Greenbelt is Given Its First Look At Proposed Area Master Plan

by Elaine Skolnik and Mavis Fletcher

At a briefing on April 14, staff members of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission (M-NCPPC) gave Greenbelters their first look at the proposed master plan currently being promulgated for the Langley Park, College Park, and Greenbelt areas. Directors Paul Aggarwal and Joe Chang and Frank Derro, chief of the Transportation Division, were the principal speakers. Project Manager Paul Fields also gave an overview of the adjacent Glenn Dale-Seabrook area, where development impacts heavily on traffic on Greenbelt Road.

The preliminary draft of the master plan (almost 300 pages of difficult reading) has been worked on for about one-and-a-half to two years, Aggarwal said. It began with surveys in which the M-NCPPC staff examined how the land is now being used, as well as addressing problems brought up at a public forum in March 1983. Later some 19 persons served as a Citizens Advisory Committee, holding about 30 sessions to provide input into the plans. Greenbelt members of the CAC were Ray McCawley, J. Davis, Antoinette Bram and Virginia Moryadas. A public hearing on the plan will be held June 7 at Eleanor Roosevelt High School.

The new master plan, which includes Langley Park, updates the 1970 Adopted Plan for College Park-Greenbelt and Vicinity. It contains a statement of planning policies, goals and objectives, and addresses land use, transportation facilities and other aspects of planning through the year 2010. Aggarwal noted that the plan would probably be "rehashed" in six to eight years.

The Greenbelt planning area includes some acreage not within the city limits: Berwyn Heights (Kenilworth Ave. to the railroad tracks), Westchester Park property, the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center south of Powder Mill Road, and the area east of the city bounded by Nashville, Greenbelt, and Good Luck Roads. The inclusion of these areas makes it difficult to apply directly to the city demographic and economic data given in the plan.

Highlights

At the briefing, Aggarwal went over the projected figures for growth of population and employment in this and adjacent areas. As of January 1, 1988, the population in the Greenbelt-area portion of the plan (Planning Area 67) is about 30,472 (18,000 within the city limits). By 2010 the population projection is 31,524. Employment in the Greenbelt area is projected to almost double from the current 17,200 to about 32,000 in 2010. This increase, however, is far exceeded by growth projected for the planning areas north of the city near Laurel, where growth is expected to more than triple as land is rezoned.

This anticipated growth will impact on Greenbelt because the planned extension of Kenilworth Ave. to join with the Intercounty Connector (a major east-west highway connecting Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties) will make that road the major access route to accommodate growth to the north. In response to questions at the briefing by Councilmember Edward Putens, Derro confirmed that Kenilworth is designed as the through road carrying traffic from the Intercounty Connector. The ICC, Derro said, will come from Montgomery County and tie into I-95, Rt. 197, then proceed to Rt. 301.

Putens pointed out that apparently there will be no interchanges with Rt. 1 or Rhode Island Ave. Derro agreed. He said that Rt. 1 cannot carry any more traffic. He also called the Baltimore-Washington Parkway "an old dying horse." It will carry what it can carry but people will have to find another route, he said. He clearly indicated that Kenilworth will fill that role.

Derro observed that originally Greenbelt Road was to go under Kenilworth Ave. "(That's) what we had on our plan," he said. He explained that the State did it the other way, however, because of the grade and "hierarchy" of roads. "The through movement," he noted "was given to the road that was going to connect to the ICC system, as opposed to the other way around."

Derro said that, except for dropping I-95 south of the Beltway and adding the Greenbelt Metrorail line, the proposed road system and improvements are "pretty much the same that has been on the plan since 1964." Growth around Greenbelt, he observed, is moving by "leaps and bounds," with the total projected "buildout only a portion of what could happen in the I-95 corridor."

Rezoning Old Greenbelt

The planners are clearly uncomfortable with the Residential See MASTER PLAN, page 6

City Budget Projected at $8 Million

by Diane Oberg

Expenditures would total approximately eight million dollars under the budget proposed by City Manager James K. Giese. This represents an increase of 8.4 percent over last year's budget, and 6.9 percent over last year's estimated expenditures.

