Capital Improvement Projects Will Cost More than Double Bond Issue

by Diane Oberg

City Manager James K. Giese presented the Greenbelt city council with the unpleasant facts of the capital improvements budget at a worksession on January 13.

The projects covered by this budget were originally to have been financed by the six-million-dollar bond issue authorized in May 1985. However, the total estimated cost for those projects included in the June 29, 1987 bond issue priorities list is approximately $13.5 million dollars. The funds available total just $7.3 million, leaving $6.2 million unfunded. The June 29 agreement allowed for an additional one million dollars in short-term financing.

Status of Projects

The estimated cost of the police station is $2.1 million. Delays in obtaining a building permit have also delayed the start of construction past the October target date.

The contractor has notified the city he plans to seek compensation for increased costs caused by the delay. Although the cost estimate includes contingency reserve, Giese said the reserve could be too low if there are substantial delay costs.

Swimming Pools

The swimming pool contractor has now provided the required bond and begun work. Giese said that the pool should be ready for opening day. However, the wading pool may not be ready, since a permit for the wading pool has not yet been sought. Giese said this was done to speed up the permit process. Since the wading pool involves modifications to the pool, rather than renovations. A longer time is required for permit approval.

The estimated cost for the renovation of the outdoor pool is $499,000. The June 29 allocation for this project was $375,000.

Giese said there has been little progress on the indoor pool and that the June target date for seeking bids will not be met. He said that he has not pursued this project vigorously because of the other issues, notably parkland, that have arisen.

Giese's estimate, including a contingency fund of 25 percent, is $3.5 million, versus the $2.8 million allocated in June.

Parkland

Giese said that the figures he was presenting for parkland represented a "worst case" scenario. The June 29 resolution allocated two million dollars for parkland acquisition and development. Giese's "worst" estimate projects a total cost of $5.1 million for the acquisition of parcels 1 and 2, the acquisition of the surplus school sites and of private properties at Schrom Hills Park, and improvements to Schrom Hills Park and to the lake park. This estimate may be high, given the questionable accuracy of the estimated cost of obtaining Parcels 1 and 2.

Giese said he doubted that the state legislature would forgive the outstanding debt on the surplus school land, as he had hoped.

North End School

Like the other projects, the projected cost of rehabilitating the North End School exceeds its June 29 allocation of $400,000. However, the $1.4 million projected cost includes rehabilitation of the entire one-story portion of the school.

While Giese said that it should be more efficient to renovate this portion all at once, rather than just the portions need to accommodate the senior citizens day-care and drop-in centers approved by council, he recognized that the money to do so may not be available. In addition, he said that there may be an asbestos problem at the school which could substantially increase the renovation costs.

The city staff has applied for grants for both the senior citizen day-care and drop-in centers and approval is anticipated.

Giese said he has heard "rumblings" that the state wants the city to repay the debt of up to $220,000 on the old school since it has not yet been put to public use. He noted that while the senior center is an accepted public use, the adult day-care facility may not be, since the city plans to contract it out. In a phone conversation with the News Review, Giese said that if the city gets the grant for a senior citizen center, repayment of the debt will probably not be required.

It may be difficult to provide adequate parking for the renovated building, Giese said. While he expected that the senior day-care facility would not require much parking, a senior citizen center might. In addition, plans developed by the city's architects assumed that the two-story addition would be razed and the area used for parking. However, there has been no decision to do so, and Giese along with several councilmembers expressed reluctance to tear it down.

Giese said that it would be very difficult to develop that addition and still provide adequate parking. He said that city Planning and Development Coordinator Celia Wilson had analyzed the proposal by the Citizens for the North End Center and found that the facility would be 100 spaces short of the parking required by county code.

Councilmember Thomas X. White argued that the availability of the Greenbelt Connection and the number of people who could walk to the center could be used to obtain a waiver from the county codes. However, Mayor Gil Weidenfeld cautioned that the city does not want to underestimate the parking that will actually be required.

Public Works Addition

The proposed addition to the public works building is now projected to cost $950,000 rather than the $500,000 allocated in June. However, Giese said that no preliminary design work has been done so the estimated cost is uncertain.

Parkland Use Is Subject Of Next Citizens Meeting

Citizens for Greenbelt (CFG) will hold a membership meeting on Thursday, January 28 at 8 p.m. in the City Council Chambers. The meeting will begin with a presentation of the use and conservation of parkland with reference to Parcel 1 and Schrom Hills Park. Stan Fey of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission and Paul Mawicke of Greenhorne and O'Mara will speak.

A business meeting will follow. The new bylaws, which were approved by the executive board, will be presented to the membership for study. They will be voted on at the membership meeting, March 31, thereby satisfying the 30 day notification requirement. The bylaws were drawn up by the bylaws committee: Eunice Coxon, chairman; Maureen Nelson, Tony Pisano and Werner Neupert.

