is accountable. Roberts requested from Salmerón the names of the JEDI Action Team members. As a sitting councilmember Roberts is entitled to receive this information without submitting a Maryland Public Information Act request. The response Salmerón offered to the News Review in the December 12 article, What is the JEDI Action Team, provided a historical context of the JEDI

Queer

1950. William Lee (Daniel Craig), an American expat in Mexico City, spends his days almost entirely alone, except for a few contacts with other members of the small American community. His encounter with Eugene Allerton, an expat former soldier, new to the city, shows him, for the first time, that it might be finally possible to establish an intimate connection with somebody. Said critic Rebeca Tucker of the Globe and Mail, "It is a remarkably beautiful portrait of agony, anchored by Craig's remarkably understated performance."

A Real Pain

Mismatched cousins David (Jesse Eisenberg) and Benji (Kieran Culkin) reunite for a tour through Poland to honor their beloved grandmother. The adventure takes a turn when the odd couple's old tensions resurface against the backdrop of their family history. Said Leonard Maltin of leonardmaltin.com, "Jesse Eisenberg has nothing to prove; he has already staked his claim as an actor, writer and director. But A Real Pain digs deeper than he ever has before – and it's a really good movie."

Flow

This animated feature is a wondrous journey through realms natural and mystical as it follows a courageous cat after his home is devastated by a great flood. Teaming up with a capybara, a lemur, a bird and a dog to navigate a boat in search of dry land, they must rely on trust, courage and wits to survive the perils of a newly aquatic planet. From the boundless imagination of the award-winning Latvian filmmaker Gints Zilbalodis (Away) comes a thrilling animated spectacle as well as a profound meditation on the fragility of the environment and the spirit of friendship and community. The Washington Post calls the film "a magical, wordless animated adventure," that the paper's critic Ty Burr gives the highest rating: four stars.

It's a Wonderful Life

In this classic film from director Frank Capra, when George Bailey (James Stewart) wishes he had never been born, an angel (Henry Travers) is sent to earth to make George's wish come true. George starts to realize how many lives he has changed and impacted, and how they would be different if he were never there.

A Complete Unknown

New York, 1961. Against the backdrop of a vibrant music scene and tumultuous cultural upheaval, Bob Dylan (Timothée Chalamet), an enigmatic 19-year-old from Minnesota, arrives with his guitar and revolutionary talent, destined to change the course of American music. He forges intimate relationships with music icons of Greenwich Village on his meteoric rise, culminating in a groundbreaking and controversial performance that reverberates worldwide. Chalamet stars and sings as Bob Dylan in the electric true story behind the rise of one of the most iconic singer-songwriters in history.

A high-powered CEO (Nicole Kidman) puts her career and family on the line when she begins a torrid affair with her much younger intern (Harris Dickinson).

ARPA Finale: New Website, Chargers, Food and More

by Diane Oberg

With the end-of-year deadline for encumbering funds fast approaching, much of the December 9 regular meeting of the Greenbelt City Council consisted of approving contracts and other expenditures funded by the American Rescue Plan Act (ARPA). These expenditures will fund a wide range of projects from a redesign of the city's website to food insecurity grants to electric vehicle (EV) charging stations.

Assistant City Manager Timothy George, who has been leading the ARPA projects, said that there is about $70,000 to $75,000 in ARPA funds left. Council scheduled a special meeting on December 18 to approve the final expenditures.

The projects below are all funded with ARPA funds unless otherwise specified.

Website

Council approved a nearly $45,000 contract with CivicPlus to redesign the city's websites. The city of Annapolis is among the firm's clients. Liz Vesta, representing CivicPlus, walked council through that city's website demonstrating some of the features residents might expect from the redesign, such as improved search capabilities and a tie-in to Google Translate, so that content on the site can be viewed in other languages, although pdf documents cannot be translated in this way.

Vesta said the company's products are fully compliant with the recent U.S. Department of Justice policy that says that accessibility to the digital landscape is just as important as accessibility to the physical landscape.

In addition to the initial contract cost, there will be an ongoing $28,000 per year cost, which is less than the city is currently paying for its website, City Manager Josué Salmerón said.

Food Insecurity

As part of the consent agenda (approved without discussion), council authorized grants to the Capital Area Food Bank ($24,000), Meals on Wheels of College Park ($72,000), Master Touch Food Pantry ($12,000), St. Hugh's Food Pantry ($76,000) and Holiday Boxes ($20,000). Master Touch is a Greenbelt program providing food to Greenbelt residents while Holiday Boxes is run by Greenbelt CARES and provides holiday food boxes from Sardi's Catering.