No tax increase is required to fund these increased expenditures due to growth in the city's tax base. However, Giese proposes an increase of five cents, to $1.22 per $100 of assessed valuation, to generate funds for necessary capital improvements projects that cannot be funded by the bond issue. The tax base has grown due to both increased assessments and new construction.

Other proposed changes in the budget include an 8.8% increase in refuse collection fees, and the hiring of two additional drivers for the refuse trucks and five additional public works employees.

City employees would be given a four percent cost of living increase under the proposed budget. In addition, some city employees including all sworn police officers would be reclassified to a higher pay grade. The request by the police chief for two additional officers was not included in the budget draft.

The budget provides for acquiring additional park land and the development and implementation of a master plan for Schrom Hills Park. The Capital Projects Fund would be used to finance construction of a small addition to the Youth Center housing shower and locker facilities for women.

Budget Issues

Giese laid out several issues that council must decide in reviewing the budget relating to the tax rate, financing of capital improvements projects, employee benefits and the city's role in the arts.

The first question Giese posed for council is what to do about the property tax rate. The draft budget calls for a five cent increase on the tax rate. Staff projections indicate that an increase will be required next year in order to fund the operation of the new police station and the increased debt service costs. The staff recommends implementing the increase this year in order to generate additional funds for capital improvements projects.

However, Giese noted that an argument can also be made for lowering the tax rate. The state estimates that the city See BUDGET, page 9

Drug Awareness Program Explains Problem to Parents

by Debbie Barracata

A drug awareness program co-sponsored by the Greenbelt Police and Recreation Departments in the Youth Center attracted few people.

According to Sandee Olek, Prince Georges County director of addiction and prevention programs, the poor attendance may reflect the hesitation of parents to become involved in substance abuse prevention programs.

"People tend to think that they do not have to deal with drug abuse if it is not already a problem in their family," Olek explained.

However, the object of the programs is prevention, not dealing with an existing problem, she emphasized. The programs work by teaching parents why drugs are a problem, what are the signs of use, and how to help children find constructive answers to their problems.

PFC Pat McAndrew cited three possible reasons for the increasing use of drugs among younger and younger children: parents, schools and slipping values in the country. He stressed, however, that it is impossible to point the finger in any one direction.

Olek agreed with McAndrew but went on to say that most substance abusers are looking for a fast answer to a problem. She also informed the audience that the average time elapsing between the onset of drug use and parents' finding out about it is two years, sufficient time for a problem to escalate. Parents trained to recognize the signs of use are usually able to intercept a problem in the early stages of its development, Olek encouraged.

Tell-Tale Signals

Any dramatic change in a child, such as sudden truancy, may indicate a problem, she said. She also advised parents in the audience to tell the principal at their child's school that the parents want to be told of any absence their child might have. "It won't make you popular with your kids, though," Olek warned.

The beginning of middle school and high school are two main entry points into drug use, Olek explained. Because these are especially vulnerable times for children, parents should be particularly attentive to any changes in their children around this time, she said.

A new group of friends that parents have never met before may be a potential hazard, Olek cautioned. "Meet the kids, get in touch with their parents and make sure they are being supervised when they are in another family's home," she advised.

Keeping children busy at activities they like and are good at, whether it is an after-school club or an area youth group, is a key factor in drug abuse prevention, Olek said. Also a factor is making sure there is a direct result between what children do and the consequences. Parents who constantly bail their children out of trouble, a phenomenon called enabling, only make matters worse in the long run. Children need to be made responsible for their actions, Olek went on. Besides, she said, children often want their parents' intervention.

The parents in the audience generally agreed that although their children do not have problems with drugs now, they want to help them stay away from drugs. PFC Carolyn McLean showed the children a video entitled "The Power of No." The video, which was derived from a play produced by a group of George Mason University students uses cartoon characters to teach children how and why to say no to drugs.