Also, the issue of radon will be discussed by the health and safety committee.

March 31 has been set as the date for the CFG annual membership meeting. It will be at 8 p.m. in the City Council Chambers. People with suggestions for speakers for this meeting should call Marvin Holmes, president at 345-6595.

Appointed to the nominating committee by the executive board were Barbara Clawson, Springhill Lake; Sandra Bowers, Greenbriar; and Irene Hensel, Lakewood. Members are asked to contact them with suggestions for officers who will be elected at the annual meeting.

Anyone wishing to join CFG or who needs further information should contact membership chairman, Eunice Coxon, 345-2756. Members and all interested people are urged to attend these meetings.

Council, by Doing Nothing, Blocks Office Building

by Leta Mach

After a convoluted one-and-three-quarter hour's discussion at its January 11 regular meeting, Greenbelt's city council decided to "do nothing" on the issue of Smith-Ewing lot number 2 in Greenbelt East. George Valanas, president of Midland Companies, proposed developers of the lot, had asked for information from council in order to make a decision on whether or not to proceed with the project and make the next payment on the land, which was due the next day.

In doing nothing, council stuck by the covenants on the property which restrict development to a 144-unit residential hotel. The present owners no longer plan to develop the property, which is now for sale. Midland Companies, who are interested in developing the parcel, want to build a six-story office building with a gross floor area of 128,000 square feet. A covenant amendment would be needed in order to construct the building in place of the hotel.

The developer's request had been reviewed by Celia Wilson, the city's planning and development coordinator, and she had presented several recommendations for council's consideration. The most important question was the square footage of the proposed building. In an earlier work session, the developer had learned that citizens and council felt the proposed building was too big. Looking similar to the Commerce Center I building, the proposed building would have the same square footage as Commerce Center I and slightly more than the 126,000 square feet planned for Commerce Center II.

Both sides wanted to hear the minimum and maximum square footages which would be acceptable to the other. Each side, however, was reluctant to divulge its position. It was obvious that 128,000 was too high for mayor Gil Weidenfeld and councilmembers Toni Bram, Joe Isaacs and Thomas White. Councilmember Ed Putens was out of town on business and was not present. Midland Companies could not supply an answer, explained attorney Richard Reed, before doing more engineering studies and learning what amenities would be required for the site. However, Valanas indicated that without at least 110,000 the company would walk away from the project and lose the money they'd already put into it rather than waste any more.

In response to earlier citizen comments, the developers indicated their willingness to reduce the building height by one story. Reed stated that the square footage was more important.

At this, citizens clarified that they expected the building's "footprint" to remain the same, thus reducing the square footage to about 108,000 square feet.

The developers stated that they wanted to do a quality project and would need a certain amount of square footage to make it economically possible. Admitting that she wasn't too wild about a residential hotel because of its "nuisance factor," Bram nevertheless noted that she wanted to do as little as possible on the site. Isaacs, on the other hand, said that the residential mode of the original project was important to him. "Putting aside traffic considerations," Weidenfeld noted that he would prefer offices because they generate more jobs.

Traffic Problems

At issue was the amount of traffic congestion the proposed building would generate. Wilson's report indicated that the office building would produce 121 more vehicle trips a day than a residence inn. Other comments were made about traffic problems. Keith Chernikoff, for one, felt a hotel would not have as much peak-hour traffic.

Bram moved that, in view of the demand for a lower density and the avoidance of hazardous traffic problems, the city adhere to the original covenants on use of the property until such time as there are mutually agreed

OFFICIAL NOTICE

Volunteers Sought for Senior Citizens Task Force

The City Council of Greenbelt at its December 21, 1987 meeting, approved the establishment of a Senior Citizens Task Force. The purpose of the task force is to:

- Recommend essential elements for an adult day care center program and senior citizens activity center program.

The task force will consist of between nine and eleven members appointed by the City Council to serve until the adult day care and senior activity center programs are in place. The task force will include representatives from other city advisory boards, citizens of all ages, and citizens with professional expertise in senior programs.

The task force shall also consider whether there should be a permanent committee to identify the elements of a comprehensive senior citizen program, including, but not limited to, medical care, alternative housing, recreational needs, social and cultural programs, transportation, financial needs, and mental health and well-being. If a permanent committee is supported, the task force should recommend what the responsibilities of such a committee should be, and consider the organization, staffing and other requirements for an effective program.

Persons interested in serving on this task force are encouraged to send an expression of interest and resume to the City Clerk, City of Greenbelt, 25 Crescent Road, Greenbelt, MD 20770, prior to Thursday, February 18, 1988.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION, PLEASE CALL MICHAEL McLAUGHLIN, 474-8000.