Charging Stations

Council approved a contract with Blue Whale EV, LLC for $225,735 to install eight EV charging stations in the Library/Community Center parking lot. Nearly $196,000 of this cost will be funded through ARPA, with any remaining cost not offset by rebates funded through state bond bill allocations for EV infrastructure. These stations will serve both city and private vehicles. The charging stations will include six level 2 charging ports and one dual-port fast charger. Among these, one level 2 charging port will be designated for ADA-accessible parking. The timeline for this project is unclear as the city is dependent upon engineering and approvals from PEPCO plus the need to acquire a 40-amp transformer.

Other Grants

Council approved $50,000 toward the continued operations of a workforce development center and entrepreneur incubator lab cooperating with The SPACE: Free Art for All and $10,000 to Favor's Table.

Lights

Council also authorized spending $11,000 to purchase solar lights for the Springhill Lake Recreation Center. Salmerón said that the lights would arrive in about four weeks. The installation schedule depends upon the weather as concrete footers must be installed which may result in additional cost if the city decides to contract for this work.

Camera

Council approved a contract with Insight Vision, Inc. for $37,787 for an IRIS mainline camera, which will allow city staff to look inside stormwater pipes and under collapsed concrete slabs and such without having to hire a company to provide this service.

No Action

One project council expected to fund was a new Animal Shelter. However, Salmerón reported that, last week, the cost of the project increased from $180,000 to $400,000. He has concluded that the only viable solution is to fix the current shelter, while acknowledging it is not the best solution.

his support for the JEDI team but did not support a censure, arguing that the best way to deal with misconduct by a member is for council to respond in the moment.

Roberts, recognized by Jordan, claimed he was being held to a different standard by other members and being falsely accused. He requested that council complete the discussion since he was being injured physically, mentally and monetarily by the accusations. Council voted to move item #14 to the top of its agenda.

The Complaint

In a memorandum addressed to City Manager Josué Salmerón and dated August 29, 2024, the JEDI Action Team complained that:

"Councilmember Roberts spoke in a disrespectful, demeaning and abusive manner to Deputy [Police] Chief [Tim] White and about the City's Public Works Department. He made statements that disparaged the skills of the Public Works Department and implied that our colleagues were 'dumb' for accepting the vendor's quote. While the recent incidents have drawn attention, it is important to note this is not an isolated incident; similar behavior amongst councilmembers has been ongoing for some time and employees have previously been instructed to simply tolerate it rather than address it directly."

Among its recommendations, JEDI requested that: "The City Council should censure Councilmember Roberts for his ongoing inappropriate conduct. Additionally, moving forward the council should censure any councilmember or meeting attendee for inappropriate conduct such as the behavior described." Jordan had already stated the discussion and vote would not be a trial, and later Weaver would reject the word "censure" in favor of "reprimand" and "rebuke" in describing how council might respond to the complaint against Roberts.

The crux of the issue is that at the August 12 council meeting, Roberts told Deputy Chief White, "My problem is, is the Sports Chevrolet [dealership] will tell you anything and they'll charge you anything. And if you're dumb enough to take that, then you are ... You can buy a new engine, complete engine for this." Later during that meeting Roberts stated, "You can buy a brand new engine for $4,000. And if we have mechanics at Public Works, they can put an engine in. If they can't put an engine in, then you know, get a book and teach yourself as you do and let them expand their knowledge a little bit. If [your mechanics] are not willing to learn then get someone who is willing to learn." Later, Weaver stated that she could understand how someone could see that last statement as a threat to their job.

Council proceeded to a motion made by Weaver that Roberts be publicly rebuked for this and his allegedly long history of verbal abuse directed at city employees. Weaver expressed satisfaction that the JEDI team felt empowered to come forward with the complaint that they presented to Salmerón and he conveyed to council. Weaver and Jordan both called on council to codify procedures for dealing with misconduct by its members.

Roberts, in response, complained about "a secret group of employees that have slandered my name in the News Review" and charged that council's action "was intended to shut me up." Roberts claimed that his civil and constitutional rights were being violated, such as his right to face his accusers. Pope explained that she would not vote for censure since the complaint had not been handled properly, even though she did feel that Roberts' words had been offensive. Weaver reminded everyone that any action taken by council would not be a censure but more like a reprimand. Jordan assured everyone that in executive sessions members do sometimes sharply criticize each other. Councilmember Jenni Pompei also praised JEDI for coming forward; she distinguished between Roberts' intentions, however positive, and the hurtful impact of his words and agreed that council needs to codify its responses when members violate standing rules. Councilmember Danielle McKinney emphasized the need to hear individual as well as collective voices and also the need for council to model the behavior it wished Greenbelt's citizens would practice with each other.

Roberts answered by calling for the dismantling of JEDI, calling it a "monster" and "out of control." Councilmember Amy Knesel pointed out that Roberts was once again vilifying city employees, to which Roberts replied that he was only exercising his right to speak. To his assertion that he comes from a different world where people speak more directly to each other, McKinney replied that they live in the same world, in 2024 and in Greenbelt, and the issue here was the manner in which people speak to each other so that they all feel respected.

