candidates, Hometown County Councilmember Richard Castaldi and Greenbelt City Councilmember Antoin-ette "Toni" Bram, are expected to bring out a big vote in Greenbelt on primary day - September 11. Native son former city mayor and coun-cilmember, Castaldi seeks the Democratic nomination for the county council seat in District 4, which he has held since 1983. In her fourth term on city council, Bram hopes to capture one of three Democratic State Delegate slots in the 23rd Legislative District. Both are facing rivals who are Bowie residents. Both must win big here in order to enhance their chances of victory. Greenbelters account for roughly 25% of the Democratic voters in District 4.

By far the most heated contest is the county council race on the Democratic side where Castaldi's challenger is G. Frederick Robinson, mayor pro-tem of Bowie. (See separate story). State Races

On the Democratic side the State Senate and Delegate races are also hotly contested. In the past the incumbents have touted their records and won handily. However, voters' feelings about the abortion issue could be a determining factor in the final (See Election Forum tally. story.)

Pro-choice positions are held by Bram and Terezie "Terry" Bohrer. Running a vigorous campaign, Bram seeks to wrest away one of three delegate seats held by pro-life incumbents Mary See ELECTION, page 2, col. 3

County Council Candidates Cast and Counter Charges by Elaine Skolnik The race for the Prince Georges County Council seat

in District 4 has turned into a verbal war. The first volley was fired by incumbent Richard Castaldi's challenger, G. Frederick Robinson, who charged that there has been "an all-to-cozy relationship between the development industry and the County Council." His allegation that developer Michael Rose had served as Castaldi's "chief fundraiser -until released by recent state ethic's legislation" (the court later declared the legislation unconstitutional) was denied by Castaldi, who countercharged that developer Mark Vogel had hosted a fundraising breakfast for Robinson on July 11 at the Bowie Golf and Country Club. Robinson has confirmed that the event took place.

Rose told the News Review and ders.

several county papers that he never held any position in any Castaldi is running on his legislative record, particularly touting bills that help to control of Castaldi's campaigns and that the building industry's political development and the environaction committee, "BUILD PAC," ment. He points to bills requirwhich he chairs, has made no endorsement in the District 4 ing that funding must be available for roads and other public county council race. He also asfacilities before new development serted that "Castaldi singlecan be built, that the streamhandedly had Westwood defeat-ed." This was Rose's proposed project in the Route 450 corrilining of the master plan process include a moratorium on rezoning requests during the review dor that required upzoning to stage, that the goal for recycling be increased and that builders Robinson has also charged that be required to preserve portions "the frustrations of municipal of woodlands in new developofficials in Greenbelt and Bowie menta.

Castaldi also plaved a major role in helping the Greenbelt City Council downzone the Sunrise property in Greenbelt East.

Robinson says new leadership is needed to "introduce a higher level of ethics into land use practices" and to deal with the challenges that face the district and county in the areas of education, environment and public safety. He notes that one of his goals is to control development and that his 20-year experience as a law enforcement officer would help him deal "effectively" and "efficiently" with problems of crime and drugs.

Joyce Chestnut Honored As City's Outstanding Citizen

by Virginia Beauchamp

This year, for only the second time in the 18-year history of the award for Outstanding Citizen of Greenbelt, the choice has gone to a resident of Springhill Lake. She is Joyce Chestnut, whose citizen activism, in the words of the selection committee chairman Tom Renahan, has "reached across the Beltway like a 'rainbow' and made life a little better on both sides." By winning this award, she became honorary parade marshal for the Greenbelt Labor Day parade.

Chestnut, who works for the U.S. Senate, has lived in Green-belt for 22 years. In Springhill Lake she has served in the Good Neighborhood Crime Watch program, with the Teen Club, and as president of the civic association, which she helped to organize. She also was a founder of the "Spring Speakers," an affiliate of the Toastmaster's Club, where she frequently gives educational speeches.

Chestnut has also been active in PTA organizations at the primary, middle school and secondary school levels and serves on the city's Advisory Planning Board and the Community Center Task Force. She is a member of the Greenbelt Arts Center, Citizens for Greenbelt and Friends of the Greenbelt Museum. She has also been a consistent volunteer for the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival. Outside of Greenbelt, she is active in the University United Methodist Church in College Park.

In accenting the award, Chestnut said, "I do the things I do in. Greenbelt because I love Greenbelt. But," she continued, "there are 20,000 outstanding citizens in Greenbelt."