McAndrew explained that the drug problem in Greenbelt is part of a wider problem that affects the entire Washington metropolitan area. Greenbelt police traditionally targeted elementary school age children with drug prevention tactics, including how and why to say no to drugs, he elaborated.

This program, he continued, was designed to involve more adults in the problem. The Crime Prevention Committee is currently gathering information about the drug problem in Greenbelt and will present recommendations to the city council on a direction to take in reference to the problem, he concluded.

PFC David Buerger and Dee Zugby of the Crime Prevention Committee also participated in the program.

Polish Translator Needed For Article About City

The city is looking for someone who can translate a recent article from Rada Narodowa, a Polish magazine on local government. On a recent trip with the Foreign Press Center, reporter Zygmunt Broniarek wrote the article about his visit to Greenbelt. The article is entitled "Ab Urbe Condita", which is Latin for "From the Founding of the City". The article itself is in Polish. Anyone interested in assisting the city with this can call Renee Bryan at the city offices at 474-8000.

Corrections

The beaver story by Betsy Likowski in last week's issue contained a typographical error. It should have read: The beavers prefer sweet gum trees. The public works department has put wire mesh around sweet gum trees and trees in areas that already have few trees, such as near the picnic tables.

The makeup rabies clinic will be held at Greenbelt Middle School on Wed., May 25 from 6-8 p.m. Call Department of Health, 464-4910, for further information.

Goddard Visitor's Center To Feature Space Films

The Goddard Visitor's Center will feature two films this weekend May 7 and 8 that commemorate historic May launches. The films begin at 1 p.m. "The Flight of Faith 7" is the story of the last flight in the one-man Project Mercury series. The 28 minute film follows Astronaut Gordon Cooper from preflight training through the launching, Earth-orbital flight and recovery. The Faith 7 mission flew in 1963.

"Apollo-10: Green Light for a Lunar Landing,"— this 29 minute film features highlights of the second lunar orbital mission in 1969 by Astronauts Thomas Stafford, Eugene Cernan and John Young, including docking and descent of the lunar module to within 16 kilometers (10 miles) of the lunar surface. This mission, which was a dress rehearsal for the first lunar landing, provides good views of the Moon and the Earth.

The center is open to the public five days a week, Wednesday through Sunday, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. There is no admission charge, and parking is free. The Center can be reached from Soil Conservation Rd. just north of Greenbelt Road.

"TEN LITTLE INDIANS" FAILS TO ADD UP

by Sandra Barnes

The opening weekend performance of Agatha Christie's "Ten Little Indians" proved disappointing. The cast seemed to sleepwalk through their performances, turning what should be a fast-paced thriller into a sluggish evening. The play runs through May 21 at the Greenbelt Arts Center and it is hoped that time and experience will assist the actors in picking up the pace and thrusting some spontaneity into their lines.

The play itself centers around a group of 10 people who are lured to a secluded country home on an island. Once there, they are confronted with a missing hostess and a series of murders among their own group—all tied to the "Ten Little Indians" nursery rhyme and the ten Indian statuettes on the mantelpiece. (A distracting note was that there never were ten Indian statuettes on the mantelpiece. People in the audience kept counting and nudging their companion, saying "How many do you count?")

As in most Agatha Christie mysteries, everyone is a suspect and the clues are appropriately obscure. By far the best performance is given by Bill Fedorshik who plays the blustery William Blore, an ex-policeman whose costume of grass green pants, matching green shirt and yellow jacket considerably brighten the stage. He takes command of the scene in which he appears and propels the action forward with the strength of his voice and character.

David Wilson's set design lends credibility to the mansion scene, while the sound of waves further creates the illusion of being on an island. As the actors become more comfortable with their parts, they should be able to liven the action in true Agatha Christie fashion.

Radon Conference to Be Held at DuVal May 12

A conference on radon, sponsored by Maryland State delegate Joan B. Pitkin (D-23rd District) will be held in the Multipurpose Room at DuVal Senior High School, (Greenbelt and Good Luck Roads) Thursday, May 12, from 7-10 p.m.