Pope asserted that members need to take responsibility for the language that they use and that while JEDI's role and authority need to be defined better, it is unfair to blame everything on its members.

Weaver reiterated that she hopes council will show that it does not condone such language as that used by Roberts on the occasion under discussion.

Resident Bob Rudd stated that while he had not voted for Roberts in 25 years, he now finds himself defending Roberts' right to speak since, in Rudd's view, Roberts was not out of line or abusive, but saying what he truly felt. Suggesting a faceless committee without official sanction from the city was accusing Roberts, Rudd claimed that what was at work here was a "woke-ism" or "cancel culture" that recently the American public had strongly repudiated at the national level.

Largely agreeing with Rudd, resident Robert Snyder asserted that diversity is more than just gender, race or ethnicity; it's also diversity of thought, expression and mannerism, which is what Roberts represents to him. Roberts shouldn't be reprimanded or scolded because he sometimes speaks harshly, he said.

Resident Kathy Legendre, participating online, noted that the present controversy has a long history and warned what was happening to Roberts could happen in the future to any councilmember. She agreed with previous speakers that complaints against Roberts had gotten out of control and proposed that council hire a facilitator to help Jordan move meetings along and minimize misconduct by all participants.

Finally, pointing out that JEDI still remained anonymous and the public didn't know if one or all of its members agreed with the complaint, resident Bill Orleans stated that Roberts was criticizing city policy, not individuals.

Jordan responded by emphasizing that council's action would result not just from the proceedings at present but also from the closed executive session devoted to discussing the complaint.

Several attendees questioned the authority of the JEDI Action Team in relation to members of council. This was raised by Scott Legendre, who wrote, "It is unclear how and when members of the JEDI committee received authorization to dictate how members of council should conduct themselves." Keith Jahoda questioned if this is the right governance model for JEDI

Council Sets Methods for Filling Vacancies; Public Hearing Set

by Diane Oberg

At its December 9 regular meeting, the Greenbelt City Council introduced an ordinance and a charter resolution for first reading to change how the city fills vacancies on council, such as occurred recently with the resignation of Colin Byrd and the death of Ric Gordon. As is normal for first readings, there was no discussion of the proposed legislation. A public hearing will be held on January 13 on the proposed legislation.

The two pieces of legislation not only change the procedure for filling council vacancies, they also remove the specifics from the charter, allowing council to change its procedure at any time by simple ordinance.

Current Process

The city charter and city code currently call for council to appoint a replacement member unless three or more vacancies have occurred, in which case there is to be a special election. Council appointed Konrad Herling to fill the remaining 2.5 months of Byrd's term.

Since Gordon died shortly after the start of the council term, there was considerable controversy about the process for filling his seat, with some residents calling for a special election. Council eventually appointed Amy Knesel to fulfill his term after holding a public hearing on the issue.

The current charter/code does not make any distinction between how to fill vacancies occurring a short time before a council election and those occurring earlier in the term.

Charter Amendment

Currently, the process for filling a council vacancy is spelled out in the city charter. It says:

"If a seat in the council becomes vacant, the remaining members of council by a majority vote shall, as soon as possible, elect a person to fill the unexpired term. If three (3) or more council seats are vacant at the same time, the board of elections shall call at the earliest date a special election to fill said vacancies for the unexpired terms."

If the proposed charter amendment is approved, that language will change to:

"If a seat on the council becomes vacant for any reason, including without limitation death or resignation, physical or mental or legal incapacity, or willful failure to participate in council proceedings, all as determined by a majority vote of the council, then the vacancy shall be filled as provided in sections 8-14 of the city code."

City Code

Under the proposed legislation, how council fills a vacancy will vary based upon when a council vacancy occurs. The proposed ordinance provides that:

Each candidate to fill the vacancy must be a qualified voter at least 18 years old.

If the vacancy occurs at least 181 days prior to the next election, then it will be filled by a special election by mail-in voting.

If the vacancy occurs 61 to 180 days before the next election, then council will fill the vacancy by majority vote within 45 days. It must hold a public hearing in each city area and allow a written nomination until the date of the final hearing.

If the vacancy occurs 60 days or less before the next election, council may allow the seat to remain vacant or it may appoint a replacement member by majority vote after a public hearing.

If more than 90 days before the election there occur three or more vacancies, then the seats must be filled by special election.

Other Actions

In other actions as part of the consent agenda, council:

Approved Greenbelt Ultimate's application as a city recognition group. The purpose of the group is to provide a weekly, casual pick-up ultimate frisbee game to residents of Greenbelt and nearby areas.

Approved extending the city's red-light camera enforcement program for one year. City staff estimates that as a result of Howard County (which runs the program) changing contractors and its pricing model, the city will save about $70,000 compared to the current contract.