Gifts to Winner Special certificates honoring Chestnut's achievements were presented by State Delegates Joan Pitkin and Charles Ryan on behalf of the House of Delegates, by Surfay La Cherry and held by Senator Leo Green on behalf of the Maryland Senate, and by Midge Patterson, Deputy Secre-tary of State, on behalf of the governor's office. Chestnut re-ceived a savings bond from the C & P Telephone Company, complimentary dinners for two from both the Greenbelt Marriott and Kargaroo Katie's, as well as a weekend for two at any Holiday Inn in the world, as a gift from Cockley & Williams and the Greenbelt Holiday Inn.

The Democratic and Republican candidates for State Senate and House of Delegates from Maryland's 23rd Legislative District participated in a Candidates Night hosted by Citizens for Greenbelt (CFG) on August 21. The Senate candidates are Democrats Donna Jo Campbell, Terezie S. Bohrer and incumbent Leo Green, as well as Republican Nicholas Palarino. Running for the three Democratic slots on the primary ballot for House of Delegates are Greenbelt City Councilmember Antoinette (Toni) Bram and incumbents Mary Conroy, Joan Pitkin and Charles (Buzz) Ryan. The Republi-can candidates for delegate are James W. Thompson and Robert Sanders.

Bob Zugby, president of Citizens for Greenbelt, welcomed the candidates and the audience and introduced the evening's moderator, Barry Schlesinger. Each candidate gave a four-minute opening statement, answering two questions posed in CFG's letter of invitation. Following the statements, the candidates responded to questions from the audience.

CFG's questions concerned ethics and the environment. The first was whether the candidates would support legislation restricting county council members who had accepted campaign contributions from developers from voting on zoning issues and whether the candidates would support such legislation statewide and for all levels of government.

The second question asked whether candidates supported a ban on throwaway bottles and what bills they would attempt to pass to reduce solid waste and the rapid filling of landfills. Senate Candidates' Statements

The order of the candidates' opening statements had been chosen by lot, with the Senate candidates speaking first.

Donna Jo Campbell declared herself a "pro-constitution, prochoice, pro-environment, pro-freedom of religion" candidate. pro-Campbell said that if elected she would like to hear from the citizens on the hard questions facing Maryland, including development and the crisis of health insur-ance. "We need to think globally, but work locally," she said, praising Greenbelt for practicing self-government. On the issue of ethics, she termed the restriction on county council voting a small part of the larger question of ethics in government. Supporting such legislation statewide, she called for larger steps in campaign reform.

Terezie Bohrer declared that she is not a "one-issue candidate" but is concerned about many issues: health care, elder concerns, education, the environment, family and child care, and development. She cited her extensive experience in city and county See CANDIDATE, page 5

Castaldi's Leadership Vital

Greenbelt and all other municipalities in the fourth councilmanic district will lose a lot in next week's Democratic primary election if incumbent County Councilmember Richard Castaldi should be deleated. He's in a tough race this year against an official of Bowie. That city of 43,000 Democrats accounts for about half the eligible voters in the Democratic primary. And believe it or not_in the city that is home to every one of our State representatives_ three delegates and a senator_Castaldi's opponent claims it's "unfair" that Bowie is represented by someone outside its borders.

Besides Castaldi's intimate knowledge of Greenbelt's history and particular needs (he was born and has always lived here), he has taken the lead on the County Council in controlling the pace and quality of development throughout the area. Having served for two decades as an employee of the MNCPPC's office of Zoning and Planning, Castaldi understands minutely this crucial aspect of the Coun-ty Council's responsibility. In particular, legislation he introduced blocked rezoning requests during the Master Plan review process; halted new development not supported by adequate roads, sewer and safety facilities; and required preservation of portions of woodlands in all new developments. His leadership has benefited citizens in all areas of the Council district, including Bowie. Since in this county nomination by the Democratic party is tantamount to election in November, we urge all registered Democrats in Greenbelt to turn out in force to return Richard Castaldi to this council seat.

In the campaign for State delegate_again in the Democratic primary_another Greenbelter is running. Fourterm city councilmember Antoinette ("Toni") Bram is qualified by education and training to serve in the House of Delegates. She holds both a B.S. and an M.A. degree in Urban Studies. For voters interested in the abortion issue, she differs from all the incumbents in offering a pro-choice position.

September 11 is primary day. The Greenbelt vote can make a difference. This year every vote will really count.

Crossing Guards Planned For ERHS Intersection

Greenbelt Police Chief James R. Craze informed Assistant City Manager Michael McLaughlin that crossing guards will be assigned at Eleanor Roosevelt High School to aid pedestrian traffic from 9 to 9:30 a.m. and 4 to 4:30 p.m. A survey, he said, will be completed on or about October 1 by the County Police "which will better detail the permanent need for crossing guards at that location.