Worth Keeping

To the Editor:

I've just returned from a visit to Greenbelt, where I grew up. I now live in Southern California, in an ordinary suburban town. I would like to share some comparisons. Our shopping district is a commercial strip along a divided road. We have Pizza Hut instead of Joe's, 7-11 instead of High's, K-Mart instead of Ben Franklin, and the AMC Village 8 instead of the Greenbelt Theatre. I miss Greenbelt very often.

On the other hand, I notice changes when I visit that latter day Greenbelters might not find as striking and sad as I do. Benjy's is closed down. I hear Domino's Pizza is coming to town. The Cultural Arts Center seems like a great idea, but I hear no one much goes. The whole Center has leaky roofs and rotting gutters.

Maybe it's no big deal. If Greenbelters want to get in step with the outside world, who am I to complain? After all, I left town 12 years ago. If Greenbelters would rather take all their business to the Mall, the Safeway, the Pizza Hut, the AMC Academy 6 (or is it 14? or 27?) maybe it's an inevitable process. Maybe the Greenbelters of my childhood had the right idea when they sold off the parklands the very "green belt" for which their town was named) to get out of paying taxes. But isn't it pointless to be surprised and indignant when townhouses and car lots appear where the woods used to be?

I guess what I'm saying is this: if it's worth keeping, it's worth paying for. If you want the Center to look decent, spend money there. If you want the Cultural Arts Center to survive, go see the shows. If you want Greenbelt to be what it can be, what it was meant to be, then you have to participate.

If you don't want to, then you might consider moving to Santee, California. We have great weather. In fact, would you like to buy my house? Because I'm still crazy about Greenbelt, after all these years, and I'm coming home.

Road Changes

To the Editor:

Greenbelt citizens may be interested to know that the County Executive is asking the city council to approve some local road changes involving Crescent Road, Ridge Road and Mandan Road. These changes could have a considerable negative impact on Greenbelt residents.

For instance, Crescent Road is proposed to be relocated to connect with Ivy Lane, the entrance to Capital Office Park. This could drastically increase the amount of traffic along Crescent.

Ridge Road would be extended to meet Kenilworth Avenue at Cherrywood Lane Extended, the new access road to the Greenbelt Metro Station. Mandan Road would be extended to Brae Brook Drive, which in turn would be extended to Cipriano Road.

At its January 13 meeting, Greenbelt's Advisory Planning Board (APB) unanimously approved the Crescent Road relocation, the Mandan Road extension, and a modification of the Ridge Road extension.

The Crescent relocation is billed as an attempt to improve the safety situation at the Beltway exit to Kenilworth. However, it would also support the county's plans to widen Edmonston Road (the Kenilworth Extension), and to construct the Intercounty Connector. A possible consequence is that Crescent could become a major thoroughfare for out-of-town traffic, including motorists who would use it as a bypass for our new $13 million interchange.

I have suggested to city council that a traffic study be done, and a public hearing be held, before any decisions are made. Citizens who are concerned about these proposed road changes should watch for this item on a future city council agenda.

All three leading roles are played by Greenbelt residents Irene O'Dare, a girl from 9th Ave., seeks success by starting her own piano company. The luck of the Irish pulls through for her when she meets Donald S. Marshall, who through Madame Lucy enables her to become a 9th Ave. girl with 5th Ave. clothes—but is it really for purely business reasons?

The show will begin at 8 p.m. There is a fee. For information call 345-7500, ext. 283.

The Odd Couple Is at Petrucci's

The female version of Neil Simon's "The Odd Couple" is playing at Petrucci's Dinner Theater in Laurel through April 1.

The basic situation of incompatible roommates whose foibles drive each other crazy is indestructible—the parallels to the original play are numerous and add an extra dimension of humor.

Oscar and Felix, now Olive Madison and Florence Unger, are played by Washington actresses Lynnie Raybuck and Rebecca Siegel. Olive, screamingly funny as the lusty, sloppy, divorcee TV producer gives a great performance. Florence is also good. Simon has done much more than switch the sexes. He has retained many of the original script's best jokes, and rewritten the characters to reflect feminine attitudes and psychology.

Simon's Pigeon sisters, the giggly upstairs English girls, have been transformed into a pair of courtly and handsome Spanish brothers.

Directed by Gene Morrill, the play will be presented Tuesday through Sunday evenings, with selected matinees.

Dinner, featuring American-Italian food, is excellent. Call 725-5226 for information or reservations. Discounts are available.

The "Girl of the Year" is Tina Umphries, who has been active in the club's cheerleading program the last three years as a cheerleader, lead cheerleader, and has contributed many hours helping out with the club's football program's concession stands.

The two adult volunteer "Distinguished Service Award" honoree are longtime club board members, Barbara Osborne, the club's secretary, and Mel Scites, the club's treasurer and registrar. Both have many years of distinguished active service with the club.