Greenbelt Eats

Once a Traveling Diplomat's Chef, Karim Cooks Up Home in Greenbelt

by Leo Casalini

By now most have likely heard about, walked past or been in Cedars of Lebanon, the restaurant situated in Roosevelt Center and serving – no surprise – Lebanese food.

Last Monday was my first time, and stepping inside was a particular pleasure as the cold and rainy drabness that pervaded the center stopped at the door. The walls are painted a light pink, with a darker shade contrasting on the bottom. Tchotchkes adorned the windowsills, while paintings claimed the walls – even the tables get in on the act with the cloths matching the general color scheme and small vases of pink-and-white flowers sitting at the end of each. The whole place exudes a feeling of comfort that was only amplified when I met restaurant owner Abdul Karim Kmaih. Wearing a knitted sweater and with a scarf around his neck, he was the embodiment of the word.

Karim has been nourishing Greenbelters for 17 years. Earlier he was the chef at the New Deal Café for several years. He opened his own restaurant six years ago and runs it with his wife, Maria Almeida, the couple working alongside their two daughters and a few other staff. Cedars of Lebanon replaced the Curves Gym which previously occupied the space. Karim renovated it with a substantial sum of money he won from a scratch-off lottery ticket, coincidentally bought at the mini-mart three stores down from where the restaurant now stands and Cedars of Lebanon was born.

His own restaurant is the culmination of decades of endeavors in the culinary field.

Graduating from culinary school in Beirut in 1974, Karim worked a few jobs “here and there,” at one point opening his own bakery, and at another becoming the first to sell hamburgers in the southern part of the country. Though perhaps the most notable was his tenure as the private chef to a Lebanese diplomat, with whom he stayed for a little over a decade and a half, and which would see him travel to countless countries across the globe.

Looking back on his travels alongside the diplomat, Karim recalled visiting France the most. The land which modern day Lebanon sits on had been designated a French protectorate after the fall of the Ottoman empire in World War I, and was likely the reason for the frequent visits. Even though the “French Mandate” which tied the two together ended in 1946, French culture and institutions are still deeply rooted in the country. The French were not the first to leave their mark, however. Civilizations like the Assyrians, Persians and even the Babylonians, among others, all sprinkled their own unique flavor into the rich melting pot called modern day Lebanon. From that pot, along with a language and culture made up of a fusion of many different peoples, came a vast array of foods, all seemingly seeking to topple and balance out the plate they sit on.

I had the chance to get a taste for myself in the form of the

mezze platter, “Lebanese Traditional,” which came as a plate filled with morsels common in everyday Lebanese fare. There was tabbouleh, a salad whose main ingredients were finely chopped parsley, tomatoes, onions, lemon juice and olive oil; baba ghanoush, an eggplant based hummus; falafel; chickpea hummus; and kibbeh – deep-fried pockets of meat and spices among other things, which quickly became my favorite. And of course, pita bread. My sincere apologies to Karim and the staff because as one can likely see by the picture, I forgot to take a picture before

I started eating. To their credit though, the dish was well plated, and I enjoyed it immensely. The tartness of the tabbouleh cooled by the creamy richness of the hummus, followed by a bite of the kibbeh was my favorite combination. Other food on the menu includes kabobs, shawarma and desserts such as baklava and crème de caramel.

Talking to Karim it was obvious that he enjoys being in Greenbelt. When he and his wife, Maria, visited the area almost two decades ago now, prompted by some friends, he said the community aspect was what drew them in, and it has also been what has kept them here. In Lebanon, Karim mentioned, community is an essential part of life. And the truth of that statement seemed to hold true as the restaurant, with its paintings and pink walls, seemed to feel more like a home.

Greenbelt's Furry Pets Visit Santa; Raise Money for Animal Shelter

by Tim King

Santa waits by the fire to take photos with pets.

The Greenbelt Animal Shelter hosted its Santa Paws event on Saturday, December 14 at Schrom Hills Park. For a donation of $10, participants could get a photo of their pet with Santa Claus.

First stop was the staffed sign-up table in front of the large-windowed indoor pavilion. After giving the pet name and the donation, pets and their owners could go inside and meet Santa for their photos. Photos were then sent to the email address of the owner.

Stationed on a cushioned chair in front of a backdrop graphic of a roaring fireplace, Santa received the furry friends. After calming down a bit from the thrill, the pets were able to sit still long enough for a quick but well-done holiday photo. Local police K9 Zeppelin was one of the first to participate. The German short-haired pointer, certified in gun and bomb detection, was so excited to see Santa he may have knocked over a decoration.

When asked how long the event has been taking place, the volunteers were not entirely sure, but a quick look back at this paper's archives shows a similar event occurring in 2018, and then again in 2023 at the Greenbelt Police Department. So at least six years in, the Greenbelt Animal Shelter has done Santa Paws in one way or another to raise extra cash.

