Two Plans for Parking at Roosevelt Center Are Presented to the Public

by Virginia Beauchamp

In preliminary remarks at the public hearing on November 3 concerning plans for redeveloping the parking areas surrounding the Roosevelt Center, city manager James K. Giese reported that the first plan offered by the landscape architectural firm of Coffin & Coffin had been sent back by the city staff, since it had not increased by enough, they thought, the available number of parking spaces.

Nevertheless, Giese noted that requirements for parking would be likely to shift in the next few years, when the major generator of parking needs — the police — moved out. The post office could conceivably also reduce the scope of its operation in the center, Giese said, also cutting down on the need for parking.

On the other hand, construction of an indoor swimming pool adjacent to the present pool would require further spaces for parking by its patrons. In both of the two new plans which were presented by Laurence E. Coffin at the hearing, about 60 spaces beyond those now available were included.

Coffin began by expressing appreciation for the original design of the center. "This is a unique place," he said, "not just another shopping center." He described the original plan as "elegantly, beautifully designed." Unfortunately, he noted, when the present Co-op supermarket was built at a later time, as well as the professional building still later, the original pedestrian flow was interrupted. In their designs the Coffins had tried to solve some of the present circulation problems and also to "restore some of the dignity" of the original plan.

Two Designs

Coffin presented two different designs for landscaping and rearranging the parking islands in the east and west parking lots. One, called Scheme B, left the cars and islands related in very much the way that they now are. Scheme A, however, turned the rows in the west lot at a 90 degree angle from their present orientation, so that the movement of people leaving their cars would flow toward the shopping center.

Scheme A would increase the number of parking spaces to 412 from the present 353. Scheme B would provide 414 spaces. Both plans call for 10 additional spaces at the rear of the swimming pool and near the Youth Center. About 10 spaces between the Co-op loading ramp and the theater, however, would be eliminated on both plans in order to create a pedestrian space — "a nice landing place," as Coffin put it, for people entering the mall. These would be replaced by four or five spaces that had been added at each end of Centerway.

In order to maximize the total number of spaces in both lots, parking would be oriented vertically to the landscaped islands. Angled parking, though easier for the driver, requires much more room, Coffin pointed out. In Scheme A, cars would be screened from view from Crescent by the trees and shrubs of what he described as "garden bays." Driveway entrances to both east and west lots would be divided, with shrubs in the median providing a screen of green.

Impact on Merchants

Speaking on behalf of the Roosevelt Center merchants, and particularly for the Co-op, Mike Burchick expressed concern about elimination of some parking spaces along the driveway between the apartment buildings on Parkway. "Each parking space is like a diamond" to the merchants, Burchick said.

Coffin commented that they had hoped to "clean up the design" by eliminating the expansive asphalt area at that location and restoring the distinction between travel ways and parking areas. Plantings of trees and shrubbery would soften the appearance of that driveway.

Later discussion brought out, however, that residents of the red brick apartment buildings on both sides of the driveway in question regularly park in the east lot, since their own lots provide too few spaces. In addition, according to Giese, residents of the apartment buildings along Crescent also utilize spaces in both parking lots during week nights and weekends. There is no way, he said, that the city could prohibit residents' use of this facility, since the county had permitted the upzoning of the properties without requiring greater room for parking.

Co-op Manager Bob Davis, indicating the impact of weekend parking by apartment residents, said that he had counted the number of empty spaces available at 9 a.m. on Saturday and found only seven. On Sunday when the Co-op opened at 10 a.m. he found only three.

Burchick also expressed reservations about the width of the driveway along the customer loading ramp beside the Co-op. There needed to be two runways, he said, between parked cars and the edge of the ramp—one to use for picking up parcels and one for through traffic to get out.

"A Raisin in the Sun" Well Done at Utopia

by Judy Goldstein

Lorraine Hansberry's play A Raisin In the Sun is a portrayal of one woman's family. The fact that the family is black does not seem terribly important, although it is billed as a play about Black America.

The Younger family lives on the Southside of Chicago. They are poor, but their aspirations are the same as those of any typical American family: more money coming in, a better place to live, education for the children.

Mama Younger, the matriarch, is decidedly the head of this family. As played by Vivian E. Gist, she runs the gamut of emotions. She is firm, she is angry, she is baffled, she is touchingly loving. Her son Walter Lee is portrayed impressively by Victor Wade as a man helplessly bound to a menial job which is not sufficient to support the family.

The grandfather of the Younger family has died, and there is an insurance policy of $10,000. Each member of the family has decided ideas on how the sum is to be expended. Mama wants to move her family into a new house, a decision applauded by her daughter-in-law Ruth, sensitively played by Shirlynn Jenice Hallum. Carol D. Johnson is Beneatha Younger, Walter Lee's sister, who is determined that some of the inheritance be invested in her dream of becoming a doctor. Beneatha is convincingly portrayed as a very young, pretty, ambitious woman, unsure of her place in the world. Although very much under the control of her mother, her rebelliousness cannot be suppressed.

