Community Center Plans Proceed Despite North End Transfer Delay

by Diane Oberg

The city has begun moving forward with plans for a new Community Center at Center School. However, the city has still not reached agreement with the school system to transfer the city-owned North End School to the school board, and for the school board to transfer Center School through the county to the city when the new school is complete.

North End Transfer

Council approved a resolution reverting the North End deed to the county on July 24 but conditioned the transfer upon the signing of a memorandum of understanding between the city, County Executive Parris Glendening and the superintendent of schools. When the school property was staked out, Laurel Hill residents discovered that some of the property enclosed by their back yard fences actually belongs to the North End School site. The residents then protested to council the loss of this property. Assistant City Manager Michael McLaughlin told the News Review that the city has been attempting to work out some solution to this issue.

School Board Representative Suzanne Plogman confirmed that the fence issue has been the primary problem delaying the agreement. She told the News Review that she had presented two motions to the school board to attempt to resolve the issue. One would have granted GHI a legal easement to the disputed property, the other would have granted residents a two year grace period to move the fences to the property line. Both motions failed.

Plogman said that the board saw an obligation as elected officials to protect public property from private encroachment and were also concerned that approval of an easement would create a legal precedent for neighbors to encroach on other school sites.

Although Plogman's motions were defeated, McLaughlin said that City Solicitor Robert Manzi and School Board attorney Paul Nussbaum have worked out an informal understanding that the fences will not have to be removed for at least one and a half to two years.

While the school board has not given the city an absolute deadline for the transfer, Plogman said that the board has warned the county council and Glendening that delays are increasing the costs of the project. Nussbaum has advised the board that school officials should not go into the building to prepare for asbestos removal or demolition until the deed is transferred.

School system Director of Planning John Huffman told

Plogman that once the board receives the North End deed, the school system will seek bids for asbestos removal, finalize construction documents and seek bids for a contractor. He estimates that demolition of the building can begin approximately six months after the deed is transferred. The first "real work" on the school is scheduled to begin this winter, according to Plogman, although the board has not yet advertised for bids.

According to Plogman, Nussbaum feels that the transfer issues could be resolved within the next week and that the North End property can be transferred directly from the city to the School Board, without going through the county government. At the same time, Nussbaum will convey the deed for Center School to the county. However, the resolution approved by city council last July transferred the North End property to the county government, not to the School Board. McLaughlin said it appears that a new resolution transferring the property directly to the School Board will be required, but that the city solicitor will have to determine whether this is necessary.

Community Center Planning

Meanwhile consultants Nancy Epstein and Phil Esocoff of the architectural firm of Keyes Condon Florance (KCF) met with the Greenbelt City Council on November 8 to discuss their schedule for developing a usage plan for the community center at Center School. On September 17 the Greenbelt City Council hired KCF to provide professional architectural and engineering services for the renovation. The consultants are currently interviewing potential users of the center. At the suggestion of Councilmember Thomas X. White, the architects will hold an open interview session for citizens on November 29.

The consultants' schedule calls for completing a plan for the center by late February 1991. Two public workshops will be held on the plan, the first of which is tentatively scheduled for Saturday, January 12. This first session will focus on the building's condition and history, a discussion of the overall site plan, the needs of the interested groups and some preliminary recommendations from the consultants. To prepare for this session, they are currently collecting data about the building and the groups interested in using it.

Various experts will also examine the historic value of the building, conduct a mechanical/electrical and plumbing survey and evaluate the building against current codes.

After the workshop, the consultants will meet with council to review the public comment, then Keyes Condon Florance will develop alternatives for use of the building. The resulting plans will be presented to the public at the second workshop. Finally a written program, historic report, mechanical/electrical/plumbing recommendations and budget estimates will be presented to the city.

The city currently has approximately 8000 sq. ft. of space. Continued on page 8

Centerway Construction Is Nearing Completion

After nearly five months of construction, the Centerway construction project is nearing completion. Construction crews have been working six days a week since early October to ensure a timely completion of project work. It is now scheduled to be completed by December 20.

Currently crews are concentrating efforts on reconstruction of the grassy areas between the Municipal Building and the Sovran Bank. City crews have also been busy at work, planting nine of the new London Plane trees, installing the underground irrigation system and striping Centerway.

While much work remains to be completed, the project has picked up pace after early delays. Work to be completed includes placement of the granite pavers around the tree wells and bordering the sidewalk squares, construction of a 4" water line to service the new underground irrigation system, placement of brick pavers across Centerway at the mall crossing, construction of new sidewalk to the Municipal Building, regrading and sodding of disturbed grass areas, construction of new curb and the creating of 10 parking spaces adjacent to the grass areas by the bank and the Municipal Building.

