Sixth Graders Honored

by Mary Lou Williamson

Sixty-seven 6th graders with shining faces, combed hair and beautifully dressed many of the girls in long skirts, filed into their places for their first graduation exercise at Center School, Wednesday, June 18.

Principal Marjorie Mizelle welcomed the students, their families and friends who filled the auditorium. She complimented the young people for working hard to acquire the skills interest and motivation needed for coping with junior high school next fall.

Congresswoman Gladys Spellman encouraged the youngsters to read, to learn and to make the most of change. She challenged them "to work always a little harder than you think you can." As to job opportunities for women, Mrs. Spellman told the girls "there's nothing you can't be — except a father or a king."

Councilman Charles Schwan welcomed everyone on behalf of the city of Greenbelt and Lesley Kreimer, member of the Prince Georges County School Board, brought greetings from the other board members. She emphasized extra curricular activities as a means of learning about careers and as a pathway to greater enthusiasm for the junior high experience.

Awards

The American Legion citizenship award, presented by Herbert Rosenberg, went to Alan Mac Quillan. Charles Hyland was runner-up. The girl's award, presented by Mrs. Anna Link, went to Tricia Foster. Lisa Reuben was runner-up.

Stape Shields, physical education teacher, assisted by Greenbelt Police Officer Davil Fulgham handed out a certificate and pin to each safety patrol. Special awards for the top patrols went to Travis DonBullian and Chris Hunt. Mrs. Spellman related the story of the first girl to break into the all-male ranks of safety patrols in the District of Columbia. "She stands before you," said Mrs. Spellman of herself!

Shields also presented physical fitness awards. In the highest category, receiving a presidential certificate, were Carolyn Szafran and Jay Conway. Those who received silver awards were Doris Brockway, Marc Bruce, Patrick Clerkin, Nicolette Durantine, Dwayne Evans, Nani Felsher, Tricia Foster Amanda Greene, Chris Hunt Charles Hyland, Jody Johnston Alan Mac Quillan, Lisa Reuben, and Forrest England.

Vessalina Bailey received special notice for the all-time school records she made in two track events: high jump, 4 ft. 1 in. and broad jump, 7 ft.

Media helper certificates went to Doris Brockway, Marc Bruce, Richard Cecchetti, Penny Gingell, Amanda Greene, Lysle Rice, Mindy Ruderman, Carolyn Szafran and Carolyn Williamson. Alan Mac Quillan and Jeff Hibbs were named Junior Media Specialists for their work with movie projectors and TV Cameras.

Service awards went to the remaining students who helped the school as student tutors, S.H.I.P. helpers and classroom aides.

Cover design for the graduation invitations and program was by Bruce Bond and Billy Thorpe.

In a surprise presentation, Schwan read a resolution passed by council, commending Mrs. Mizelle for her educational efforts

Center Mall Ceremony

A brief ceremony will be held in the Center Mall on Friday, July 4 at 4 p.m. The ceremony will begin with the playing of the Greenbelt Community Church chimes by Mrs. Donald Kern. This will be followed by a concert of combined church choirs, a flag raising ceremony, the reading of the Declaration of Independence and the dedication of the Greenbelt historical marker.

In the event of rain the ceremony will be held at the Youth Center.

Festival Needs People

The 21st annual Greenbelt Labor Day Festival is now accepting applications from individuals or groups who can demonstrate a skill or sing, dance or play an instrument. Anyone interested in participating in this year's event is urged to contact special events chairman, Sandra Barnes, 474-5310, after 4 p.m., or write to the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival, Box 2, Greenbelt, 20770.

July Fourth Block Party

Springhill Lake Civic Association is sponsoring a Fourth of July block party July 4 from 2-11 p.m. in the area of the Springhill Lake Community House. All Greenbelt residents are invited.

Mosquito Control Spraying Begins

The City is once again participating in the State of Maryland Department of Agriculture's mosquito control program with spraying on Tuesday and Friday. It will continue throughout the summer on an as needed basis with periodic checks by the Department of Agriculture to determine the need. Malathion, to be sprayed this summer, is regarded as non-hazardous to animals and humans and is approved by the Environmental Protection Agency. Applications concentrations are determined on the basis of findings of such responsible agencies, as the Maryland State Board of Agriculture, the U. S. Department of Agriculture, the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Agency and the U. S. Food and Drug Administration.

High School Equivalency

Do you have a high school diploma? It doesn't matter when, where, or why you didn't finish high school. Here is a chance to improve your opportunities in the job market or to go to college. Prince Georges County is now offering a six-week summer program of preparatory classes for the General Educational Development (high school equivalency) examination. Classes, materials and testing are free of charge to residents of Maryland who are 16 years of age or older.