Mama Younger, aware that her son's self esteem must be bolstered, places more trust in him than he is ready to handle.

The family seems shattered by the resulting financial catastrophe, but with great love Mama is able to restore her son's pride and to rally the spirits of all.

Racial problems do enter into the plot of this play, but one nevertheless has the feeling that this is a portrayal of resilience, family solidarity, and, above all, hope. This is not a sad or depressing drama. There is a great deal of humor as the family goes about life's routines. Meals have to be served, and at least there seems to be enough food to go around. Ruth is everlastingly busy with laundry and ironing. Beneatha has two boyfriends Rhoden Skyies is amazingly authentic as the philosophical Nigerian, Joseph Asagai, who gives marvelous advice but no noticeable proposal. Isaiya Washington

To the Editor:

At about 2 p.m. on November 11, the day of the heavy snow. I was traveling up Greenbelt Road toward Beltway Plaza to pick up my wife. My car has front-wheel drive and I knew that I would get over the Kenilworth bridge as long as I didn't have to stop. I would have made it were it not for the vehicles that were stuck in the middle of the road. I had to stop, and of course, became stuck myself. I soon found out that most of the stuck vehicles (about seven of us) became stuck the same way I did, that is, somebody was stopped in front of them.

The rest of the vehicles were 4-wheel-drive vehicles driven by greedy thugs who saw an easy way to make money off helpless people. "Pay me $50 and I'll tow you across the bridge," said one of them to me. The prices ranged from $15 to $50, depending on how much the victims had. I saw several people pay, but I refused (I did not have any money on me anyway). "You fool!" one thug yelled at me. "Don't you know people die in the cold. It gets pretty cold here at night." He threw a snowball through my open window into my face.

Some groups of these extortionists were even fighting over who "stole" whose "customers." The driver in front of me finally begrudgingly handed money to one of them and they very recklessly yanked his car across the bridge. This opened up an avenue for the waiting cars and now I was in the way. Since I could not move my car, I did the next best thing. I got out and pushed, or helped push, several cars around mine. Nobody really needed a tow. Each car just needed a little push to get going again. Every few minutes, a thug would heckle me, telling me I could save a lot of energy if I would only pay them their fee. "I'm helping people for free," I said. "Can't you just give me a push?" "Hey," came the reply, "I didn't come out here to get cold, I came out here to make money!" Hard to believe, but it's true.

Finally, after more than an hour, I was able to get my car rolling (I chipped a path in the ice with an iron rod).

At Beltway Plaza, we called the police. I hope that these extortionists were caught.

I wrote this letter to forewarn Greenbelters of people like these, in case the situation arises again, and to remind anyone who thinks this was a good way to make money that these acts can (and hopefully will) cost them much more than they could possibly gain.

The Trains Are Coming

To the Editor:

Well Greenbelt, it's about to happen again. We're about ready to accept what is supposed to be an answer to all our problems. Last time it was "let's build a bridge over Kenilworth Avenue so that Greenbelt Road traffic flow will be improved." Most, save the traffic engineers, will say that it is a worse situation than before. Now Kenilworth Avenue north of Crescent Road is inadequate, has been moved to high priority, and we find that there are plans to make it part of the cross-county connector. More traffic. This is almost as bad as when Greenbelt was first halved and then quartered by the Parkway and then the Beltway. Boy, did we get snookered.

Now they are peddling Metro. Has anyone really looked at the plans? The good it will bring to Greenbelt? The problems it has already started? The problems it will bring? Let's take a look. Traffic for Metro from the west is handled well. Exits and ramps to the Beltway. Traffic from the north and east, including old Greenbelt and the B-W Parkway, will have no way of getting into the station except through the Greenbelt Road and Kenilworth Avenue intersection and then along Cherrywood Lane through Springhill Lake. Remember, Greenbelt will be playing host to a 3000-car parking lot, countless buses, and "kiss-and-ride" patrons. We're even getting a 70-acre, 250-car train yard. (If a six-car train left every 10 minutes, it would take almost seven hours to use the train cars in the lot!) All this so we can have a $1.75, 30-minute ride to downtown.

Traditionally, wherever Metro goes, there is a development boom. Look at Fairfax. Look at New Carrollton. Look at Silver Spring. Just in anticipation of the arrival of Metro, Greenbelt is becoming a development center. Roads are being built ("the" intersection, etc.), hotels are going up, highrise office buildings are going up. Every spare parcel of land previously undesirable is being built on.

