Council Members Exude Cheerful Confidence As Supporters Crowd Into Council Chambers

by Virginia Beauchamp

Before an audience of over 50 family members, friends, and other well wishers on Monday evening, September 24, the newly re-elected city council took their oath of office for a new two-year term and elected high vote getter Gil Weidenfeld to serve as mayor. Weidenfeld will exchange titles and seats behind the podium with former mayor Richard Pilski, who was elected to the post of mayor pro tem. Administration of the oath of office to the new mayor was performed by Norman Pritchett, Clerk of the Seventh Judicial Circuit Court of Maryland.

In a short statement following the swearing-in, Weidenfeld expressed his gratitude for the vote of confidence rendered to him and his colleagues by the citizens of Greenbelt. Weidenfeld called the group "a well seasoned council."

Other council members struck the same note. Pilski, elected to his eighth term, indicated that if he completes it, he will have served on the city council for 16 years, longer than any other citizen in Greenbelt history.

Councilman Thomas X. White stated that government goes on in Greenbelt "without missing a beat." He called the four-time re-election of the entire council "unprecedented in Greenbelt history."

All council members in their statements sketched out what they see as significant problems for the years ahead, and all gave priority to the threat posed to the city by proposals by the State Highway Administration for future highway redesign within the boundaries of Greenbelt. "The plans are grotesque, particularly in combination," Councilman Charles F. Schwan charged. "They are so bad that it is hard to take them seriously, but take them seriously we must."

White stressed the need for people in Springhill Lake to have "safe and adequate ingress and egress."

GHI Board Explores Means of Informing Members as Rehabilitation Moves Along

by Mary Lou Williamson

With most of its major decisions on rehabilitation already made, the Greenbelt Homes, Inc. Board of Directors at its September 13 meeting was kept busy refining the minor points: how to keep its 1600 members abreast of what is happening in general and, more specifically, how to notify members of when their homes will be disrupted for the installation of windows or insulation or siding.

Member Katherine Keene suggested forming a members' committee to handle complaints or queries about the rehabilitation work in progress; management thought the idea sounded useful. HUD requires reporting of information to the membership. The board asked management to come up with some plans as to whether the "Newsletter," the News Review or a special rehab bulletin, as suggested by Director Margaret Hogens, would be the most efficient.

Both board and members were concerned about guaranteeing proper supervision of the rehabilitation work. The board has already approved hiring a construction supervisor. A new inspector, Margie Secone, has been on the job about a month. Members Janet James and Carl Conrad and General Manager Roy Breashears all testified in her behalf.

"We are gearing up toward close overlook of subcontractors," Breashears said. "Most of these jobs are of such magnitude that manufacturers will be doing the bidding and then hiring their own subcontractors."

"Our own construction supervisor, our architect, also HUD and county (inspectors) will be keeping an eye on the work," added director Norman Weyel. "Once we get started we'll have plenty of supervision!"

Also to be hired is a "scheduler" who will keep track of where the various sub-contractors will be working on a day-to-day basis.

Board member Jim Smith told board and management: "It's absolutely necessary to provide the opportunity for members to check the validity of their orders—particularly windows which will have to be ordered soon—and be given a last chance to change." He noted two potential problems: 1) homes that were in the process of being sold in August (when window and GHI Members Gather This Sunday To Hail Start of Rehab, At Last!

Robert Embrey, Assistant Secretary for Community Planning and Development, U. S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, (HUD) will be the featured speaker at the inauguration ceremonies for Greenbelt Homes rehabilitation program on Sunday, September 30, at the North End Elementary School. The program will begin at 3 p.m. Local, state, county, and federal officials will also join GHI members in kicking off the rehabilitation program.

HUD has committed $6.4 million in loans to GHI, to be repaid at 3% interest over 20 years, under its Section 312 program. This is the largest of such loans in the entire country.

County Executive Lawrence J. Hogan and his staff have worked with GHI in developing the program. The county has submitted the application on behalf of GHI and will continue to administer the three-year rehabilitation program.

In addition, Congresswoman Gladys Spellman, Senators Charles McC. Mathias and Paul Sarbanes have been instrumental in helping GHI obtain the HUD loan.