Placement of brick pavers across Centerway will necessitate closing the street for two to three days. Weather permitting, city crews will plant the remaining street trees at the end of November.

Although Centerway has been striped for parking, the final surface course will not be placed until the spring. The surface course will add two inches of asphalt to the existing street surface and bring all storm drain inlets to final grade.

The Centerway project has involved reconstruction of the street from the Mobil station to the Municipal building access drive, reconstruction of sidewalk areas, replacement of existing street trees with large London plane trees, installation of an underground irrigation system to enhance the growth of the trees, realignment of the access road, and enlargement and redesign of the Municipal Building grounds. Seventy-five percent of the project cost is being funded through Community Development Block grants. The remaining funds come from the city's capital budget.

CITY CONFLICT WITH STATE DJS SEEMS TO BE NEAR RESOLUTION

by Virginia Beauchamp

Greenbelt City Manager James K. Giese has hopes, he said in a recent memo, that what had appeared to be an impasse between the Maryland Department of Juvenile Services (DJS) and the three municipalities of Greenbelt, College Park and Bowie concerning the funding of youth service programs can be resolved. At a meeting on Tuesday, November 6 at which Giese represented the three cities, Robert Fontaine, Legal Counsel for DJS, presented a revised procedure for securing client information necessary for DJS funding of city-run programs. This proposal is now under review by professional staff members of the three cities.

At issue is the obligation on the part of youth service programs, such as Greenbelt CARES, to provide confidentiality to the clients who are served. At the same time the state DJS has demanded names of such clients so as to evaluate the cost-effectiveness of the programs in keeping troubled juveniles out of the criminal system. Periodically bureau directors in the past were required to review the state's files to determine if any of their clients were listed.

In early May, however, DJS Director Susan Saperstein ruled that DJS itself needed the names in order to follow their progress and to evaluate the program's effectiveness. She described this requirement as "a very reasonable request," which would help the state achieve "greater accountability" in how it spends its money.

According to the city manager it appears that the three cities are prepared to sign the agreement. In order to protect privacy, a blind match procedure will be utilized to track clients.

This requirement came in the form of an amendment to the Fiscal Year 1991 agreement between DJS and the individual municipal programs. State funds would be withheld for all clients who refused to sign a waiver permitting release of their names to DJS.

Tours of Holiday Lights Historic Sites Scheduled

The Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission will sponsor tours of the holiday lights and historic sites in Prince Georges County from December 15-17. Transportation departs from the Colony Inn South at 5:30 p.m. The cost of the tour includes transportation, dinner and a holiday memento.

The tour includes visits to the Historic Mary Surratt House in Clinton, the stopping off place of John Wilkes Booth after he had assassinated President Lincoln, a holiday dinner at the Historic Colonial Mount Airy Plantation Inn and Restaurant on Roarville Road; and a drive through the Festival of Lights at Watkins Regional Park, where participants will view a display of more than 100,000 lights.

For reservations and information call Kathy Stump at (301) 779-2011 or (301) 277-8456.

Aroused by what was interpreted to be a violation of ethical responsibilities to clients, Greenbelt appealed to Governor William Donald Schaefer to intercede with DJS. When Schaefer, however, declined to take such action, Giese wrote back, suggesting that the issue was more complex than the governor was aware.

"It has been a basic tenet of youth service bureaus," Giese wrote, "to serve all who seek their help. DJS is now taking the position that you can only be served if you are willing to have your name made a part of the criminal justice system records."

On behalf of the Maryland Association of Youth Service Bureaus, Inc., President Audrey F. Moore supported the concern expressed by the city of Greenbelt. Copies of the reply to Schaefer were sent as well to the State Delegates Mary Corroy, Joan Pitkin and Charles Ryan; to State Senator Leo Green; and to County Executive Parris Glendening.

In a separate letter of September 17 to Alfred I. Murphy, DJS Deputy Secretary, Giese described the CARES program as a "highly professional family counseling service," supervised by both a psychologist and a licensed social worker "obligated to maintain client confidentiality." CARES is directed by Carol Leventhal.

Parkway Renovation Project Is Working Its Way North

The second project in the multi-year, multi-million dollar rehabilitation of the Baltimore-Washington Parkway is set to begin immediately on two miles of parkway from Riverdale Road (Md. Route 410) to the Capital Beltway (I-95).

Construction will be similar to the work in the first project which is nearing completion between Kenilworth Avenue and Riverdale Road.