In the past, someone was always whispering to Congress, "There is a lot of unused land out there in Beltsville. It's called the Agricultural Research Center. Sell it to me and reduce the deficit." With the federal budget in the shape it's in, and the rapid development atmosphere we're experiencing, we will see hoards of developers shouting to Congress "SELL BELTSVILLE ARC!" We've saved it in the past, but who will stand up for us next time?

Transportation is supposed to improve the quality of life. With the trains is coming traffic beyond our dreams, development of a new office corridor that will do the average Greenbelt resident little good, and the loss and over-development of the BARC lands. Will Greenbelt buy this one too?

Frank Kayser

Editor's Note: Cherrywood Lane is to be extended across the Beltway to intersect with Edmonston Road. This will provide a direct route to the station without going through the Greenbelt Road-Kenilworth Avenue intersection.

Officer Steven Keller stopped a 1987 Chevrolet Blazer with Virginia tags about 11:40 p.m., November 12 when he saw the car being operated without lights on Kenilworth Avenue. driver pulled over in response to the officer's signal, then jumped out and fled. A computer check revealed the car had been stolen the same day from New Carrollton. A K-9 team responded and made an unsuccessful search for the suspect. He was described as a black male in his early teens, 5'10", 140 lbs., wearing a dark coat and pants with a light-colored scarf or collar. About 9 p.m., November 7, while in the kitchen of her ground-level apartment a resident in the 7700 block of Hanover Parkway saw a man outside her kitchen window who motioned to attract her attention, then unbuttoned his pants and started to expose himself. When she went to the phone to call police he left.

In separate cases reported about 10:30 p.m., November 6 at Jasper's Restaurant in Greenway Center a wallet was stolen from a purse and a purse was stolen. In both cases the purses had been left on chairs unattended.

Officer Thomas Keifline stopped a car for a traffic violation about 1:40 a.m., November 9. When he approached the car he found the passengers rolling what appeared to be a marijuana cigarette. He arrested two male non-residents, aged 16 and 21. The juvenile was released to his parents pending court action and the adult was incarcerated in lieu of $3000 bond.

The assistant manager and a clerk at the Dress Barn store in Greenway Center reported on November 7 that while standing outside in front of the store they saw a man walk out carrying four ladies' winter coats. When the manager asked if he could help him, the man smiled and got into a waiting late model, two-door blue Chrysler-make car driven by a second man, and they drove off with the stolen garments. Both men were black. The first was dark-skinned, tall and slim. He wore a rust-colored leather jacket and blue jeans. There was no further description of the driver.

Officers arrested a 29-year-old D.C. resident at the Greenway Center about 4:20 p.m., November 9 after they were called to the Attitudes Dress Shop where the manager reported a shoplifting theft. He had seen the suspect conceal merchandise between her legs and leave the store. They arrested her in the parking lot where the manager identified her. She was held on Security officers at Beltway Plaza arrested a 39-year-old Riverdale man about 3:30 p.m., November 8 for shoplifting after a store employee saw him concealing two pairs of jeans under his coat.

$3000 bond

A two-story townhouse in the 8200 block of Mandan Road was broken into on November 10. A VCR, camera equipment, jewelry and tennis shoes were stolen.

Entry was gained by breaking a sliding glass window.

A storage bin at 6002 Springhill Drive was reported broken into on November 6. A red Craftsman tool box containing assorted tools was stolen.

A brown two-door 1977 Buick Regal, Md. registration SWH-227 was stolen about 3 p.m., November 8 from the parking lot of TGI Friday's restaurant at 6460 Capitol Drive.

Roosevelt Center Parking Plans

paying for the landscaping and improvements. "If the purpose is to be aesthetic, the merchants should not be stuck with the cost," he said. "The plans do not do much for the merchants who depend on the east parking lot." Rosenzweig also noted that the two handicapped parking spaces next to the Co-op loading ramp had been eliminated along with other parking when the space between the store and theater was turned into a pedestrian area. Coffin indicated that handicapped spaces had been provided in the design, however.

Leonard Wallace of Realty 1 commented that potential commercial tenants refused to move in because of the lack of parking space. He wondered about the feasibility for more parking on Centerway.

Aesthetic Features

Almost universally those present praised the attractiveness of both designs. Keith Chernikoff complimented the Coffins on the way traffic had been designed to flow across all three lots on the northern edge, though he raised a question about speed control. Council member Antoinette Bram noted the design change for the grade behind the statue which Coffin described as an attempt to tie the swimming pool into the Center area. Two sets of stairs would cross diagonally at a resting spot halfway up what is now a steep slope, thus eliminating the current stairs alongside the west wall of the Co-op.