The rehabilitation program will begin in October in the north end of town. Members are expected to save $210,000 in fuel oil costs in 1980, up to $624,000 by 1983.

The City of Greenbelt and GHI also will jointly receive nearly one million dollars in Community Development Block Grant funds through the Prince Georges County Neighborhood Improvement Program.

In addition to the formal part of the inauguration program, GHI hopes to have a demonstration of the insulation being installed in a nearby home. Refreshments will be served with a special cake created for the occasion by GHI member, Doty Varda.

All members of GHI—as well as past members—and their families are welcome to attend the ceremonies.

Meeting to be Held on Intercounty Connector

The State Highway Administration (SHA) will hold a Project Initiation Workshop Meeting at High Point Senior High on Thurs., Oct. 4, at 7:30 p.m. on the Intercounty Connector. The Connector is a proposed interstate highway which would link the B-W Parkway to I-270. If constructed, the highway would be expected to dump heavy traffic on the Parkway which would have to be widened. City council has gone on record opposing the construction of the Connector.

SHA plans to inform the citizenry of different aspects of the Connector, including its history and environmental considerations, and to learn what the public thinks of it. Everyone is invited to attend the meeting, but no more than 225 persons can attend due to the format which will stress citizen participation. Registration is required in advance, by writing to Hal Kassoff, Director, Office of Planning and Preliminary Engineering, c/o H.D.R. Inc., 5454 Wisconsin Avenue, Chevy Chase, Md. 20015. Included in the notice should be the name, address and phone number of the person registering, and the date and place of the meeting the person wishes to attend.

Science Center to Offer New Evening Programs

The staff of the Howard B. Owens Science Center, a special facility of the Prince Georges County Public School System, is readying its first-ever series of evening planetary programs for the general public, to begin on October 11.

Last spring the Board of Education gave the go-ahead for development of evening programs for audiences from the community. While the specifics of the first in the series are still under wraps, Science Center Coordinator H. B. Lantz says it will be both educational and "good, clean family fun."

The fall 45-minute program will premier at 7 p.m. on Thursday, October 11, and will be repeated at 7 p.m. on October 25, November 8 and November 22. The Center promises a new program for December, with additional showings each week.

Science Center is located at 9601 Greenbelt Rd, adjacent to DuVal Senior High School. A nominal admission fee will be charged to help defray the costs of the evening programs. For more information call the Owens Center at 577-8718.

THANKS FROM CANDIDATES

To the Editor:

A most appreciative thank you to all the Greenbelt citizens who voted for and supported me in the recent city election. I will make every effort over these next two years to justify the confidence you have shown in me.

I was pleased to see the strong election activity in the newer sections of the city. Also, it was impressive to see the many senior citizens working at the polls for their favorite candidates. And, as usual, the large voter turnout by the seniors was an excellent tribute to their commitment to civic responsibility.

The fact that more voters came out to vote in this election than in any previous election reflects well on all of us.

Greenbelt is great and I pledge to work hard to keep it that way.

Gil Weidenfeld

To the Editor:

We wish to express our thanks to all those volunteers who worked so earnestly for the Gordy-Ley campaign. Wherever we turned we found encouragement and friendship. Many people so generously gave their time and effort, their talents and skills that it would be impossible to name them all. Without their enthusiastic support we could not have won as many votes as we did. Our thanks to all who made the campaign such a rewarding experience.

We shall continue to play an active role as concerned Greenbelt citizens working toward a greater community.

Jeanette K. Gordy
Richard W. Ley

To the Editor:

My most sincere thanks to all my friends and neighbors who voted for me in the city election. I shall endeavor to do my very best in my duties as councilman for the City of Greenbelt.

As special thanks to those who worked at the polls to further my candidacy. I am most grateful.

Richard Castaldi

To the Editor:

I wish to thank those who voted for me and, in particular, those who worked in support of my candidacy. I promise to try to uphold your trust in me.

Charles Schwan

To the Editor:

I wish to thank the voters who reelected me for my eighth term on the city council.

To those that did not vote for me, I will have to work harder to gain your confidence. To those people who helped me throughout the campaign and on election day you have my heart-felt gratitude. There have been so many of you that have been with me in all my campaigns over all these years.