As far as fundraising goals, the answer was, "Anything helps." It was a chilly morning on Saturday, and 30 minutes into the event, only three or four dogs had participated. A similar fundraising event this paper has covered, Pooch Plunge, takes place in September. Local dogs then can take a dip in the Greenbelt Aquatic Center pool.

Greenbelt is also lucky to have Santa be able to dedicate some of his time to this cause. Trained in Midland, Mich., at the Charles W. Howard Santa Claus School, and a member of the IBRBS (International Brotherhood of Real Bearded Santas), Santa Claus can also be seen at the College Park Winter Wonderland and other local charity events.

Greenbelt Krampusnacht Was Both Scary and Fun

by Daniel M. Thies

On Saturday evening, December 14, the third annual Greenbelt Krampusnacht took place at Roosevelt Center. Taking inspiration from Alpine Christmastime traditions of a horned and hoofed Krampus to counterbalance the jovial Saint Nick, folks came together wearing creative and scary twists on festive costumes. The Greenbelt Honk! Situation played two sets of "scarols" – spooky arrangements of familiar Christmas songs – and during their intermission, the "Witches of the Green Shire" did a group dance for the crowd. The week prior, the Greenbelt Honk! Situation took part in the Fells Point Krampuslauf in Baltimore and, returning the favor, the Baltimore Krampus made an appearance at the Greenbelt event.

Although some of the appearances were monstrous, the atmosphere of the event was welcoming. Leading up to the event, posts in Greenbelt-centered Facebook groups reminded folks that the event was free for everyone, but that unwrapped toys would be appreciated as donations to Toys-For-Tots. To continue the holiday festivities, the Greenbelt Honk! Situation plans to follow up this Friday evening with a Lantern Parade that will begin by the Firefly Sanctuary at 6 p.m. and travel to Roosevelt Center. See page 3 for details.

this finding, GHI will assess members' needs for temporary housing during the 2025 pipe replacement project. GHI also found that more water heaters had to be replaced and they spent more time in the crawl spaces than was anticipated. PVC pipes were identified as the most efficient for replacing current pipes. During the project, affected members can expect to receive weekly email updates.

In 2025 the Pipe Replacement Project will occur in 100 homes over four phases that affect the following units: (1) Research Road Courts 8 and 9, (2) Research Road Court 7, (3) Research Road Court 6 and Ridge Road Court 73, and (4) Ridge Road Courts 69 and 71.

Specifically, the project involves surveying each unit to document kitchen and bathroom conditions, executing a memorandum of understanding (MOU) to outline GHI and member responsibilities, preparing project specifications for pricing and reviewing contractor proposals. With the board's approval, GHI Technical Services will then draft and implement the contract and communicate the start date and schedule to members.

GHI 2025 Budget

In budget materials sent to GHI members Stefan Brodd, GHI president, stated that "... GHI continues to be in a strong financial condition and able to meet [its] financial commitments." This was supported by GHI General Manager James Claggett, who summarized the 2025 budget and stated that membership fees for 2025 would increase by 3.5 percent. The largest portion of membership fees will go toward real estate taxes at $5,775,213 (35.3 percent). This year's amount projects an increase in real estate taxes of about 9.3 percent. The second largest portion of the budget is for maintenance at $4,627,715 (28.4 percent), which includes payroll/benefits, materials and contracted services such as gutter cleaning. GHI has a Replacement Reserve fund that covers the cost of replacing major items including but not limited to roofs, windows and doors. There is an Addition Maintenance Program where members with additions pay an additional fee included in their monthly co-op fee. Together these two items are expected to total $2,731,752 (16.8 percent). Administrative expenses including payroll and benefits for the administrative staff are estimated to come to $1,799,479 (11.0 percent). Finally, insurance and trash collection are budgeted at $933,510 (5.7 percent) and $461,800 (2.8 percent), respectively.

Member Handbook

Board Vice President Debbie McKinley provided an update on revisions to the Member Handbook, which is sometimes referred to as the Green Book. McKinley said the handbook has been restructured into six sections: an introduction about Greenbelt and GHI; cosmetic and minor alterations (changes that do not require a permit or only a GHI permit); major alterations and addition requirements (changes that require a permit from GHI, city and/or county); GHI cooperative living; procedures to sell, rent or assign the GHI unit; and community resources.

The handbook has been revised to make it more user friendly and standardized: the formatting and font are the same throughout, inconsistencies removed and language clarified and updated. The document also was updated to reflect current rules and standards.

The handbook has been reviewed by GHI staff and comments have been received from the board, which McKinley and her team are now addressing. After the board approves the updated handbook, it will go out to members for feedback before being finalized by the board.