Motorists can expect traffic restrictions during the new construction. Two lanes of traffic will be maintained in both directions during rush hour periods, 6-9 a.m. and 3-7 p.m. Traffic may be reduced to one lane in either direction during non-rush hours and on weekends.

The construction will be accomplished under a $10 million contract awarded to Concrete General, Inc., of Gaithersburg, Md. to be administered for the National Park Service by the Federal Highway Administration. Completion is scheduled for November 1990.

In addition to reconstructing and repaving the two miles of parkway, work under the contract will include grinding and smoothing the worst of the bumpy joints.

The construction is part of a total rehabilitation of the 19-mile federal portion of the parkway from U.S. Route 50 (at the District of Columbia line) to Jessup Road (Md. Route 175). The total project is estimated to cost $141 million over the next 7-9 years.

The total project includes major reconstruction at parkway interchanges, most of which await completion of the main roadway.

Work that has been finished includes reconstruction of the four bridges at Fort Meade Road (Md. Route 198) and construction of a new NSA interchange just north of Savage Road (Md. Route 32).

Work in progress includes rehabilitation of the Big Patuxent River bridge just north of Laurel-Bowie Road (Md. Route 197), expected to be complete by early 1991; and reconstruction of the Savage Road (Md. Route 31) interchange.

An estimated 90,000 vehicles travel the Baltimore-Washington Parkway daily. Built in 1953, the first 19 miles of the parkway from the District line to Route 175 at Jessup, Md., is under federal jurisdiction of the National Park Service. The remaining 12-mile portion is administered by the State of Maryland.

Repairs to the existing pavement were made in the mid-1970s, but the pavement since has deteriorated badly.

Not Responsive

To the Editor:
 I read Suzanne Plogman's campaign ad in the November 1 issue. The ad highlights her accomplishments and credentials which serve to best attest to her ability to serve as School Board Representative. Responsiveness is one of the many that are highlighted. I don't believe that Ms. Plogman brings responsiveness or professionalism to the position she fills.

My wife and I attended a special council meeting in July regarding the replacement of the Center School. I vividly recall Suzanne Plogman tongue lashing a group of Greenbelt citizens who had just finished expressing their concerns regarding the design of the new school. I remember being shocked and later embarrassed that an elected representative of the community would address her constituents in such an unprofessional manner. She apparently thought very little of their concerns as well as their right to express them. The campaign ad states that she is available to resolve the concerns and problems of parents, students and teachers. Her responsiveness, and apparently her respect, are reserved for this special interest group. I agree that Ms. Plogman, as the School Board Representative is responsible for seeing that issues which may be of special concern to parents, students and teachers are addressed. However, she is obligated to all Greenbelt citizens who may wish to express their concerns regarding how these issues may impact the community. She further has a responsibility to treat all Greenbelt citizens in a respectful and professional manner.

A ROAST

"A Mayor's Lot Is Not a Happy One"

by Mary Moien and Sandy Smith

Greenbelt Mayor Gil Weidenfeld was the target of a celebrity roast held on November 11, in support of the Greenbelt Arts Center. Before the event was over his childhood, early career, political acumen, legal ability, manners, and even his dog Tuffy were attacked by friends and colleagues.

Al Herling, roast chairman, promised a program of "lies, half truths, scandals, and excursions into the dark side of the mayor's life." Celebrity roasters, long-time friend Charlie Brown, County Councilmember Richard Castaldi, Prince Georges County Judge Jerry Devlin, Arts Center Founder Konrad Herling, and Arts Center Board Member Tom Renahan kept that promise.

First up, Charlie Brown told the story of environmental Gil, who was stranded in a wilderness area and after three days caught an endangered condor, killed, cooked and ate it. Moments later a game warden arrived, lamenting the loss of the condor but agreeing that it was necessary under the circumstances to save Gil from starvation. The game warden said, "I do have one question, since I'll never know, what does a condor taste like?" Gil responded, "Oh, sort of a cross between a spotted owl and a bald eagle." Brown also told a story of Weidenfeld's dog Tuffy, a campaign sign and a pet rabbit and advised the Mayor to "remember everything to tell your lawyer."

Richard Castaldi praised the mayor for his achievements, remembering his humble start on a chicken farm in New Jersey. In fact, when Gil was a baby, his family had no baby powder, so floured him instead. In hot weather Gil was the only child to break out in bagels, Castaldi asserted. He also reported on the current shortage of turkeys as reported by the Department of Agriculture but unrecognized by Greenbelt voters.