A special thank you to my wife Claire and my children for their encouragement, patience and understanding.

As in the past, I will continue to do all I can to justify your faith in me.

Dick Pilski

To the Editor:

Many thanks to the Greenbelt voters who participated in last week's election. You deserve a round of applause for the record breaking turn-out.

I would like to express my sincere appreciation to those who supported my reelection. I cannot give enough thanks to those who personally assisted me in the campaign. I will not forget your efforts on my behalf.

I look forward to serving the citizens of Greenbelt for another two years. I hope that I am deserving of your trust and confidence.

Thomas X. White
Councilman

To the Editor:

I'd like to take this opportunity to thank all of those who supported and worked for me in the recent city council election. I'd like to thank particularly my campaign manager, Jose Morales, whose energy, good humor and patience helped to keep me going. It has been an intense but most worthwhile effort in which I met many new friends, gained new insight through exchanging ideas, and learned much about our city and its citizens. It is an effort to which I will be continually committed. Again, thank you Greenbelters.

Konrad Herling

THANK YOU ALL

To the Editor:

My heartfelt thanks to tenants of Lawrence and Strathcona and former tenants in Greenbelt, council and staff of City of Greenbelt and senior citizens who so generously expressed their sympathy on the death of my son, Eddie Sacra, and for the love and kindness they showed my parents.

John Sacra

To the Editor:

With love and appreciation we wish to thank our tenants in Lawrence and Strathcona and our former tenants in GreenRidge House, our neighbors and friendly senior citizens, and council and staff of the City of Greenbelt, for the love and sympathy shown to us on the loss of our dear grandsons Chip and Eddie Sacra.

Words cannot express our appreciation for people like you. God bless you all.

Hazel and Henry Sacra

Isn't is Remarkable?

To the Editor:

Isn't it remarkable how some people cannot see their own inconsistencies? Bettie Denson, in her letter in the September 13 issue of the News Review, indicates that it takes too long to get a response to a request for service but at the same time there are too many GHI trucks on the streets. Our employees are good, but they are not supermen who can spread their cloaks and fly around town, trailing a bunch of tools behind them.

Don't these dissidents realize that the very things they say are wrong with GHI can be made worse by their constant carping criticism? Do they think they could have done a very good job when they were employed if they had had a half dozen people looking over their shoulders and trying to pick up some little thing to complain about?

This is a call to all of those many GHI members who appreciate the job our maintenance department is doing for us to let it be known that when we call we get an immediate and satisfactory response. Let's tell them that most of the time they do a good job and that we appreciate any efforts of theirs to do a better one. We'll see them getting even better with that kind of treatment. You catch more flies with honey than with vinegar, as my grandmother used to say.

Janet M. James

Reply to Janet James

To the Editor:

I would like to respond to Janet James' letter in a recent News Review and set the record straight. I will concede that much of the work was done, but how was it done? How many thousands upon thousands of dollars of our money was contributed to sheer waste by the shoddy methods used in executing the work done? In fact, I just had my roof redone because the first time the work was done so poorly, not to mention that my next door neighbor had a room ruined because of the bad roofing job done originally. I will limit myself to one area of this multi-faceted problem of not getting a dollar's worth of work for a dollar spent as it would take too much room to go into everything.

Let's talk about the sidewalks since you said they were done so well and satisfied you completely. If they were done so well, why did our general manager and a member of the Audit Committee spend the better part of a Saturday checking measurements for compliance to the specifications for the work contracted? Next point: a member observed the workmen placing concrete over sod, a vegetation, to save pouring the full depth, thereby saving concrete. A saving when concrete at that time was about $40 per yard. This procedure is not permitted by federal, state or county regulations. The vegetation disintegrates leaving voids which fill with water which in cold weather freezes, heaves up and breaks up the walks. This same member observed the workmen placing large amounts of flake calcium chloride to the mix, which is against all engineering standards and is not permitted by federal, state or county regulations. This was brought to the attention of management. The answer was that this procedure would be stopped, but three days later it was still being done.

