Upcoming City Election Spurs Voter Registration Drive in Greenbelt East

by Pat Scully

Plans for conducting a voter registration drive were the chief action item on the agenda of the September 7 meeting of the Greenbelt East Advisory Committee (GEAC). GEAC hopes to encourage more Greenbelt East-ers to register to vote in Greenbelt before the upcoming City Council election.

Roy Dahl presented a draft of the flyer designed by the voter registration subcommittee, with information on how, when and where to register, as well as reasons why. The flyer was approved for distribution by GEAC, which also voted to spend $125 to have it printed for distribution throughout the communities in Greenbelt East.

A current listing of registered voters in each GEAC community was distributed, to be cross-referenced with the list of residents. Only those not currently registered will receive the flyer. Follow-up canvassing, by telephone or door-to-door visiting, is planned.

In anticipation of the election, President Bob Zugby was requested to arrange for a candidates' night, to be held at Greenbriar between the close of nominations and the November 7 election.

The Sun Also Rises

GEAC discussed the brief appearance of Sunrise property developer Ronald Cohen at the August 22 council worksession and considered what steps, if any, GEAC could take to prevent high-density residential development of the property.

The site is currently zoned for the density of development Cohen is proposing, although a site plan has yet to be approved. Rezoning of the site to permit commercial development would require a traffic impact study. No rezoning would be approved by the County if the expected level of service were to be worse than the level projected for all currently approved developments and planned road improvements.

City council member Ed Putens shared with GEAC a memorandum from Celia Wilson, City Planning & Development Coordinator, presenting her analysis of traffic impact of Sunrise Village. Wilson concluded that, "with planned road improvements, the adjacent road network can absorb traffic by an apartment complex but not by an office development at the density studied." The Hanover Parkway Greenbelt Road intersection could absorb the traffic from commercial development at a maximum density of 35,000 square feet, according to Wilson's analysis.

Zugby decried not only the traffic impacts but the concomitant demand for city services of the 478 apartment units currently planned. "We are looking at," he said, "intolerably high density residential development or intolerably high density commercial development from a developer who doesn't need or seek our approval."

Putens suggested that a third alternative might be possible, the acquisition of the property for parkland. For the city to attempt condemnation and purchase would require passage of a bond issue with an accompanying rise in the tax rate, clearly not a feasible alternative. Putens help out the hope, however, that a significant infusion of federal funds might be possible and that the National Park Service could be interested in adding the property to its Greenbelt holdings.

The sense of the meeting was that GEAC would continue to monitor the Sunrise situation as site plans are presented to the Advisory Planning Board and City Council for approval and as any other developments arise throughout the city and county approval processes.

Other Issues

In addressing the recurring Schrom Hills Park Lake wetlands theme, Zugby reported that he had drafted a letter asking for an update on the status of the wetlands permit. He intended to mail it within the week to the Corps of Engineers, the city and county, state and federal representatives.

Dahl presented his idea for an alternate alignment of the new exit ramp from the Baltimore-Washington Parkway onto Greenbelt Road. The planned realignment will move the ramp north and east, affecting Greenbriar and creating what will be a third set of traffic lights on Greenbelt Road from Hanover Parkway to the Greenway Center entrance. Would it be possible, Dahl wondered, to create a separate exit for northbound Parkway traffic onto eastbound Greenbelt Road? He envisioned either flying a ramp to Greenbelt Road over the westbound 95 exit to the northbound

FIVE INCUMBENTS, FOUR OTHERS COMPETING FOR COUNCIL

Completing the News Review's publication of the biographies of candidates for the Greenbelt City Council election on November 7, the biography of Rodney Roberts is printed below. He joins challengers Ruth Kastner, Konrad Herling, and Roy Dahl in vying with all five incumbent councilmembers for a seat on the city's policy-making body.

Also running are Mayor Gil Weidenfeld, Mayor Pro Tem Joseph Isaacs, and council members Antoinette (Toni) Bram, Edward Putens and Thomas X. White.