P.G. County Schools Plan More Magnet Schools

The recommendations are: Communication Arts Magnet Program at Kettering and Phyllis E. Williams elementary schools for the 1988-89 school year. Companion programs would be established at Tulip Grove and Rockledge elementary schools. This program would provide instruction in communications and related fields, as well as foreign language studies, art, drama, dance, creative writing, computer assisted instruction, debate and international studies.

Communication Arts Magnet Program at Kettering and Benjamin Tasker middle schools for the 1989-90 school year to provide continuity with the elementary communication arts programs.

Science/Mathematics Magnet Program at Gwyn Park High School for the 1989-90 school year. Establish a Science/Mathematics Magnet Program at Gwyn Park High School for the 1989-90 school year. The middle school program would be comparable to existing magnet programs of this type in the school system, and would enable additional students to have continuity in the program from the elementary to middle school levels. The high school program would be designed as a continuation of the middle school program with a variety of comprehensive and advanced science and math components. (The program is related to, but distinct from, the existing Science and Technology programs offered at Eleanor Roosevelt and Oxon Hill high schools. Testing admission criteria, for example, would not be required.)

—Career Component Program in Banking, Finance, Entrepreneurship, and Management and Public Policy at Largo High School for the 1988-89 school year. The program would be designed to offer studies in conjunction with private industry and other academic institutions.

—Career Component Magnet Program in Biotechnology at Fairmont Heights High School for the 1988-89 school year. The program would be designed to concentrate on the skills and career opportunities in biotechnology, with lab instruction, computer assisted instruction, and courses in biotechnology applications and science technology.

—Transitional Academic Center Program at Laurel High School for ninth graders in the 1988-89 school year. Establish a full University High School Magnet Program at Laurel for the 1989-90 school year. The first-year program would offer ninth grade transitional course offerings for students attending the Martin Luther King Jr. Middle School Academic Center program. The full program would replicate the existing University High School Program at Suitland High School, offering an enriched preparation for college. The program would be open to students from the middle school Academic Center program, and black students from the northern half of the county.

—Transitional Traditional Classical Program at Friendly High School for ninth graders in the 1988-89 school year. Establish a full program in the 1989-90 school year. The program would be designed to provide college preparatory instruction for students completing the Traditional-Classical Academy program at Lord Baltimore Middle School. Friendly would not be open as a magnet program except for students transferring from the middle school.

Transitional Academic Center Program at High Point High School for ninth graders in the 1988-89 school year. Establish full program in the 1989-90 school year. The program would be designed to provide college preparatory instruction for students completing the Academic Center program at Martin Luther King Jr. Middle School who are within the regular attendance area of High Point High School. High Point would not be open as a magnet except for students transferring from the middle school.

City Hosts Md. Managers

On Friday, January 15, city staff hosted an all day session for members of the Maryland City and County Management Association (MCCMA). In attendance were administrators or other top level personnel from five Maryland jurisdictions and a representative from the Institute for Government Service.

Presentations and discussions were held on how the council-manager plan works in Greenbelt, and on the city's current innovative projects. These included the video annual report, plans for the new police station and swimming pools, development negotiations, the city's five-year budget, the adopt-a-tree program and council agenda packets.

This session was the last in a series sponsored by the MCCMA, which provided insight into the operation of a number of local jurisdictions throughout the state.

Lion Belles Meet

The Greenbelt Lion Belles will hold a pot luck dinner on Tuesday, January 26, at 6:30 p.m. After the dinner, member Harriet Ying will show artifacts of Chinese culture.

Arts Center Establishes Fund for Roof Repair

by Marie Tousignant

Anyone who has visited the Arts Center in Roosevelt Center over the past year, especially after a rain or snowstorm, is well aware of the need to repair the roof over the lobby area. Repeated pleas to the owner of the building for roof repair have gone unheeded. The Arts Center's managing assistant, Kevin Kneisley, has arranged to have the roof repaired for the sum of $1800. A special fund has been established for the roof repair. The goal, according to Kneisley, is to find eighteen concerned citizens in the community to donate $100 each for this project. "We have plans and funds for interior decoration and refurbishment," says Kneisley, "but can't begin until we get the roof repaired."

At the first public notice of the campaign, the Catholic Community of Greenbelt, which meets at the Arts Center each Sunday, kicked off the campaign with the first $100 contribution. Anyone interested in contributing to this cause can send a check to the Greenbelt Arts Center, P.O. Box 293, Greenbelt, Md. 20770.

Lenore Thomas Straus

Lenore Thomas Straus, age 78, died of cancer on January 16 at her home in East Blue Hill, Maine. A sculptor with the federal Works Progress Administration in Washington during the Great Depression of the 1930's, Mrs. Straus carved the friezes depicting the preamble to the U. S. Constitution on the facade of Center School, which in Greenbelt's early days served also as the community building. She also sculpted the large statue of a mother and child affectionately dubbed the "Buddha," the focus of the Roosevelt Mall.