According to Craze, Councilman Richard Castaldi, Captain Teresa Chambers and Lt Pill Stage of the Prince Georges County Police and Mrs. Dawson, supervisor of the crossing guards, "were instrumental in getting this task accomplished."

The action was taken following the August 30 city council work session. Attending were officials of the State Highway Administration, state legislators, county council and Roosevelt PTA officials.

Literacy Classes Offered 1990 is International Literacy

Year and Saturday, September 8 is International Literacy Day. Literacy is a word that means reading, writing, speaking and thinking. These are skills that help people do well in life. Functional illiteracy is the inability of an individual to use these skills in everyday life. It is estimated that 27 million Americans are functionally illiterate.

"If you know someone who needs help with literacy skills, says literacy teacher and Greenbelter Betty Sonneveldt, "Prince Georges County Adult Basic Education Classes can help you." Registration for free adult basic reading and math classes is Monway, September 17 at 7 p.m. at Eleanor Roosevelt High School. The school is one of many centers in the county offering this program.

"We should make literacy a priority for the future in Greenbelt," Sonneveldt said. For further information, call 386-1561.

ELECTIONS

Conroy, Joan Pitkin and Charles "Buzz" Ryan. In the spirited Ryan. In the spirited State Senate race, Bohrer is working hard to unseat pro-life incumbent Leo Green. Donna Jo Campbell, a pro-choice advocate, is also competing for the Senate slot.

Bram and Bohrer are fighting an uphill battle, especially since the incumbents have been included on a Democratic ticket that also lists Democratic incumbent candidates for such offices as governor, state comptroller, county executive, congress, and sheriff. Greenbelt City Council member Thomas X. White, who is not expected to have any trouble winning a third term on the Democratic State Central Committee for District 23, is also named. The slate, however, does not include any county council candidates

On the Democratic side, County Executive Parris Glendening is in a lively contest with County council member Floyd Wilson, Jr. Local political pundits believe that Glendening should win the nomination easily. Other oppo-nents are Arthur Haynes and Artie Polk.

Governor and House

In the major contests for Governor and Member of the House of Representatives, there appear to be clear favorites in the Democratic party. Incumbents William Donald Schaefer and Melvin Steinberg must be considered front runners for Governor and Lieutenant Governor over rivals Frederick Grisser, Jr. and Sanford Abrams, In the Congressional race, Steny Hoyer should have no trouble continuing his winning ways. His opponent is Abdul Ajum Muhammed. On the State level, incumbent Louis Goldstein is expected to be the victor in his face-off with Kenneth Frederick.

Republican Races

In the Republican primary there is no competition for nomination as candidates for State Senator, House of Delegates, County Executive, Clerk of the Circuit Court, Judge of the Orphans Court and Sheriff.

Among Republicans the quest for the Governor/Lt. Governor nomination is between the duos of Ross Pierpont/Lloyd Reynolds and William Shepard/Lois Shenard. In the race for the Congressional seat are Lee Breuer and Gregory K. Washington. Washington appears to have the edge since he was endorsed by the Prince Georges County Republican Central Committee. Seeking the Commtroller nomination are Larry Epstein and Marshall Jones, Jr.

On the Republican side Theodore Henderson and John Kallenberger are competing for the county council nomination in District 4.

Other Races

In the race for the Democratic nomination for the Clerk of the Circuit Court are Shirley Hill and Vivian Jenkins. For Judge of the Orphans Court, Democrats may vote for three among the following: Dee Frances Alban, Angelo Castelli, George Trees, Jeffrey Fisher and Lucy Warr. The contest for sheriff is among incumbent James Aluisi, Frederick Jones and Law. rence Keval.

Greenbelt will vote for two candidates for the Democratic Central Committee from the 23rd Legislative District. Running are Greenbelt mayor pro-tem Thomas X. White, who currently serves on the central committee, William Aleshire, former Greenbelter, Donald Beach, William Boone Jr., Randel Dawes, and

Lawrence Keval. Voters will also choose one at-large member of the Democratic Central Committee in District 26. Candidates are Severina Benzon and Mark Osborne.

Republican voters will vote for two candidates for the Republican central committee from the 23rd district. Vying for the two slots are Teresa di Stefano, Everett Edmond II, James House, William B. Johnson and John Scott.

There is no competition among the Democrats and Republicans in the Attorney General race.