Roberts Biography

Rodney Roberts, 31, a lifelong resident of Greenbelt, grew up at 2-G Research Road. He went to school in Greenbelt, attending North End Elementary School and Parkdale High School, and was active in city sports.

Roberts currently lives at 38-M Ridge Road and works for Boyd Enterprises, a minority-owned business based in Greenbelt. He is a mechanic, welder and shop foreman. Also a skilled carpenter, he has helped his friends remodel their houses and is proud of the fact that he lives in a historic community. Roberts is dedicated to the preservation of the original town plan. An active environmentalist and outdoorsman, Roberts is also a woodland and wildlife photographer whose work has been displayed locally. As co-chair of the Committee to Save the Green Belt, he has organized weekly tours of the "green belt" for almost two years. In addition, he has designed and constructed two prize-winning booths in the city's Labor Day Festival. Proceeds from the sale of his collection of photographs of the Greenbelt woods were donated to the committee.

He is also interested in such issues as senior citizens' needs and recreation, as well as concerned with the problems of traffic congestion, crime, pollution, and taxes.

Green - Handled Spades to Turn Earth For Green Line Station

by Elaine Skolnik

The groundbreaking ceremony for Metrorail's Green Line terminus in Greenbelt is expected to attract federal, state and county officials as well as the Greenbelt community on Saturday, October 7 at 10 a.m. Three dozen green-handled shovels will be wielded by guests to scoop up the first spadefuls of earth that will mark the start of the long-awaited Greenbelt station. The event will take place on the station site located south of the Beltway and directly west of Cherrywood Lane and the Springhill Lake Apartments.

The facility will include the station, a parking area for 3,000 cars and ramps for the Beltway. Cherrywood Lane is now being widened and will extend northward over the Beltway to connect with the Capital Office Park complex and Ivy Lane.

Metro's Transit Car Service and Inspection Yard will be situated on 70 acres of the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center (BARC). The tract is directly north of the Beltway and west of the CSX railroad right-of-way.

Although metrorail's construction in Prince Georges County has been held up over the years by funding problems, lawsuits, disputes over road and metro routes and environmental questions, all have apparently been resolved except two. One involves a construction permit for the ser-

Political Pollution

To the Editor:

Each day, after work, as we drive into our fair city in the late afternoon, we enjoy seeing the soft, gentle-colored flower beds on Southway. Our heart-felt gratitude is extended to our city's horticulture specialist, Bill Pheasant. We've oft-noticed him tending, maintaining and arranging this orgiastic array of impatiens, black-eyed susans, canna lilies and pampas grass.

But, truth be told, things have changed. Now as we arrive, we are visually accosted by the newest form of pollution: campaign signs of city council candidates. These are the persons upon whom we purportedly rely to safeguard our city from blights, visual or otherwise. How can we possibly have confidence in them to protect our interests if they are unable to control their penchant for premature politicking—and the pollution it produces?

We urge the board of city election members to restrict the size of these signs and enforce a limit of 40 days, pre-election, for their display. Perhaps the newly elected city council could include this item in their policy statement of election procedures.

We need not sit by with bovine docility, co-opted by those whose political existence depends upon us, the citizens of Greenbelt.

Promises Forgotten?

To the Editor

As the 1989 City election approaches, it is a good time to review what the candidates for City Council in 1987 said was important and what has happened since that election.

During the 1987 election campaign, the candidates pledged to revitalize Roosevelt Center? Today, little has changed.

During the 1987 election campaign, the candidates pledged to expand and enhance programs for Greenbelt's ever-growing senior population? While the city's recreation department has employed a therapeutic recreational coordinator to improve and expand some programs for special populations, these programs need to be expanded further. The city's failure to act on a Senior Daycare Center has resulted in the loss of a State grant for $140,000. Disappointingly, no definitive plans exist to construct or house additional senior programs. Today, only a little has been done.

During the 1987 election campaign the candidates pledged to seek additional bond funding only after detailed and careful planning, and only with a definite program! Toward this pledge, they got it half right. The bond issue for Schrom Hills Park was well thought out. The bond issue for the community center left more questions than it had answers.