Radon is a naturally occurring odorless, colorless, tasteless gas caused by the decay of uranium in the soil. Radon is found both outdoors and indoors, but it only becomes harmful when concentrated inside a home. Because a radon problem can best be detected through professional testing, it is important to get reliable information and help.

This conference is open to the public. People are encouraged to attend to learn more about the presence of radon and the health hazards it presents.

There will be a panel discussion moderated by Pitkin. Members of the panel will include Richard Brisson, Maryland Department of the Environment, discussing how Maryland is implementing the EPA's programs; Dr. Stephen Fritz, University of Maryland School of Medicine, speaking on the health hazards that radon presents; Dr. Charles Osterberg, ENRAD, INC., explaining the practical use of radon detection instruments; Stephen Page, Department of Radon Action Programs, EPA, discussing remediation and what the Federal government is doing to implement the EPA's program's; Sydney Machat, The Maryland Association of Realtors, discussing the effects of radon on real estate; and Pitkin, sponsor of Radon Legislation in the Maryland General Assembly.

Exhibits of testing equipment and remediation procedures will be provided by area radon detection firms. Testing kits will be available for purchase.

It encourages consumers to read and understand all clauses in that contract before signing it, and recommends that they not sign away their legal rights in the process.

Toy Exhibit at Museum Continues; Dinner Planned

by Sandra Barnes

The Greenbelt Museum at 10-B Crescent Road has extended the display of its toy exhibit. The popularity of the exhibit has brought in a number of special groups including Washington Women in Planning, Towson State Urban Planning class, a Brownie troupe and the staff of the Greenbelt Library.

In addition, new pieces are frequently added to the exhibit. One of the most recent is an authentic Shirley Temple doll, the gift of Ruth Kennedy of Fayette Place. Her husband Burford contributed a "Big Little Book" popular in the late 1930s. The Museum is open every Sunday, noon to 4 p.m., and by appointment at other times.

The Friends of the Greenbelt Museum is currently planning its gala 1988 fundraiser for Wednesday, May 25, 6:30-10:30 p.m. The event will bring the popular labor troubadour Joe Glazer back to Greenbelt for a repeat performance of the songs he sang at last year's fundraiser; in addition there will be a number of new ones. Rounding out the evening will be a full course spaghetti dinner and 1930s and 1940s dance music by disc jockey Dave Southerland. The event will take place at the Greenbelt American Legion. For ticket information, contact the Museum at 474-1936 or Mary Linstrom at 474-7951. Additional information is being mailed to Museum members and will appear in next week's News Review ad.

Our Neighbors

by Dorrie Bates 345-5961

Friends and neighbors of Abraham and Gladys Chasnoff, formerly of 45 Court Ridge Road, will be saddened to learn of the death of Abe Chasnoff on April 6 in Tamarac, Florida.

From Holy Cross Hospital we hear that Harel Jonathan Hunt arrived on April 17, weighing 6 lbs. 6 ozs. Jon, as he will be known, has two brothers, Jared and David, and a sister, Sharon. Proud parents of all are David and Louis Ann Hunt of 2 Court Gardenway.

Former 'Neighbors' correspondent Martha Kaufman is on the road to recovery after fracturing her ankle a few weeks back. She says she's been able to get around some since she has a walking cast but is looking forward to its imminent removal. (Never one to sit idle, she's been helping make phone calls for various News Review projects while she mends.)

Navy Seaman Recruit Edward M. Goodwin has completed his training at the Recruit Training Center in Orlando, Florida. A 1984 graduate of DuVal High School, David joined the Navy in February. He is the son of Hazel M. Goodwin of Breeze-wood Court.

Our deepest sympathy to Pat Hand of Greenbelt on the death of her mother, Grace C. McHale.

