GHI Votes Pay Hike, Sets Up Committees

by Sid Kastner

During a rather long evening meeting of the GHI board on Thursday, November 13, much was discussed but few actions were actually taken. However, the previously reported pay raises for staff and maintenance personnel were ratified, and some further steps were taken in setting up the new structure of committees. Board members and audit committee members also voiced their views on the issue that came up at the Nov. 5 city council meeting - the proposed abandonment of a strip along Southway Road.

The board was clearly concerned about the fate of the twenty-five foot strip along Southway road, on which five GHI homes presently exist. Director Jim Smith strongly urged that "the mistake should be corrected now", rather than in the future. (Council subsequently resolved this issue by approving a 25-foot abandonment.)

Committees

Committee functions have all been assigned, as reported previously, except for three: home improvements, member services and legislative references. Directors Katherine Keene and Stephen Polaschik suggested that the first two functions should be handled by one committee, though David Lange thought there would be enough work for two committees to handle. On Nat Shinderman's motion, as amended by Miss Keene, one committee was set up to handle both functions - the Member Services and Home Improvements committee. With this and the Legislative References committee, the full complement of GHI standing committees has now been set up, and the board turned to the important matter of staffing them.

Director Lange proposed that all members be directly informed of the committee openings. He remarked that an informed membership would be easier to contact. A special issue of the Newsletter will go out to members, giving all details of the committee functions and make-up, and encouraging each individual to volunteer his or her services. Chairman Charles Schwan asked board members to nominate people to chair the committees - the nominations will be first considered at tonight's special meeting.

Townhouse Landscaping

Gordon Allen of the Landscape committee expressed high concern about the way the contractor is earthing out grading at the site of the almost complete townhouses. He went so far as to say that the excavations are not deep enough to accommodate the site plans properly, though it is now too late to remedy matters. Superintendent David Kane said the steepest slopes would probably be sodded, and thought the work was being properly carried out; however, it was evident that the board members were worried by Allen's comments. Director Smith urged Kane to see that the contractors completed the grading in a satisfactory manner.

Pay increases for staff and maintenance personnel were approved in the amounts recommended previously by the Personnel committee, a flat 5% increase for maintenance staff, and a sliding scale as reported earlier for the administra-five people. These pay raises will become effective the first pay period in 1970. The board did not forget recording secretary Helen White and the personnel of the sales office in its considerations, also.

A number of individual matters took up the rest of the meeting. The rental rates set a few weeks ago for spaces in the boat and trailer lots were judged to be inconsistent - the corporation would be getting proportionately less return from the larger lot - so the monthly rates will be set at $4.25 and $5.00, the latter rate being used for a space in the larger lot. Another problem, of many years standing, has been to clearly lay out lot lines throughout GHI property; Shinderman noted that the services of junior and senior engineering students of the University of Maryland will be available during the summer, and recommended that two such part-time employees be hired to survey the property lines. Director Alex Chavrid did not go along with this, but Smith and Polaschik expressed support for it and the proposal carried. As a final item, manager Breashears and one of the townhouse members, Bill Johnson, reported that more than a dozen members are interested in purchasing carpeting on a cooperative basis and that a store chain can supply this and install it; Johnson urged quick action on this.

City Notes

Leaves, leaves—mountains of leaves! And just in the nick of time, a new leaf vacuum to the rescue! The machine was delivered, as scheduled, on November 14. That should be the happy ending to the story—except that it arrived incomplete; the pick-up attachment at the end of the hose was missing. Furthermore, the machine, which was delivered direct to the city rather than to a dealer, needed servicing. But the word drifts in that these problems have been taken care of and that the machine is making its rounds. Goodbye, leaves!

PRAB Hearing Held On Youth Center Wing

by Sandra Barnes

Soliciting public opinion on the proposed addition to the Youth Center, the Parks and Recreation Advisory Board held a special hearing on Thursday evening, November 6. The meeting was attended by more than 15 members of the Golden Age Club, Mayor Francis White and councilman Joel Katz. Jerry Shafer representing the Boys Club, and a few other interested citizens.

Conspicuous by their absence, noted the meeting's chairman Richard Stevenson of PRAB, were any members of the youth of the community.

Darald Lofgren of the recreation department briefly described what would be included in the two wings of the addition. Golden Agers were concerned about having a first aid room equipped with a cot and other related facilities near their lounge. Lofgren explained that such facilities would be stored in a nearby conference room and would be readily available in any emergency.

The Golden Agers also wished to have microphone receptacles at both ends of their room. Their wishes will be conveyed to the architect. Otherwise the Golden Agers were well satisfied with the plans and noted their intention and ability to furnish their lounge.

The one negative voice on the proposed addition was heard when Jerry Shafer protested the lack of a second gym. He felt the city "was not doing one thing to improve the Boys Club," especially in view of the expected increase in the club's growth over the next ten years.

