CRAB and Committee Differ on North End School Plans; Council Defers Action

by Diane Oberg

The report of the Community Relations Advisory Board (CRAB) on future uses of the former North End School was taken under advisement by the Greenbelt City Council at the regular meeting of April 27.

By a vote of 3-1 with Mayor pro tem Thomas X. White opposed, the council agreed to consider the report in conjunction with the strategic planning process. Council member Edward Putens was out of town.

Strategic Planning

The council also established a schedule for deciding upon funding and priorities for the bond issue projects. A strategic planning session to develop a draft proposal will be held at 6 p.m. on Thursday, May 21. A public hearing on that proposal is scheduled for June 11 with final council action expected, according to Mayor Gil Weidenfeld, by the end of June.

The council had earlier defeated by a 2-2 vote a motion by White to hold a public hearing on May 21 on the bond issue priorities. White called the delay in determining priorities "near tragic." He criticized the strategic planning process as having "a lot of flaws," and as being the wrong way to make public policy decisions.

In addition, White criticized the process as being too heavily oriented toward the city staff and as having a public perception of being a private discussion among council and staff. White continued his opposition as the strategic planning schedule was being established.

Council member Joseph Isaacs provided the other vote for White's motion. However, he qualified his vote by saying that while he had long supported an early public hearing, a hearing now would best come as a result of the strategic planning process.

Weidenfeld and Council member Antoinette M. Bram voted against the proposal. Both made it clear that they did not oppose a public hearing, but rather its proposed timing. Both argued that the hearing should occur after the strategic planning process has been completed. Bram also noted that the public hearing on the budget is scheduled for June 1, which would put the two hearings too close together.

Weidenfeld urged White to follow the example of Isaacs, who said that although he had opposed the strategic process as a means of setting bond priorities, since that process had been approved by a majority of council, he saw no purpose in taking a negative approach.

North End School

The North End School building

was acquired by the city in May, 1984 after it had been declared surplus by the county. Since then it has been vacant — used only as a polling place and as a city storage site. Renovation of the building was included as one possible project for the $2 million "bricks and mortar" portion of the 1985 bond authorization. In addition, for two years a portion of the city's property tax revenues has been placed in a reserve for the North End School. This account now has a balance of approximately $243,000, according to the CRAB report. The report also notes a balance of $143,000 in a reserve for building projects.

CNEC Proposal

At a February 2 work session, the Citizens for the North End Center (CNEC) presented council with a seven-point proposal for creation of a North End Center. CNEC's stated goals are to provide a facility for use by all citizens, a program to reduce the building's operating cost to the city, and a facility providing programs to meet community needs while also fitting into the residential character of the neighborhood.

The CNEC proposal called for renovation of the entire school building. Among the programs to be located there would be a walk-in/activity center for senior citizens on a drop-in basis; senior daycare to provide for elderly citizens unable to care for themselves; rental studio space for artists and craftspeople; a photography lab available for a "nominal fee"; a pottery workshop; recreation programs, possibly including a major program in gymnastics; and a nonprofit children's daycare center.

To offset part of the $147,000 operating cost of the building, CNEC estimates that a daycare center would rent for approximately $39,000 per year, the artists studios $15,000, the senior daycare center $22,000 and the photography lab $7,500 per year, for a total of $83,500 per year.

The group also summarized possible sources for renovation funding. Besides the reserve for the North End School, CNEC said that up to $200,000 in state grant money is available for renovation work for senior programming. The group said that it may be possible to obtain state bond bill money for other parts of the renovation.

CRAB Report

CRAB recommended renovation of only the 1967 addition and the connecting front of the building to provide a senior daycare facility, a children's pre-school daycare center, artists studios and recreation and meeting activities.