MASTER PLAN Gets First Look in Greenbelt

 Planned Community (RPC) zoning which now applies to most of the city's core. Chang and Aggarwal both attempted (at length) to explain why this designation is unsuitable and must be changed. Chang recalled that the RPC zoning was in place when the city was owned by the federal government.

He said a mistake was made when the city was sold to the housing co-op in 1953, in that the zoning should have been changed at that time and it was not. (When federal land is sold it is placed in the Open Space category and later can be rezoned.) Thus the city is still in the RPC category with no base zoning. As a result, there have been 22 "piecemeal zoning map amendments" to the original I-PC—like "a piece of pie with holes," Aggarwal said.

Chang said four of the other six areas originally zoned I-PC have been eliminated. Only Greenbelt and Marlton (near Upper Marlboro) remain. If this master plan is approved, only Marlton will retain its RPC zoning. Chang said that Marlton will be left because that area has a detailed plan and has had only two minor map amendments in Greenbelt, however, there is no such plan.

Ron Colton, Manager of Greenbelt Homes, Inc. asked whether rezoning GHI homes and land to Residential Townhouse (R1) would not mean that these homes would be a non-conforming use in that classification. Aggarwal agreed, but he maintained that they are a non-conforming use now. Councilmember Tom White took instant exception to this statement. He said, "The rest of the world is non-conforming. Original Greenbelt is conforming."

In a later conversation with the News Review, Colton said that being declared a non-conforming use might have considerable consequences for GHI and its members in terms of what changes and additions could be made to the homes and to the land uses.

Parcel 1

Aggarwal said that Residential-Suburban (RS) zoning is being proposed for the undeveloped tract long known as Parcel 1 (and renamed Parcel 10 in the proposed master plan). (Readers should be prepared for the fact that parcel numbers have been changed and that the land for which zoning changes are being recommended also have 'Change numbers' attached to them. No one ever said it was going to be easy.)

Aggarwal described RS as a comprehensive design zone designation which essentially provides for single-family homes at a density rate of 2.7 to 3.5 units per acre. (RS zoning also allows 3000 square feet of commercial convenience store use.) RS zoning is also being recommended for Parcel 2 including the former school board property. Aggarwal said he assumes that the latter property will be transferred from the county to the city and actually be used for open space and recreation. Nevertheless, RS zoning is proposed in case the city should not wish to dedicate it for recreational purposes.

Greenbelt East

One of the goals of the plan, as set forth in the Highlights of the introduction is that the plan "emphasizes the importance of the preservation, enhancement and protection of established residential areas from encroachment by incompatible uses." In pursuit of that goal, Aggarwal said that the plan does not recommend increased density in any area. In some areas, density will decrease.

Aggarwal said that the plan maintains the principle that the development down Hanover Parkway should be less dense as it moves toward Good Luck Road. The proposed plan recommends R80 single-family detached zoning for Magnolia Gardens (owned by Mark Vogel). A 16.08 acre tract owned by Michael T. Rose Associates is not listed in the change list. Aggarwal later explained that this tract probably will be kept for future comprehensive design zoning (probably Residential Suburban).

In the immediate vicinity of the Greenbelt Metro station, Aggarwal indicated that the plan recommends Mixed Transportation Zone (MXT) for the area surrounding which is not to be occupied by Metro and its parking lots. Most of this area is now zoned Industrial (I-2). Aggarwal explained that the MXT zoning would allow no higher density than I-2 but would permit housing as well as commercial development. He emphasized that such development would promote two-way traffic (with residents leaving in the morning and entering in the afternoon), the direction opposite to Metro commuter traffic. Presumably many of the residents would walk to Metro from their apartments. Aggarwal said the Metro Station area "could take a maximum of about two and a half million square feet" of MXT development.

Old Greenbelt as a Shortcut
 Fears that Metro will bring greatly increased traffic to the residential streets of the central city were fueled by plans to re-locate the light at the intersection of Crescent Rd. and Kenilworth Ave. to the Ivy Lane intersection. This would require that Crescent Rd. be realigned to intersect with Kenilworth Ave. at the same point. This realignment has been on the books for some time; however, both this change and the proposed realignment of Ridge Rd. to connect with the extension of Cherrywood Lane over the Beltway at Kenilworth Ave. have raised questions about increased traffic through the city.