Mrs. Strauss, who lived in the Washington area for 31 years before moving to Maine in 1965, was a native of Chicago. She studied at the Art Institute in Chicago. Her works were exhibited in Washington, Baltimore, New York, Maine and Europe. A wood carving which she gave to Mr. and Mrs. Rexford Tugwell is now on view at the Greenbelt Museum.

Her marriage to Robert W. Straus ended in divorce.

Survivors include a son, Eric Thomas Straus of Accokeek; a daughter, Lenore Ware Straus of Washington, and two grandchildren.

Martin Ford

Martin Ford, 29, died January 13 at the Washington Hospital Center. He had been shot once in the temple on January 7 in Landover. The bullet, had lodged in the brain and could not be removed. Ford's request that his organs be donated to help others has already resulted in aid to three persons.

The son of long time Greenbelters Mary and Fred Ford, Martin grew up in the family's home in the 55 court of Ridge Road. He attended North End School, Greenbelt and Mary Bethune Junior High Schools and Parkdale High School. He played baseball with the Little League and the Boys Club. At 17 Ford joined the Army, serving seven years. Later he worked as a security guard at Columbia Women's Hospital and most recently in construction.

Three years ago Ford and his two children, Jayson and Laura, now ages 8 and 7, moved back to the Greenbelt home of his parents following a separation from his wife. The children attend Center School. Ford was involved with the Mowatt Memorial Methodist Church.

In addition to his parents and children, Ford is survived by a brother, Fred, of Crystal City, Va., a sister, Crystal, of Kensington, Md. and a grandmother, Laura M. Ford of Riverdale. An older brother, Gary, had died at age 19 following a head injury.

The funeral was held January 19 at Gasch's with the Reverend Clifford Cunningham performing the service. Burial, with full military honors, followed at the Maryland Veterans' Cemetery at Cheltenham.

The family suggests that donations in lieu of flowers be made to the Washington Hospital Center.

Stephan Teal

Stephan Teal, age 26, died of cancer on Tuesday, January 19, at Holy Cross Hospital. The disease was discovered in early December and he had received chemotherapy at Fairfax Hospital. He returned to the home of his mother, Erika, when he was discharged from the hospital. Last week he returned to the hospital, this time Holy Cross.

While Teal grew up in his mother's home in Silver Spring, he was a frequent visitor in the Greenbelt home of his father, Fred T. Teal, Jr., participating in activities here. He was also a member of the Paint Branch Unitarian Church.

Teal graduated from the Capital Institute of Technology two years ago and had been working for TRW in Northern Virginia.

In addition to his parents, Teal is survived by his wife, Jennifer of Falls Church; brothers Walter R. and Kevin of Silver Spring; and grandparents Fred T., Sr., and Francis A. Teal of Oxon Hill.

Friends may call at Hines-Rinaldi Funeral Home in Silver Spring on Friday, January 22 from 2 to 4 p.m. and 7 to 9 p.m. Funeral services will be held on Saturday, January 23, at 10 a.m. at St. John the Baptist Catholic Church, 12319 New Hampshire Ave., Silver Spring. Expressions of sympathy may be made to the American Cancer Society.

Ban Proposed on Evictions During Inclement Weather

County Executive Parris Glendening has sent to the District Court a proposed policy for halting evictions during inclement weather. The new policy proposes that no evictions will be carried out in rain or snow, or if there is a 70 percent chance of rain or snow, or if the temperature falls below 32 degrees.

Current state law reserves to the Chief Judge of the District Court the power to stay execution of an eviction. Evictions are ordered by the courts and carried out by the Sheriff's Department. Glendening noted that the Sheriff's Department is eager to accept the new guideline.

While recognizing the importance of tenants meeting their financial obligations and that court-ordered evictions must be carried out in a timely manner, Glendening said that "No one . . . is interested in carrying out evictions that cause unnecessary hardship. . . ."

Capital Improvements

2/2/2 allocation of $2 million each for bricks and mortar, pools, and parkland. Using the current estimates, $3.3 million would go for construction projects, $4 million for the pool projects, and $4.7 million for parkland acquisition and development. These numbers reflect the cost to the city after subtracting the $1.43 million available from grants and reserves.

He said the first decision council must make is whether to seek additional funding authorization and if so, how much. He does not think the city can borrow the full $6 million dollars required to do all the June 29 projects and still maintain its credit rating. He estimated that the city could borrow no more than $4 million, in addition to the $6 million already authorized, and still maintain its rating.

Giese said he had done some projections on the city's debt service payments if a total of $10 million were borrowed. The next fiscal year would present no problem, since the $5 million already received from bond sales has been invested and is earning interest. Two years later, however, a substantial increase in debt service would occur, possibly greater than the increase in tax revenues through growth in the tax base. In addition, if parcels 1 and 2 are purchased, the debt service will increase more rapidly, since the money would be paid out at once rather than as construction proceeds.

