Greenbelt Leads Car Theft Rate In Washington Metropolitan Area

by Kelly Harmon

Rising crime and the Greenbelt city layout have prompted Mayor Gil Weidenfeld to recommend a city-wide crime watch program.

Greenbelt has the highest rate of car theft in the Washington area according to Weidenfeld, who spoke at a special meeting of the Crime Prevention Committee (CPC) on March 1 to discuss ideas for implementing a city-wide crime-watch program.

"There are a lot of apartment communities, shopping centers and a good road network here," he said. "It's easy to get far away in only a few minutes."

Greenbelt is situated near interstate highways 95 and 495 and the Baltimore-Washington Parkway. Kenilworth Avenue (201), Greenbelt Road (193) and Baltimore Avenue (Route 1) are also close. These roads provide swift exit from the city.

Because of car thefts and to a much lesser extent, house breaking and drug use, Weidenfeld feels that Greenbelt is "ideal" for a city-wide program. "There is a high level of volunteerism and low miles (to patrol) in Greenbelt," he said. "The program would have an influential effect on the city. It would be a deterrent. If a criminal comes here to commit a crime, we want him to know that he is coming here to get arrested."

The program would consist of volunteers in cars marked with citizen crime-watch emblems, patrolling Greenbelt neighborhoods and business sectors and reporting suspicious incidents via radio to a base station operator who would relate that information to the police.

Weidenfeld's plan includes sending out residents to patrol neighborhoods other than their own.

"If a person is trained, it shouldn't matter where he works," he said. "There are limited benefits in attacking single areas or hot-spots of crime," said Weidenfeld. "It works like a balloon. If you squeeze it in one place, it pops out somewhere else."

Police liaison Pfc. Dave Buerger disagreed with the mayor's full-scale approach. He said, "I think crime watch is necessary, but not to the extent of city-wide. I don't think it would be effective. Citizens want to patrol their own neighborhoods. A lot of people on this committee don't agree with the city-wide approach."

Committee Secretary Sally Robbins said, "It can't be done. You can sponsor a city-wide program, but the only thing you can have is community involvement. You'd be wasting your time to go into a neighborhood if you don't know the territory or don't know the people. You wouldn't know what was suspicious and what wasn't."

Sara Bomberg, coordinator of the Springhill Lake Good-Neighbor Crime-Watch Program, said, "People feel a certain loyalty to their own neighborhoods. Crime-watch is wonderful, but if we start, we have to start in each little community. It can't be done any other way."

Another main concern of the committee is that community crime watches have been tried and have failed in all parts of Greenbelt (except for Springhill Lake).

"You need a spark," said Buerger. "Someone who is willing to give a lot of time."

Bomberg said, "The main thing you need is someone who doesn't mind being on the telephone. I'm on the phone seven nights a week (coordinating)."

Another consideration is liability. The mayor said that the city could not be held accountable for accidents or injuries during crime watch. "It would strain the city budget," he said.

The mayor suggested soliciting businesses for donations so a crime-watch committee could purchase portable radios and build a tower for the base station. In return, volunteers would also patrol the business sectors of Greenbelt.

Robbins offered an alternative: "Buy Cellular-One Phones," she said. "You're always going to have interference on radios, and you have the added expense of building a tower. With car phones, volunteers could just call the police from their cars. There's time saved there, too."

Nine Key Points

The mayor's plan had nine key points:

1. A powerful base station would be located at the police station with a high tower where any place in Greenbelt could be reached via portable radio.
2. Citizens would patrol both businesses and residential areas.
3. The Crime Watch Committee would ask businesses for contributions to help pay for radios and other equipment.
4. Crime Watch would be highly publicized to promote citizens' interest.

5. Volunteers must be trained to be on the team.

6. To remain on the team volunteers would have to commit to at least two hours of time per month to Crime Watch.

7. The base station operator would eventually be a paid position because of the burdens of scheduling volunteers as well as monitoring the radio.