Questions directed to Derro focused on the possibility that large numbers of drivers aiming for Metro will use Crescent and Ridge as shortcuts to and from the B-W Parkway and Greenbelt Rd. Derro downplayed the possibility, saying that drivers would encounter many stop signs on the way. He did say, however, "if there is a road, people are going to drive on it."

Earlier Derro had said that the realignment of Crescent and Ridge to connect with Ivy Lane, and Cherrywood Lane respectively, were options for the city of Greenbelt. "You can tell us how you want your city to have access to Metro and Kenilworth Avenue. They are not by any stretch of imagination things that we are recommending which must be there and the city is stuck with," he said.

Development East of City

An unnerving part of the briefing was Fields' presentation of the development outlook in the Glenn Dale-Seabrook-Lanham area. In a written summary of development activity in the area east of Greenbelt, he listed 37 projects — commercial, office, industrial and residential uses — in various stages of planning, development and construction. Many would impact severely on the Greenbelt Road corridor and the Baltimore-Washington Parkway. The Glenn Dale-Seabrook-Lanham Planning area is bounded on the north by Greenbelt Road and Good Luck Road, on the east by Springfield and Hillmeade Roads, Rt. 450 and Enterprise Road, on the south by Rt. 50 and on the west by the Capital Beltway, Good Luck Road and Cipriano Road.

Proposed Public Works Budget Calls For New Positions, Incentive Program

by David Jackson

City Manager James K. Giese proposed hiring two additional refuse collectors and instituting an incentive program to encourage city refuse workers to increase the volume of newspapers collected for recycling in his Public Works Department budget presented to the city council during their April 25 work session.

Both proposals were offered as solutions to complaints about the city's waste collection service. To pay for the extra drivers' salaries, Giese also proposed an 8.8% increase in refuse collection rates.

Overall, Giese's budget includes $1,461,700 for public works, a 3.4% increase from last year's budget. It includes what Giese described as a moderate increase in personnel, the addition of two refuse worker positions plus the hiring of an extra parks department crewman, an extra maintenance worker for the new Police Department Building, and an office assistant whose times will be split between the public works department and the Greenbelt Connection.

This was the first section of the new budget to be presented this year. During the coming weeks, the council will hold work sessions to examine each section of the budget, which details the city's planned revenue collections and expenditures for the fiscal year, July 1, 1988 to June 30, 1989. A public hearing on the budget is scheduled for May 26, and the council will adopt their final version in early June.

According to Mayor Gil Weidenfeld, the need for extra refuse workers was brought to the council's attention several months ago by a former refuse employee. Currently, the refuse crews routinely leave their trucks unattended while collecting trash. Because of concerns that this practice presents a safety hazard and is probably in violation of state law, the city is planning to hire two additional workers, which will enable the drivers of the trucks to remain in the vehicles at all times during collection.

According to Giese and Director of Public Works George

Smith, who also attended the meeting, it is common practice in the industry to leave trucks unattended, but they added that there is definitely a safety risk and that it is a violation of state law.

Smith said the trucks are equipped with a safety brake-locking device, but these devices aren't foolproof. "If you leave the truck running, and in my opinion that is necessary, it is unsafe. The braking mechanism isn't 100% failsafe," Smith said. Mayor Weidenfeld said that unless the council is told that the additional drivers aren't needed, they will probably be approved in the final budget.

"We don't want to operate in an unsafe manner or in violation of state law," Weidenfeld said.

The incentive program for newspaper collection was proposed in response to complaints from several residents that their papers weren't being consistently picked up, Giese said. One citizen, who attended the meeting told the council that her papers are never collected unless she leaves them by the street curb.

According to the printed budget, money received from the sale of collected newspapers, approximately $6,000 annually, would be paid back to the crew members in proportion to the amount of papers collected by each crew. In order to receive their share of the money each week, however, a crew member would have to work that entire week without unexcused absences.