The frequent water outages in GHI over recent weeks are unrelated to the GHI Pipe Replacement Program. On several occasions over the last couple of months, including this week and last, residents have lost access to water in some GHI courts due to breaks in aging pipes in the street beyond the units and work being conducted by WSSC.

Berwyn Heights Volunteer Fire Department (BHVFD), of which $30,000 has been spent. So far $10,000 has been disbursed to support GVFD and $15,000 to BHVFD and around $5,000 has been spent to improve and deep clean the Greenbelt station.

Beginning December 29, Greenbelt's station will gain a round-the-clock paramedic ambulance and retain one of the emergency medical services units available from 7 a.m. to 11 p.m., the hours of peak activity, seven days a week (currently it has just two peak units). The change at the end of the month "is a welcome improvement," said Salmerón, though, "obviously it's not the full staffing we had hoped for." He characterized the addition as an upgrade but expressed disappointment that the removal of career staff, which the city had been led to believe was a temporary summer staffing plan, continues into the winter season.

Action Team. However, the core basic question remains unanswered. Why did Salmerón deny Roberts' request for the names of the JEDI Action Team members prior to council's vote to rebuke him? As of the December 9 meeting, Salmerón has denied Roberts this information. Any person who is accused of misconduct has the bona fide right to question the individuals making the accusations. Why was mediation not offered to Roberts to include the JEDI Action Team and/or Public Works employees who were offended by his commentary? The failure of Salmerón to disclose the identity of JEDI Action Team members to Roberts upon request is alarming. This points to a concerted effort by council and Salmerón to coerce Roberts to accept disciplinary action.

This is not the first time a select majority of council has chosen to conduct business in an undemocratic fashion. Prior to the rebuke of Roberts, four out of the six sitting councilmembers chose to dismiss the votes of their constituents and appoint an individual to council. The individual chosen by council was not a candidate in the November 7, 2023, election. A majority of council voted to approve this appointment with the exception of Pope and Roberts. The actions taken on December 9 clearly demonstrate that an undemocratic process has been and continues to be followed by a select majority of council. The rebuke of Roberts confirms a rampant disregard in following the democratic process. The rebuke is only a link in the chain of actions taken by a select majority of council which demonstrate their continuing disregard for following a legitimate democratic process.

Scott Legendre

Editor's Note: City Manager Josué Salmerón told the News Review he provided the names of the members of the JEDI Action Team to all councilmembers on December 3.

More Scoop On Dog Poop

The Companion Animal Committee in GHI provides plastic bags and bag containers/dispensers to facilitate dog owners picking up their dog's poop. These containers are attached to posts with signs that say "Scoop your pet's poop." There are signs attached to the containers that state the containers are only for fresh, new bags and ask people to not put bags of poop or trash in the containers.

It is extremely unfortunate that unthinking individuals repeatedly put bags of poop in the bag dispensers, which causes unhealthy nasty problems as there is no poop or trash collection from these containers. If you see or know of anyone contributing to this problem ask them to stop. Usually, but not always, there are trash cans near the dispensers so do dispose of your dog's waste in an appropriate manner.

Animal Committee

Boxwood Poop Addendum

We were remiss in not mentioning, in last week's News Review, the locations of trash receptacles for dog waste. They are located at the Metrobus stops at Crescent and Lastner and Ivy and Ridge, and at the playground at Ivy and Lastner.

If there are more in Boxwood, let us know.

and was concerned that it is not. Pope stated that the complaint should not have come from JEDI. Jordan stated that council has not delegated any authority to JEDI.

Salmerón Weighs In

Responding to a request by Jordan, Salmerón explained that JEDI had tried to follow proper channels in sending their complaint to him as city manager and that he then passed it on to council. He had also identified the members of JEDI to council. Salmerón described JEDI as a “pillar” in the “bottom up” approach where staff contribute ideas for making city government’s delivery of services the best organization possible. Weaver answered Orleans’ assertion that questions of misconduct by councilmembers should be handled publicly by reading the standing rule that stipulates councilmembers should not express criticism of staff in public but rather submit it to the city manager and to Human Resources. Weaver felt that efforts in private executive sessions to warn Roberts about his abusive language had failed and so there was no other recourse at present than to make it part of this regular meeting.

Weaver made the motion seconded by Pompei that council issue a “public rebuke” of Roberts for making disparaging remarks about city staff in “a public meeting” – meaning specifically the worksession on August 12 – and council voted 5-2, with Roberts and Pope opposed, to support the motion and issue the rebuke.

leaving the Co-op, unhappy with the management, and morale is low, reported former and current employees in August. At the December meeting, Audrey Dixon and former employee Jessica Silver spoke on behalf of friends who are Co-op employees, who Dixon and Silver say have been afraid to speak since that August meeting, to which, they said, there’s been no response from the board. Bernheisel said the board has discussed the topic since the last board meeting and doesn’t discuss personnel policies publicly.