During the 1987 election campaign, the candidates promised to move forward on senior housing? Today, it remains an unmet need.

For the last 20 years, citizens have sought to resolve the future of Greenbelt Lake Park by adopting a plan to govern its future? Today, only a few steps have been taken to resolve this issue.

The Council members we elect this November must be committed to deliver on their promises.

Remember to judge candidates — both incumbents and challengers — not only on what they say they'll do but more importantly on their previous performance in public office. Promises are easy; delivering on those is a true litmus test! It is also easy to forget that promise once elected. It is hard work to keep those pledges once made.

All current candidates for City Council have a track record. Examine that record carefully. Ask incumbents for a copy of their previous campaign literature. Check their performance against their litany of promises.

For newcomers to the election campaign, check with people in the community who have worked with them to see if they did what they said.

Credit Where It's Due

To the Editor:

Many times over the past 11 years as a public official I have been taken to task for the shortcomings of either myself or state government. I accept this not very pleasant task as part of the job of a delegate. However, in fairness, it would also be pleasant to be acknowledged when one has been at least moderately responsible for doing something worthwhile. What I am referring to is your coverage of dignitaries affixing the Drug Free School Zone signs at Greenbelt Elementary School on August 28. While a number of officials were saluted in the article, I found that my name and that of School Board member Suzanne Plogman were absent.

I was the first legislator to introduce the Drug Free School Zone bill at the state level over two years ago. No one was interested and the bill died in committee. Last fall, Suzanne Plogman introduced a resolution for drug free school zones to the school board. It passed overwhelmingly.

Early in the fall of 1988 I wrote to Governor Schaefer asking for his support of this safe school legislation. This, after months (spent) trying to garner support for the bill. I am pleased that the Governor and my legislative colleagues saw the merit in the legislation which as your article stated, Mayor Weidenfeld first discovered while visiting New Jersey.

The Drug Free School Zone law is important and I am pleased, as I know Ms. Plogman must be, to have worked hard for its passage. If it helps even one child feel that his or her school is a safer environment, then the effort is more than worthwhile.

All I ask is that when you dole out the praise for Drug Free School Zones that Suzanne Plogman and myself are given at least some faint praise.

Seeks Senior Housing Site

To the Editor:

A number of senior citizens have lived in Greenbelt for up to 50 years or more. We have put our roots down in this community and have raised our families and are not willing to leave.

However, as the years progress and families grow, we are less able to cope with house and yard and need a less demanding situation.

Accordingly, the Senior Co-op Housing Committee of Greenbelt

Consumer Cooperative has developed a proposal for a non-profit 100-unit apartment senior co-op housing development. This will be developed with our financing and will be without cost to the taxpayers. In fact, our property and personal taxes will go to the city and county.

During our time here we have served both the community and the city in various leadership and volunteer roles, too many to state here, and plan to continue to do so.

The one thing we cannot provide is the site for this development. For this we need the favorable response of the city's voters to the city's questionnaire which will be available at the voting places in November to indicate your support for our endeavor. As a bonus, if we succeed we will be making available to Greenbelt our present housing.

For the Committee

THANKS

I want to thank all my neighbors and Greenbelt friends for the heartfelt sympathy that was shown to me during my sorrow over the death of my son-in-law, Richard L. Young. Dick had always been a big help during the Labor Day Parade and drove his truck for my Club's floats for the last six years. My grandson Gregory G. Law rode his motor bike without his helmet and was instantly killed. Support of friends helps one to get through deep family losses.

vice and inspection yard; the other stems from a threat by the College Park Pilots Association and Friends of College Park Airport to bring their environmental and safety concerns to Congress.

Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority officials are confident that the Green Line from Fort Totten to Greenbelt will open in late 1993 as scheduled. The Corps of Engineers, they note, has already indicated its intent to grant a construction permit for the service and inspections yard. The permit awaits the Fish and Wildlife Service's recommendation, which is expected this week.