Schools Closed

County public schools will be closed on Tuesday, September 11. primary election day. Sr. Open House At Youth Center The Greenbelt Recreation Department is holding its second biannual Senior Citizens Open House on Tuesday, September 11 at the Youth Center from 10 a. m. to 2 p.m. The open house will provide the opportunity for senior citizens to register for all the classes and activities that are being offered in the Fall. THANKS

To the Editor: I am a volunteer ambulance technician with the nearby Berwyn Heights Vol. Fire Dept. and Rescue Squad, Inc. but last Sunday evening I was just another Greenbelt citizen enjoying the Labor Day Festival. During the grandstand presentations one speaker rightfully thanked the Public Works and Police Departments for their contributions toward the Festivai. I would also like to thank the members of the Greenbelt Vol. Fire Dept. who volunteered their to man an informative time booth and who vigilantly stood by during the entire weekend, ready to respond to any fire, rescue or medical emergency that arose.

As a Greenbelt citizen, I appreciate their being there and as a fire department volunteer I thought they might appreciate a "thank you" for an often thankless job. Cindy Frend

False Information To the Editor:

During my 24 years as a Greenbelt resident, I have refrained from writing letters to the Editor and from commenting publicly on election or political issues. However, I have rarely been as outraged as I am right now.

Recently, I received a flyer at my home from G. Frederick Robinson of Bowie who is trying to unseat County Councilman Richard Castaldi of Greenbelt. In this very negative campaign material, Robinson accuses Castaldi of being part of "shameful land deals and flexible ethics," of being unconcerned about "uncontrollable development" and loss of woodlands. I take exception to this, as I know that Castaldi was the major sponsor of recent county legislation to preserve trees in development and to require adequate public facilities before new development is permitted. Over the years he has sponsored and worked toward the enactment of other legislation important to Greenbelt and the county in order to minimize the detrimental impact of development allowed under existing zoning. Richard Castaldi also played a leading role in helping Greenbelt obtain over 200 acres of open space in all parts of the city - including Schrom Hills Park in Greenbelt East.

I am concerned that some new residents of Greenbelt might be misled by the false statements Robinson's flyer. Castaldi has in fairly represented the interests of Greenbelt, the 4th District, and Prince Georges County for many years. Castaldi's experience and background as an employee of the Park and Plannng Commission for over 20 years, his service on the City Council as council member and mayor and as member and chairman of the Metro Board contrast sharply with the experience and qualifications listed by Robinson.

If Robinson intends to "return honesty to the political process,"

SWEDISH BOY NEEDS HOME IN OUR COMMUNITY

Jesper from Sweden is anxiously awaiting news that there is a family in the Prince Georges County area who will help fulfill his dream of spending a year in America. Jesper enjoys golf, tennis, music and movies and is hoping to pursue some of these interests during his exchange year. He is also looking forward to developing new 'American' interests and hobbies that he can share with his friends when he returns to Sweden.

Each year, ASSE International Student Exchange programs provide qualified European students with the opportunity to spend an academic year in America attending a local high school and learning about life in America. If your family would help make Jesper's year in the Prince Geor-County area possible, ges please call your local Area Representative, Janet Smith at 301/567-7288 or ASSE's toll free number at 800-333-3802. (Continued from page one) government, including service on a number of task forces, and her expertise in health care. On the ethics question, Bohrer said that campaign reform is needed for elected officials. Not only all would she support a bill to keep officials from voting on zoning questions or other matters where they had accepted contributions but she would back laws calling for full disclosure and limits to spending for campaigns. "Our election system is badly flawed," Bohrer said, and we need public financing of elections; however, there is no citizen support for such a measure at this time.

On the environmental question, Bohrer called for a focus on marketing to create incentives for recycling. She would support such measures as procurement policies to create a demand for recycled goods, tax incentives for recycled products and recycling equipment, and assistance to paper mills in retrofitting for recycled products. Polls show that 95 percent of the 23rd District support reduction in excess packaging, returnable bottles and an expanded goal for newspaper recycling, said Bohrer. She noted that her campaign materials are all printed on recycled paper.

Incumbent Leo Green said that these are tough economic times in Maryland and the United States. The federal deficit, inflation, and now the crisis in the Mid-East are placing a great strain on state governments, he said, calling for "mature economic decisions by the state Senate." On the ethics question, Green said that he had cospon-sored the previous bill restricting county council members' votes on zoning questions, which has since been declared unconstitutional by the state Supreme Court. It was a surgical step that raised citizens' consciousness to the problem, he said. "Prince George's County is up for sale," Green said. "Money talks and planning walks." The county is in trouble with overdevelopment, he said, calling for caps on spending by Political Action Committees (PACs) in addition to ethics legislation.

