City Council Delays Decision on Chasanow Parking Request

By ISADORE PARKER

Continuing his quest for city permission to provide parking spaces alongside his office, Abe Chasanow appeared before the city council again last Monday night. The council told Chasanow it is awaiting a further report from the planning advisory board, when certain conditions set forth in a preliminary report have been met.

These conditions, according to John Downs, Secretary for the board, are: (1) an opinion from Ben Smith, county traffic engineer, who looked over the site; (2) a traffic count made by city police; (3) a legal opinion from the city solicitor; and (4) a formal plan to be submitted by Chasanow. The board recommended denial of the permit until the conditions were forthcoming.

Chasanow informed the council that he had appeared before Judge O'Hare that morning on a parking ticket received from city police, for parking on the walkway in front of his office. The judge had dismissed the case after ascertaining that there had been no easement granted by Chasanow, and therefore the property was private. A statement by the city solicitor giving the opposite opinion and presented by Chief Williams was heard before the dismissal.

Mayor Alan Kistler assured Chasanow that the delay in the decision seemed unwarranted, and promised quick action by the planning board, the solicitor and the council for an early decision. "Justice delayed is justice denied," Kistler said.

The planning board was specifically urged to act on the request as soon as the four above-mentioned conditions were met, even if this should require a special meeting of the board.

The council directed city manager Charles McDonald to prepare an amendment to the parking ordinance which would limit parking on the section of the west parking lot closest to the mall to 90 minutes, after a recommendation to that effect was heard from the planning board. McDonald assured the council that it would place no undue burden on the city police to enforce the ordinance. It was disclosed that the advisory board was requested to recommend the 90 minute limit by Greenbelt Consumer Services, owners of the commercial area and west parking lot.

A motion to approve a lease to Eli Don Bullion for space in the city warehouse was defeated 3-2, after Don Bullion declared he was unsatisfied with the terms of a 30-day termination clause. He asked for a one-year termination clause, but the motion met defeat. Offered a 90-day period, he declined it as unsuitable to

140 Parking Spaces

New Goal for Center

A preliminary subcommittee report, presented to the Planning Board at their May meeting last Thursday night, recommended an additional 140 parking spaces in the commercial center, these to be located somewhere in the wooded area behind the statue. A sketch of the proposed layout was presented, but the board took no action on the report.

Stephen Polaschik, 12-DRidge, was appointed to membership on Harvey Geller's subcommittee on capital budget.

Two other items on the planning board's agenda were presented to the city council at Monday night's meeting. These were: a recommendation to delay a decision on local realtor Abraham Chasanow's request for angled parking next to his office, pending further information; and a recommendation that an ordinance be drawn up to limit parking in the eastern section of the west parking lot, behind the bank to 90 minutes.

GHI Committee Report Explores Possible Uses of Vacant Land

By AL SKOLNIK

In a report prepared for the Greenbelt Homes, Inc. membership last night, chairman Henry Brautigam of the land use committee summarized the problems facing the corporation with respect to the 50 acres of idle land now owned by GHI.

Brautigam stated that GHI has three courses open with regard to the idle land: (1) to leave it idle; (2) to sell it; or (3) to develop it. The land use committee favors the third approach. Brautigam pointed out that leaving the land idle can be an expensive proposition. The corporation will need to continue paying real estate taxes, as well as principal and interest payments on the Federal National Mortgage Administration (FNMA) mortgage. Taxes of $9,400 per year are now paid on the idle land, plus principal payments of $8,850 and interest payments of $4,602. These total $22,852 a year, or approximately $1.21 per month per GHI unit, a figure which is now included in the monthly charges.

As for selling the land, Brautigam observed that this would not provide an immediate benefit to the members, since the Federal government would only apply the sales money to reduce the tail end of the mortgage.

Public Works Budget Reviewed By City Council

Albert S. Attick, superintendent of public works, defended his budget before city council last Tuesday night in the third in a series of current hearings being held on the 1961-62 budget. The finance office, city clerk, and police department budgets had been considered in the first two meetings. The recreation budget will be reviewed at the next hearing on Monday, May 22.

