Sunrise Gains Approval for Parking Garage; Swim Pool Rates May Rise

by Diane Oberg

At its March 12 regular meeting, the Greenbelt City Council heard an update on the Sunrise property and introduced for first reading an ordinance increasing pool fees for the 1990 season.

Sunrise

City Solicitor Robert Manzi reported that the county Board of Appeals had upheld the variance granted to the Sunrise Development Limited Partnership. This variance permits construction of a parking garage for the planned high-rise apartments. The board found that denial of the variance would "result in a peculiar and unusual practical difficulty" for the owner because of the shape and topography of the property. Council has 30 days to decide whether to pursue further appeals.

Council also received a copy of a letter to the District Council from Russell W. Shipley, attorney for the Sunrise developers. Shipley wrote that the owners plan to develop the property consistent with the current R-10 zoning (high-rise apartments). They have asked the District Council to retain this zoning when the Sectional Map Amendment is adopted. The District Council had been considering rezoning the property for commercial-office (C-O) development. (The District Council is the County Council sitting on zoning matters).

The city had recommended R-18C (medium-density condominium) zoning for the property. Shipley wrote that this would be a "substantial downzoning" of the land, which he thinks would be illegal and inconsistent with the approved Master Plan. City council had opposed rezoning to C-O because no limits could be placed on the development.

Pool Rates

Council introduced, for first reading, an ordinance increasing pool rates for the coming season. City Manager James K. Giese also provided a proposed fee schedule for the combined indoor/outdoor pool complex. He urged council to consider the combined fee schedule when setting fees for the upcoming season.

Under the proposal, family pass rates for residents would increase $20 to $120 per season for the outdoor pool, while individual passes would cost $55, up from $45 this year. Nonresident and daily rates would also increase.

Once the indoor pool opens, Giese proposes that year-round passes (indoor and outdoor pool) for a family cost $320 and $150 for individuals. Summer-swimming-only passes would cost $150 and $70 respectively.

The legislation also proposes discontinuing the issuance of free passes to senior citizens and families of city employees. The legislation would charge seniors and employees' families $25 for the summer only or $75 for a year-round pass. A comparison of rates at area pools done by the recreation department shows that the proposed senior fees are below all those studied. Council will discuss the proposed rates at a March 20 work session.

Jaycees Clubhouse

In November the Greenbelt Jaycees asked the city to make improvements to the Jaycees Clubhouse basement to permit its use for storage. Under terms of the lease, the Jaycees do not pay rent for the city-owned building but pay utility bills and maintain the building.

Giese opposed the request because the clubhouse does not meet modern codes for public safety or handicap accessibility. He also argued that, given the poor structural condition of the building, further repairs would not be cost-effective.

At council's direction, staff obtained an estimate for repairing the building. Internal waterproofing would cost $4,000. Giese said that this type of repair sometime solves basement problems, and sometimes does not.

Harold Wheeler, president of the Jaycees, argued that it would be a "terrible disaster" not to repair the building. He said that the Jaycees cannot afford to rebuild the basement themselves. Wheeler argued that the group is a service club that helps Greenbelt and is not merely a social club. He added that they are currently struggling for membership, a fact he attributed in part to the condition of the clubhouse.

Council member Antoinette M. Bram said that the building should either be brought to code or demolished. Council member Joseph Isaacs said that if the city does not plan to raze it, which he did not feel council wanted, then the building should be fixed.

Mayor Pro Tem Thomas X. White said that bringing the building up to code would cost "considerably more" than $4,000. Council member Edward Putens asked for a study to see what work would be required to bring the building up to standard. He expressed concern about the condition of the floor. Wheeler said that much of the work could be done by the Jaycees.

Council unanimously agreed to seek evaluations of the building. Zoning Enforcement Council agreed to support the efforts of the Prince Georges County Municipal Association to develop a memorandum of understanding with county officials permitting municipalities, rather than the county, to enforce the county zoning law. However, council also agreed with the staff recommendation that the city indicate it does not yet want to join the agreement.