He would support not only a bottle law to reduce solid waste, but would impose bigger tipping fees and higher mandatory recycling charges to reduce solid waste.

Asking plaintively, "Are there any Republicans out there?" the sole Republican Senate candidate, Nick Palarino declared that he is running as "an alternative to the Democratic Party machine, which is out of touch with the citizens." Prince Georges County is "the last bastion of one-party politics," he said, urging that the voters follow the lead of West Germany, Poland and Yugoslavia, which threw off the abuse of the one-party system. He quoted Money magazine's citation of Maryland as "Tax Hell" and said the Democratic government is "reaching into your pocket for more taxes" and will tax Maryland into a deficit.

Speaking to the ethics onestion, Palarino said that officials should be held to higher standards of ethics than ordinary citizens, with no appearance of impropriety. Ethics legislation should address state officials as well, he said. He called PAC money "a threat to the integrity of the election process," asking, "What are they getting for their money?" On the landfill question, he called for more recycling, including returnable bottles and an increase in paper recycling, as well as enforcement of existing legislation to reduce waste. Delegate Candidates' Statements

The Democratic candidates for the three delegate seats spoke first. Incumbent Charles (Buzz) Ryan, chair of the Assembly's Appropriations Committee, countered Palarino's depiction of Maryland as "Tax Hell" by citing Maryland's ranking as "the most fiscally sound state in the Union." On the ethics question, Ryan said that Maryland needs to look at campaign reform statewide. He called for increased disclosure and limits to contribu-tions "by individuals, corpora-tions and PACs. There is no cap on PAC contributions now." Increasing the frequency of disclosures and reporting of contributions should be implemented statewide, he said. He agreed with Bohrer that public financing should be the ultimate goal but that it will be difficult.

On the environmental question, Ryan said that Maryland is moving forward on recycling and Prince Georges County is aggressively pursuing its recycling program. He called for a one dollar increase in the landfill tipping fee to go directly to the state Department of the Environment. However, he noted that at most, 30 percent of waste can be recycled. We need a change in attitudes, he said, to reduce solid waste.

Incumbent Ma.y Conroy also supports an ethics package for all elected officials, she said. She called for construction of trash processing plants and aggressive marketing of recycled materials. She would support mandatory recycling goals and reduction in the use of non-recyclable materials. Other concerns, Conroy said, include drugs, crime, and health care for the elderly. Incumbent Joan Pitkin said that we must "restrict even the that we must "restrict even the appearance of undue influence of developers on zoning." How do other counties minimize developer influence? she asked, suggesting that a separate, nonelected zoning board may be an answer. She supports the recommendations of the Governor's Panel on Campaign Reform. She is a staunch advocate of the environment, citing her 100 percent voting record on environmental concerns. "There is no more 'away' to throw things, Pit. kin said, and the government has a critical role to play in waste reduction.

"I am not part of any Party Machine," said Toni Bram, pointing out that she would bring a needed, different geographic element to county representation in the House of Delegates. A number of health issues need immediate attention, she said. Maryland needs federal child care funds and to invest in the Women's, Infants and Children (WIC) program. Catastrophic insurance and medical assistance for inhome care are also priority items. In addition, Bram called for revoking the drivers licenses of first-time drug offenders.

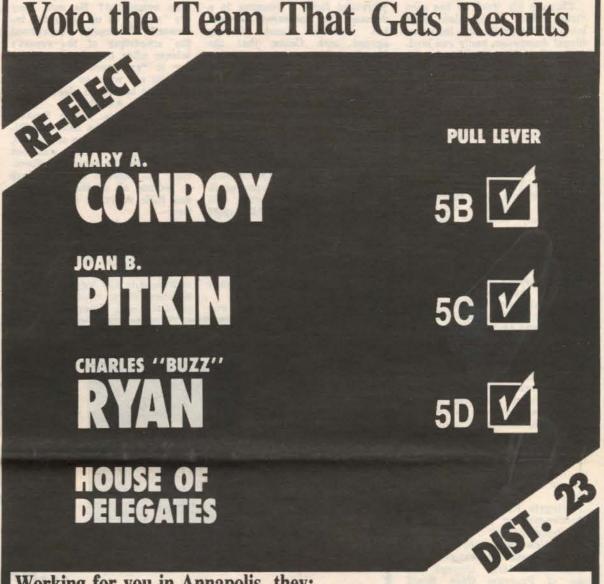

On the ethics question, Bram said she had difficulty with a bill that "singles out one county, and one level of government." Any ethics bill should apply to all elected officials. "Elected officials should be ethical leaders," said Bram. She would like to see Maryland on a fast track for recycling. Among her environmental ideas are legislation to require less packaging and other source reduction measures, as well as landfill mining to make room in existing landfills.