Stevenson and Lofgren protested. Lofgren stated that to build a second gym would be to spend all the money allocated for the addition on a gym only, and have no facility for any other activities. He also stated that he hoped to move the adult gym programs into the Center School gym, thereby freeing the Youth Center gym for the boys on one or two additional nights. The armory was also mentioned as a possible facility for the boys' use.

Stevenson noted that the attempt of the city and PRAB was to provide facilities for an "equal balance of activities, cultural, social and athletic." He added that PRAB was thinking of the future growth of Boys Club, and that in addition to the three already mentioned area gyms, the new high school will also have a gym for possible use by the city's recreation department. The addition, he concluded, represented "a compromise of interests and programs."

Hugh Jascourt, chairman of PRAB, asked what effect the city's possible acquisition of the Lutheran Church would have on the recreation program. Lofgren seemed uncertain as to how the church site could be used but stated that "the programs are built around the facilities." He mentioned a little theatre group as a possibility.

Council in Split Vote Adopts Modified Southway Proposal

by Al Skolnik

Mayor Francis White tried valiantly to get unanimous agreement Monday night on the Southway abandonment issue but finally had to let the matter come to a vote in which council split down the middle. At issue was the amount of right-of-way that the city should retain after adjusting the city's property line to correct a 17-year old error which had the city's 100 foot right-of-way incorporating portions of five Greenbelt Homes, Inc., homes on the west side of Southway between Ridge and Crescent.

The original proposal introduced two weeks ago was for the city to abandon 25 feet of the right-of-way, thus retaining a 75-foot right-of-way. City manager James Giese felt that such a right-of-way would be sufficient for the city's needs unless council was contemplating a widening of Southway Road beyond that incorporated in the present plans. Councilman Edgar Smith argued for retaining as much city right-of-way as possible in case there were future demands for realignment of Southway and further widening. Councilman Dick Pilski also felt that since the 25-foot right-of-way would revert to the nearest property owner - GHI, the latter should agree to an exchange of property.

At Monday's meeting, GHI president Charles Schwan made known that a 5-foot easement would be made available by GHI on the east side of Southway, thus giving the city, in effect, an 80-foot right-of-way and meeting the requirement of an "arterial" road.

With this as a basis for agreement, councilwoman Elizabeth Maffay moved that the city solicitor file a petition for the abandonment of the 25-foot right-of-way on the west side of Southway, based on assurances that GHI would give a 5-foot easement on the east side. Supporting the motion on the final vote were White and councilman Joel Katz; opposed were Smith and Pilski.

Prior to the 3-2 vote, White attempted to get council to agree on some intermediate footage as a right-of-way, but the charts prepared by the city manager did not allow much leeway. A 100-foot right-of-way, realigned along the center of the road, would run the property line practically from building to building on both sides of the street. A 90-foot right-of-way would still have the city property lines extending beyond the current hedge lines and cutting into individual GHI lots.

Southway Reconstruction

After taking an hour and a half to settle this issue, council then moved speedily to approve engineering plans for the reconstruction of Southway Road. Giese reported that in order to qualify for Federal urban funds for secondary roads, Southway would have to be constructed to a minimum width of 62 feet, with parking restricted. The city plans call for widening Southway to just 44 feet (two 12 foot traveling lanes and two 10 foot parking lanes). Another Federal requirement, Giese said, might be a city commitment to a program of reconstructing Crescent Road from Southway to Kenilworth Ave. in the same manner.

The council agreed that both conditions were unacceptable and therefore moved to abandon efforts to get Federal aid. It also instructed the city engineer to proceed with the preparation of plans and specifications for bidding early this spring. The plans also call for a 5' sidewalk on the west side of Southway, requested by the residents at a public hearing in January 1969.

High School Problems

Rights-of-way and abandonments continued to dominate the rest of the council agenda. The council directed the city manager to advise the county school board that it did not see how the city had any alternative but to oppose the school board's petition to abandon the sanitary landfill road unless agreement could be reached on the various other problems surrounding the three-school complex.

The city council had informally agreed to this abandonment and to the transfer of its landfill property to the school board, conditioned upon the school board's making available the perimeter road. An agreement between the school board and the former owners of the 72-acre site, which is to house the three-school complex, places some doubt, Giese said, on the school board's ability to dedicate the perimeter road.

The council also expressed concern about other problems; namely, the dedication of extension of Hamilton Road for a second access road to the school tract and the question of who would pay for the access roads. It was estimated that the access roads could cost up to $100,000. The school board has indicated that it is not in the road-building business.

Hugh Jascourt, from the audience, asked whether county aid should not be forthcoming since, he said, the senior high school will be mainly meeting county needs. He estimated that out of a total

The Police Blotter

On November 13, at about 10 p.m., a Springhill Lake resident heard a knock on his door. As he was in bed he did not reply to the knock. Shortly thereafter he heard someone trying to enter his apartment through the patio. He possessed a gun and shot at the intruder, who fled. As blood was found near the patio, it is suspected that the intruder was hit. A lookout was placed in the Springhill Lake area, but no one was apprehended.