Also, let it be known that the specifications stated that where new walks were to be installed, the old walk was to be broken up and all old concrete and debris hauled to the dump. All new walks were to be placed full depth on undisturbed compacted sub-base. This procedure was not followed on hundreds of linear feet of sidewalks. The new walks were placed on top of the old walks. Remember now, frost will penetrate between the old and new layers causing the new walk to heave up and break or crack. No expansion joints were placed in the new walks, a very serious mistake!

Last but not least, by not breaking up and removing the old sidewalks, which represents between one quarter to one third of the cost to comply with the specifications, you can see what a rip-off we got. Where the blame for this lies is anyone's guess. However, the ones responsible for the awarding of the contracts, the day-to-day inspections, and the final inspection should be held responsible. Our general manager and the board member notified should shoulder some of the blame.

In closing I would like to say, Janet, that maybe you are satisfied with huge sums of our money being spent for very sub-standard work, but I for one am not!

Jeb's Great Race

To the Editor:

On the morning of September 2, there was excitement in the air. The big race was scheduled for 11 a.m. Jeb was roused at 8 and given a light breakfast at 9:30 so that he wouldn't feel groggy at race time. Neatly dressed in his white, one piece outfit, at 10:30 a.m. Jeb, mother and Uncle David wheeled it to the racing grounds for registration and warm-up exercises. Registration has been taken care of, Jeb has had a few practice runs and checked out a few of the other contenders. We are ready for the race! Let the Diaper Derby begin!

A great circle was marked in baby powder. The babies were placed in a sitting position at the center of the circle. The race had begun. One baby took off immediately and crossed the finish line.

The other babies continued to sit in a circle looking at one another and watching their mommies yell "Come on Jeb. Come here, sweetie. Jeb. Jeb. Hey You!" The referee had to pull some of the babies apart. They were all a bit confused as to what they were expected to do. One overanxious mother had to be cautioned about hanging too far over the line. That overanxious mother was me. Finally, Gramma and Uncle David came through with a mass of delightfully noisy keys. At last we had Jeb's attention. He made two false starts and decided to watch the baby who was holding his ear.

The referee untangled them but the keys had attracted the attention of a baby on the opposite side of the circle and he was crawling over any baby that got in his way. In the process of knocking over babies, he caught Jeb's interest and they both started crawling for the keys. At one point they were neck and neck. But then... Jeb decided to lie down and grin at us while the other baby stalled on the finish line. The babies that were still in the center of the ring began to rustle forward. "Come on Jeb. Get up!"

Well, he got up and crossed the finish line! We were so proud of him. He received a beautiful white and gold 3rd place ribbon and his name was taken for the newspaper! A clipping of the paper and his ribbon will be placed in an acetate cover along with a description of the event so that in the years to come, he can look back and know the joys he has brought to his parents. His Uncle David is having some pictures of the event processed. Those too will be saved and treasured.

Needless to say, the reason for this letter is to thank Greenbelt for a truly exciting Labor Day Festival. I enjoyed the Diaper Derby, the swim meets, the Talent Show, the bands, the carnival, the softball games and the parade. But I think what I enjoyed most of all was the community feeling of togetherness.

GHI Rehab, Too Many Options?

siding decisions had to be made): sellers made the selections and now buyers want to change; and 2) the kitchen window in many of the frame homes is too low for a counter to fit underneath. Members who knew about the problem ordered a smaller window. Others who didn't know have since found out and want to change.

Director Virginia Moryadas also pointed out that both full and half screens will be available, a fact not known last August.

Architects' Concerns

Environmental Design Group, the architects whom GHI employed to verify that the rehabilitation program meets the Federal requirements for "substantial rehabilitation" under section 312 financing (a HUD requirement) have been putting together bid documents for the general rehabilitation program. According to a letter directed to president Don Volk the architects are very unhappy with the large number of choices offered to members: windows by three different manufacturers, two of which involve further style and color selections, and exterior siding in 10 colors. In the windows alone, they note 100 different options.

The architects point out that GHI will lose the advantage of large orders to obtain discounted prices if each house is allowed to be different. Maintenance will be complicated by the large number of suppliers. The architects also say that esthetically there should be greater uniformity. "The attractiveness of Greenbelt Homes like all planned communities depends on maintaining basic relationships and consistencies between the materials and design of the individual buildings. Owners of homes . . . should recognize and accept the responsibilities of that fact and allow design decisions to be made in the context of the whole community—ultimately their own property values will be affected."