8. There would be a new committee created to oversee only the Crime Watch program.

9. Citizens would use their own cars, which they would have to insure.

Crime-Watch History

Ten years ago Weidenfeld made recommendations of a Crime Watch Program to the Community Relations Advisory Board (CRAB). CRAB formed a separate committee which lobbied council for monetary support to fund more police and to help build stronger relations with the police in the community, and

A "first" in the history of Greenbelt civic programs—"The Role of a Community Newspaper"—will be presented on Thursday night, March 15, in the Municipal Building Council Chambers as a part of the Citizens for Greenbelt Annual Meeting.

The guest panelists are Dr. Ray Hiebert, a leading communication educator; and Bill Rowland, president, and Diane Oberg, vice president/treasurer, of the Greenbelt Cooperative Publishing Association, Inc., publisher of the Greenbelt News Review. Barry Schlesinger will be the moderator.

The public is invited to attend. The meeting will also be cablecast on Channel B-10.

Hiebert, who is a professor in the College of Journalism at the University of Maryland, has had a distinguished career as a college educator and working journalist with such papers as the Los Angeles Examiner and the Washington Post. He also has served as academic advisor to the Voice of America both here and abroad.

Rowland, who has worked on the News Review for over nine years, was a personnel management specialist with the federal government before his retirement. Oberg, a ten-year veteran on the staff of the local paper, works in the Foreign Trade Division of the Census Bureau.

A brief business meeting and presentation of awards from 8 to 8:30 p.m. will precede the panel program. Voting on several by-laws changes and election of officers will also be held.

Marvin Holmes, outgoing two-term president, has appointed Keith Chernikoff, Joyce Martin and Tom Renehan members of the Nominating Committee. Cher-

Herling Concert Pleases Record Crowd

by Jan Turkiewicz

The Greenbelt Center Elementary School was the scene of a joyous celebration of life and of the arts this past Saturday evening, March 3. Al Herling celebrated his 75th birthday by performing a piano recital for the benefit of the Prince Georges Arts Council and the Greenbelt Arts Center. He played for an enthusiastic audience of 360 friends and arts patrons who filled the multi-purpose room, which was transformed into a concert hall by his dynamic yet sensitive performance on a Baldwin grand piano. An atmosphere of celebration and good will was felt by all present, including Al, who thanked everyone present for coming and supporting the benefit concert.

The program began with four Preludes from the Well Tempered Clavichord, Book I, by J. S. Bach, which were played with clear exposition of the polyphonic musical lines. This was followed by a lovely lyric performance of the Andante—2nd movement of the Italian Concerto, also by J. S. Bach.

After a short intermission the program continued with the Piano Sonata in A Minor, K310 by Mozart. This was followed by another intermission, when Al played two Impromptus, Op. 90, by Schubert; Andante mosso, G Flat Major, and Allegretto, A Flat Major. His artistic use of the pedal brought out the flowing lyric qualities of the Impromptus.

The finale of the printed program was a rousing performance of the Chromatic Fantasy and Fugue by J. S. Bach which brought the cheering audience to its feet in a standing ovation. Al responded with a Swedish folksong for an encore. Then he moved to the microphone to read a quotation from President John F. Kennedy, who exhorted us to cultivate the arts and our artists, because they mold and give identity to culture and civilization, as the reign of Queen Elizabeth, for example, is known better as the age of Shakespeare. After thanking Deanne Lange and her co-workers for the delicious food outside the concert hall, he invited every one to enjoy the food.

Happy Birthday Al, and thanks for a great evening of fine music, delicious food, support for the arts, and abounding good will.

GHI Sets Special Meeting On Articles of Incorporation

by Pat Scully

The members of Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI) can provide input into the revision of the cooperative's Articles of Incorporation at a special meeting of the membership to be held Thursday, March 15 in the GHI board room. The GHI board scheduled the special meeting during their regular meeting on Feb. 22.

In a process that began in August, the board and staff have been discussing and reviewing the Articles to ensure internal consistency and conformity with federal and state laws. Staff revised the Articles, following directions given by the board at several meetings. The attorneys have since reviewed the Articles, finding and correcting one error. The board then voted to give members another opportunity to address the issue of the revised Articles, thus devoting a special meeting to the topic. The bylaws are not being revised at this time, except to bring them into conformity with the Articles.