On November 5, Chief William Lane attended a state-wide conference of police chiefs at the University of Maryland. The purpose of the program was to explore what courses the university can offer to aid law enforcement officers.

Unit & Cluster Amendment Public Hearing Monday

The Prince George's County Planning Board's amendment to the Zoning Ordinance and the Subdivision Regulations entitled "Planned Unit and Cluster" will go to a formal public hearing before the Prince George's County Board of Commissioners on Monday (November 24) at 8:30 p.m. in the Courthouse hearing room in Upper Marlboro.

The Planned Unit and Cluster Regulation has been adopted by the County Planning Board in an effort to stimulate more imaginative development and encourage the dedication of open space for County residents.

The new regulations would allow development designs in Prince George's County to fit the topographical conditions and surroundings. This would be done by providing optional procedures wherein standards relating to the placement of buildings and the arrangement and size of lots could be modified as necessary.

Under these procedures, a developer may cluster his development on the property and reduce the lot size thereby creating open space which may be either dedicated to the public or privately maintained. The Cluster Plan would be subject to minimum size requirements of at least twenty dwelling units in the case of residential zones and at least one acre in non-residential zones.

While preserving open spaces which could serve in active or passive recreational uses, scenic or historic purposes, the amendment could result in economy in subdivision improvements and retain limitation on the total number of dwelling units or building intensity within an area.

At Monday's meeting council agreed to testify in favor of the proposal, but with one modification. It disapproved a provision which permits a payment of a fee by a developer desiring to improve open space. Council feared that this would give a developer an opportunity to more densely develop his property by the payment of a fee to the county.

Council has also notified the county commissioners of its support with some modifications of a proposal to require mandatory dedication of open space up to 5 percent of a tract area in family zones and 10 percent of tract area in multiple family zones or a fee in lieu. One change the city is advocating is language that would permit dedication of open space land to the city of Greenbelt and other park jurisdictions in areas not under the jurisdiction of the Park and Planning Commission. Another change being suggested is that the fee required should be commensurate with the cost of the land required. Otherwise, the city feels, developers might find the payment of a fee (proposed at 5% of the total assessed valuation) less costly than to deed the land.

school enrollment of 2,400, only 500 will be coming from Greenbelt.

Gentry Drive

The council gave its approval to a preliminary plan which would provide for the dedication of a 60-foot right-of-way for Gentry Drive. This road, running past the A&P in the Beltway Plaza Shopping Center, is part of the perimeter road and will be serving as a major access to Springhill Lake. The Prince Georges County Planning Board will consider the preliminary plan on Wednesday, November 26.

When questioned as to why the dedication did not call for an 80-foot right of way, which is the requirement for the perimeter road, White stated that it was the best agreement that could be obtained with the Beltway Plaza developer (Sidney Brown). The alternative, he said, would be to take the land to condemnation, which would involve city costs.

Other Matters

The council authorized the city to execute a contract with the Department of Housing and Urban Development for the receipt of open space funds in the amount of $116,000 for the purchase of parcels 7 and 8, the land near the entrance to the city at Kenilworth and Crescent. This is a matching grant, with the city to put up an equal amount.

The council appointed an ad hoc committee on city elections consisting of Mrs. Howard Coxon, Theodore Reiss, Harold Siegel, Joseph Hanyok, and George Beauchamp. It also accepted the resignation of Robert Barton from the Parks and Recreation Advisory Board. Barton has taken on duties as class president at Parkdale Senior High School.

The council received a request from the Jaycees to lease the Athletic Club building, which was vacated by the Lions Club at the end of September 1969. The building is in need of repairs and the Jaycees have indicated a willingness to invest some money. Glese told council that the city's Recreation Department has also indicated an interest in using the premises. Council suggested that perhaps a sharing arrangement could be worked out.

Ordinances were passed at Monday's meeting regulating the carrying and prohibiting the use of deadly weapons, and amending the personnel plan. Postponed until the next meeting was consideration of an ordinance regulating skating on Greenbelt Lake. At the request of GHI, action on the comprehensive ordinance establishing a municipal traffic code was postponed until GHI would have a chance to consider the changes at its December 11 meeting.

Borrowing the old heat for the new room isn't such a hot idea.

At first blush, tapping your present heat supply might seem logical.

But, come winter, the blush you'll experience won't begin to offset the decided chill you'll feel. And setting the thermostat at 80 won't help. Instead of spreading your present system too thin, add a little electric heat where it'll do the most good.

It comes by the roomful. In baseboard form. In wall units that fit flush, so you hardly notice them. In the ceiling as a hidden cable, or as a radiant panel that installs like ceiling tile.

For an idea of which kind of room-size electric heat would make the most sense, phone Pepco's Residential Customer Department at 628-0389, 628-0506 or 628-0617. We'll send you someone who'll be happy to give you a free heating survey and estimate of operating costs.

Or, let us send you a free copy of "20 Most Often Asked Questions About Electric Heat."