Tom Renahan began his comments with stories of Gil's childhood. "You might assume that Gil was a good student, but you would be wrong," Renahan relates. Young Weidenfeld was not a star pupil. He thought Noah's wife was Joan of Arc. And he was not popular as a child. When he played seesaw, he had to do both ends. He might have overcome that inauspicious start, but chose a career in law. Renahan related a current development in research. Lawyers are now being used instead of rats in scientific research projects. There are three major reasons for this change: There were more lawyers than rats, researchers occasionally became attached to rats, and there are some things that even rats won't do.

A special guest, Myra Rash (played by local actress Sunday Wynkoop), then recounted her favorite moments in the mayor's trips out of town on official city business. In a dramatically provocative voice she recalled sitting in a bar with the Mayor and offering to do "anything Gil wanted for $100." He took out a $100 bill from his wallet, placed it on the bar, and said, "Paint my house." She remembered other city council members as well who attended the Maryland Municipal League meetings in such work-like urban settings as Ocean City.

With apologies to Gilbert and Sullivan, a rag-tag chorale group, ably accompanied by Al Herling, sang "A Mayor's Lot is not a Happy One." The crowd of 150 friends, associates, local dignitaries and Greenbelt citizens joined the chorus with "When there's a heavy civic duty to be done, a Mayor's Lot is not a happy one."

Konrad Herling insisted that the mayor should be honored to have a roast since many other distinguished citizens have never had a roast, including a certain State Senator after whom Greenbelt was named. Even Elaine Skolnik, who has covered the entire political career of Gil Weidenfeld, has never had a roast.

Jerry Devlin overcame the problem of being a lawyer by becoming a judge. He called Greenbelt the "nut capital of the world." He said that Greenbelt has an unparalleled tolerance for eccentric views, unlike homogeneous, bland Bowie. You can judge the diversity of political views in Greenbelt through the numerous and challenging letters to the News Review, he said.

Not content with impugning the mayor's past and present, a skit looked at the mayor as a resident of Green Ridge House in the year 2020. Phillip Brandis played the outspoken and arrogant Mayor and Marie Tounsignant took the role of usually unimperturbable Mary Lou Williamson, News Review editor. The mayor had been banished to Green Ridge House by his wife, Muriel, who had an unlisted phone number. Gil was more interested in Mary Lou than in being interviewed on his 40th year as Greenbelt mayor.

Revenge

Finally able to respond to the "kind remarks," Mayor Weidenfeld donned a curly purple wig, glasses and red nose. He told the audience that he thought he had been invited to a toast and that finally his good qualities would be recognized. It would be a pleasant change, he insisted, from the city council meetings. But here he was being insulted and a target for mean remarks, he said, much like many council meetings.

He had something to say about each of the roasters. He called Castaldi Greenbelt's Mussolini determined to have the trains (Metro) run on time. The greenline is already five years late, he quipped. He said he knew Jerry Devlin before he was honorable, and that everyone feared Charlie Brown, who knew where all the bodies were buried—literally. He saluted roast director Gerry Gough as a real Greenbelt celebrity and urged the audience to ask him for his autograph, marking his brief appearances in "Reds" and other movies.

Gil characterized Konrad Herling as a loser recalling the time a bee flew up Konrad's nose and he lost control of his car. He also lost the lease for the arts center theater. Gil called Al Herling the Don Quixote of Greenbelt—always on the side of good and justice—always jousting at windmills. He declined to tell all about Myra Rash. "It'll just get me into trouble." Tom Renahan was labeled Tom Renegade, changing political affiliation from long-time Republican, to Democrat, and back to Republican this year so he could vote in a more interesting primary.

Speaking after the Mayor's rebuttal and primarily to avoid that response, County Executive Parris Glendening said he was asked to speak as "an antidote to total depravity." He saluted Gil's ability to harass the county for money and said that in future he would just send the annual $2 million to Greenbelt each July 1 and avoid the hassle.

To sum up his and the widely-held opinion on Greenbelt's Mayor Weidenfeld, Glendening called him "a gentleman who has represented Greenbelt with a great deal of class."

Renahan then thanked others on the celebrity roast committee, including Deanne Lange, ticket coordinator, Beatrix Whitehall, on lights, and Kenny Voight who handled the sound system. Ann Castaldi organized the raffle which raised over $300 and was won by Elaine Skolnik. The prize donated by Jasper's was dinner for four after which the group would be driven by limousine to an Arts Center performance. The program was videotaped by Greenbelt Access Television (GATE). Some of the material in the program may be suitable for public viewing. Al Herling closed the program expressing the Arts Center's appreciation to Mayor Gil Weidenfeld, who among his many other virtues is really a good sport.