The 1961-62 budget of $334,120 calls for an increase in the tax rate of 0.37 cents per $100 assessed valuation to $1.97.

This proposed increase has led to a close scrutiny of the budget by councilmen and interested citizen groups. Not many items in the public works budget, however, were found subject to paring. The major item questioned was a contemplated increase of $2,000 in road surface supplies. Attick had proposed trying a new method of road surface treatment, known as "Smooth Surface Seal", in place of the sealing with liquid asphalt and chips.

This method gives a much smoother finish than the chip sealing program but is more expensive. The "Smooth Surface" should last considerably longer than the chip seal, stated Attick, so the cost should even itself out over the years. Councilman Tom Canning, who opposed this innovation, stated that he was against any kind of new "starts" this year.

This negative attitude was expressed again a few minutes later when Attick pleaded for $1,200 to cover the cost of uniforms and laundry for public works and waste collection personnel (heretofore paid out of employee's pay). Canning argued that such uniforms would be nice, but not necessary.

This time, however, Mayor Alan Kistler came to the aid of Attick. He stated, that as far as waste collection people were concerned, he could see a good case for the city absorbing the cost of cleaning clothes, which is a heavy cost item for such employees. He also cited the comparatively low salary scale of waste collectors.

In answer to a question from the floor, Attick stated his belief that present manpower is sufficient to maintain the ball-fields playgrounds, and parks in good condition. The Recreation Advisory Committee had recommended that additional manpower be assigned to the job of improving and taking proper care of the play areas. It also had recommended that a systematic program be undertaken in the fall to prepare the fields for spring use. Attick did not feel that a fall program was too feasible, at least as far as the ball fields were concerned, since the latter were used into the winter.

FAVORS DEVELOPMENT

The proposal for developing the land, Brautigam argued, has the advantage of increasing the assets and membership of the corporation and of spreading the costs of the idle land over a larger group.

Among the projects suggested for the idle land are the senior citizens housing, a quality motel, a quality high-rise apartment building with business offices on the first floor, conservative town houses with three or more bedrooms, and individual free-standing homes on isolated lots.

Brautigam admitted that if GHI did the developing, it would have to advance a small portion of the construction money at the outset. The remainder of the money could be financed through cooperative housing loans under the Federal Housing Administration program. The money advanced by GHI would be returned as living units are sold.

As for the motel, Brautigam said that current thinking favors a long-term lease to a national chain of motel operators. It is felt that a favorable net income could be derived from this operation, which in turn would directly effect the monthly payments of all members.

Brautigam cautioned that this is not a package program, but simply a list of suggestions that could be developed conservatively on an individual basis as time and money permit. He also reassured members that there would still be certain green areas set aside as parklets, as in the present built-up area.

More Communication

We have been both pleased and delighted to note the unusual degree of interest on the part of GHI members in the current election campaign for positions on the Board of Directors. We only regret that this interest had to be stimulated by a series of controversial letters to the editor during the past few weeks. Indeed, we would hope that the members would take an interest in GHI activities on a year-round basis, and that election-time interest would always run high. To this end, we would urge the new Board, whoever is elected, to address itself seriously to the perennial problem of keeping the membership fully informed and abreast of all the corporation's activities. An informed membership, we believe, is an interested membership, and an interested membership is an active membership.

California Doctors

Criticize AMA Policy

LOS ANGELES (CNS) -- Almost unanimously, California Medical Association delegates rebuked their national federation for its unprogressive attitudes, May 3. In a formal resolution, California doctors

-- urged American Medical Association to recognize the need "for vigorous leadership in developing better ways to provide voluntary prepaid medical care for everyone;"

-- urged AMA to recognize the "changing socio-economic structure of this country;"

-- warned AMA that a review of its public relations is "urgent;" and

-- declared that recent AMA

ads and speeches of AMA leaders "resulted in the erroneous impression that AMA is opposed to providing medical care for the indigent."