He said that debt charges for the $5 million already borrowed are already budgeted and that problems would occur if additional funds are borrowed.

White requested information on the capital projects previously discussed but not included in the priorities list, such as upgrading the Northway ballfields and improving Roosevelt Center, along with any other foreseeable needs.

Councilmember Antoinette M. Bram recalled that the 1987/88 budget provided funds for Roosevelt Center. However, Giese noted that while this had been included in the reserves for capital improvements, the June 29 agreement called for applying these reserves to the bond projects.

In a phone conversation with the News Review, Giese said that for each additional million dollars of debt, revenues equivalent to a three-cent increase in the tax rate would be required.

changes in those covenants. City solicitor Robert Manzi recommended against the motion as being unnecessary because the covenants continue to be binding unless both parties do agree to change.

As an alternative, Bram, seconded by Isaacs, moved that council take no action. White stated that he would vote against the motion. He felt that a more appropriate motion would have the building's square footage reduced to the range of 90,000-106,000 square feet and specify that the traffic volume not exceed development, as proposed. However, Isaacs stated that he would not withdraw his second to Bram's motion, who in turn said she would vote for the motion since she had made it. Isaacs stated that he was in favor of doing nothing because Putens had asked him to request a delay if there was no consensus among council members. White expressed his philosophical willingness to withhold action when it was requested by a member of council.

Weidenfeld did not think a delay was necessary if there were three votes for White's motion. "Is there a motion?" asked Reed. "Is there anyone who would not support Mr. White's motion?" Weidenfeld asked, to which Isaacs said, "Yes." "You're asking for a vote without a motion," protested Bram. Reed asked for more information about "Mr. White's motion that never made it to the floor." However, at this point, council unanimously moved to "take no action this evening."

Video Report

The evening began colorfully with a video annual report for the city's 1987 fiscal year. Narrated by the city's communications coordinator, Renee Bryan, the report was shown simultaneously over cable TV and in council chambers.

In other highlights of the evening, council:

- Approved an ordinance to establish a separate fund to account for capital improvement projects.

- Approved a resolution to establish a service charge for providing a computer floppy disk of the city voter registration list.

- Received a report on the audit report for the 1987 fiscal year.

- Decided to get more information about proposed U.S. Congress bills providing matching funds for child-care projects.

Public Hearing on WSSC Increase Set for Feb. 3

The Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission will hold a budget hearing on February 3, at 8 p.m. in its Hyattsville Headquarters Building, 4017 Hamilton Street.

The proposed expenditures of $590,431,000 represent a decrease of $13.6 million from the current year's approval.

If approved, the WSSC proposal will require a bi-county customer rate increase of 6.6 percent to finance maintenance and operation of water and sewerage system facilities.

The proposal represents a $24.09 annual increase for the commission's average customer in a single family, detached dwelling, with a household of four who now pays $365.01 each year.

Copies of the FY '89 proposal are available by calling the WSSC's Public Affairs Office on 699-4172.

What Are Supernumerary Teeth?

Supernumerary teeth are "extra" teeth, or sometimes just parts of teeth, that form in excess of the normal number of teeth, that form in excess of the normal number expected. During our lifetime we normally have 20 deciduous (baby) teeth followed by 32 permanent teeth. Supernumerary teeth develop when extra tooth buds, the earliest form of a tooth, begin to grow. Although there is no true explanation for this occurrence, there seems to be a relationship between "extra" teeth and a family history of tumor formation. Permanent supernumerary teeth are much more common than deciduous.

The importance of supernumerary teeth lies in their effect on the adjacent "normal" teeth. In the case of deciduous teeth, unless they are very unsightly or 2 or more have developed, nothing is done. The space they occupy is easily utilized and eliminated by the permanent teeth that replace them. In comparison, when extra teeth are found associated with permanent teeth they are usually removed as early as possible. Even unerupted supernumerary teeth must be thoroughly evaluated. They are subject to cyst formation which can affect the roots and development of adjacent teeth.

The most common site for permanent supernumerary teeth is between the 2 upper front teeth (incisors). In this case early detection, either visually or by xray examination, is of great importance to prevent possible rotation or separation of the adjacent teeth.

Question & Answer Session Held by Area Legislators

by Betsy Likowski

Greenbelt citizens got their chance to ask their representatives in Annapolis questions during a meeting on Saturday, January 9 in the Greenbelt Municipal Building. State Senator Leo Green and delegates Charles "Buzz" Ryan, Joan Pitkin and Mary Conroy fielded questions from the dozen citizens present. The meeting will be shown on the city's cable channel, B-10, on Jan. 26, and 27 at 7 and 9 p.m.

