City Points Out Problems With Site Plan and Road Improvement Waiver

by Virginia Beauchamp

Continuing development within and east of the Greenway Center added two more items to the Greenbelt city council agenda at the last regular meeting on May 21. One involved a site plan review for the last, and final, section of Glen Ora townhouse development. The other involved who would pay for the widening and other improvements of Hanover Parkway.

Some difference of opinion appeared about how council should proceed with the site plan approval request. The city's Advisory Planning Board in its official report asked council to withhold approval until the first section of the Glen Ora Gardens development, which has been occupied now for half a year, is brought into conformity with its approved site plan. But the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission staff, on the other hand, claimed that the APB's reasoning is not a valid basis for denial. As reported in agenda comments from the city manager's office, MNCPPC contends that "the site plan review for one area cannot be made contingent on the progress of another area in the same development."

The property in question is a 6.63-acre parcel between the Smith-Ewing tract on the west (the undeveloped forested section across Hanover Parkway from the Greenway Center) and the Tidler tract on the east. Section 5 lies directly south of Ora Glen Drive, which parallels Greenbelt Rd. to the south.

The site plan calls for 63 townhouse units, (9.5 units per acre), a tot lot, a pre-teen lot, and a multi-purpose court. According to the APB's report, the "proposed parking and green space exceed County Code requirements." But the city staff reports that the site plan gives a crowded appearance—primarily because all recreational areas are placed at the outside edges of the property.

Trash Removal

The city staff, as well as council, were equally concerned about the failure to plan for adequate trash removal. As mayor Gil Weidenfeld commented, only the GHI property in Greenbelt (the original planned community built by the federal government in 1937) had really included careful thought to removal of trash. (Each GHI home has a trash closet near the rear door of the residence, in closest proximity to access from residential parking lots.)

At Glen Ora Gardens, city manager Jim Giese noted, no paved walkways are provided to the rear of the property to be used by trash collectors, nor is space provided for dumpster type container units. He suggested, and council unanimously agreed, that council recommend approval of the site plan to the MNCPPC with the stipulation that level graded areas three feet wide be provided adjacent to all rear lot lines to hold trash receptacles.

On the other issue raised by the APB—the inadequate completion of the site plan approved for the first section of Glen Ora Gardens — Giese recommended, with council approval, that the city express to both the MNCPPC and the developer, U.S. Homes, its concern and displeasure with the failure to complete the work. The APB report particularly called attention to uncompleted interior walkways to connect with walkways in adjacent Windsor Green, incompleting roadways to parking areas, substandard curbs and other concrete work, and incompleting grading and landscaping that had led to erosion and the creation of gullies.

Impact on Roads Serious Problem With Maryland Trade Center III

by Virginia Beauchamp

"Council needs to be very tough," said Greenbelt mayor Gil Weidenfeld at the May 21 regular city council meeting. He was talking about roads, or the lack of them, to support projected new commercial development in the city. Specifically he was responding negatively to approval at this time of a site plan proposal for a third highrise office building, Maryland Trade Center III, in the tract lying between the Greenway Center and the Beltway. The proposal was presented to council by attorney Russell Shipley.

With the Maryland Trade Center II building already topped out and the projected Martins East catering facility scheduled for groundbreaking sometime in August, the prospect of an additional 19-story office building south of the Greenway Center raised understandable concern. Access to all these facilities would be possible only from the already congested Hanover Parkway. And this is not counting traffic to be generated by a row of professional offices now rising on Hanover Parkway itself.

Shipley, with the aid of Jack Ferri of Coakley & Williams, Inc., presented several visual aids to show what was being planned. MTC III would be placed approximately east of the Holiday Inn. It would stand in a line south from MTC I. Because the land elevation is about 20 feet lower and the method of construction different than that utilized in MTC I, the new building's roof height would be slightly lower than that of the first building, Ferri explained, even though it would have three more stories than the 16-floor MTC I.

It would also look very different. Instead of a square glass box, MTC III is designed with curving sides with pie-shaped wedges cut out on both the north and south faces. The building would be sited on a large green plaza—what Ferri described as "a nice pod." It would occupy parcels E and F of the Maryland Trade Center Park, totaling 9.21 acres.