Giese said that the city would receive no fees in return for assuming this responsibility, but that this action would permit more aggressive enforcement efforts than provided by the county. He said that Greenbelt's code problems are "minimal" and that the county does respond to the city's requests for enforcement actions.

Putens was concerned that the city "too often" does not join the initial efforts of the PGCMA. He said it is time to back organization. White pointed out that the city would be free to join later. He suggested that the issue be considered during the upcoming budget review.

Mayor Gil Weidenfeld said that the decision whether to accept zoning enforcement responsibility should be made once council decides if it will assume responsibility for licensing apartments. This task will generate revenues for the city. The mayor said that given the small number of city zoning enforcement problems, it was not worth the cost of assuming enforcement responsibility. However, he said that

Greenbrook Villagers Voice Opposition To Proposed New Metrobus Route

by Pat Scully

Several Greenbrook Village residents voiced their opposition, at the March 1 meeting of the Greenbelt East Advisory Coalition (GEAC), to the proposed route for an extended R-15 Metrobus. They suggested alternatives that would serve Hunting Ridge and keep buses off Greenbrook Drive. They described Greenbrook Drive as a narrow road, vulnerable to increased traffic and parking problems. Other residents, however, said they looked forward to having bus service from their door to the New Carrollton Metro station.

The Route at Issue

Metro representatives had presented the planned route extension to GEAC at the meeting on February 1. In response to a request from resident of

Two 17-year-old Greenbelt volunteer firemen, Ted Sacra (left) and Tim Grady are presented with a city proclamation by Mayor Gil Weidenfeld honoring them for controlling a fire at 4-T Laurel Hill Road on Feb. 1, and probably saving the entire four-home row from destruction. The presentation was made during the March 12 council meeting.

Education Dept. Heralds Greenbelters as Heroines

by Virginia Beauchamp

Several Greenbelters are named as "Maryland's Unsung Heroines" in this year's resource packet prepared by the Maryland State Department of Education and the Maryland Commission for Women. Such packets have been developed each year since 1980 to supplement the school curriculum, since standard elementary and secondary textbooks provide almost no information about women's lives. The Maryland packets, which contain suggested student activities as well as various kinds of information, are delivered free to each school and each public library within the state. Since the program began, it has dramatically increased the level of understanding about and interest in the achievements of women.

In previous years the packets have focused on a particular career area, such as women in science and engineering, women writers, women in the arts, or women in public advocacy work. But as a means of calling attention to women's often invisible contributions within their communities, the tenth-anniversary packet looks at "Everywoman."

Among Greenbelters featured in this year's packet is Florence M. Holly, who was chosen in 1989 as the city's Outstanding Citizen. The biographical sketch prepared by the nominators notes her kindness in chauffeuring the disabled and the elderly to church services, her volunteer teaching at Center School, and her activities with the Woman's Club and the Golden Age Club. "What makes this woman so remarkable," the account reads, "is her talent for problem solving. She will say, 'We will just have to do something about that, won't we?'"

Betty Timer, who works with senior citizens groups throughout the county, is also highlighted in the packet. She serves on the planning board of the Oasis Senior Centers, as well as on the city's task force to deal with programming for seniors in the recreation program. She also leads groups in Greenbelt history at the Greenbelt Museum and the Tugwell Room of the Greenbelt Library. "Start each Hunting Ridge for bus service, Metro proposed an extension of the R-15 route, which provides rush-hour service between Greenbelt and the New Carrollton MetroRail station. The proposed extension would loop south of Greenbelt Road from its intersection with Hanover Parkway. Buses would go south on Hanover to Greenbrook Drive, northeast on Greenbrook to Ora Glen Drive, east on Ora Glen to Mandan Road, then north on Mandan past the Greenbelt Road intersection and continuing with the current route.