While the board and management did not appear likely to take up the architects' offer to help re-design the options, they have pinpointed some color-coordination problems they admit need to be dealt with. Whereas in some courts members had gotten together to choose harmonious colors and windows, in most others the lack of coordination has resulted in the hodge-podge that has distressed architects and board alike. The board will establish some methods of negotiating color changes in problem courts. Members may come to the GHI offices to find out what their neighbors have ordered.

In another problem of esthetics, director Bobbi McCarthy challenged the necessity of "ugly heavy-up pipes, wires and spaghetti and meter-boxes on the frame homes. In some cases it makes the whole building look . . . worse than tacky—terrible. We have to consider those problems too."

The board unanimously approved Smith's proposal to send a letter to members advising when they should come to the office to verify or change their orders.

Member William Offenbacher, however, made it clear to the board that he was "against paying money for these letters." He reminded the board that he had voted against the rehab program.

Optional Rehab Program

Placed on the back burner for now, but not to be forgotten, the optional rehab program—those odds and ends that didn't find their way into the formal plan—has no source of funding at the present time. Originally GHI had hoped either the Maryland Housing Fund or federal 312 money would be available to individual members who wanted to modernize kitchens and bathrooms, build additions, sheds or patios. The 312 money will now finance the formal program, and staff is now waiting to hear whether Maryland Housing Funds can be used to finance the capital improvements program.

While some board members anguished over how to finance the optional program, Smith reminded the board: "Use the funds you have on the big, basic job. That is our first responsibility, our corporate responsibility. Then if we can find appropriate funds, we'll look into options."

In a related action the board determined to switch the $10,000 in Community Development Block Grant funds from paying for the design of members—options to an engineering study of how to handle crawl spaces, rewiring and a possible change from oil to electric baseboard heat. These items are very expensive, Smith pointed out. To use the grant money available now for this purpose might save money in the long run.

Deficits and Reserves

Over the years management and board have kept a running tally of deficits and reserves. For example, at the close of business on December 31, 1978, brick and masonry homes had overspent their heating budgets by $78,500; frame homes had overspent by $107,900. The primary cause has, of course, been the dramatic rise in oil prices. While the bills were paid long ago, these deficits are still carried on the books.

In a like manner, contingency reserves of $119,000 for bricks and $113,000 for frames have been accumulated on paper though, in fact, this money has been paid out. Smith proposed the transfer from contingency to cover these accounts as of January 1, 1979. The balance shows that GHI reserves are $180 in the hole. "The worst balance we've ever had," Smith later told the News Review.

Smith's motion to reallocate reserves passed unanimously.

Tidbits

—In response to a member's complaints about the poor quality of grass cutting this year, management admitted it was hard pressed to keep up with the job, made worse this summer by excessive rainfall. The board invited members to cooperate by reaching out and mowing common areas near their homes.

—The board put off discussion of a member's proposal to have all board meetings taped until both the member (who was not present at the time) and the staff were prepared to offer advantages, disadvantages and alternate proposals to include a sound system.

—GHI's new oil supplier, Amereta Hess, is checking every oil tank, making an analysis of the sludge in the bottoms of the tanks. Whistles that sound-off when the tank is almost full are being installed to prevent overflows.

—The Board set September 25 as the date for an extensive discussion of the draft report from Mueller Associates on energy sources and problems for heating GHI homes. Also to be discussed is the Engineering and Maintenance committee's comments on the Mueller report.

—The board agreed to consider giving easements to the city on those GHI-owned playgrounds in which the city is preparing to install new playground equipment paid for through CDBG funds. There would be a 10-year limit to the easements.

—Ad Hoc Committee on Policies and Procedures board liaison, Foster, reported the beginning of a series of meetings with employees on heating and grounds. Foster said he expects the committee to make recommendations to the board sometime in October.