BALTIMORE-WASHINGTON PKWY. DEDICATED TO GLADYS SPELLMAN

by Mary Lou Williamson

Several hundred people gathered by the side of the Baltimore-Washington Parkway Sunday afternoon to dedicate the gently curving roadway dressed in its spring greenery to their friend Gladys Noon Spellman.

Politicians and friends recounted her twenty years of service to the people of Prince Georges county and to the nation—her years on the county board of commissioners and county council, her involvement with the county hospital system and most recently her three terms in the Congress of the United States. Her dedication to the needs of her people brought her to the forefront of the issues — both large and small — during those years. She was an energetic problem solver.

In the audience were many family members and a who's who of colleagues, campaign workers and citizens of the county.

Congressman Steny Hoyer, who jointly with the National Park Service sponsored the affair, called Gladys "an outstanding leader . . . one of our finest pub-

Ballet Theater to Offer "Coppelia" at Utopia

"Coppelia," the story of a doll who threatens a romance, opens at the Utopia Theater tonight as the Central Maryland Ballet Company brings fantasy, a villain, and a bit of magic for the whole family in its four-day performance schedule.

Tonight through Saturday at 7:30 p.m. and Sunday at 6 p.m., Nancy Wire, the company's founder, will direct Ernesto Fernandez (who performed in Nutcracker with the CMBT here in December) and Bianca E. Cortes, guest performers, and the large ballet company in this first ballet of the 1984-85 season here.

The Central Maryland Ballet Theatre is based in Laurel, but the company has agreed to be the resident ballet group at the Greenbelt Cultural Arts Center. Almost 900 people attended the four performances of the Nutcracker.

Tickets may be purchased at the door or reserved in advance by calling 953-3388 in Laurel or 441-8770 here.

OFFENDED!

To the Editor:

When reporting on Greenbelt City Council deliberations in the May 31, 1984 issue of the Greenbelt News Review, reference was made on page 4 to remarks of "councilman Toni Bram". Although councilmember Antoinette M. Bram is only in her first term of office and, perhaps, the Greenbelt News Review staff is not yet used to reporting on her activities, I find this reference, "councilman", insensitive and offensive.

If you will recall, prior to the most recent City Council election, the Greenbelt News Review itself admonished the Election Board for referring to all candidates as "councilmen" rather than "members of council". The editors of the Greenbelt News Review should heed their own advice.

I am married to a councilwoman, not a "councilman".

Ralph A. Bram

Editor's Note: Our face is red. While our reporter did use the word "councilwoman" in her story, our proofreaders did not notice that the linotype operator had set the word "councilman." Our apologies to Greenbelt's newest member of council, Antoinette M. (Toni) Bram.

In fairness to the election board, it was the board that asked us to call attention to their inappropriate use of the direction "Vote for five councilmen." It was too late to reprint the ballots.

Kender-Simon

Greenbelters Barbara McGee-Kender and Thomas Simon were married May 12 at St. Hugh's Church. Barbara, an artist, and Tom, a member of Greenbelt Library's staff, are home after a honeymoon in Ireland.

Endless Development?

To the Editor:

The argument in favor of development cites increased living space requirements to justify urban sprawl. Civilization must stop its consumption of rural lands and instead recycle city space that contains deteriorated buildings. There is already adequate space within developed (but dilapidated) Prince Georges County to provide for urban renewal. Increased tax dollars—to pay for increased crime—from expanded, compact populations is not necessarily the goal of the general citizenry.

As an example of the above in Greenbelt, Prince Georges County and in the state of Maryland, legislation was recently proposed by citizen activists who hoped to return zoning decision-making power to the voting constituency. However, the legislators rejected this and have continued to usurp zoning decisions as their proprietary privilege. We citizens are apparently to be satisfied with limiting our desires to the perspective of our legislators and accept passively the relentless development that continues to abound.

An important test of these development concerns will be considered on Monday, June 11, at 7 p.m. when the District Council holds a public hearing on the Washington Gas Light Company's proposal for changing the zoning of rural lands in southern Prince Georges County to allow for development of the Brookefield New Town. This proposal would result in the destruction of some 2000 acres of forest and farm lands, destruction of the purity of the Piscataway and Mattawoman waterways through sedimentation of the water, and contribute to the tragic demise of the beleaguered Chesapeake Bay—but it would produce short-term economic advantage.