The Greenbrook Village homeowners association had narrowly approved the issue at their February meeting, by a vote of 23 for and 21 opposed. (There are 220 owner-members.) Bus opponents said that many residents were unaware of the proposal until at or after the meeting and felt that Metro should have informed them directly.

Some Support

One Greenbrook Village couple, describing themselves as "a one-car family," said they welcomed the coming of the buses to make getting to and from the MetroRail station easier. In addition, every rider on the bus would mean one fewer car on the road, reducing rather than increasing traffic in front of their house.

Letters to the Editor

Crime Watch

To the Editor:

In the March 8 issue you discussed the efforts to organize a city-wide Crime Watch and cited the commendable activity of the Springhill Lake Crime Watch. However, your statement that "While other programs failed after a few weeks or months, . . ." was not totally accurate. The Lakewood Crime Watch was organized in November 1983 and was joined by the Woodland Hills Crime Watch the following years. For a period of over three years until December 1986, the combined Crime Watches had patrols on the streets on a regular and frequent basis. During 1985, for example, the two base operators logged a combined total of 858 hours of patrols. The Lakewood/Woodland Hills program was also recognized by certificates from the Greenbelt Police Dept. and was presented with the "Governor's Certificate of Merit for Crime Prevention" by Governor Hughes on November 24, 1986. Although not in regular operation since 1986, the Lakewood/Woodland Hills groups have made several attempts to reorganize and have conducted patrols on an occasional basis since then.

I welcome efforts to organize a city-wide Crime Watch with a central base operator at the Police Station, but believe that individual neighborhood groups should patrol their own neighborhoods for maximum efficiency.

Clean-up Days?

To the Editor:

Thanks to City Manager Giese for commending the good citizens of Greenbelt who pick up litter while out walking. A lot of Greenbelters are already showing pride in their community and concern for the Earth in this way. Would more interest in developing these good habits be generated if the volunteer cleaners were to band together once in a while?

How about some "Clean Up Greenbelt" days, maybe Saturday and Sunday, April 6 and 7, in time to have the city presentable for Earth Day, when people would make a conscious effort to go out and clean up, taking bottles and cans to the recycling center, re-using bags, etc.? Or would a church, scout troop, or other group be interested in an "Adopt a Block" program, much like Maryland's "Adopt a Highway."

Call or leave a message at 345-0410 if you or your group would be interested in pursuing this public service.

Ready for the 90's

To the Editor:

The News Review deserves much credit for its participation in the Citizens for Greenbelt (CFG) forum. "The Role of a Community Paper," held at the March 15 membership meeting.

Where else but Greenbelt could this sort of event take place? CFG will continue to serve as a means of bringing forth residents' views on serious issues of public concern.

We saw the Berlin Wall tumble. Let's work to tear down walls—real and imaginary—that divide our city! In place of those walls, other foundations will be built. Our group will play a part in that process . . . CFG's new vice president, Bob Zugby, is a founder of GEAC. Al Freas is a Board member of GHI and has served CFG as treasurer . . . a post he continues to hold. Terri Rutledge, elected secretary last week, is known for her work on behalf of the green belt. Konrad Herling, who represents a proud family tradition here, heads our transportation committee. Barry Schlesinger's zoning committee has made an impact on that vital issue. Eunice Coxon is stepping down as chairperson of our membership committee. The innumerable activities of this past CFG president are renowned.

CFG is ready for the 1990s! Our Town Meeting series, launched last December with Rick Meetre's presentation on Metro is only a sampling of what we have planned. We urge your readers to join us. CFG needs pullers at the oars—not just passengers in the boat!

Dimilin Issues

To the Editor:

In a letter to the editor last week, some questions were raised about the State's use of Dimilin in part of Greenbelt to control the gypsy moth infestation. As coordinator of the City's efforts, I would like to provide further information on some of the issues raised.

Dimilin is an insect growth regulator which has proven greatly effective in combatting the gypsy moth caterpillar. The only harm that this chemical has been shown to cause is to animals which have protective shells, or exoskeletons. These include not only caterpillars but some aquatic life, such as crabs and shrimp. For this reason, Dimilin is not sprayed over areas of open water which ultimately empty into the Chesapeake Bay.