Commercial Center

Several references were made by council members also to the present state of the commercial center in old Greenbelt. Weidenfeld stressed the need to keep the customer-service facility of the post office in its center location. Councilman Richard Castaldi said that he would like to see "our center completely redone. It could be a beautiful center." Schwan spoke with satisfaction of the overwhelming vote on the referendum for revenue bond financing, which could among other things be used for redevelopment of the center.

Maintenance in general was a major concern expressed in the Weidenfeld statement. He noted deterioration of streets, the need for repair of the municipal swimming pool, and continuing need for ballfield maintenance. At the same time he looked to the expanding revenue base with new high quality commercial developments as a hopeful sign to deal with such problems. He expressed his hope to expand services to older citizens in Greenbelt and noted with satisfaction the recent achievement of the opening of Green Ridge House. Recreation in general will become more important, he suggested, as the gas shortage continues.

Schwan commented on voter approval of the overpass to span the Baltimore-Washington Parkway, seeing it as establishing a precedent in bridging separated sections of the city. Getting better access to the proposed Metro terminal in Greenbelt is another high priority, he noted, as is the city's insistence on continuing high-quality development in our area. Schwan saw the re-examination of the Greenbelt Master Plan, currently under study by the Advisory Planning Board, as a major concern.

Challengers Recognized

Among the audience were the three challengers in the city council election—Jeanette Gordy, Konrad Herling, and Richard Ley—and several council members thanked them for their participation in a "well run and well fought" campaign, as Pilski called it.

"I believe they helped to delineate the issues and to call attention to some matters that previous councils may not have addressed adequately," Schwan said.

Castaldi also particularly expressed his appreciation to all members of the city staff. "They have worked hard," he said, "and made this council look good."

Rabbi Kenneth R. Berger, of the Mishkan Torah Jewish Community, said the invocation, and the Rev. Sherry Taylor of the Greenbelt Community Church said the benediction.

Space Center Exhibits

At the Goddard Space Flight Center on Greenbelt Rd. a person can speak into a phone and listen to his voice as it travels 22,000 miles into space and 22,000 miles back via a relay station and satellite.

The Center is a popular site for area school groups, who can also view a replica of the Enterprise, a space shuttle which will carry teams of scientists and equipment into space and back in the 1980's.

Other attractions at the Center include a 4-million-year-old rock sample from the moon, and replicas of Mercury, Gemini, and Apollo spacecrafts. All exhibits may be seen from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday through Sunday, free of charge.

There was a second wedding ceremony, a sit down dinner, music and dancing - all arranged by their sons and daughter. Our very best wishes to Ethel and Ben who are Greenbelt pioneers. They have been and still are active participants in community affairs and leaders in Co-op and Mishkan Torah.

Happy to hear that Congresswoman Gladys Spellman is fully recovered from a recent illness and will be coming to Greenbelt on Tues., Oct. 9. An "Open Door" meeting will be held from 8 to 9:30 p.m. at Center School. Mrs. Spellman extends an invitation to all Greenbelters to attend.

Academy Application Due by November 1

U.S. Representative Gladys Noon Spellman is urging high school students in Maryland's 5th Congressional District to write her at her Capitol Hill office if they are interested in attending a uniformed service academy next year. Applications from students interested in competing for 1980 nominations to the Naval, Air Force, Merchant Marine and U.S. Military Academies must be received by November 1. Supporting documents, including high school transcripts, College Entrance Examination scores and three letters of recommendation, should be submitted by November 23. All applicants must have a combined score of at least 1050 on their College Entrance Exams (SATs).

As a member of Congress, Mrs. Spellman nominates candidates for appointments to the four service academies from her District. An Academy Selection Board will screen those seeking academy nominations.

Letters should be addressed to Congresswoman Gladys Noon Spellman, Room 308 Cannon House Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20515

Initial contact should be made at the school office to request the facilities and to determine if they are available at the desired time. Applications will be considered on a "first come, first served" basis.

Linda also played in the Henry Mancini Orchestra Concert in Evansville, Indiana. Linda, a Senior at Indiana University at Bloomington, is a music major. Her instrument is the viola. On October 11, she will give a recital before the faculty and students.