Privacy Screen Rules

The board adopted, with revisions, the Architecture and Environment Committee's recommended changes to the rules and regulations on privacy screens. The most significant changes include:

—Written approval of GHI and adjoining neighbors is required prior to construction of all privacy screens;

—The maximum length of screens is reduced from 16 feet to 8 feet;

—Materials and construction details for wooden screens are spelled out in detail. All wooden screens shall be designed to "present an equally attractive face on either side" and shall "allow for both air and light penetration." Sample styles are included in the rules.

Annual Meeting Preparation

The schedule of deadlines for the 1990 annual meeting was pre-nikov was elected chairman.

A social hour and refreshments will follow the election of officers.

Key dates for members include: April 11, to place an item on the agenda by petition; April 30, for biographies of candidates to be submitted; May 9, to file all nominations by petition and consent to serve forms; May 11, proxies received; and May 16, Annual Membership Meeting.

The board and staff also reviewed the summary of Roberts' Rules of Order which had been distributed at past annual meetings. The board directed staff to clarify or expand on the procedures for recognition when raising a point of order and for taking a recount. The Rules are to be included in the packet of information to be sent to the membership.

GDC Loan Referendum

Staff reported on results of the recent member referendum concerning a loan to Greenbelt Development Corporation (GDC) for rehabilitation of the apartments. The membership has approved the loan of $320,000 in GHI funds to GDC for 15 years at an interest rate of 11.5 percent. Previously, sitting as the directors of GDC, the board had formally approved acceptance of the loan from GHI and had directed staff to negotiate a contract for heat pump installation with MRI Mechanical Contractors.

Vision of the Past and Future

Al Herling gave us much more last Saturday night than a wonderful evening of music; he also gave us a vision of the future. For during those few hours in the Center School gymnasium he drew us together as a community. Thinking back to early photographs of that same gymnasium crowded with people during town get-togethers, as it was Saturday night, we had a vision of how that room can function again—when Center School rehabilitated, becomes the true Community Center of Greenbelt.

As Al wrote in a program note to the audience for his recital, his 75th birthday concert was "a wonderful opportunity to enlist you all in the effort to enhance our cultural environment and our quality of life." The concert proceeds will go to the Greenbelt Arts Council, which hosted the event, and the Prince Georges Arts Council. The local group plans to use its funds to equip the theater once the Center School space becomes available.

With townfolk once again heading to Center School for activities they can enjoy together—crafts, theater, music-making, and sports events, to name a few—the handsome old building will take on new life as the hub of the community. The advisory committee on the rehabilitation of Center School that met for the first time Monday night will be pushing us toward that goal.

But Al Herling's concert was the first step. Thank you Al, from all of us.

get the communities of Greenbelt involved with crime prevention.

Several communities in Greenbelt started neighborhood Crime-Watches, but the only one still active is in Springhill Lake. While other programs failed after a few weeks or months, Springhill Lake's, under the coordinated efforts of Sara Bomberg, has been running since 1979.

A survey since 1984 has shown that over 260 volunteers have been trained, there have been 134 weekly patrols and 45 monthly patrols. No one has ever been hurt.

The Springhill Lake program has been recognized by the Greenbelt Police Department, Governor Schaefer and Parris Glendening.

PRESENT COUPON AT TIME OF SITTING

Henry Fisher

Henry Fisher, 78, one of Greenbelt's outstanding citizens, died from cancer on February 25 in Philadelphia, Pa. He came to Greenbelt about 1960 to work for Greenbelt Homes in the maintenance department for 15 years. He joined the Lions Club and was best known for his volunteer work in health care screening and Labor Day Parade Bike and Trike Contest.

He served as president and district zone chairman of the Lions Club, directed the bike and trike competition for 10 years and chaired the health committee providing many health screening tests over a number of years for Greenbelters of all ages. And in 1975 Fisher was selected outstanding citizen.