The questions covered a broad range of topics. State issues raised were proposed salary raises for state employees, insurance open season for state employees, higher education in Maryland, emissions testing of cars, and legislation requiring trucks to be covered. Topics of local concern were city acquisition of 72 acres of woodland, liability of pizza delivery drivers, fee for services in public libraries, and possible test of a genetically altered organism near Greenbelt. National health care plans to fund college education and job training for welfare mothers were also discussed.

Mr. Love and Dorothy Galvin stated they were opposed to the large raises proposed for upper level state employees. Green, Pitkin and Ryan agreed that it was uncalled for. (Conroy arrived late due to family obligations.)

Ryan explained that this proposal was part of the annual salary review process. Also asked for this year is a four percent raise for state employees. Ryan promised that the committee he chairs, Appropriations, will be asking for justification for every suggested pay raise.

The representatives listened with sympathy to complaints against the open season on health insurance that state employees had last November. A citizen complained that she received needed information very late and it was contradictory and inaccurate. All agreed it was a major problem and unfair. Pitkin said even she had received her information late.

Ryan told her that her problem was system-wide. He had met several times with the Department of Personnel on this matter.

Two questions were asked about higher education. Larry Goldberg asked why University College does not get state funding and thus a class taken at University College is more expensive than the same one taken during the day at the University of Maryland campus. Ryan replied that the governor has included $3 million in the budget for University College. In the past, he said, funding has been blocked because the Senate Budget and Tax Committee has opposed funding.

Al Herling expressed concerns about Maryland universities getting funding and about the College Park campus being the flagship facility of the system. Ryan assured him $20 million in new initiatives is slated and the legislation being drafted states that the College Park campus will be the flagship facility.

Galvin also asked about emissions testing and covered truck legislation. Pitkin explained that the governor wanted to decentralize testing by having it done at gas stations. Green said that some senators are introducing legislation to have testing done every other year and have everybody in the state pay for the cost.

Pitkin said that there are still attempts to pass legislation requiring trucks to cover cargo. She explained that not only is the truck lobby against it, county governments also testify against it.

When asked by this reporter, all the state representatives indicated they will support Greenbelt's efforts to acquire 72 acres of wood land (surplus school property). The parcel, south of Parcel 1, north of Hamilton Place, between Greenbelt Homes, Inc., and the Baltimore-Washington Parkway, is currently held by the county. The land originally purchased for a three school complex still has $458,000 owed in indebtedness. The city is seeking to acquire the property without having to pay this amount.

Ryan said they had sent letters to and have asked for a meeting with the appropriate persons on the state level. He feels it is not a problem at the state level and that it should pass this year.

Also on a subject of local concern, Tony Pisano asked about auto liability insurance for drivers who work for pizza delivery establishments. According to Pisano, the company planning to open in the center of Greenbelt does have umbrella coverage for accidents incurring very serious injury or death, but does not plan any further coverage. The company relies on drivers to provide their own insurance. Green answered that all drivers in Maryland have to be insured to drive, and drivers working for such firms should tell their own insurance company about their use of their vehicles for commercial delivery.

Al Herling expressed concern over the idea of fee for service in the public library system. "I see the current proposal as the entry into the tent by the camel" to turning a public system into one that is quasi-public.

Pitkin said she introduced legislation to open discussion on the issue. "Are we in the business of competing with a video store," she asked.

Conroy said she opposed fees for books. She and Ryan agreed with Pitkin's concerns about videos.

In response to a query about the representatives' stance on the proposed outdoor test of genetically engineered organisms in the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center (BARC), they said they had received information on the proposed test. They said they (and other local officials including Greenbelt city council members) had met with BARC officials and had suggested a public forum on the issue.

Ann Pisano explained that the Gray Panthers want to see a non-binding resolution passed in Annapolis asking the federal government to enact national health care. She quoted figures illustrating the enormous costs of health care in this country and that 37 million people are not covered by health insurance.

Pitkin explained that the former chairperson of the concerned committee was against such a motion. Green called 37 million uninsured a national disgrace. He noted that a person cannot be turned away from a hospital in Maryland.

Carl Bond wondered if a custodial fund to simplify the process for a parent to put aside funds earmarked for a child's college tuition could be part of the legal code. Pitkin said she would be happy to look into it and said the Ways and Means Committee was working on something similar. Ryan agreed this was the case, but predicted it would not pass this year.

Lily Goldberg complained that despite assurances, private industry was not doing a good job in training young mothers on welfare for the work force. Often the jobs they would fill are low paying and they would lose their medical coverage if they got off welfare.

Green said he and others have tried to help in various ways. For example, he is pushing a bill for free tuition for them at Prince Georges Community College.

AIDS IN TEARS

Recently, the National Institutes of Health (NIH) announced that the AIDS virus had been isolated in human tears. This has caused great concern for the close friends and relatives of the AIDS victims and health workers.