GREENBELT NEWS REVIEW

"Ich vas ein Greenbelter," declared Republican candidate Robert Sanders, who used to live in Springhill Lake. In his work for the National Security Agency he was trusted by the highest levels of government, he said, "and I hope you trust me." He supports statewide ethics legislation for elected officials. "and isn't that tragic? It's tragic that we have to babysit" those from whom we should expect a high standard of conduct. He would support stronger legislation governing campaign reporting and vigorous enforcement. "I have no PAC support," Sanders said; "I have no money."

Sanders said he had more questions than answers on the environment, asking if Maryland is using the best state-of-the-art technology in encouraging recycling and use of recycled materiele. He would support returnable bottles or a tax on nonreturnables. Recycling of maner is important not just for trash reduction but for preservation of trees, Sanders said.

Republican candidate James Thompson, an inspector in the county's zoning office, spoke feelingly of the need to eliminate interference from state, county and city officials in zoning matters (although he had never seen interference from Greenbelt). He said he won a (Continued on Next Page)

Elected officials set ethical standards, should Thompson said, supporting limits to PAC and individual campaign contributions. He does not accept campaign contributions and, if elected, would donate 15 percent of his salary to public education and safety in the county.

Through his work he has seen "trash that would blow your mind," Thompson said, including illegal dumpsites, badly run land. fills and toxic waste dumps. He would support mandatory recycling, including requiring all government offices to use recycled paper.

Community Zoning Role

Following the candidates' statements, Schlesinger opened the floor for audience questions. He asked that questioners not engage the candidates in arguments. "If you don't agree with what the candidates say," said Schlesinger, "vote for their opponents.

The first question, by Rick Meetre, continued the discussion of county zoning. Would the candidates support reactivating Article 7 of the County Charter to give local communities a role in zoning, so that control over land use and zoning would not be vested in one body?

Delegate Pitkin responded that previous efforts in that direction had failed. Local control would involve putting zoning questions to referendum, a lengthy process making development practically impossible. Senator Green noted that zoning control efforts are instead focusing on providing a larger state role, particularly in all critical environmental areas and in decisions on infrastructure

Delegate Ryan said that local decision-making has resulted in a "hodge-podge" around the state. Now the state is trying to implement long-range planning, particularly through the use of Program Open Space money.

Flag Burning

Charles Hagelgans, noting that all the incumbents voted for Maryland's anti-flag-desecration bill, asked if they would support a constitutional amendment against flag burning if it came to the state for approval.

Ryan and Green said that Maryland's bill specifically addresses not mere burning but burning with the intent to incite civil unrest or riot. A constitutional amendment goes too far, said Ryan. "Our bill covers us well.

Senate candidate Palarino, who saw too many people bleed for the flag; Delegate Conroy, whose late husband served in Korea; delegate candidates Bram and and Sanders supported a con-stitutional amendment. "I would support a constitutional amendment that is constitutional," said Bram, noting the need to preserve existing constitutional guarantees of free speech.

Senate candidates Campbell and Bohrer and delegate candidates Pitkin and Thompson opposed a constitutional amendment. While the flag is an important symbol, they agreed, it is only a symbol and does not require tampering with the Bill of Rights to protect. Campbell called flag burning a "specious, emotional issue" which diverts attention from more serious issues.

Regressive Income Tax Eunice Coxon asked why, with a regressive income tax, the legislature has "sat on" the report of the Lino Commission on reform of the tax structure.

Delegate Ryan said that the study is not complete. The commission is holding public hearings this year and is on schedule to issue its report on December 15. "After the election," noted Coxon. "There'll be other elections," replied Ryan.

Delegate Pitkin said that Maryland faces a dilemma in a demand for increased services but decreased taxes. Conroy agreed with Coxon that the Maryland income tax is regressive and should be more equitable. Conroy had introduced a "snack tax" bill to raise money to provide services for those on the developmentally disabled waiting list.

Bram noted that though the Lino Commission report will be issued in December, a bill implementing its recommendations probably won't be introduced in 1991. The state legislature will need time to study the report and craft a bill. She was concerned that the taxing powers of municipalities might be reduced, saying she would not like to see Greenbelt or any city lose its ability to raise money to meet local needs.