While people allergic to Dimilin or chemically sensitive could conceivably be affected by such a spray, the Maryland Department of Agriculture reports that "to date, there have been no adverse reactions reported by people living in areas participating in the spraying programs. In fact, after years of use, spraying programs using Dimilin have not caused adverse reactions even in allergic or chemically-sensitive individuals."

As to the effect of Dimilin on gardens, the State reports that Dimilin is not absorbed through the leaves or roots of plants, so the only residue will be on leaf surfaces. Washing the leaves of vegetables is quite sufficient to prevent ingestion of the product.

City staff shares the concerns of others as to the indiscriminate use of chemical sprays. We also are seriously concerned, however, with the devastating effect the gypsy moth invasion can have on our tree population if not controlled. In other areas of the country which have been plagued with gypsy moths for many years, Dimilin has proven to be an effective controllant without adversely affecting humans or animals.

I encourage any person interested in obtaining further information on this or any aspect of the gypsy moth control program to contact me at the City office.

day with a prayer," she comments, "that you will find someone who will need what you've got. Then give it away."

The organizer of the Women's History Month project itself, Linda Shevitz, was nominated by her secretary in the Equal Opportunity Office of the State Department of Education, who describes Shevitz as "the one person I know of who is always caring about people globally." Noting that Shevitz receives "very little recognition" for her work each year in preparing and distributing the packet, Alice Carter decided to write her own tribute to her boss.

Finally, the staff of the News Review itself were nominated for their contribution to community journalism. Those whose tenure has been the longest — Mary Lou Williamson, Elaine Skolnik, Barbara Likowski, Diane Oberg, and Virginia Beauchamp — were mentioned by name, as were several male members, past and present, of the staff — the late Alfred Skolnik, Harry Zubkoff, and Bill Rowland. "These women and men have given untold volunteer hours to assure the continuous publication of a newspaper that serves to unify and inform the citizens of Greenbelt," the profile says.

In a personal history describing the origins of the project 10 years ago, Jill Moss Greenberg, its founder, concludes: "Someday Women's History Month may not be necessary. Someday history texts and all other materials will help students learn about the history of all Americans, women and men — all year round."

Kindergarten Open House

The Greenbelt Nursery School and Kindergarten will hold a kindergarten open house March 27 and April 3 from 12:30 to 3:15 p.m. Parents interested in enrolling children in the kindergarten program next year are invited to come observe the class and meet next year's teacher, Karen Keilman. Karen holds a B.A. and M.A. degrees in education and is certified in early childhood education.

The kindergarten program, after a year of careful planning, was started in September 1989. The program grew from the desire of parents to find a kindergarten which was child-centered and "hands on" in its curriculum. Therefore, the program's curriculum is based on the knowledge that the five-year-old learns best when able to explore using all modalities (visual, auditory, tactile and kinetic), and is in an environment filled with learning centers and flexible, changing materials. This approach is recommended by the National Association for Young Children and has recently been adopted by the State Department of Education. The program takes a holistic approach to child development and provides a balance in the areas of social-emotional, physical and cognitive development. It includes language arts, mathematics, science, art, music, and social studies. All areas are incorporated into the curriculum in an early childhood interactionist approach. Language is taught through the "Whole Language Approach," which is an integrated, concrete approach to phonics, reading and writing skills. The mathematics curriculum is based on "Math Their Way," which allows the young child to learn math concepts by actively exploring a variety of materials. Dramatic play and regular field trips center around social studies. Science is incorporated into the classroom daily as well as with field trips and a weekly resource teacher. Art and music are also in the classroom daily as well as with weekly resource teachers.

The class meets Monday through Friday from noon to 2:45 p.m. September to May. The program is not a cooperative; however, parents are welcome to share in the classroom and on field trips.