Giese said that absenteeism is also a problem in the waste collection department, and that hopefully the incentive program will decrease absenteeism as well as encouraging workers to do a thorough job of collecting papers.

The council also discussed the problem of residents not properly separating their newspapers from other trash, and not properly binding the newspapers. Mayor Weidenfeld proposed that collectors be given notices to leave at noncomplying households that would warn that trash will not be picked up if the situation is not corrected.

Giese also discussed the need to replace the city's bulldozer, a 1955 Allis Chalmers. The current bulldozer was recently repaired at a cost of $4,500 in parts, plus an undetermined amount of department labor. Giese didn't request a new bulldozer in this year's budget, but asked the council to plan for it in the near future. He estimates the cost of a new replacement bulldozer at $40,000.

Smith also discussed the need to take each of the city's ball-fields out of service for a full year, one at a time, to build up and resod them as needed. He said the fields are currently used so extensively that any repair work his crews attempt is destroyed before the grass fully takes root.

The council asked Smith to prepare cost estimates for repairing the fields. Several members also noted that any such plan would have to be discussed and closely coordinated with the groups that use the fields.

ANSWER: These printed forms are only a starting point. There are dozens of varieties of deeds, leases, mortgage forms. Which ones are to be chosen to best protect yourself is a good question for openers. Then, it's what goes into the blanks, what is crossed out, and what is added that gives you that value, security and protection that you pay the experts for. Believe me, some of the largest financial losses and legal entanglements have resulted from printed forms being incorrectly used.

BUDGET for City is Projected at $8 Million

(Continued from page one) could decrease the tax rate by six cents and still obtain the same tax revenues as received this year. The draft notes that the State Department of Assessments and Taxation reports that the assessed value of property in the city will increase 5.4 percent.

The city estimates that with the increased assessments and the proposed tax increase, resident's tax bills will increase approximately 10 percent. This will be partially offset by a two cent increase in Greenbelt's tax differential, which reduces the county tax owed by residents. Giese also noted that last year council reduced the tax rate by two cents.

Currently it appears that the full $6 million bond authorization can be financed at a cost equivalent to nine cents on the tax rate. In addition, the city staff believes that the city could borrow an additional $3 million without jeopardizing the city's bond rating. The maximum tax impact of a total bond issue of $9 million is estimated to be 19 cents.

The current contribution of five cents on the tax rate to the Reserve for Building Construction would be continued under the budget proposal. However, if an additional bond issue were authorized, Giese suggests that the contributions to that reserve could be discontinued, reducing the tax impact to fourteen cents.

Capital Projects

Council must also decide what to do about needed capital improvements not funded in council's June 1987 list of bond issue priorities. Included are renovation of the North End Center, the bathhouse at the outdoor pool and Roosevelt Center, construction of an athletic complex at the Northway Fields, development of the Perimeter Trail Park and improvements to "Buddy" Attick Park. Renovation of those parts of the North End Center to be used for senior daycare and a senior citizen center is already planned using a combination of city funds and grant moneys. Grants will also fund the renovation of Centerway at the Roosevelt Center.

Other Issues

Giese addressed two further questions to the council: should the city maintain the Greenbelt (Utopia) Theater as a performing arts center and should the city improve its employee benefits package?

The budget proposes no additional funding for the arts over past budgets. However the budget does call for the development of a "cafeteria benefits plan" which would not increase the total benefits cost to the city. Giese noted that council has received a request from the Greenbelt Lodge of the Fraternal Order of Police for "an extensive and costly package of additional benefits."

Budget Details

Giese estimates that after adjusting for accounting changes the proposed budget represents a 9.2 percent increase in expenditures over the previous fiscal year. The proposed tax increase would increase city revenues by 2.7 percent. Increases in nontax city revenues, such as interest on the revenues from the bond sale, and from growth in the city's tax base will add another 11.2 percent for a total 13.9 percent increase.