Employee Concerns

“Very few people ... enjoy any aspect of how they’re managed and in fact, feel it [is] hostile and are afraid to come here. Everyone that I asked to come [to this meeting] and give their true sense so this place can grow, has been afraid to lose their jobs,” stated Dixon last week. She would love for the board to take action, have regulations and make employees a higher priority, said Dixon. “Customer-to-employee misconduct ... [is] a huge issue especially when employees have gotten death threats, harm threats and harassment and nothing has been done about that,” complained Dixon, echoing complaints heard by the board in August.

Dixon expressed what she said were employees’ concerns about the treatment of a longtime colleague who was demoted from being a front-end supervisor and replaced by a new front-store manager, who was brought back from the New Deal Café following the dissolution of the store’s partnership as vendor there.

“There’s just no sense of community here. Every employee I talk to says [the manager] has no compassion for any of them. No one has gotten a raise. I just don’t know what else I can do. I can’t go to you all,” Silver said to the board, citing a lack of response to previous comments and emails. Silver recently resorted to posting on social media about employee dissatisfaction at the Co-op.

Board member Leonard Wallace asked Silver and Dixon to suggest first steps for board interactions with them, members and employees, which Wallace himself and Silver answered together: helping employees speak without feeling uncomfortable. Dixon asked “Are there any policies if an employee has a complaint about working conditions, even about the way that [General Manager] Dan [Gillotte] manages, are there policies in place to protect them from demotion and employment termination?” Silver followed with “Because that’s the biggest thing I’m getting. I can’t get any of the employees to come here,” she said. Such policies “would be a wonderful start if there aren’t any already,” said Dixon. Silver emphasized the importance of making such policies known, because employees fear retaliation, she said. Bernheisel noted the question.

Customer Concerns

Customer and Generous Joe's owner Aaron Mengel asked via Zoom if policies prevent customers talking with staff. He described talking about his mother's memorial with a cashier who was his mother's friend. He said they were talking between her other customers for whom he stood aside, when Gillotte asked him to let her do her job, which Mengel found rude. "Given what the Co-op is - these are our community members we communicate with, and it seems a little off from what the Co-op is supposed to be," said Mengel. He said he experienced this more than once and heard similar experiences from others. "It doesn't feel like we have that community aspect of the Co-op anymore, and we should be able to speak to our fellow community members and the employees at the Co-op themselves. ... I didn't know if that was common practice or normal, but it's concerning." James Thompson on Zoom wrote "The lack of speaking with cashiers lately is upsetting, [with] fears of reprimands and retribution." Dixon said, "... this is a repeated issue for people including us." Bernheisel said board members would discuss the topic.

Communication Challenges

The board wasn't receiving email for over a year, during which emailed concerns from employees went astray. The problem was recently corrected, the board reported. Wallace encouraged people who have not received a response to email the board again. Silver and Dixon appreciated the email fix and a new meeting sign-in sheet for non-board member attendees, with a space for email addresses if attendees want the board to contact them.

The member comment period was at the meeting start, when some remote attendees could not join due to an initially broken link on the Co-op website, which was shared by Silver earlier that day on Facebook. The board reopened the comment period, though Zoom attendees hadn't heard Dixon's and Silver's earlier comments.

Hopes for Next Steps

Dixon requested assurance of another meeting to discuss solutions that can be made public, to show progress and that "comments and concerns are not just going in one ear and out the other." Wallace reiterated, "I think they're looking for a response from us." Bernheisel said, "I think we'll respond. I think we'll discuss and try to be deliberate and earnest but cautious in answering for [the Co-op] ... I feel like we'd speak differently when answering for ourselves [as board members]; that seems like a consideration. I think we'll address the issues."

Silver later told the News Review she resigned in 2023 after workload-caused panic attacks which were disregarded with "a lack of care" and expectations to continue at the same pace. She said though hired for part-time work, she worked full-time hours without full-time benefits like insurance and even so, "loved working here until it became so much that I couldn't."

Talking with the News Review after the meeting, Silver and Dixon said they intended to share information and seek board acknowledgement of their concerns. Dixon hoped the board can make decisions that are best for the Co-op and best for the community, employees and customers. Silver worries about high employee turnover and wants "everyone to feel better about coming here." Dixon "would love to see what I hear about, the community that was once vibrant, to have that vibrance and joyful community back, to see worker rights and the environment improve."

The Co-op Responds

No current employees identified themselves or spoke on December 11, which Silver and Dixon attributed to their being afraid to speak. In a recent social media post, the board said they took seriously the concerns raised in August and investigated every allegation. The News Review contacted Co-op Board Chair Kim Kash, who said the store's departmental managers are taking on greater responsibility, meeting weekly with their teams and instituting innovations like creating relationships to source fresh produce from local farmers market vendors, and that current employees are excited about changes across the store and happy in their workplace.