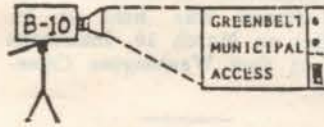

People are invited to visit at 1 Hillside Road or call Leslie McLaughlin at 474-4020 for more information.

the city should support PGMCA's proposal to allow those municipalities with problems to take action.

Other Actions

Gil Weidenfeld presented a proclamation to Ted Sacra and Tim Grady for their efforts in fighting a fire at 4-T Laurel Hill Road on February 1. The Branchville Fire Department, the first company to reach the scene, estimated that the two firefighter trainees had extinguished approximately 90 percent of the fire by the time the fire equipment arrived.

In response to a petition from Eunice Coxon, council unanimously agreed to send a letter to the city's delegation in the state legislature urging support for the concept of victims' rights and to urge adoption of legislation permitting victims of crime, or their families, to be present during plea bargaining. The proposal would force judges who forbid victims and their families from attending the trial to state their reasoning.

Isaacs asked about the state's plans to spray part of the city with Dimilin. The chemical is to be used against gypsy moths in the area between Hamilton Place and the city limits, east of the Baltimore-Washington Parkway. Assistant City Manager Michael P. McLaughlin said that the city has questioned state officials about citizens' concerns about the spraying, especially its effects on aquatic life. McLaughlin reported the state's views that the spray will be far enough away from water that this should be no problem.

McLaughlin said that state officials claimed that any changes to the state's proposed program would result in the city's either not receiving any spray or being sprayed too late to have an effect.

Bram said that she had questioned a Beltsville Agricultural Research Center staffer, who agreed with the state's program. Bram said that the state may feel that the more effective agent is needed, given the extensive tree growth in that area.

Council deferred a decision on whether to join a health benefits plan being developed by the Council of Governments (COG) until after a March 20 work session. A decision on whether to join the plan must be made at the next regular council meeting. Adoption of the new plan and programs to minimize its effect on city employees will increase benefit costs. However, Giese is concerned that Greenbelt could, in the future, lose its coverage under Blue Cross/Blue Shield. He said that several cities have already been dropped by the insurer.

Council received the city manager's capital improvements budget, but delayed consideration until later in the budget process. Giese noted that it will be difficult to evaluate the program until the city has more information on the costs of building the indoor pool and purchasing Parcel 1.

Gray Panthers Meet

Special Investigator Ann T. Bentley of the state of Maryland Consumer Protection Commission will discuss how to avoid "rip-offs" at the Gray Panther meeting on Saturday, March 24 at 1:30 p.m. at the Greenbelt Library.

Unfair trade practices, Maryland consumer protection laws and the role of the commission will also be discussed.

A question period will follow. All are welcome.

Cedar Ridge Church Relocates to Laurel

Cedar Ridge Community Church will begin holding services at the Capitol College auditorium in South Laurel beginning April 1.

The interdenominational church which is pastored by Brian D. McLaren of Riverdale, began with about 100 adults and 50 children at Eleanor Roosevelt High School in September 1988. The rapid growth of the congregation, which now has an average weekly attendance of 225 adults and 100 children, has made this move necessary. According to McLaren, the rapid growth of the church has resulted from two major factors: the church's contemporary style, and its focus on relating to unchurched people.

For directions or information, call the church office at 441-2362.

Starlite Orchestra Takes Center Stage

Trux Baldwin and The Starlite Orchestra will return to Beltway Plaza Mall's Center Stage in two performances on Saturday, March 31, at 2 and 4 p.m. The Washington area 17-piece orchestra plays the familiar top hit arrangements of the big bands of the past 40 years—Tommy Dorsey, Glenn Miller, Duke Ellington, Artie Shaw, Count Basie and others. The band members belong to the American Federation of Musicians.

Greenbelters will remember the band for its performances at the city's 50th Anniversary dinner dance, Buddy Attick Park's Summer Sounds and Springhill Lake's Fountain Lodge.