The budget again includes a five year budget projection. This projection indicates that if the tax rate is increased five cents as proposed, revenues will keep pace with project expenditures over the next five years, assuming the city's tax base grows as anticipated.

Capital Improvements Fund

This fund, accounting for the expenditures of the proceeds of the $6 million bond issues authorized in May 1985, contains a $144,000 shortfall in revenues needed to complete the projects included in the June 1987 list of capital improvements priorities.

Giese says that the biggest uncertainty in this budget area is the cost of acquiring Parcels 1 and 2, budgeted at $1.5 million. Cost estimates have ranged from $1.32 million to $4.3 million. If the cost exceeds the allocation, Giese says the council's options are to delete the indoor pool, acquire only part of the land or seek additional bond issue authorization from the voters.

The cost to the city of acquiring the surplus school site between Parcels 1 and 2 has still not been determined. The draft budget allocates $457,800 for acquisition of this land but the city is seeking a reduction of the debt service costs that must be repaid the state. The allocated amount represents total outstanding debt from the time when the sites were first declared surplus. The outstanding debt as of July 1, 1988 is $90,554.

Public Safety

Expenditures for public safety are proposed to increase 14.9 percent over the 1987/88 estimated expenditures to $2.88 million.

Salaries and wages are proposed to increase 14.4 percent reflecting the proposed upgrading of all officers. The increase is needed, according to the budget comments, to keep salaries competitive with other police departments in the metropolitan area.

Operating expenses will increase 13.2 percent under the proposal, with a further 13.4 percent increase in 1989/90. The costs reflect, in part, the costs of operating the new police facility scheduled to open in the spring of 1989.

Public Works

Expenditures for public works would increase 0.9 percent under the proposed budget to a total of $1.5 million. An additional office assistant is proposed to help with administration and the Greenbelt Connection. Other personnel increases include an additional parks crewman, two additional seasonal employees and a crewman for the new police facility.

A one-year trial incentive program for newspaper collection is also proposed to reduce absenteeism on the refuse crews and to increase the volume of newspapers collected for recycling. Under this proposal, the money received from selling the newspapers would be paid back to the refuse crewmembers. In order to collect their share, crewmembers would be required to have worked the entire week without unexcused absences. This program is estimated to cost $6,000, although Giese notes that the cost may be somewhat offset by reduced absenteeism.

Parks and Recreation

An 11 percent increase, to $1.4 million, is proposed in the Parks and Recreation budget. An additional 4.6 percent increase, to $2.0 million is proposed by the 1992/93 budget. For budget purposes, the indoor pool is assumed to open during the 1990/91 fiscal year. These increases will be partially offset by increases in pool fee revenues. For the upcoming fiscal year pool fees are estimated at $70,500 up 24 percent from last year. They are expected to increase to $300,000 by 1991/92 with no further increase expected through the 1993 fiscal year.

Parks Department objectives include the development and implementation of a master plan for Schrom Hills Park, improvements to the path at Attick Park, upgrading the parking areas at the Northway Fields and improvements to Greenbelt Lake necessary to improve water quality and repair the dam and spillway.

Other Budgets

The General Government fund which covers the costs of administering the city including the council, city manager, city treasurer and related staffs, is proposed to increase 4.9 percent to $1.00 million. A previously approved position of part-time office assistant is being dropped, but funds are allocated for part-time help with minutes of work sessions and advisory boards. In addition, the Department of Finance and Administrative Services will drop an approved position of Administrative Assistant. Instead, the Assistant Public Works Director, J. Paul Williams, will assume the responsibilities of Assistant Purchasing Director, while spending approximately 20 percent of his working time assisting the Public Works Director.

Debt service will increase 36.9 percent this year to $458,000 or 5.7 percent of expenditures. As the capital improvements projects progress, debt service will increase further, rising an additional 82.4 percent to $836,000 by the 92/93 budget.

Expenditures for social services will increase 12.3 percent to $87,000 under the proposed budget.