A permit had been withheld by the Corps for over a year because of concerns about disturbing extensive wetlands on the BARC site. Evaluation of the tract has been conducted by various agencies including the Environmental Protection Agency and the Fish and Wildlife Service. To address the problem, Metro is expected to employ mitigation measures, such as replacement of the wetlands excavated.

In December 1988, the airport groups lost their suit to stop construction of the Green Line in Prince Georges County. They had cited safety and environmental concerns and the historic status of the airport. This summer the groups withdrew their appeal. Instead, they are trying to persuade members of Congress to authorize the building of the line underground instead of Metro's present plan to place the tracks above ground across the end of the airport runway.

Metro officials say the cost for a tunnel would be prohibitively expensive. They also note that required approvals were given by various agencies in an August 1988 memorandum of agreement

Parkway or having the traffic exiting the Parkway going to Greenbelt Road east merge with and then through the traffic exiting the Beltway onto the Parkway.

Without an accurate map, it was impossible for the group to determine whether either option was feasible. Would the merge/cross be too hazardous? Is there enough clearance to put the Parkway ramp over the Beltway, or would it be too steep at too sharp a curve? And would it be possible, if feasible, to change the plans at this stage? Dahl promised to investigate these questions and report back.

Following up from the August presentation on Greenbrook Manor, Zugsby reported that the prices for the projected townhouse/condominium development have already risen, with condo prices now anticipated at $150,000 and townhouse prices starting at $200,000 to $250,000.

The next meeting of GEAC will be held October 5 at Greenbriar.

Kastner Open Houses

City Council candidate Ruth Kastner will be holding two open house get-togethers. One is at the home of Sid and Bernice Kastner, 1-A Ridge Road, on Sunday, October 8, from 1-4 p.m.

The other will be held at the Windsor Green Community Center, 7474 Frankfort Drive, on Sunday, October 15, also from 1-4 p.m.

Refreshments will be provided at both events. The public is invited to attend. For further information, call Ruth Kastner at 474-5605.

JOE'S TIPS OF THE WEEK

Hello Again:

As the colder months of winter approach, the engine coolant must be able to protect in sub zero temperatures. Anti-freeze, or technically speaking, ethylene glycol, is alcohol-based with added chemicals to protect against corrosion.

Anti-freeze changes properties in the winter so the engine's coolant doesn't turn into slush or ice. In the summer it raises the boiling point in conjunction with the pressure system, so our engines don't overheat.

But the price of anti-freeze has doubled in the last year.

When recycled anti-freeze was introduced, it was exciting as it lowered the price and eliminated the contaminate factor for environmental reasons. The chemical break down looks good as it gets recycled for use in the final washing. Finally, the use of recycled anti-freeze is stable and meets all specifications.

When using according to directions for complete discharge of system and recovery, you completely refill the system with recycled coolant. This product comes in pre-mixed solutions, ready to be installed. Doing a flush of system and filling with recycled anti-freeze gives us a pm level of 9.5-10.5 and a freeze point to 27 below zero.

Some questions have been asked about what gets recycled out and placed back into the coolant. As the washing process starts, it's filtered and oxidized contaminants are removed and molybdate is added. The final product is an anti-freeze that meets specifications and is ready to use. No mixing.

Personally, I think this is a very good use of product. It meets current engine warranties and is compatible with gasoline and diesel engines. Also, it makes disposal of old coolant less apt to get into places where it does not belong, thus protecting our environment.

Till next time

Dear Friends and Neighbors,

As you know, another campaign for election to Greenbelt City Council has begun. I will be visiting with you at your door during the next six weeks. Please let me know your concerns about the city and I will listen.

Since all candidates run at-large, you should know that for the past 6 years I have been on the City Council. I have represented all of Greenbelt - East, West, North, and South. My experience on the City Council and my inherent determination to stay current on all issues has been extremely important. It has resulted in a decision making philosophy that addresses immediate needs while considering long-term enhancement of the quality of our lives.

I look forward to discussing issues with you again. If you are a newly registered voter, I look forward to meeting you and learning of your special needs.

Sincerely,

Tom