The News Review also contacted Gillotte, who responded that departmental managers told him this week that current staff do not share the concerns raised by the staff in August, and that issues were addressed when they occurred, not ignored. Kash wrote "the board has assessed and monitored Dan's approach to staff. We are satisfied that he is responsive to staff concerns and complaints, and that he is continuously working on improving the Co-op for staff and customers. Decisions involving personnel will not be discussed publicly in accordance with privacy laws. But we know that Dan acts in a reasonable and responsible way toward issues of all stripe[s] that affect the Co-op."

New Co-op Board Meets, Elects Officers, Discusses Finances

by Erica Johns

At the December 11 meeting of the Board of Directors of the Greenbelt Co-op Supermarket and Pharmacy, board members elected new officers and reviewed pharmacy sales and plans for membership and donation drives and for grant opportunities. Virtual attendee participation was initially hampered by some attendees attempting to use a broken Zoom link that circulated earlier in the day. The meeting began with a moment of silence in honor of longtime employees Gina Murphy and Betty Edwards who died recently.

New Officers

At the November 9 annual membership meeting Co-op members elected seven board members, including incumbents Steven Bernheisel, Amy Drew, Kim Kash, Sarah Rusk, Joe Timer and Leonard Wallace and newcomer Amber Hennessy. On December 11, board members elected Kash as the new chair, re-elected Bernheisel as vice chair and Amy Drew as treasurer, and elected Sarah Rusk as the new secretary. Bernheisel led the meeting since officers weren't elected until part-way into the agenda and Kash attended remotely over a troublesome internet connection. Kash recognized November board candidates Aaron Mengel and Philip Lake who attended via Zoom, inviting their contributions in other forms such as committees or projects.

The board decided to change "chairman" and "vice chairman" language in the bylaws to "chair" and "vice chair", deciding they didn't need Co-op members' permission for the nonfunctional change.

Annual Meeting Brainstorming

Ideas are still being written up from when annual meeting attendees brainstormed the question "What role can members individually and collectively play in helping us to move forward to a positive thriving future at Co-op?"

Finances and Members

Drew said sales continue on a negative trend, with differences between grocery and pharmacy sales. Comparing a recent week to the same week one year ago, average weekly grocery sales are down 1.7 percent, but combined average weekly grocery and pharmacy sales are down over 10 percent, demonstrating significantly decreased pharmacy revenue.

General Manager Dan Gillotte said the decrease doesn't reflect fewer numbers of prescriptions (which are steady), but lower drug prices, including drugs that changed from proprietary to generic - good news for customers but not for pharmacy revenue. What is good for revenue is that pharmacy benefit management fees (to companies that manage prescription coverage for health-care insurers), previously a major expense, have declined and are expected to remain steady. So, efforts to increase revenue must rely on grocery sales, and Gillotte recommended exploring separating pharmacy and grocery operations, referencing previous board discussion of the idea.

Gillotte said the store is gaining three to five new members and about $500 in member equity weekly. A new member drive is planned for 2025, probably in January. Inspired by learning at the annual meeting of Co-op members from Bladensburg and Silver Spring, one of whom makes combined Co-op and Greenbelt Farmers Market trips, Gillotte and Marketing and Membership Coordinator Honora Banko plan information tables at area farmers markets in 2025 to attract new customers and members.

Email Problem Resolved

An email problem that lasted over one year had prevented board members from receiving emails sent to board@greenbelt.coop until a recent fix. The board has now received emails sent since August 2024, but cannot access emails sent before then. Anyone who emailed the board without response before August 2024 is encouraged to resend their email.

Employee Concerns

Several members raised concerns about employee working conditions, personnel management and customer-staff interactions. See separate article on page 1.

Grants and Donations

Rusk discussed grant opportunities, starting with a requested $5,000 Greenbelt Community Foundation grant which is awaiting foundation approval, to fund a proposed exterior wall mural. Rusk may need help managing the mural project.

Rusk mentioned other grant sources that were promising but require building ownership so the Co-op isn't eligible (Maryland Energy Administration for energy-efficient equipment and Prince George's County Redevelopment Authority for facade improvements). Purchasing the building would increase grant opportunities. More promising is a U.S. Department of Agriculture program for projects to expand or preserve stable and perishable food access.

Board member Joe Timer, inspired by unsolicited member gifts and bequests of up to $40,000 and the recent Greenbelt Cinema donation campaign, proposed a program to encourage member donations toward permanent support for the Co-op. These could include gifts of membership capital upon moving or death, permanently donating one's Rays on the Roof loan or estate gifts. He will prepare a proposal for the January board meeting about a 2025 campaign for donations that, said Timer, "demonstrate a commitment to the importance of a member-owned supermarket and pharmacy in the heart of Greenbelt."