Fisher was born and grew up in Rosenhayn, N.J. Fisher served for four years in the U.S. Navy during World War II. He married his first wife Sarah in 1933. They raised two children, Doris and Robert. Before coming to Greenbelt, Fisher worked for the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. In Greenbelt they lived in the 7 court of Southway. Both his wife and son died in the mid 70s.

In 1979 Henry married Ann Roman of Atlantic City, N.J. They spent summers in New Jersey and winters in Florida, but Henry returned each September to head the Bike and Trike Parade. He was an avid reader, golfer and sports fan. "Henry was dedicated to Greenbelt and was a compassionate individual who cared about people," said Emory Harman. "Greenbelt was lost a wonderful friend." Joe Wilson said, "If you had Henry for a friend, you were lucky. He'd do anything he could for you."

Fisher was also a member of the Jewish War Veterans, Veterans of Foreign Wars and the American Legion.

He is survived by his wife Ann, daughter Doris Albright, three grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Services and interment were in Atlantic City.

Greenbriar News

The children of Greenbriar and Glen Oaks are in for a treat! Shamrock Shenanigans will take place on Friday, March 16, from 4 to 5 p.m. in the Terrace Room. The children will decorate cupcakes, play games, make necklaces and more. All events will have an Irish theme. Registration is required.

Greenbriar is planning to attend the matinee performance of "Annie Get Your Gun" at Harlequin Dinner Theater on Sunday, April 1. Interested persons should call the office, 441-1096, for more information.

PUBLIC NOTICE

Intelligent Prince George's County Homeowners may avoid the embarrassment of an unkempt lawn by ordering lawn-mowing service prior to the start of the growing season.

Instead of hacking away at knee-deep grass or begging surly teenagers to come to your house, enjoy your weekend with golf, tennis or another pleasant activity.

Yes, the really smart homeowner can return home on Friday evening to a recently clipped, trimmed and bagged lawn and have an entire weekend free to unwind. But this will only be possible by calling for a free estimate no later than our

DEADLINE
MARCH 17, 1990

By April our phone will be ringing non-stop with desperate housekeepers who need mowing "immediately." But, you, the intelligent homeowner, by planning for lawn mowing service can have a pre-assigned day for mowing and design a service package that meets your needs and budget. All of this at a price that is competitive with the neighborhood teenager — And at unprecedented levels of reliability.

Please call for your free estimate today. 345-2220

LAFFTERS GO IRISH

by Jan Parker

Well, it's time for all to become Irish, wear green, and dance the night away, which is what the O'LAFFTERS will be doing on Friday, March 16. They will be traveling across the river (Potomac, not Shannon) to join others with Special Needs at the Lee Center in Alexandria. Those planning to attend should call Karen at 474-6878, and be at the Youth Center by 6:30 p.m.

For further information about Leisure Activities for Fun and Friendship, sponsored by the Greenbelt Recreation Dept., call Karen or Chris at 474-6878.

JOE'S TIPS OF THE WEEK

Hello Again!!

Have you ever gotten the feeling that your vehicle was trying to pull a boat anchor, or that it was dragging something? Well it could be a parking brake cable that is not releasing all the way. When you apply the parking brake there is an arrangement of cables underneath your vehicle which pulls on designated brake brackets in the rear brake assemblies that hold tension on the rear brake assemblies, thus activating the parking brake. As time goes on these cables become corroded and stretched. If the cables become damaged they will not move or slide in their inner casings and will bind up while holding onto the rear brake components. This creates a brake drag. There are times when we perform a 4 wheel brake inspection that we find one side is in perfect shape while the other side is worn down to the rivets. This is a good indication to check the parking brake cables for movement and activation, making sure they retract all the way. If they don't, the brake drag comes into play and you'll actually be driving around with the parking brakes practically "on", thus causing premature brake lining wear. It's a good idea to be sure your parking brake releases all the way and at every brake inspection interval question the condition of the parking brake assemblies. These PREVENTIVE MAINTENANCE ideas are proven to put longevity into your brake shoes and assure parking brake system stability.

'Til next time
 Think Preventive Maintenance