Dr. William Thompson, former president of San Mateo county medical society, had offered a far stronger resolution demanding a shake-up in basic AMA policy. He agreed to tone it down.

The SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE said AMA doesn't reflect the unanimous opinion of its 180,000 members "in its extravagant campaign against President Kennedy's health plan for the aged." -- FN

Upon investigating the trouble, Byrd found the gas peddle had fallen off and he returned it to its place, and the motorist was able to go on her way.

On Tuesday evening, after the heavy rain, the road under construction near the Co-op gas station was in such bad condition that it had to be blocked off. This was decided after seven cars had gotten stuck in the mud. The construction crew was notified and after midnight, arrived to make the roadway usable again.

CARE Gives Results of Xmas Drive

(Ed. Note: Last Christmas a CARE campaign was organized in Greenbelt, the first of its kind ever held, in which local residents were asked to donate CARE food packages in the names of friends or relatives to serve as Christmas gifts. The objective of the campaign was to provide food packages and other materials for Tibetan refugee camp in India. The refugees, fleeing from the Communist invasion of their homeland, had been little publicized. The following letter is a report from CARE on the use of the funds contributed by Greenbelters.)

To The People of Greenbelt, MD
Dear Donors:

I wish to thank you for your kind donation to CARE's food crusade program to help the Tibetan refugees in Dalhousie camp.

A report on the Dalhousie Camp issued by the Central Relief Committee for Tibetans reads as follows:

"To provide relief to over ten thousand Tibetan refugees who sought asylum in India was our first and primary concern.... Consequently, food, clothing, medicines and other necessities of life were rushed to the relief camps and the supplies still continue.... The Dalhousie Tibetan Handicraft Centre (a part of the Dalhousie Camp) is one of the major and promising rehabilitation projects the Committee has undertaken.... CARE has consented to meet the expenses of equipment needed for the centre. We hope... with the continued assistance of individuals and voluntary agencies, both in this country and abroad, we will be able to assist these unfortunate Tibetan brethren stand on their own legs in the not too distant future".

Until the "not-too-distant-future", food is the primary need. Besides the food assistance rendered to the Tibetan refugees at the transit camps when they first entered India, we have so far supplied 2,270 bags rice (each 100 pounds) to the Dalhousie Camp alone. This includes 272 packages (68 bags) whose delivery has been possible through your kind donation. Each member receives 1 pound CARE rice per day. At present there are 1,300 refugees in the Dalhousie camp. This is one of the sixteen camps where we have supplied rice, thanks to the generosity of donors like yourselves.

Medical Costs

By Mary Bernhardt
of GROUP HEALTH & WELFARE NEWS

Anyone hit by high medical bills or expensive prescriptions will immediately respond to a new book on medical economics -- IT'S CHEAPER TO DIE. (Braziller, $3.50).

Author William Michelfelder hits all the headlined high spots in medical care and costs, from the drug industry to the medical business of the American Medical Association -- inadequacies and abuse of health insurance, staggeringly high drug costs, fee splitting, physician-pharmacist tie-ins, doctor shortage.

These are vital issues, important to the health and the pocketbook. And they need serious, thoughtful study, more than Michelfelder's haphazard headline hopping. His criticisms are valid; many of them call for drastic action. But Michelfelder offers only superficial description, colorful anecdotes, and sensational quotes, all designed to provoke interest and keep it.

The author's glib, vivid journalistic style is easy to read, but hides errors and misstatements galore. A professional hospital journal recently itemized a magazine-page-full of these slips, both major and minor.

There is much to criticize in organized medicine, health insurance, and the drug industry. But criticism that is both deliberately provocative and at the same time empty of constructive suggestion may do more harm than good.

One thing IT'S CHEAPER TO DIE is guaranteed to do -- it will show readers that something is wrong with the business of health.

4-H Demonstration

Every year on a Saturday in May, girls from all over Prince Georges County converge on Frederick Sasser High School in Upper Marlborough, carrying ironing boards, pots and pans, boxes of food, and similar items. Then they proceed to demonstrate for teams of judges what they have learned in their home economics projects, describing what they are doing as they go along. Eleven girls from Greenbelt participated in this year's event on May 6.