The current session begins July 1 and will run through August 6 on Tuesdays and Wednesdays from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. at Parkdale Senior High School. Pre-GED courses in mathematics and reading are also available. For more information, call the Adult Education office at 474-3588 or Mrs. Unger, 474-1052.

and high standards. The audience gave her a standing ovation.

The 6th graders closed the program with a musical number, a song written by a 6th grade student six years ago, entitled "Center School."

Berkofsky to Perform In July 5 Concert

by Janet James

Greenbelters will have a rare opportunity to hear one of their own in concert at the Meriweather Post Pavilion on Saturday, July 5 at 8:30 p.m. Martin Berkofsky and Justin Blasdale, with the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra, will perform Max Bruch's "Concerto for Two Pianos." Sergiu Commissiona will conduct.

Max Bruch's "Concerto for Two Pianos" has been called the "Mystery Concerto" because of its strange history. Two Baltimore sisters, Rose and Ottilie Sutro, were well-known as a two-piano team in Europe and America for over two decades after their debut in London in 1894. In 1911 the Sutro sisters visited Max Bruch, whose works they had played on the concert stage, and asked him to write for them a concerto for two pianos, a request which he granted. Either they couldn't play it as written, however, or they didn't like it, for they made literally thousands of changes. Under the baton of Stowkowski, they played a version of it with the Philadelphia Orchestra and another version with the New York Philharmonic with Stansky conducting. Then the Concerto dropped out of sight. Even a Sutro version left with the Library of Congress for copyright disappeared, later to be found in Ottilie Sutro's effects after her death.

Nathan Twining, a young Baltimore pianist, attended an auction of the Sutro effects after Ottilie's death in 1971 and came away with a pasteboard box of unidentified manuscripts for which he paid $11.00. In it he found a bound manuscript of a concerto for two pianos, skillfully written which he and his friend Martin Berkofsky played through. On the last page they found the signature "Max Bruch." Then came a long period of research by Berkofsky and Twining to identify the original Bruch opus without the sturo changes. Through the study of other Bruch manuscripts made available to them with the help of Max Bruch's son Ewald, still living near Berlin, they were able to understand Bruch's musical shorthand and produce the scores required for performing the original work. Although the piece was recorded in November 1973 with the London Symphony Orchestra, with Berkofsky and Twining at the pianos, the performance on July 5 will be the first "live" performance. Berkofsky has asked a rising young pianist, Justin Blasdale, to play the other piano with him for this and future performances.

Martin Berkofsky was born in Baltimore but shortly thereafter his parents Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Berkofsky, moved to Greenbelt. Martin attended Center School, Greenbelt High School and was graduated from High Point High School. He received his musical training at Peabody Conservatory in Baltimore and studied at the Vienna (Austria) Academy under a Fulbright Scholarship. Blasdale received his early training in Berkeley, Cal., before attending

Greenbriar Day-Care Center Denied Special Exception

Denial of a special exception for the proposed day-care center at the Greenbriar condominium project was handed down by zoning hearing examiner Barry S. Crump on June 20. George Brugger, attorney for the applicant, Campus Center for Early Learning, has filed an appeal with the county council, sitting as the district council, and will present oral arguments to the council within 30 days.

Seek County Solution To Trash Disposal

Prince Georges own version of Mt. Trashmore — today's most innovative method of trash disposal — may well be rising in the vicinity of five northern municipalities as a result of discussions between Prince Georges councilman David G. Hartlove Jr. and five county mayors.

Convinced that above-grade landfills can transform barren acres into recreational treasures, Hartlove has persuaded the mayors of College Park, Bowie, Laurel, Greenbelt, and New Carrollton to sell the idea to their legislators and citizens.

Bowie Greenbelt, and College Park will be faced with a solid waste dilemma within two years when present landfills are filled. Hartlove, anxious to get a pilot project operating in Prince Georges County, firmly believes that piling and seeding compacted trash and soil on marginal land is the method of trash disposal for the future. And he believes just as firmly that a municipal operation may be the place to start.

"A single visit to Virginia Beach, where the original Mt. Trashmore style waste disposal started, will convince any serious individual that burping out paper towels, bottles and scraps really is a waste of time and materials," Hartlove noted. "We can use all that in the most massive recycling effort any community can undertake and end with a more beautiful site than we had when we began."

In Virginia Beach, a soap box derby ramp now sits where a city eyesore once was located. Officials are moving ahead with plans to build an amphitheatre overlooking one of the two lakes created out of landfill borrow areas around Mt. Trashmore. The lakes are stocked for recreational fishing.