However, CRAB suggested further analysis to see if these needs could be met in other existing or proposed city facilities, such as the renovated Municipal Center, the Roosevelt Center and the pool facility. If these other buildings can adequately house the proposed programs, then CRAB recommends that the building be razed and the area converted to parkland. CRAB chairman Konrad Herling told the council that this recommendation reflects CRAB's view that the North End facility cannot be looked at in a vacuum—the important thing is how the needs can be met.

In December, CRAB mailed a questionnaire to all city residents. Approximately three percent of the questionnaires were returned. A majority of the respondents opposed a six or ten cent increase in the city property tax, while 51 percent would support a three-cent increase to maintain the building. CRAB concluded from this that with a 3.5 percent tax hike, program revenues and the North End and Building Projects reserves, adequate funding would be available to renovate the newer portion of the building without use of bond issue funds.

CNEC Responses

At the April 27 meeting, CNEC presented a written response to the CRAB report. Barbara Simon read aloud the group's conclusion, which calls on council to consider promptly and resolve the future of the North End Center.

CNEC objected to CRAB's recommendations, disputing the accuracy of some information in the report.

Calling the demolition of the building "wasteful" and "short-sighted," the group said CRAB had not demonstrated that the needs CNEC had outlined were either invalid or could be met elsewhere. CNEC also objected to the "fragmentation" of the programs if they were to be held at sites scattered throughout the city.

The entire building should be renovated, according to CNEC. They said that the portion proposed for renovation by CRAB is

Public Safety Day Held at ERHS

Public Safety Day, a community-oriented event, will be held at Eleanor Roosevelt High School on Saturday, May 9, from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Dennis Farina, star of the NBC series "Crime Story," will be honored at a special awards program. Throughout the day there will be exhibitions and live demonstrations by over 30 federal, state and local law enforcement agencies. There will also be two performances of a special one-act mini-musical, "The Power of No."

This event, which is co-sponsored by the Greenbelt Police Department and the Greenbelt American Legion Post 136, coincides with the beginning of National Police Week.

Home and Garden Tour To be Held May 16-17

by Sandy Smith

Greenbelt's first city-wide home and garden tour takes place on May 16 and 17 from 1 to 5 p.m. The tour, which is part of the city's 50th anniversary celebration, includes homes, gardens and apartments in all parts of the city. Over 50 homes and gardens will be on the tour during the weekend, as well as a number of special events and attractions.

The tour starts at the Municipal Building, where participants pick up the tour brochure and purchase a ticket. Tickets are $1.00 and are good for both days of the tour. There is no charge for senior citizens and children 12 and under. All participants, however, must obtain tickets to enter the homes on the tour. Tickets will be on sale from 1 to 4:30 p.m. on May 16 and 17. The tour is self-guided. Those taking the tour may select homes and gardens to visit in any order.

The tour features some of the newest and oldest homes in the community. From the very diverse new homes just built outside the Agricultural Farm on Upper Research Road to the many variations of the Greenbelt Homes Inc. frame and brick and block units, the tour covers it all. On the tour people can visit homes and gardens in Windsor Green, Greenbriar, Charlestowne Village, Lakeside, Lakewood and Boxwood and take a short or long walking tour of decks and gardens in Lakeside. Several of the homes along upper Ridge Road are on the tour, including those with a modular, contemporary and log cabin construction. Greenbelt's first dental office of the McCarl family will be a tour stop. The Club House at Hunting Ridge Condominiums will be open for the tour on May 16.

Some of the homes and gardens appear on the tour for both

Greenbelt's Homes Exhibit Owners' Work, Creativity

by Eileen Peterson

Dan Boone wasn't thinking of garden awards when he surveyed his steep back yard in 1972 and knew he had to stop the small lake forming behind his house.

What began as a solution to a drainage problem, however, has turned into one of the finest gardens in Greenbelt, the winner of the Prince George's County First Place Beautification Award in October 1986. The Hedgewood Drive home of Dan and Judy Boone is a stop on Greenbelt's Home and Garden Tour this year.