Steps to Take to Solve School Related Problems

Since it is the Area Assistant Superintendents who supervise the day-to-day operations of schools in their area, they play a key role in resolving any problems parents or students have that cannot be settled at the school level. County school officials offer the following advice to anyone having a problem at any Prince Georges County Public School:

1. Contact child's teacher or other person with whom the problem was encountered.
2. If the problem was not resolved in step 1, call or make an appointment with the principal.
3. If, after talking with the principal, parents still feel they need assistance, contact the Office of the Area Assistant Superintendent.

Greenbelt is part of the Northern Area. Offices are at 49th Ave. and Greenbelt Road, College Park, Md. 20740. William Blount is assistant superintendent, Donald Burgess, administrative assistant; phone 474-0090.

Anyone who is unable to come to a satisfactory resolution of his concern at these levels, may call the Office of the Superintendent of Schools at 952-4404.

Tips From the Postmaster

It's not too soon to start thinking about shopping and mailing early for Christmas. Old Santa Claus and the Post Office are getting ready to handle all letters and packages.

Early mailing guarantees faster, safer and more accurate delivery, and please don't forget the zip code.

The Partridgeberry School

The Partridgeberry School, which opened in Greenbelt in 1971, and still exists as the only parent co-op elementary school in the State of Maryland, has close ties to the City of Greenbelt, both through its origins in the Greenbelt Co-op Nursery School and through its co-op philosophy.

Partridgeberry has operated in classrooms in the Mishkan Torah Synagogue until this past June, when both the Hebrew School and the Partridgeberry program reached such expansion levels that shared use of space became extremely difficult for both organizations.

Extensive efforts to find suitable space here in Greenbelt led Partridgeberry to contract with the Laurel Boys and Girls Club to use classroom space in their building in Laurel.

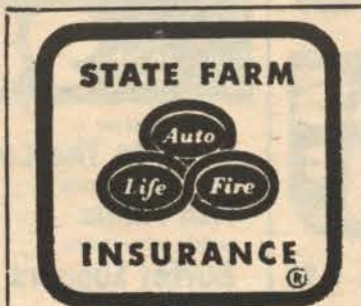

The School provides children from ages 5 through 12 with an alternative educational environment designed to encourage individualized learning and responsibility. Partridgeberry's Director, Mary McGee, wants to acknowledge the influence that Greenbelt's cooperative philosophy has had on the school and to let parents in Greenbelt know that, although the school's classroom location is moving to Laurel for this school year, many Greenbelters are still involved in this project. Carpools are available, and "the co-op ideology is alive and well," said McGee. Interested parents can contact the school at 474-0994.

Thesis in Uruguay Honors Arthur Gropp

Greenbelt Arthur Gropp has received a copy of a thesis prepared in fulfillment of requirements at the Library School of the University of Montevideo, Uruguay. The thesis, entitled Arthur E. Gropp, Bibliotecario de las Americas, written by Ana Maria Ferrari, Solveig Gurgitano, and Irene Lago, contains 63 pages of text and 21 pages of "The Writings of Arthur E. Gropp." The text is devoted to the development of modern library practices and to the introduction of library science instruction in Uruguay.

Gropp was commissioned in 1942 by the American Council of Learned Societies in Washington, D.C., with funds provided by the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, to establish and direct an American Library in Montevideo. While there he assisted in the establishment in 1943 of a Library School, which he directed until 1948. The School, in 1946, became a part of the University of Montevideo.

The authors include evaluations by Gropp's former students and employees relative to his contribution to library science in Uruguay and its impact on library organization there.

A COOPERATIVE THE GREENBELT NURSERY SCHOOL MEETING NEEDS OF COMMUNITY

by Leta Mach

In early September school opened for children of all ages. Some of the youngest children to begin school in Greenbelt came to the two year old program at Greenbelt Nursery School, Inc. That program is only one of six offered by the school which was founded in 1941 as Maryland's third cooperative nursery school.

In recalling the formation of the school, Mary Jane Kinzer, then Director of Community and Family Services in Greenbelt, stressed its purpose of meeting the needs of the community. To achieve this purpose, the school has started several new programs in the last several years. A new program this year is a two day class for 2½-3½-year olds. The backbone of the school remains the five day program for 3-4-year-olds. To help working parents, the school now allows families to hire another designated parent to serve some of their "co-oping" days for them.