Although the AIDS virus should be found in all body fluids it has now been definitely isolated in tears, saliva, blood and semen. Reports indicated that researchers have not shown any transmission by saliva or tears.

The transmission of AIDS is strikingly similar to that of hepatitis B — from person to person, through sexual contact and exposure to blood and its components or products.

Researchers have wondered if mosquitos or other insects could transmit bloodborne HTLV-III virus from human to human. The absence of the disease in heterosexuals and pre-adolescent children argues against insect-borne transmission.

Although proper care and hygienic techniques should be maintained, based on current epidemiologic and microbiologic evidence, health workers and relatives dealing with AIDS victims should not be overly concerned about contacting this viral disease from contact with tears.

Police Blotter

Officer Robert Musterman, while on routine patrol at Roosevelt Center, disrupted an attempt to break into a shop at 2 a.m. on Jan. 10. As the officer approached, a suspect fled through the front door after breaking out the glass. The suspect evaded the officer in the wooded area between the Parkway apartments and Braden Field. Neither Musterman nor a later K-9 search was successful in finding the suspect. Damage to the business was estimated at $200.

A clothing store in Greenway Center was robbed of several thousand dollars worth of merchandise during the early morning hours of Jan. 10. Entry was gained by throwing a rock through the front window.

Three Springhill Lake apartments were entered last week. In each case entry was gained by breaking a window. Two of the incidents occurred in the 5900 block of Cherrywood Terrace. On Jan. 12 assorted household items were reported taken at 2:18 p.m.; the second incident occurred on Jan. 13 at about 6:50 p.m. The third, at about 11:45 p.m. on Jan. 13, involved several thousand dollars worth of small appliances, jewelry and cameras taken from an apartment in the 6000 block of Springhill Drive.

The men were in the stolen car in a parking lot in the 7800 block of Mandan Road. Two 17-year-olds were incarcerated at Boy's Village in Cheltenham. One was also wanted in North Carolina for a parole violation. The third, a resident of Washington, D.C., was released on personal recognizance.

Thefts from and vandalism to autos were reported on Jan. 10 in the 6000 block of Greenbelt Road, and on Jan. 13 in the 6400 block of Ivy Lane.

Feed the Birds Now

During the cold winter months, birds need plenty of food to stay warm. The best way to help the birds is to keep them well-supplied with plenty of good quality birdseed. Foods with high oil content — sunflower seed, suet, and peanut hearts—are best in cold weather.

Use the best birdseed available. Black oil sunflower seed is the seed most eagerly taken by the greatest variety of birds.

Put some seed on the ground. Juncos, sparrows, cardinals, mourning doves and other local species all prefer to feed off the ground. Continue feeding until late April. Warm weather may come in March, but the birds' natural food supply such as insects and vegetation won't increase until much later.

Make a banquet for the birds. Melt 2 cups suet, mix with 2 cups corn meal and 2 cups peanut butter, and cook several minutes. Pour mixture into containers and store in refrigerator or freezer. After mixture is cooled and hardened, hang it in a mesh bag such as an onion bag or a special suet feeder.

CITY NOTES

Both the special details and general crews worked on removing snow from city streets and parking areas. The crews also upgraded multipurpose and snow removal equipment.

The parks crew removed snow from designated city sidewalks and collected refuse from city parks.

The Horticulturist began work on designing and constructing a small greenhouse to grow seedlings for spring planting.

Regular trash collection was limited by snow and ice conditions. Several houses were missed due to the inaccessibility of the trash. The Public Works Department urges all citizens to keep sidewalks and pathways clear of snow and ice in order that regular trash collection may operate smoothly.

There was also limited special trash collection the week of Jan. 10. The special roadside collection crew worked on chipping Christmas trees placed at designated locations throughout the city, they also assisted in the regular refuse collection.

John Crisman drove the Greenbelt Connection three days this week in place of Norman Lockerman who was on vacation. Requests for the Greenbelt Connection are continuously increasing.

The crews cleaned storm water drainage systems through-

CARES

CARES Director Carol Leventhal, representing the Maryland Association of Youth Service Bureaus Executive Board attended a day-long conference at the University of Baltimore School of Law held by the Mental Hygiene Administration. The conference dealt with mental health services to children, adolescents, and their families.

Donald Gillespie recently joined the CARES volunteer counselor group. He is a teaching assistant in the Psychology Department at the University of Maryland where he is a full-time student and candidate for a Ph.D. in Clinical Psychology with a Community Orientation. Don is a fan of jazz and classical guitar.

CARES graduated five students from the Fall GED course. The next GED session will begin January 26 and be held every Tuesday and Thursday between 2 and 4 p.m.

CARES currently has 23 students being tutored. There is a continuing need for more volunteers to tutor students.

The parks crew trimmed trees around the Center. In addition, the crew collected broken tree branches, leaves, and other debris along roadsides. It is taking no more than two working days to service citizens' special refuse requests.