The Bladensburg Rotary Club took one look at the detailed plantings, path, stone walls and the hand-forged ironwork Dan has set along the manicured lawn and gave him its Garden of the Year award in 1986.

Like most gardeners, Dan buys his plants. Rocks for walks and small walls along the back are brought from trips away to blacksmithing and craft festivals where Dan forges intricate fireplace pokers and candle holders as well as furniture and utensils decorated with iron leaves or fanciful creatures.

With an energy that first went to just making the yard presentable, Dan soon was sculpturing every inch of ground, front and back, then forging gates and posts and railings for yard and house. A seventh-generation blacksmith, this Asheville, N.C. native forged some of his railings while the family lived in Bowie. At Plateau Place for seven years, the family wanted to stay in Greenbelt. Judy, a craftswoman specializing in cross-stitched items, grew up at 69 Ridge, the daughter of the late Peg Baldwin.

In the Green

Set into the woods at 58 Court Ridge, John and Christina O'Boyle found a house where there was "lots of dreaming John could put into actuality," reflects Christina.

Their first thought was "all the green—all the forest." There was already a two-storied addition and an enlarged kitchen, and the entrance had been moved to the end of the house. At that end and behind the house, low land and a stream preclude close neighbors. But the house was dark, so a Victorian-style turret, two-storied and with windows punctuated with antique-colored panels, brings in the sun. At the front, space from a clothes closet and the old trash closet became a powder room with a greenhouse window filled with ceramics.

"It's not a finished house," reflects Christina, who is Assistant Director of Decatur House, a National Trust property on Lafayette Square. John had been an "incredible" gardener at their D.C. house, but there are still the old bricks to lay into a patio beyond the two-tiered deck he and his friend Rex built. He is President of Intercare, a company on Ivy Lane, so home and planning the garden with iron gate and rose bushes is close at hand.

Both houses are on the city-wide Home and Garden Tour.

All Around Great

We Greenbelters like to tell ourselves how wonderful we are. We also like to share that message with others. But over the last weekend at the remarkable international Greenbelt Conference on New Towns, we had the great and continuing pleasure of hearing notable architects and urban planners from around the nation and abroad confirm what we already knew: Greenbelt is Great.

From the riveting keynote address on the Depression context of the New Towns program to the wrap-up session on Sunday afternoon, conference speakers did not fail to link the design concepts of garden cities to spinoffs in the positive quality of life which have been made a reality for those who reside in the new towns. All speakers were impressed with the strong community commitment and creativity that had both conceived and produced the conference.

Many Greenbelters participated as conference speakers: Mayor Gil Weidenfeld, City Manager James Giese, and County Councilman Richard Castaldi as members of a panel on "Making the Green Towns Work"; Mary Lou Williamson, Al Herling, Bruce Bowman, and Margaret Hogensen on another panel on Greenbelt's sense of community. Many others contributed in behind-the-scenes work in the planning and in the nitty-gritty details of bringing off a product so complex and far-reaching. It was a thoroughly professional job. But particular kudos are due to Sandra Barnes, overall chairperson of Greenbelt's 50th anniversary celebration, as well as chairperson of the conference. Her graciousness and collectedness were never-failing.

In the elegant ambiance of the Greenbelt Hilton, the town and its citizens were on view at their dressed-up very best—not a tee shirt in sight. The legend we have all worn so many times spread across our chests was invisible during the entire weekend. But even the outsiders knew that we carried it in our hearts.

Stanley C. Osinski

Stanley C. Osinski, 74, the pedestrian who died on April 11 as a result of injuries after he was struck by a car on Crescent Road, was buried at the St. Casimir's Cemetery in Shenandoah, Pa. on April 14. A Mass of Christian Burial was offered at St. Casimir's Catholic Church by his nephew Rev. Peter Osinski of Pennsauken, N.J.