Senator Green said that any bill would have to wait for the federal tax package. Don't let the federal government pass on its debts to the state, cautioned Campbell. Bohrer said that while no total legislative package could be passed in 1991, some elements of the recommendations could be addressed, perhaps in public hearings. The Commission will probably recommend a progressive income tax with less reliance on property tax, she said.

How is it, Palarino asked, that the Democrats know what will be in the report, if the study hasn't been completed? He said they are "setting us up for a tax increase." Thompson questioned the scheduling of the report's release after the election, terming it "arrogance of officials" who do not want to be held accountable before an election.

Abortion

Keith Jahoda, noting Senator Green's role in the Senate's filibuster on the abortion rights bill, asked why this role was not cited in Green's campaign literature. The question was broadened to include all of the candidates and their views on such legislation.

Green noted that the filibuster did not prevent voting on the bill. The Senate passed a bill that was killed in the House. He cited four concerns that need to be addressed in any legislation: that abortion of a viable fetus be permitted only if required to protect the life of the mother; parental notice, with a judicial bypass provision, for abortions sought by minors; the same guidekines for clinics performing abortions as apply to hospitals; and reporting of abortions, necessary for allocation of federal and state family planning funds. As to why the issue does not appear in his literature, Green said that everyone knows his position, especially after eight days in a row of appearing in the Washington Post during the filibuster. As an incumbent, he runs on his record, he said.

Bohrer said that she is a prochoice believer. "A woman has the right to make this decision with her doctor," she said. Having worked as a nurse in the emergency room, she has seen the results of the prohibition against safe, legal abortions.

Campbell cited the constitutional right of freedom of religion. "The legislature should not control breeding," she said.

Palarino said that we must "care for children before they are born as much as after birth. He cited the fact that 80 percent of abortions in Maryland are performed within the first 12 weeks of conception as evidence that abortion is being used for birth control. He strongly supports the requirement for parental consent for abortion on minors.

Ryan said that while "I am

Thursday, September 6, 1990 philosophically and personally opposed to abortion," he believes legislature is incompetent to deal with the issue. Individuals should decide, he said, "and answer to their own conscience." He noted that Maryland funds Medicaid abortions and that the legislature did not seek to deal with the issue, but it was brought up by the recent

Supreme Court decision. Conroy's response was succinct. "I am opposed to abortion," she said.

Pitkin defended the committee that killed the bill passed by the Senate that joined two opposing hills and both sides of the issue. She noted that the State Attorney General had lobbied to have the package killed. Calling abor-"tragic" and "more than a tion religious issue," Pitkin quoted a recent Parade magazine call-in poll in which a majority of respondents opposed abortion.

Bram said she is uncomfortable with lawyers debating viability and other biological issues; the issue does not belong in the legislature. She said women should have the freedom to choose and make personal, reproductive decisions. She noted that she is the only freedom of choice candidate for delegate among the Democrats.

Thompson said that he is "proabortion-and I'm not afraid to say the word." He would like to (Continued next page)

Sanders said that he is against abortion except in cases of rape or incest. He would like to see full prosecution of rapists. He noted that candidates "get in a lot of trouble" if they put their positions on controversial issues in their campaign literature.

Eastern Bypass Konrad Herling asked if the candidates would support the proposed "Eastern Bypass" or a second phase of Metro that would link the termini of the currently planned system. The candidates were united in opposing the bypass. Most spoke in favor of expanded Metro and bus routes, light rail and other means of rapid transit. Pitkin summarized most of the candidates' sentiments when she said that economic and commercial interests have revitalized the bypass plan; it is not in the master plan and not wanted by the citizens. Rail is expensive, she warned, and said we must "learn to love the bus," including private contractors and cross-county bus systems.

Palarino warned that the "Democratic Party Machine is not listening to its constituency." GREENBELT NEWS REVIEW

He quoted County Executive Parris Glendening as saying that "the silent majority" wants the bypass.

Green, calling the bypass an "environmental disaster and developer's dream," warned that the inter-county connector is a sleeper issue. That road is part of the master plan and has been funded, Green said. Campbell, saying "We're paving Maryland and dying of pollution," called for a change in lifestyle and research into alternative transportation modes. She'd like to see the Star Trek method of beaming people from place to place. Wetlands

Clara Kuehn noted that under new wetlands legislation, Maryland is applying for authority to regulate construction in wetlands, previously held by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. Would the candidates support application by the county for local control over wetlands?