CLOVERETTES

Seven girls from Mrs. Helen Geller's club gave demonstrations. One team composed of Eva Garin and Barbara Skolnik, won both a blue and purple ribbon (grand champion) for their demonstration of bathing a baby. Lyn Rousseau showed how to make a scrapbook for a young child, and Jeannette Louk showed how to sew a hem. Elise Geller won a blue ribbon for a college box, and Elise and her sister, Barbara Geller, also won a blue ribbon for a team demonstration on party snacks. Phyllis Chasnoff, who has only been with the club a few months, delighted everyone by winning a blue ribbon for her date and prune confectionary and dried fruit candies.

CLOVERBUDS

Four girls from Mrs. Evelyn Simonson's club gave demonstrations. Linda Simonson showed hand stitches and Laura Simonson gave pointers on processing material. Ruth Amberg won a blue ribbon for an attractive lunch, "Hot and Hearty," and Benise Unger won a blue ribbon for a "surprise Bag," which she will take along on her baby sitting jobs.

Report Those Bass!

Bass and pike fishing have been very good at the Greenbelt lake recently, according to "Pop" Bell, official warden. Many fine catches have been made, he reports.

Bell points out, however, that restocking of bass in the lake depends on the number of bass reported caught. He therefore urges all fishermen to turn in to him a tag for each bass which has been caught.

ROBERT CARSON ANITA LOOS

MY HERO NO MOTHER TO GUIDE HER

An explosive novel about a hero of World War II who has a second chance to be a hero — in private William Clay had everything — the Congressional Medal of Honor, a beautiful wife, and a rich, politically powerful father-in-law. Tremendously successful in business after the war, Clay attracts attention in Washington, and is being groomed for a high position on the national scene when, in impassioned but misguided sincerity, he calls upon congress for unheard of and highly unpopular measures to save the country from sure defeat in World War III.

His public life is ended, and in bitterness he goes abroad with his wife, whose own deep problems and sporadic reforms create a further struggle, reflecting in private life Clay's failures, ruined career, and lost heroism.

It is in Germany when he finds old friends who served with him in the war, and new friends who suddenly and dramatically transform his whole life, that he discovers he is far from useless or forgotten — and that he has one more chance to be a hero. His unexpected decision — this time a choice he can control — gives the novel a powerful and exciting conclusion.

Robert Carson is author of the widely-praised novels, The Revels are Ended, The Magic Lantern, The Quality of Mercy, and Love Affair.

An irrepressible satire on Hollywood's era of fabulous nonsense by the inimitable Anita Loos whose Gentlemen Prefer Blondes delighted a generation

In Viola Lake, the bedeviled film star whose antics are portrayed here with biting wit, Miss Loos has created a character as memorable as Lorelei Lee.

And in Elmer Bliss, the quondam columnist determined to save Miss Lake from a fate worse than oblivion, we find the implacable optimist, whose credo is "Be Good, Do Good, Think Good, and Act Good."

When the Bareo murder case threatens to blow the lid off the film colony and smear his heroine, Elmer rises to the occasion with superb and wily innocence. The fast-moving, zestful story gives Miss Loos an opportunity to lampoon every aspect of California's Never-never land — the phony sects, elusive Swedish-type stars, "it" girls, nepotism, and national idols. As well, amorality, sex, multiple divorce, and all the other assorted sins of which Hollywood is accused come in for their share of ironic barbs in this hilarious portrait of an epoch.

Not surprisingly, Edmund Wilson has referred to this "intrepid satire" as "the novel about Hollywood with the most teeth in it." Line drawings.

Anita Loos, who at the age of sixteen wrote her first film, The New York Hat, for Mary Pickford, has devoted herself to theater work in recent years. Her Broadway hits include a musical version of Gentlemen Prefer Blondes, Happy Birthday, and adaptations of the Colette novels, Gigi and Chéri.