Mr. Osinski is survived by a daughter, Linda Liffie, two granddaughters, a sister, four brothers and numerous nieces, nephews, great and great-great nieces and nephews. He had been living at the Boxwood Village home of his niece Regina Wilkinson at the time of the accident.

THANKS

To the Editor:

On behalf of the Osinski Family and myself, I wish to thank Rev. Stack, the Rescue Squad and all who have helped Mr. Osinski and to those who have offered their kind expression of sympathy.

It is deeply appreciated and gratefully acknowledged.

Police Blotter

Based on Information Released by the Greenbelt Police Department

On April 27, Cpl. Timothy Hahn responded to a report of a breaking and entering in the 9100 block of Edmonston Court. The patio door was smashed and someone appeared to be in the apartment. When the persons inside were told to come out, a man and a woman appeared. The woman said that the man had broken the door and then refused to leave. The man had no identification and refused to give his name. When the man attempted to push past Hahn, he was placed under arrest. He was charged with malicious destruction and common law battery. After the man was identified, he was released on personal recognizance.

Officer Robert Musterman responded to a report of a suspicious person at the parking lot of 7730 Hanover Parkway on April 25 at 5:48 p.m. A man described as a white male, age 20, 5'7" with a slim build approached a woman and started to question her about the nearest phone and gas station. When he became aware that a male friend of the woman was in a nearby car, the man fled on foot.

A resident male was taken to Prince Georges Hospital about 6 a.m. on April 27 after he had created a disturbance on Parkway Road. According to police, the man was the driver of a hit-and-run vehicle in an incident which occurred on Southway on the previous day. No one was injured in the vehicular accident. Cpl. Timothy Hahn had found the man just sitting in his car after the accident. The man said he had been taking PCP and cocaine.

On April 26, Officer Thomas Keifine responded to an assault report at the Holiday Inn. The female victim said that a man who had been sharing a room with her had been taking drugs and became abusive, striking the woman about the face and body numerous times. The man was placed under arrest. The man had a gun in his possession and admitted using it to threaten the woman.

Three young males brought a bicycle to the police department on April 28 after finding it in the woods near a creek in the city. The owner was contacted and a new bicycle registration was issued since the old one had faded.

A sliding glass patio door was stolen from a construction site in the 7100 block of Lake Drive in Greenbelt East over the weekend. The theft was reported on April 28.

A resident of the District was arrested for shoplifting at Linen 'N Things in the Greenway Shopping Center on April 27. Officer Robert Musterman spotted the suspect from the description given by witnesses, who later identified the woman as the person who entered the store with a blue vinyl bag. The bag was recovered in the parking lot under a vehicle; it contained stolen sheets and pillowcases. Officer Troy Harding arrested a male resident for filing a false report that his vehicle had been stolen. On April 25 an Eleanor Roosevelt High School ring was reported stolen from the gym at the Springhill Lake Recreation Center. The owner had left it on the bleachers while playing basketball.

CITY COUNCIL from pg. 1 inadequate to house the programs CRAB cites. They also doubt that other facilities will have adequate space.

The CRAB report had not recommended including a senior activities center. CNEC objected to this omission, citing support in the 1981 election questionnaire, which they felt must refer to an activities center rather than a daycare facility.

CNEC called the CRAB questionnaire "poorly timed, poorly constructed and poorly analyzed." They felt the delivery of the questionnaire during the Christmas season reduced the response rate and that the section dealing with support for various tax increases was confusing and that its results were unreliable.

In conclusion, CNEC, renewing its call for a multi-purpose use of the North End School, urged adoption of its original seven-point proposal. The CNEC response to the CRAB report says: "We believe that there is a willingness to support a modest increase in taxes to support the CNEC proposal in conjunction with user fees."

Ride-a-Bike Benefit For Retarded May 17

The annual Greenbelt Ride-a-Bike to benefit programs for the retarded is scheduled for Sunday, May 17 (raindate June 7). City officials will cut the ribbon to start off the first group of participants at 10 a.m. The event will continue through the day until 4 p.m. Participants may bike, walk or jog. This project is co-sponsored by the Greenbelt Recreation Department and the Greenbelt Jaycees in cooperation with the Prince Georges County Association for Retarded Citizens (ARC). The area REACT group will also participate.