None of the candidates endorsed county or local control. Pitkin, saying the only analogy was the good job the county had done in the critical areas planning, was willing to hear more but did not want to see the legislation weakened controlling wetlands. Campbell also expressed interest in looking seriously at some measure of local control.

Bram expressed the prevalent view that wetlands are not a local issue but need comprehensive planning. Waters of Maryland affect the Chesapeake Bay, as do those of Pennsylvania and Virginia. Control should stay at the state level, she said, to permit negotiation between the states.

Conroy said she "doesn't trust Maryland to watch out for our wetlands" and said the Assembly and Senate will have to be vigilant against developers who will try to build in wetlands. Green, calling nontidal wetlands "nature's kidneys," also said we need strong enforcement of wetlands regulations and that county control would be "a disaster."

Bohrer said Maryland would be wise to enter into a "partnership of federal and state" agencies for wetlands control, noting that the Corps has more expertise than the state on this issue.

Congratulations to the Green-briar Coed Softball Team who finished their first season with a 4-3 record! The team experienced some problems early in the season, but rallied together for a winning season. The team had a good time this year and is looking forward to playing in the league next spring. Ground Is Broken For Indoor Pool

On Labor Day, ground was broken for the start of construction of the Greenbelt Indoor Swim Center. Thus the largest and the last of the Capital Improvement Projects to be funded by the 1985 bond issue is about to begin.

In his welcoming comments, Recreation Director Hank Irving noted the appropriateness of signalling the start of this project on Labor Day, as the city's outdoor pool completes its 52nd season.

In Mayor Gil Weidenfeld's remarks, he described to the audience what they will experience at the new pool—a bright facility with a translucent roof and glass window walls, planters filled with tropical plants, a whirbool spa with a water fall, a free play pool area and a main pool for competitive swimming, lap swimming, other pool uses. When completed, the city will have an outstanding swim center and health spa facility.

Irving recognized the dignitaries in attendance at the groundbreaking. These included members of the Greenbelt City Council; State Senator Leo Green; County Council member Richard Castaldi; Miss Greenbelt, Shannon Grady and Little Miss Greenbelt Brandy Worley; pool architect David Almy of Sullivan and Almy; Ron Armstrong, president of Kettler Brothers Construc-

TO GREENBELT DEMOCRATS:

During the past eight years, Greenbelt has benefitted from the effective legislative efforts of State Senator Leo Green and Delegates Ryan, Conroy and Pitkin.

As a Greenbelt City Councilmember, I have had an opportunity to work with members of the 23rd District Legislative Team and have seen first hand how significant a role they can play in securing important benefits that are crucial for maintaining the quality of life in Greenbelt.

Buzz Ryan's position as Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee has been the key, not only for Prince Georges County programs, but also for assuring state support for acquisition of Parcel 1, grants for a new community center and greater police aid funds for Greenbelt.

Mary Conroy sits on the House Ways and Means Committee and was a great help in the Municipal Police Aid compromise worked out by the General Assembly and the Governor's Budget officials.

and the Governor's Budget officials. On the environmental front, there is no one more consistent and dedicated than Delegate Joan Pitkin in legislative efforts that put Maryland out front in environmental protection — Joan's efforts will help Greenbelt secure its "Green" future.

For nearly twenty years — almost for as long as I have been an active spokesman and leader in the Greenbelt community, I have worked with, and enjoyed the support of State Senator Leo Green. Leo is Greenbelt's strongest advocate. He sets a high standard for ethics in government, works tirelessly to protect the 23rd District (including both Bowie and Greenbelt) from overdevelopment, and recognizes the immediate and personal value of constituent services. Leo's position on the Senate Finance Committee gives him a unique and important role for looking after Greenbelt's interest:

- Leo Green and the other members of the Prince Georges Senate delegation effectively put a halt to excessive developer contributions to County Council members.
- Leo's efforts in working with Greenbelt East citizens obtained a signal light at the Greenbelt Road/ Mandan Rd. intersection — He continues to assist the City's efforts to improve safety on Greenbelt Road
- Leo has worked effectively to bring state grants to the city — for land accuisition (Parcel 1), for community center and adult day care
- Pressure from Leo Green and the other senators resulted in adoption of the adequate public facilities ordinance by the County government. This is an effective and successful legislative team for the 23rd District and Greenbelt.

I urge your support for their re-election on September 11.

Greenbelt will be facing important and crucial challenges in the future. The ability to maintain our quality of life may well depend on the experince and proven leadership of the 23rd District Legislative Team. Your vote and support is important.