KALAHARI

By Jens Bjerre

Photographs—8 in full color; 31 in black and white

Jens Bjerre describes his experiences in one of the world's most inhospitable regions—the Kalahari Desert of South-West Africa.

Here Bjerre shared the daily life of Bushmen—the oldest surviving race on earth, who eat insects and suck up drinking water from the subsoil through hollow sticks—and is one of the few persons to have witnessed their secret ceremonies. Bjerre describes gigantic desert fires, the mysterious vanishing islands of the Skeleton Coast, subterranean lakes. His adventures were a journey through both time and space, for Bjerre's observations lead him to speculate on the development of mankind from its remote origins in Africa and Asia.

The author also of The Last Cannibals, Bjerre has an international reputation for his writing and films about primitive peoples.

THE FLY IN THE MARTINI

More than seventy of these delightfully whimsical articles have now been collected in this book. Among the titles that suggest the flavor of this amusing and warmhearted book are: The Barefoot Guest, I Demand Worse Weather, How to Tolerate In-Laws, Dream of a Lowbrow, Kitten Merchant, Shakespeare, Anyone?, Dogs Ain't My Best Friends.

The Fly in the Martini is illustrated with more than forty cartoons by the well-known artist Eric Gurney, also a Westporter, who illustrated the best-selling How to Live with a Neurotic Dog.

Siren Notes

BY RITA FISHER

On Wednesday, a three-year-old child on Hillside was playing with matches in the closet of a bedroom, when suddenly a fire broke out. Firemen had to break through the roof, working fast because the fire had spread to the attic. A fireman from College Park was burned on the neck during the operation. It was the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Leech and their eight children. Fortunately, none of the family was injured. Bedding and furniture in the children's room were destroyed along with most of the children's clothes. GHI is now in the process of repairing the damage.

On Sunday morning, at about 7:30 a.m., Greg Loftus and Kevin Kistler were delivering papers to residents of the apartments on Crescent when they smelled smoke in the basement. With clear heads and alert thinking, the boys did an excellent job of sounding the alarm. While Kevin went to the doors and knocked to warn the residents of the danger, Greg sped to the Police office and made his report. The cause of the smoke was an improperly functioning oil burner. These boys should be commended for their quick work. They may have averted a much more serious occurrence by their quick thinking.

Two brush fires were discovered this week behind the apartments on Parkway. It is possible that they may have been the work of youngsters.

Greenbelt assisted in a shed fire in Beltsville on Friday. They were 10:22'd on a call out of town on Monday night.

May 16

A very quick summary of the call received during the week showed that the fire fighting equipment responded to two fire calls and two 9-1's (auto accidents). There were 15 ambulance calls.

The big news of the week is that our ambulance is shining so brightly these days that it took first place as the "best appearing ambulance" at a parade in Landover Hills this past week-end. Credit for this, said Chief Reynolds, should all go to Frank Bequette, a new member of the department, who has taken much time to keep the vehicle shiny and bright. It's nice to know that we won out over some of the newer models that most certainly must have been in the line of parade.

Now that the current First aid course has reached the Advanced part, over fifty persons are attending the classes on Monday night which are being taught by Bill Hopkins.

Sodality Elections

On Wednesday, May 10 the Senior and Junior Sodality held elections of officers for the year 1961-62. Marie Boisvert was elected Prefect; Theodore Murray, Assistant Prefect; Dorothy Figlia, Treasurer; Hazel Callahan, Recording Secretary; and Shirley Dwyer, Corresponding Secretary for the Senior Sodality.

May Celebration

On May 21 the entire student body of St. Hugh's School, led by the 71 First Communicants received on May 14, will form a procession at 3 p.m., culminating in the crowning of Mary's statue by the May Queen, Miss Nancy Haslinger, assisted by her attendants, Debbie Duffy and Valeries Salopek, and the celebration of out-door benediction by Reverend Paul Liston.