As in previous years, the 10 mile route will begin at the Youth Center, run down Braden Field and through the city into the Research Farm and back. The routes may be repeated or shortened as each participant wishes. Last year's event included several 100 mile riders and family groups. It is hoped the number of special participants will increase this year.

Refreshments will be available for all participants and T-shirts will be given to all with at least 10 pledges. For every $100 worth of pledge collections, participants will receive one chance at winning a 5" black/white portable TV. Special prizes will be awarded to all with collections over $200. The participant on the Greenbelt Route with the most collections will receive a 13" color television, and the one showing the greatest effort in support of the project will be awarded the Hosea White Memorial Plaque, which hangs at the Youth Center.

Pledge forms are available at local schools and recreation centers. For additional information call the Recreation Department Office (474-9486) weekdays 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. or call Eileen Labukas (474-9486). Anyone wishing to make a pledge for the event may also call the above numbers.

Historic Photo Exhibit Shows City's Origins

by Sandra Barnes

Franklin Delano Roosevelt's dream of the ideal community will be displayed in a photographic exhibit prepared in commemoration of Greenbelt's 50th Anniversary. The exhibit will open at the Greenbelt Library on Sat., May 9, with a reception at 3 p.m. It will run through Greenbelt Day week-end, June 6. Comprised of 42 black and white photographs, the exhibit is an historical record of Greenbelt's early days through the lenses of the photographers employed by the Works Progress Administration (WPA).

The jewels of the exhibit are seven conceptual drawings of the ideal community painted between 1935 and 1936, again by WPA artists. These drawings portray Greenbelt homes and families in the stylized Art Deco fashion of the era. The photographs of Marion Post Wolcott, Arthur Rothstein, Marjory Collins and Gretchen Van Tassel capture the essence of community life in the late 1930s and early 1940s.

The exhibition begins with the construction of Greenbelt from the day that the first workers descend from the truck bringing them to the rural farmland in Prince George's County. By building the greentowns (two others were built in addition to Greenbelt: Greenhills, Ohio, near Cincinnati and Greendale, Wisconsin, near Milwaukee), FDR achieved the goals of hiring unemployed men following the Great Depression and providing housing for low-income people. In one photograph, FDR's director of the Resettlement Administration, Rexford Guy Tugwell, debonair in his white suit, is shown inspecting the construction site. It was Tugwell who convinced FDR to build the greenbelt towns.

The exhibit takes the viewer from the clearing of land to the building of homes, to the shaping of community life as families enjoy their new surroundings in the country. Mothers and children stroll through the town center and along the walkways. Families picnic in their gardens. Children feed the ducks at the lake park. Boys ride their bikes safely through the underpasses.

Greenbelt's planning features are captured by the camera. These include the interior walkway system the underpasses separating pedestrian and vehicular traffic, the superblocks and the encircling green belt. FDR's new town had everything its First Families could want including a structure for town government and the seeds of cooperativism which later characterized the town.

The exhibit has been prepared by a committee: Sandra Barnes, Cal Corell, Joe Polanin, all of Greenbelt, in collaboration with David Fogle and Ralph Bennett, of the University of Maryland School of Architecture. It is made possible in part by a grant from the Maryland Humanities Council through funding from the National Endowment for the Humanities. Other contributors include the Potomac Valley Chapter of the American Institute of Architects, the National Capital Area Chapter of the American Planning Association, the American Planning Association (national organization) and the Art Deco Society of Washington.

This photograph is part of the "community life" series in Greenbelt's 50th Anniversary Photographic Exhibition, which opens May 9 at the Library.