The band returns after three year's absence, to kick off the spring events at the Beltway Plaza Mall, and signals the return of Pat Valle as promotion director for the Beltway Plaza Merchants Association, the sponsor of mall events at center stage.

Joseph G. Brown

Joseph Gorman Brown, 88, a Greenbelt pioneer, died Friday, March 16. A Washington civil servant who worked for the Panama Canal for 42 years, Brown moved his young family to 58 Crescent Road in the new town of Greenbelt in 1937. He later lived at 6-B Crescent Road for 20 years and more recently at 10-B Crescent Road. During those early years he served as president of the Greenbelt Band and the Garden Club and later he served many years as an usher at St. Hugh's Catholic Church. He was a "Center Bum."

His wife Helen died in 1982.

Brown is survived by his daughter Margaret B. Ledwith; a sister, Margaret Lacey; four grandchildren; and five great grandchildren. A Mass of Christian Burial was held at St. Hugh's on March 19. Interment was at Fort Washington Cemetery.

Speaking for local sports fans, we must congratulate Greenbelt and terrific Terp Jerrod Mustaf for a fine season of basketball play. A sophomore majoring in Management and Consumer Economics, Jerrod also managed to be ranked among the top ten by the Atlantic Coast Conference statisticians in five categories: scoring, rebounding, blocked shots, field goal percentage and free throw percentage. Well done, Mr. Mustaf!

From the military comes word that Staff Sgt. Andrew J. Feeney Jr. has graduated from the Air Force noncommissioned officer leadership school. Stratchko, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Stratchko of Lastner Lane, on being named district marketing manager for Delta Airlines. He will be based in Melbourne, Florida.

And wasn't that a special evening down at Center School March 3 as Al Herling gave us all a present for his 75th birthday. The concert was attended by both young and old, all admirers of the man or the music—most probably both. And I hear that the food provided by Deanne Lange and her helpers following the concert was wonderful. Thank you, sir, for the music and the memories.

We have some new neighbors who are arriving just in time for spring (at least by the calendar). Stephen Edwards Horst was born at Holy Cross Hospital on March 5, weighing 8 lbs. 10 ozs. He is the son of Janet and John Horst of Mandan Court.

well as parking problems, were given as reasons to oppose the buses on Greenbrook Drive. It is the only street on the proposed extension with houses directly on it. Several persons present at the GEAC meeting expressed displeasure at the idea of hearing buses at their windows at 6:30 a.m. or of having their residential street turned into a commuter road. Not only will the buses use the route, but those who ride the bus will be likely to use it as a bypass of the Hanover Parkway and Greenbelt Road intersection when driving their cars, increasing overall traffic on the road, it was argued.

The extension will not, in fact, reach Hunting Ridge, which had requested the bus service. At the February meeting, Metro representatives said that they had been unable to find a suitable turn-around place for buses at Hunting Ridge. Suggestions were made for getting the buses to or through Hunting Ridge and then back up Hanover Parkway to Greenbelt Road without going through Greenbrook Village and Windsor Green.

One possible loop could run through the Maryland Trade Centers. Advocates of this loop pointed out that it would keep buses off residential streets and that it could be a real loop since Greenway Center Drive and Hanover Drive connect. Another possible loop would take buses in at Greenway Village apartments and out at the main Hunting Ridge entrance.

The presence of speed bumps within Hunting Ridge could make the roads impassable for the buses. A possible legal prohibition could also be involved again. Metro's operating on private property, which the Hunting Ridge roads are. While the buses are 30 feet long (10 feet shorter than standard Metro buses), they are as wide as the standard buses and need a wide turning radius.

The impacts wouldn't be as bad, nor the benefits as good, as feared or hoped, said Roy Dahl, GEAC representative from Windsor Green. There won't be so many riders that other traffic will decrease noticeably, he believes, nor will the noise or traffic of three short buses be extreme. However, the route is too long and zigzags too much, in Dahl's view, for many potential riders to use it. He was also concerned that establishing the route on Greenbrook Drive now would set a precedent for use of the Drive as a bus route when the Greenbelt MetroRail station opens.