I believe that the citizens of Prince Georges County appreciate and need the green space and farm lands that are still with a easy access of the current population centers. Each year the county loses too many hundreds of acres to subdivisions, highways, reservoirs, office buildings and other urban uses.

Concerned citizens should consider going to the County Council Chamber in the County Administration Building in Upper Marlboro to provide presence in opposition to this unnecessary development. The Sierra Club and the Chesapeake Bay Foundation intend to present testimony opposing the Brookefield development with the hope of informing the District Council that the citizens of Prince Georges County do not desire endless "development."

Peppermint Blue Returns to Utopia

Peppermint Blue Productions returns to the Utopia Theater for the fifth time on Friday, June 15, at 8:15 p.m. for a two-day performance of songs, dance, and drama ranging from a nostalgic nod to the World War II years to the fast-action numbers in the movie "Grease."

Entitled "Henri . . . and company," the variety program features Henri Ellison in songs, dances, comedy and drama, backed by Mary Anne Busse and Leslie Glass at keyboards, Chris Sciannella at electric bass, Bret Manassa on guitar, and a drummer.

Ellison is remembered as the male lead and choreographer of "Tickets to Broadway," the first musical brought to the Utopia Theater. He recently appeared in the TV series on George Washington. Peppermint Blue is based in Takoma Park.

The 90-minute program will repeat a few numbers from earlier productions which received enthusiastic audience response, explains Ellison. He hints at the rest of the program by revealing that "The Andrews Brothers," will sing "Boogie-woogie Bugle Boy from Company B."

The Utopia Theater ticket office will open at 7:30 p.m. both evenings.

cil meeting, represented by attorney Russell Shipley. Greenway East has a 700-foot frontage on Hanover Parkway north of Greenway Center Drive. (It is to be distinguished from a similar row south of Greenway Center Drive, which is called Greenbelt East.)

According to Shipley, Chesley bought what was represented as "a finished lot, not raw property" from the original owner, Western Development Corporation. He was thus later stunned by representations from the city of Greenbelt that he was liable for the cost of improving Hanover Parkway adjacent to his property. This would involve adding a third lane in the center and providing curb and gutter for the median strip—"an unexpected expense" Shipley estimated at $50,000. Both developers, Shipley said, had understood at the time of acquiring the property that street improvements had already been completed.

On the basis that the county government, as confirmed in a letter from Chief Administrative Officer John Wesley White, had made a commitment to construct the road improvements, Shipley requested a waiver by the city of Chesley's responsibility in this regard.

Council, however, did not look on the White letter as an enforceable legal document. In the letter White claimed that the cost of the widening of Hanover Parkway would be covered by additional funds generated by the Greenbelt Tax Incremental Financing District (TIF funds), a fund set aside for the design of Cherrywood Lane and the construction and extension of Hanover Parkway. White recommended against "a piecemeal widening of the Parkway," which the city would be requiring if Chesley was obligated to complete his small section of the road improvement.

There was some dispute among Giese and council about how early Chesley had been informed of his obligation as adjacent property owner but none at all concerning the importance of widening Hanover Parkway. "I feel strongly," Giese said, "that six lanes are needed with the occupancy of this building and Maryland Trade Center III."

On the basis that Shipley would prepare an agreement with the county clarifying the understanding that the street improvement could be covered under the TIF monies, council expressed itself as willing to waive Chesley's obligation. "Otherwise the owner would have to construct." That was how Mayor Weidenfeld summed up the issue.

Castaldi to Hold Cookout

Richard Castaldi, 4th District County Councilman, will hold a cookout at the Bowie Golf Course on Tuesday, June 12 from 5-11 p.m. Activities will include dining from 5-8 p.m. (hot dogs, hamburgers, sodas and beer) and dancing from 8-11 p.m. Children under five are admitted free when accompanied by a paying adult.

Rehab Information Meetings

Masonry Repairs

Weekly information meetings about masonry structural repairs and painting will be held on Mondays from 5-6:30 p.m. in the GHI Board Room. The next meeting is scheduled for —

Monday, June 11

The purpose of this meeting is to keep you informed, listen to and respond to your concerns about painting and structural repairs.