Greenbelt Gardner

Mild weather is here, and the ground has warmed up enough for annuals, the mainstay of the summer garden. No other group of plants offers such an abundance of color, over a long period, and such a varied source of cutting material for the house. Annuals are especially useful for new home owners, whose more permanent plantings have not yet filled out.

When you plant annuals, be sure you know the ultimate heights to which they will grow. Zinnias and marigolds, for instance, come in sizes ranging from 10 inches to four feet. Taller-growing varieties should be set at the rear of the flowerbed, and may be drifted forward at intervals to form bays in which shorter plants may be massed. Zinnias, marigolds, and petunias rank first in popularity among American gardeners. Marigolds range in color from pale yellow through orange. Planthybridists are hard at work seeking a pure white marigold, but as yet they have been unsuccessful. Petunias are available in white and shades of red, pink, and purple. Many are splotted or striped, and some of the newer varieties have ruffled edges. Zinnias come in every color but blue, and care should be taken to avoid combining the more vivid magentas with orange marigolds.

Annuals must be thinned, or they will grow poorly. A distance of four inches is enough for sweet alyssum. Medium-height annuals need to be spaced about a foot apart each way, while taller ones should have more room to branch -- up to three feet for the tall, late-blooming cosmos. Pinch the tips of annuals several times while they are still small, to promote branching. It may give you a pang to nip off that very first bud on the young plant, but it's worth it; ultimately it will produce many more flowers than an unpinched plant. Keep faded blooms picked off all annuals, for once the plants begin to go to seed, they will stop blooming.

Tall-growing varieties will need staking as the summer progresses. The aim of staking is to keep the flowers from being dashed into the mud after a heavy rainstorm, while preserving the natural appearance of the plants. Staking plants properly is something of an art. All too often, a piece of clothesline is passed around the outside of the clump, which is then yanked up against an old mop handle. Peony hoops make excellent supports for annuals, once the peonies have stopped blooming. Or twiggy brush may be set in firmly among the plants while they are still young, which, as they grow, will lean against the branches and conceal them. Green-stained bamboo, sold in bunches at local hardware stores, is an inconspicuous, inexpensive material for staking plants. Use several stakes for each clump, and tie branches to them separately. Green twist ties are easy to use and not unsightly. They may be cut with scissors.

Most annuals need plenty of sun, but some will grow in the shade. Among them are nicotiana (flowering tobacco) in white or shades of red. The flowers remain closed in the early part of the day, and open toward evening. They are very fragrant, so plant a few where you can enjoy them when you sit outside on a warm summer's evening. Vinca (periwinkle), with its star-shaped white or pink flowers and handsome foliage also tolerates shade. So does torenia, an arresting annual with small purple orchid-shaped flowers. Petunias will grow in light shade.

A foresighted gardener thinks ahead to the long dreary winter when the only flowers available cost $4.00 a dozen at the florist's, and plants a few varieties which can be dried for winter bouquets. Strawflowers are excellent, and just a few plants will furnish plenty of cutting material. They are available in shades of yellow, orange, and purple. Pick them when the flower centers are still tightly closed, and only the first few rows of petals have opened. To dry, hang them upside down in an airy place. When strawflowers are dry, their stems will be too brittle for handling. Snip off the stems, and poke a green florist's wire up through the flower centers. They are then ready to be used in arrangements. Honesty is another plant for drying. The white phlox-like flowers in spring are inconspicuous, but the plant is really grown for its showy seed pods, which are round, flat, and of an iridescent silvery color. Cockscomb dries well, as do many kinds of ornamental grasses and also (these, of course, are not annuals) certain varieties of hydrangea.