Condo Rezoning Requested For Greenbelt East Parcel

Greenbrook Associates (Michael T. Rose Associates) has filed a rezoning application for a 16-acre parcel located in Greenbelt East immediately south of Hunting Ridge along the Capital Beltway. According to City Manager James K. Giese, the application requests rezoning from the R-R (rural residential) to the R-18C zone. The R-18C zone is designated for Multi-Family Medium Density Residential-Condominium development. The proposal envisions the construction of 360 condominium units in four-story structures. No hearing dates have been established. The city staff has contacted the applicant in order to schedule meetings with the city's Advisory Planning Board and the city council.

Lake Fails Screen Test

On the afternoon of April 22 a representative of Twentieth Century Fox called to inquire about the possibility of using Greenbelt Lake for the final scene, a reunion of three people, of a movie being filmed in Washington, D.C. They were having difficulty finding a suitable location and wanted to take the scenes either Friday or Saturday. Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, which had refused their permission to use the pond at the Brookside Aboretum, had referred them to Greenbelt. Smith, Lt. Stair and Giese met with the representative and executive producer at the lake later in the afternoon. The decision was quickly made that the lake, while beautiful, was too big and too much "city park looking" to be suitable for the scene. City staff members were somewhat disappointed, but also relieved, as they weren't sure that they could accommodate a 100-member film crew on a busy Saturday. The film stars William Hurt and Holly Hunter and is directed by Jim Brooks, who did the Mary Tyler-Moore Show, Taxi and the film Terms of Endearment.

Middle School Sets Exercise Classes

The Greenbelt Middle School Co-op offers teen and adult classes at the Greenbelt Middle School at Kenilworth Avenue and Greenbelt Rd. beginning in June. The classes being offered are: Aerobics (Bio.) Mondays and Wednesdays from 5:30 to 6:30 pm or from 7 to 8 pm, both classes start on June 15; Aerobics (Lively) Tuesdays and Thursdays from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. (starts on June 29); Weight Lifting on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. Registration can be accomplished by mail up to May 15; walk-in registration will be on May 20 from 6-7 p.m. at the Beltsville Community Center, 3900 Sellman Rd., in Beltsville. For information, 445-4500.

The city's intra-city bus service, the Greenbelt Connection, needs drivers with good driving records to work Sundays.

We are interested in people who want to work every Sunday, or even just one or two Sundays per month. If you are interested, or want further information, contact Michael McLaughlin at 474-8000. Applications for employment are available at the city offices, 25 Crescent Road. Salary is $6.00/hr. EOE.

LANDSCAPE ARCHITECTS PRESENT VIEWS ON REDESIGNING CENTER

by Virginia Beauchamp

In a low-key and informative work session at the Youth Center on Wednesday, April 29, the landscape architects hired by the city to design the renovation of the Roosevelt Center area presented a status report to the city council and interested citizens. The husband and wife team of Coffin and Coffin, a Washington firm, set forth the guidelines under which they have been carrying out the information-gathering segment of the process of developing a plan. They then went on to seek feedback and suggestions on any thing they might have overlooked. Audience response was universally positive.

Their presentation began with a set of slides illustrating the design concepts according to which Greenbelt was laid out. These began with a geological map, in which Greenbelt was shown inside an immense coastal plain with a clay deposit base. Throughout the evening that clay base, and the limitations it imposes on possibilities for certain types of plantings, came to be seen as one kind of natural environmental force that would have to be considered. (For example, sycamores planted on the islands in the west parking lot and along Centerway are dying back because of the inhospitable soil in which they are set.)

The slides went on to show the original "doodle" by a designer of the possible shape of the town. Although many details were later changed, the sense of a crescent-shaped pattern was already there. Laurence Coffin was especially commendatory of the original planning for pedestrian walkways in the Center area—symmetrical loops leading from both east and west to Centerway, with similar loops behind the mall. These latter walkway patterns were later broken by construction of the Co-op food store building and still later by the professional building. Early photographs showed a heavily wooded background to the mall where the north parking lot is now located.