The GHI Hotline (474-6644) also provides information about rehab including schedules and the status of special requests. During business hours, a staff member is available to answer your questions. At other times, you can listen to the pre-recorded information and leave a message if you still need help.

For information about your pre-construction inspection report and the particular work done to your unit, call the rehab offices (474-2300). You can then ask to speak to the Construction Manager, Paul Jackson, of American Property Construction, Inc.

MTC III Site Plan

The city's Advisory Planning Board, which had reported to council previously on the site plan proposal, was particularly concerned about the building's size. According to covenants signed with the city when the property was annexed, a limit of 400,000 square feet of office space was agreed to beyond that already provided in MTC I. Since building II has a gross amount of 172,000 square feet and building III, as designed, has 297,000, the total for the two structures would come to 469,000 square feet.

The developers, on the other hand, contend that only 400,000 square feet of usable office space is provided in the two buildings, when the square footage allocated to mechanical systems and elevators is deleted. (In MTC III, because there will be no basement level, a major portion of the ground floor will be utilized by space for mechanical systems. Six elevators—as opposed to four in MTC I—will also be installed.)

According to a memo, however, from the city's administrative assistant Michael McLaughlin, the gross square foot figure—not the net figure for usable office space—is employed by the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission to calculate parking requirements and traffic generation figures.

And those traffic generation figures were what was most troubling to council. According to the covenants, the scheduling of construction of buildings was to be coordinated with road improvements, "so that there exist at all times," as McLaughlin's report puts it, "adequate public facilities to serve the property." But as the report states, "This has not been done."

In response to a question concerning the time frame for projected construction, Shipley noted that MTC I is now fully occupied and MTC II 40% leased. The developers would like to break ground for the new building, he said, in the fall, with completion projected by the end of 1985, some 14 to 16 months later.

Council concluded that too many issues needed to be resolved for any action to be taken at the May 18 meeting—in particular ambiguities in the covenants concerning building size and prospects for action on road improvements. To deal with these mat-lic servants." Hoyer followed Spellman as the Fifth District Representative. Spellman suffered a near-fatal cardiac arrest a week before winning her fourth term. She remains semiconscious in a nursing home.

Rep. John Seiberling (Dem., Ohio), chairman of the House subcommittee on public lands and national parks, helped Hoyer guide through the House and especially the Senate his legislation to dedicate the federal parkway to Gladys—the first woman to be so honored. In speaking of Gladys, Seiberling compared the natural beauty of the parkway which she loved to 'my beautiful, warm, generous colleague.' The key to her success? "No one could say 'no' to Gladys," remarked Seiberling later at the reception.

Gladys's husband Reuben gratefully accepted the spoken tributes to his wife, and the decision to dedicate the Parkway in her honor, a fitting memorial. Perhaps some would remember the "lady who accomplished so much in so short a time," Reuben summed up what others had detailed. Dorothy Lupo, Gladys's sister, sat beside Reuben on the platform.

A series of switches was thrown, the curtains parted to reveal the handsome wooden marker set in stone, bearing the words: "This Parkway is dedicated to Gladys Noon Spellman." The sign faces the northbound lanes of the 25-mile federal stretch of the parkway just above Route 450. A matching marker faces the southbound traffic below Route 175. The Maryland portion of the parkway to the north has already been named Gladys Noon Spellman Parkway.

The nursing care center of the Prince Georges General Hospital will also be named for Spellman. Robert Brady, head of the private firm that runs the hospital system for the county, Community Hospital and Health Care Systems, Inc., made the announcement.

The crowd was transported back again to the terrace of the National Arboretum's administration building in six buses. The terrace had been Gladys's choice for a reception for 800 some years ago, said long-time aide and friend Edna McClellan. "A lovely setting, and so little used," added McClellan, who had made many of the arrangements for the afternoon.

Police Blotter

Based on Information Released by the Greenbelt Police Department

At 8:31 p.m. on May 29 a woman was robbed as she got out of her car at 12 Court of Ridge Rd. No weapon was displayed but the man threw her to the ground.