City Council

cil to run the Labor Day Weekend Festival was also denied... Off the cuff - it is rumored that Perkins, owner of the land opposed for development near the junior high school, has sold it to a wealthy developer.... The Council is considering negotiation for the sale of city land formerly used for the sewage disposal plant. An interested party now wants outright sale rather than land swap. The council was warned by a citizen that the land has potential value due to proximity to the future interchange of Kenilworth and Capital Beltway. He urged that the land be declared surplus and sold on bids, rather than by negotiation... The Council was disturbed by the use of the Youth Center by the Steperettes under Legion sponsorship. Bills were paid by the father of an instructor, rather than by the Legion.... The Council was informed that the city warehouse area is being used to store wrecked cars from the Co-op filling station, while awaiting insurance adjustment. No rent is being charged.... McDonald was questioned on $2,000 used for paving the parking area without putting the job out on bid, as dictated by the ordinance.

Shamrock Slants

RITCHIE STEVENSON

The Greenbelt Lanes' Shamrocks, winners in their opening game against Bowie (11-2), had to travel to Scaggsville to play their "home" opener because of last weeks' bad weather. After the Shamrocks jumped off to a quick four-run lead in the top half of the first inning, Shamrock pitcher Jim Ake had easy going throughout the game; Ake and Wilson Rowe, who entered the game in the eighth inning, combined to throw a three-hitter. In the seven innings Ake was in he gave up two hits and recorded seventeen strike outs.

The leading hitters for the Shamrocks were Taylor Slye - three hits and two R.B.L.'S, and Bill Moore and Terry Collins with two hits and two R.B.L.'S each.

The Shamrocks play their next home game this Sunday, May 21st at 2 p.m., against Bowie. Come down and cheer the team on to victory.

This reflector is a vital part of a versatile microwave system, which sends alarm signals, "reads" measuring instruments at distant points, provides remote control of important equipment, and affords communication by voice. (PEPCO also owns and operates its own radio broadcasting station, for two-way communication with its many mobile units, generating stations, sub-stations, and work and load dispatchers.)

GCS Shopping Centers

Report Sales Up 37%

An all-time high in sales and the greatest single year's increase were reported in the 21st Annual Report just issued by Greenbelt Consumer Services, Inc., a consumer-owned co-operative operating 11 shopping centers in the Washington-Baltimore area.

Figures covering operations through the fiscal year ending January 28, 1961, showed retail sales at $21,860,000, up 37.4% over the previous year. This total includes the pharmacy, service station and variety department sales, as well as super-market operations. According to General Manager Samuel F. Ashelman, Jr., much of the increase was the direct result of adding four new centers to the group during the year, although existing stores were also up in sales.

In the report, Ashelman also pointed out the decline in earnings from the previous year, attributing this to the substantial expenses incurred in the opening of the four new units. Net income for 1960 was $212,088, compared with $254,200 for 1959.

Dividends were paid totaling $87,414, compared with $71,671 in the previous year. At the same time, the number of members holding stock increased from 19,013 to 22,496.

Beginning in 1939 with one supermarket located in Greenbelt, Maryland, the Co-Op organization has grown steadily in sales volume until it is now the largest consumer co-operative supermarket group in the United States.

Snow Emergency Plans Boy Scout News

Though winter is 8 months off, the city council is determined not to be caught unprepared when next season's first snowstorm hits. At its April 17 meeting, the council approved the passage of an ordinance giving the city manager authority in times of emergency to prohibit temporarily the parking of automobiles along certain designated streets and to remove vehicles parking in restricted areas. This authority would also apply in periods of emergency other than snowstorms such as during road repair work, parades, tree spraying, etc.

Motorists must be given 12 hours warning of the restriction. After that time, the car may be removed by towing to an unrestricted area or to a designated impounded area. The owner of an impounded vehicle may be permitted to repossess his car upon the posting of a fee to cover the costs of removal.

Mr. Norman Hooven Jr., Committeeman from Troop 202, Greenbelt, received the "Scouters Training Award" on Friday, May 12, at the Prince Georges District of the National Capital Recognition Dinner.

On Saturday May 13, thirteen Boy Scouts from Troop 202 took a twelve mile hike which started at Georgetown on the old C. & O. Canal, and ended at Great Falls. While en-route, the boys scaled the hazardous and difficult Billie Goat Falls Trail. At noon they stopped off at Glen Echo to prepare their lunch, after which they enjoyed rides and games at the park.