GEAC's Role

James Foy, GEAC chair, explained that GEAC itself is not a decision-making body. Its member organizations take positions on issues of general interest. GEAC will act if there is consensus on an issue, expressed by at least five member organizations. In response to a motion from Ed Shilling of Windsor Green, GEAC decided to refer the issue to each member board for their support or opposition. The concerns raised at the GEAC meeting by the Greenbrook Village residents would be presented to each member board at that time.

Crime and Police

Addressing the proposed legislative agenda, GEAC discussed requesting additional police patrols in Greenbelt East. Over the last five years, there has been a tremendous increase in both residential and commercial development in the East; the level of police coverage has remained the same, said Dorothy Pyles of Greenbriar. Shilling, noting that the East leads the city in car theft, said that Windsor Green residents pay for extra police coverage, which tax payers shouldn't feel obliged to do.

Council member Edward Putens offered some discouraging words. At the Westminster planning meeting Police Chief James Craze had outlined the department's needs, which focused on areas where crime is the highest—for example, drugs and breaking and enterings. Increased square footage, Putens said, didn't mean increased need for police protection. "If you don't have crime, you don't have a problem."

GEAC voted unanimously to ask the member boards to support a request to city council for increased police patrols in Greenbelt East.

In addition, the need for an overall increase in police resources was discussed, particularly relating to the Selective Enforcement Unit (SEU). The SEU would establish a computerized data base to analyze crime in the city and detect patterns. Knowing patterns of crime would allow police to focus resources on prevention and early detection. GEAC also moved unanimously to ask the member boards to support a request that city council allocate resources to establish the SEU.

Informational Items

Members of the GEAC board provided updates on various topics of interest, including the County Council's Sectional Map Amendment hearing, the recent meeting on plans for Schrom Hills Park, the city Advisory Planning Board's conditional approval of plans for the Greenbrook Manor development, and the county Zoning Board's granting of the variance request for garages for the Sunrise apartment development.

Foy also distributed information on the city tax base breakdown, which he had obtained from city staff. A summary chart Foy had developed showed the assessed residential taxes for three regions of the city: Springhill Lake, $34 million; the center city, $73.7 million; and Greenbelt East, $89.5 million. The figures, calculated by the city, are based on the averaged property value of three or four homes in each subdivision, multiplied by the number of units.

The next meeting of GEAC will be held April 5 at 7:30 p.m., at Greenbriar.

LAFFTERS NEWS

by J. J. Parker

The LAFFters, a social club for adults with special needs, sponsored by the Greenbelt Recreation Department, left no doubt that for one day they were Irish. On March 16, at the Lee Center in Alexandria, they mingled with old friends and new, danced to the live and lively music of the Shakers, and cheered David, a new member from Springhill Lake as he sang an Elvis Presley song with the band.

On Wednesday, March 28, at 7 p.m. at the Greenbelt Youth Center, favorite volunteer Ben Abramowitz will lead the group through the creation of another mural. This one promises to be even better and more colorful than the group's last successful debut into the world of art. Seniors and golden agers are invited to observe the creative processes at work.

POLICE BLOTTER

Based on Information Released by the Greenbelt Police Department

After stopping a vehicle for a traffic violation in the 7000 block of Greenbelt Road on March 10, Pfc. Thomas Kemp found suspected phencyclidine in the vehicle and arrested a 27-year-old male resident for possession of the drug. While the man was being processed at the police station he pulled a fire alarm, and then got arrested for activating a false alarm, too. The man appeared before a District Court Commissioner and was released pending trial.

Investigating a suspicious person in the parking lot of Beltway Plaza on March 11, Officer Barry Byers found suspected crack cocaine on an 18-year-old nonresident male. Officer Byers arrested the man for possession with the intent to distribute crack cocaine and possession of cocaine. The man appeared before a District Court Commissioner and was held on $10,000 bond.