Council several months ago endorsed the concept of above-grade landfills and asked the county's Solid Waste Task Force to evaluate the system as a means of reclaiming strip-mined or other marginal land. The resolution, sponsored by Hartlove, also asked the county to identify five potential five-year sites to be filled with 60 percent compacted refuse and 40 percent earth.

The pilot program, in Hartlove's view, should be a shorter than usual operation, lasting perhaps two to three years rather than the typical five to 10 year period. Although details and sites must be topics for future discussions, Hartlove pointed out that one alternative may be municipal purchase of marginal land to be leased later to a private businessman to conduct the Mt. Trashmore-style disposal operation.

the Juilliard School of Music in New York.

The program on July 5 at the Meriweather Post Pavilion will be devoted to double concertos. Brahms' Concerto for Violin, Cello and Orchestra, with Robert Gerle, violinist, and Mihaly Virizlay, cellist, and Franceschini's Concerto for Two Solo Trumpets, with Don Tison and Langston J. Fitzgerald II as trumpeters will complete the program.

Ticket information may be obtained by calling 953-2424. Lower-priced, unreserved seats are available for cash only.

The applicant had requested a special modification of the off-street parking requirement of 12 additional parking spaces for 70 children on the ground floor of the Greenbriar Recreation Building on Hanover Parkway. (The code provides that for every 6 children, 1 parking space must be provided.) Twenty-nine spaces are already located adjacent to the recreation building but these spaces were provided to satisfy the zoning ordinance requirements generated by the residential units of the Greenbriar project.

Arguments For Exception

The applicant pleaded that the 12 additional spaces were not needed because:

(1) The day-care center will be used to accommodate mainly the students, faculty, and staff of the Laurel branch of the Prince Georges Community College. (The Campus Center for Early Learning is a facility of the PG Community College which enables students, faculty, and staff to leave their children at the facility while they attend school and work.) These children will be transported back and forth by a fleet of maxi-wagons, hence a reduced need for parking space.

(2) The balance of enrollment will be generated from the residents of the Greenbriar complex, many of whom will be able to walk to the center.

(3) Almost all of the activities scheduled for the recreation building other than the day-care center will take place in the early evening, at hours other than when the center will be operating.

Reasons for Denial

Despite recommendations of approval by the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the Greenbelt City council, the zoning examiner denied the request on the grounds that the record is devoid of evidence of special circumstances or conditions peculiar to the subject property that would statutorily satisfy the waiver.

"Should we approve this modification," the examiner said, "we would be extricating the applicant from a condition knowingly entered into by those who sought and received the earlier special exceptions and parking waiver for the Greenbriar complex." Reference here was to the special exceptions regarding green space and parking that the developer, Alan Kay, successfully secured from the county council in September 1972 when the Greenbriar project was developed. Construction of additional parking space would violate the green space requirement contained in the special exceptions.

The decision acknowledged that the day-care center will serve an excellent purpose in that it will provide a service to the community, but concluded that the proposed use is not in harmony with the purpose and intent of the zoning ordinance. The examiner also felt that if the parking modification were granted, the boarding and discharging of pupils in a parking lot provided for residential users could potentially create a safety hazard to both groups.

Brugger said that "the decision was an attempted triumph of a technicality over common sense."

Holiday Refuse Schedule

Due to the July Fourth holiday there will be no refuse collection on that day. Refuse collection for the remainder of the week will follow the normal schedule.

Twin Pines Will Figure Interest on Daily Basis

Previously, it didn't matter what members did with their money at Twin Pines for the greater part of the month. As long as money was in by the 20th, interest was figured on it for the entire month. Starting July 1, however, that will change, as Twin Pines converts to a plan of figuring interest on a daily, rather than its present monthly basis.

Supported by claims from Twin Pines manager, Steve Frankenburg, that the action would save money for Twin Pines, the board of directors voted at their regular meeting last week to implement this change. It is designed to encourage savers to keep their money in Twin Pines for a greater part of each month by granting a higher interest yield. It will also be less advantageous to take money out during the first part of the month only to return it by the 20th, because interest will only be paid for the days in which the money is in the account.

Although the compounding method is different, dividends will still be paid on a quarterly basis. This is provided for in the Twin Pines bylaws and would require the membership vote to change.

Also approved at the meeting were the payment of dividends on July 1. Manager Frankenburg estimated that about $75,000 would be paid in dividends this quarter.

On July 16 a Twin Pines membership meeting will be held at the Twin Pines office, in order to continue the vote on the articles of amendment. Persons who have not yet voted are urged to do so, as over a thousand more votes are needed.