When the school was founded, the results of a community survey had shown high interest for a nursery school, although many indicated a difficulty in paying even a small tuition. Financial considerations and the desire to educate parents were important reasons for the formation of a nursery school which involved parent participation. It was felt that many people didn't know what to expect of three and four year olds. In that regard, the school's first teacher, Charlotte Wagner, who was educated at the "Little Red Schoolhouse," initiated the adult education program by teaching a free evening class on understanding children.

First Quarters

With the permission of the federal government, the school's first quarters became the basement of 14 Parkway. A loan of $150 was obtained from the city for the purchase of equipment and supplies which were not homemade or donated. Even the school's first set of building blocks was handmade by the young, enthusiastic parents. Although the school had no door, there was never any trouble with vandalism or stolen articles.

The early years were difficult years, especially after the outbreak of war. The draft caused the withdrawal of many children, either from financial problems or a move out of town. During the first year enrollment dropped from two classes to one. Needing a full-time job, the school's first teacher resigned. To keep the school operational, many fund raising projects were held. One of these was creating a map of Greenbelt still in use. Other problems encountered during these years were the necessity of limiting field trips because of gas rationing, and closing during a measles epidemic.

"Anything you organize with a sound basis will survive," says Mary Jane Kinzer. Thus in 1958 the school became incorporated. The next year the school moved to its present location in the Fellowship Hall of the Community Church. From one teacher, the staff has grown to four teachers, one of whom serves as the school's director, and two teacher aides. Currently, the children of an alumnus are attending the school.

From the beginning, when a co-op nursery school was organized at the University of Chicago in 1916, cooperatives have emphasized the importance of personal involvement in childrearing. Thus the traditional cooperative nursery school uses parents as teacher aides. Fathers, as well as mothers, are encouraged to participate. The sharing of special talents such as cooking, playing musical instruments, or performing simple chemistry experiments is part of the curriculum in many co-ops. Another continuing theme is the importance of education for adults as well as children. While no single educational philosophy is advocated by cooperative schools, the need for personal growth and the rights of all participants—parents, teachers, and children—is uniformly stressed. In this regard, the acceptance of differences among people is vital to the cooperative movement. Members are chosen regardless of race, creed or national origin.

Cooperatives are run by and for their members, who participate in the administration, finance, maintenance, and teaching of their schools.

In 1944 the first association of cooperative nursery schools was organized in Maryland. The incumbent president of this council (MN-PPNS), Deanna James, is a Greenbelt resident and Greenbelt Nursery School parent.

Police Blotter

Residents should be on the alert for persons tampering with cars, especially in the Lakeside North area, where there have been intermittent problems for almost a year. Suspicious happenings in the community's parking lots should be reported immediately to the police at 474-5454. Articles stored in trunks—spare tires, tools, etc.—have been stolen. Most incidents have occurred after midnight.

Swim Team News

by Karen Jones

The annual banquet was held last Friday. Outstanding team members received awards for their accomplishments. For their efforts in the Swim-for-Heart Swimathon, James and Aimee Fellows received trophies for raising the highest amount of money, and Mark and Linda Blue received trophies for runner up.

Those earning the highest number of points during the entire season were given awards. High point winners for 8 and under were Shawn Luddy, and Dana Sensi and Kathy Barwick tied. The other high point winners were Robbie Reed and Aimee Fellows in 9-10, Colin Aldridge and Susan Gardes in 11-12; Brian Gardes and Simone Bram in 13-14; and Mark Blue and Karen Jones in 15-18. Those earning the highest number of points for the swim team over the entire season were Craig Dies and James Fellows for the boys, and Linda Blue and Nicolette Durantine for the girls. Most improved over the season were Scott Luddy and Amy Eaton. Spirit Awards were given to two of the most dedicated swimmers of the team. These were Anna Williams and Shawn Fellows.

The winter swimming program will begin Sunday, October 7. Anyone wishing to participate should call John Blue at 345-7457.

My apologies to Elaine Robbins whose name was omitted from the novice meet results. She earned a seventh place in the 10 and under girls breaststroke.