In setting forth the planning goals under which they were working, Laurence Coffin listed the following: maintaining the original planning concepts, preserving historical elements of value, and improving visual and functional relationships. On the other hand, they hoped to find ways, he said, to deal with two strongly felt needs for the Center's viability: the need for more commercial space and the need for more parking.

In order to pin down both goals and needs more specifically, he and Beatriz Coffin had divided the total area for which they were responsible into eight discrete segments: (1) the green sloping lawn between Crescent Road and Centerway, (2) the original stores on both sides of the mall, (3) the more recent co-op store and professional building, (4) the parking areas, (5) the municipal building, with its newer wing, (6) the service station and realty office, (7) the woodland area behind the north parking lot, and (8) the Youth Center and swimming pool. These eight sections had been highlighted in different colors on a map that Laurence Coffin used for his discussion.

Among the specific goals which he outlined were improving the relationship between the woodlands and the original plaza, dealing with pedestrian and vehicular conflicts, restoring the Center as a pedestrian hub, and expanding recreational opportunities. The Coffins also hoped to provide architectural guidelines for restoration of the buildings, as well as ideas for appropriate signage and street furniture. In addition, they intended to find ways to better define the parking and to improve the appearance of Centerway.

Beatriz Coffin then went through the eight segments of the map they had drawn up, detailing in each case what they had found to be assets to be preserved and liabilities to be minimized. Soil erosion in both the Centerway area and the woodland section near the Youth Center were both seen as problems.

Audience Response

A Ridge Road resident and Baltimore architect, Calvin Corell, set the tone for the audience response in his commendation of the Coffins' "rational and level-headed approach." He pointed out, however, that their description had not taken into account a recently presented plan for locating an indoor swimming pool adjacent to the east boundary of the original outdoor pool. In later discussion he amplified his concern: "You should tell the swimming pool people where to put the pool," Corell said. "If they plan to extend the square footage for parking, you should tell them where it should go."

When Michael Burchick questioned how the Coffins intended to deal with parking design behind the realty office, Laurence Coffin commented that they had not yet worked out solutions to the problems they had delineated. At this point, he said, they were still gathering information and were seeking from the audience comments on anything they might have overlooked.

In response, Leo Walder pointed to conflicts between youths and older people in how the Center mall area should be used, and Mayor Gil Weidenfeld later amplified the issue when he spoke of continuing problems with bicycle traffic. Walder also said that the commercial buildings numbering system is confusing—that many people coming to the Center cannot find the specific office they are looking for. Ruth Mathes was pleased that some form of storm water management was being considered to deal with erosion problems.

Council member Antoinette Bram pointed out that some of the traffic congestion in the west parking lot would be removed when the police facility was transferred out of the municipal building. But her council colleague Thomas White suggested the traffic-generating effect of the library and the Center School, both beyond the limits of the specific area to which the landscape architects had been assigned.

Walder also stressed the importance of the Center School—"a massive structure" which would be good to connect visually with the original mall buildings. Burchick commented that he could see the Center becoming a tourist attraction. Laurence Coffin agreed. The shopping area, he pointed out, is "an undestroyed little period piece." He could envision considerable outside interest in coming here to look at it.

Ruth Bond expressed concern over the proposed location for the new swimming pool and its potential for interfering with the visual background for the mall which the present woodlands provides. She observed that parking needs in the north parking lot may eventually be alleviated, since she felt the post office "probably won't stay forever."

Some disagreement developed concerning the Bradford pear trees in the Center. Many felt them to be a very important asset in providing shade. Others felt they blocked the view of the commercial buildings so that people could not find the stores. Others were concerned that the entrance roads into the city lacked signage to indicate that the city center was here.

As the meeting closed, the Coffins indicated that they expected in about a month and a half to be able to present solutions for consideration by the council and the citizens of Greenbelt.