Another design feature that drew favorable attention was the Coffins' attempt to re-establish the corner between Centerway and the Mobil station. The roadway to the Youth Center would also be closed off to all but emergency vehicles, and access to the parking spaces behind the natatorium would run along the east side of the pool area.

Eileen Peterson praised both designs, especially for the visual integrity of the plans in keeping with the original philosophy of Greenbelt. She noted that parking solutions could no longer be met in the same way as they were fifty years ago, since the vehicles themselves are so different and since there are so many more of them. She felt that the designs' strengthening of the pedestrian ways through the Center forms the key to their success.

Pizza Carry-Out

Several people expressed concern over parking and traffic problems that might be generated by new tenants of the realty office building next to the gas station: a pizza carry-out business advertising fast and instant delivery. Joe Timer spoke on behalf of the Co-op membership, who had passed a motion at their annual meeting a few days earlier indicating worry about pedestrians, especially small children, who use the sidewalk in front of the building and for safe access to the east parking lot.

Giese noted that both the realty building and the gas station were private property. In controlling use of this space, "We can propose but not impose," he said.

Peterson and others also expressed concern about the many spaces occupied by vehicles involved in the automobile repair service at the south end of the east parking lot.

Costs

Finally Glory Houck asked what council member Thomas White called "the best question of all"—the respective costs of the two plans. Coffin said that according to the preliminary estimates, Scheme A would cost about $317,650 and Scheme B about $279,400.

In response to a question about when a plan might be forthcoming for improvement of the building facades, Coffin indicated that the architect involved hoped to have his plan completed by the end of November.

Public Response Extended

At the beginning of the meeting Giese announced that the hearing had inadvertently not been officially advertised. Nevertheless, because a large crowd had gathered anyway to hear the presentation by the landscape architects, the hearing proceeded as scheduled. However, plans were made to air the videotape of the session so that all not present would still be able to offer testimony.

(As published in the November 5 News Review, the program was to be shown on November 19 at 7 p.m. on Channel B-10. All viewers were also invited to send comments in writing to the city, directed either to Celia Wilson or Michael McLaughlin.)

"To Your Smile"

Dr. Ray Vidal
Can Chocolate Prevent Cavities?

Research conducted at the Forsyth Dental Center in Boston has found that the cocoa in chocolate blocks an enzyme produced by the bacteria known to cause dental decay. These current studies are a continuation of research done in the 1970's at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. In fact, as far back as the 1950's, studies conducted in Europe claimed that chocolate does not cause cavities and in fact, may prevent them. These early studies were never verified.

The exact mechanism is not fully understood, but it is believed that this substance blocks the conversion of sugar to dextran. It is actually the next step, the conversion of dextran to acid which is responsible for the decay process, but stopping this step before is, understandably, just as effective. It is also suspected that certain other foods, specifically tea, coffee and unsweetened fruit juices, may have similar affect on the decay process.

Although this appears to indicate chocolate cannot harm the teeth, it must be remembered that this research deals only with the cocoa in chocolate. Most commercial chocolate contains considerable amounts of sugar and is still to be avoided in excess.

"It's The Holidays... Why Do I Feel So Terrible?"

Sometimes the holidays just make things worse. Extra responsibilities create extra stress. Rampant materialism coupled with exaggerated warmth creates confusion—even depression. And being alone in the "season to be jolly" can feel overwhelmingly sad.

But it doesn't have to be that way. The Crisis Psychiatric

Service can help lift your holiday spirits in several ways:

Free Seminars: "Coping With Holiday Stress" and "Making Resolutions Stick: Getting Real About Change."
Free Brochures: "Facing The Holiday Blues" and "A Party Guide For A Non-Alcoholic Holiday."

Low-Fee Counseling, often with same day appointments.

So take the first step toward a happier holiday and call us for more information.

plays George Murchison, Joe College all the way, complete with white shoes.

If there is one thing incongruous about this family, it is that three women of different generations can inhabit a home, not to mention a very small kitchen, so harmoniously. All of them seem to take a hand in the raising of the grandson, Travis, played with cheerful enthusiasm by Calvin E. Soard. As written, the role was meant for a younger person, and it might be well to mature the part a bit.

Among the other parts, Frank Pearlman comes across very well as Karl Linder, the bigot. Kerry Patience has a walk-on as a mover.

Not satisfied with distinguishing himself as the director of this play, Keith Fulwood also plays the part of Bobo, a very sad man with a big problem.

The set, designed and built under the direction of Tom Shreiber, is properly dowdy but neat and clean. The family seems at home in those surroundings and there is a look of the 1950's. The only obvious anachronism was in the daughter's wardrobe, which ranged from mini to midi skirts, and a very shiny modern iron

This production is definitely one to be recommended. The players were so convincing that this viewer occasionally felt as if she were eavesdropping, not watching a play.