Community Center

imately $4 million budgeted for the renovation of Center School as a community center. Work cannot begin until the building is vacated by the students following completion of the new elementary school in the city's north end. The consultants did not realize until the November 8 meeting that the groups receiving space in the center would be asked to contribute towards operating costs of the building. The cost of space cannot be determined until better estimates are available.

One unknown also is the cost of asbestos removal at Center School. Because of liability insurance restraints on architectural firms, the city has removed this issue from the scope of the consultant's contract. Councilmember Antoinette M. Bram suggested that KCF plan for phased construction if necessary to stretch out expenditures.

Councilmember Edward Putens suggested that, given the significance of the North End School to the city, some items from that building, such as some of the wood features, be preserved at the community center.

One problem with the planning is that no action can be taken to implement the plan until the new school is completed and Center School transferred to the city. Groups currently interested may not still be interested when renovations are complete. In addition, once the center is opened, groups may leave. Putens asked about the effect of such changes on the plan. Phil Esocoff of KCF said that this should not be a major problem as most of the groups do not need highly specialized space, although some uses will require extra ventilation or electrical power.

On Nov. 1, around 4:49 p.m., Cpl. James Donovan assisted the U.S. Park Police in chasing a stolen car from Southway Rd., to Crescent Rd., to Kenilworth Ave., and finally to Cherrywood Lane, where the stolen car hit two parked cars and the driver fled on foot, eluding the officers. He is described as black, in his twenties, 6'0", thin build, black hair, wearing a green t-shirt, blue jeans, with a dark sweat shirt.

While on patrol around 1:58 a.m. on Nov. 8, Pfc. Carl Schinner noticed a woman passed out be-

We your Greenbelt neighbors urge you to call the President Comment Line (202 456-1111, Rep. Steny Hoyer, Sen. Barbara Mikulski, and Sen. Paul Sarbanes (all at (202) 224-3121 so that you can convey your grave concerns about the threat of war in the Persian Gulf and the need for a peaceful negotiated resolution of this confrontation.

War Is Not The Answer

We are gravely concerned about the possibility of war in the Middle East - especially as the United States shifts from a defensive to offensive military posture in the region.

We emphatically oppose the United States taking any offensive military action in the current crisis.

War in the Middle East would be a human, political and economic catastrophe

War would result in a massive loss of lives — including as many as 10,000-50,000 Americans and untold numbers of other combatants and civilian casualties on all sides. Chemical and even nuclear weapons might be used. A fragile multilateral consensus and alliance would be shattered. The entire Middle East could be engulfed in war.

We believe the U.N.-sponsored embargo must be given every opportunity to work. We believe that a multinational, diplomatic, and non-military solution can and must be found.

We therefore strongly urge that:

- No U.S. offensive military action be taken.
- Economic sanctions against Iraq be given time to work
- The crisis be resolved through peaceful, diplomatic means

This crisis requires visionary and courageous leadership. Wisdom, diplomacy, patience and restraint must guide the United States as it works through the United Nations to resolve the crisis in the Gulf.

Scrabble Lovers Invited To Join Game on Nov. 29

by Eileen Peterson
Anyone who enjoys playing Scrabble—children to senior citizens—is invited to come to the Greenbelt Library meeting room on Thursday, Nov. 29, at 7 p.m. for a relaxed game or two, advises Barbara Simon of Friends of the Greenbelt Library.

Bring your own game if you have one and your partner or just come and pair off with another word game enthusiast. Refreshments will be provided by FOGL. Parents can arrange rides home for any children coming by calling Eileen Peterson, 345-2454; FOGL hopes this service will encourage younger players to enjoy the evening. This won't be a competition—just a fun night.

The Friends group hopes to encourage interest in Scrabble by sponsoring game evenings and the annual tournament. If enough interest is shown, a club may be formed to play on a regular basis at the library.

Tournament
On Saturday, Oct. 27, FOGL sponsored its second unofficial Scrabble tournament. Winners in the three age groups were Harry Vernon of Bowie, Ronald Millard of Periwinkle Court and Barbara Simon in the adult division and Laura Jean Torgerson, aged 10 of Landover, who won in the children's division. Brothers Nilsh and Sachin Karkhanis of College Park also were awarded prizes. Winners chose Friends of the Library T-shirts, library logo ceramic mugs or cloth book bags.

Bookstore Anyone?

New volunteers to help in the library's Novel Endings bookstore have come forward, but more are needed. One two-hour session either on Saturdays between 11 a.m. and 3 p.m., Monday evenings from 7-9 p.m., or even some daytime volunteering Tuesdays through Thursdays from 1-4 p.m. are available. Assignments are done one month at a time, so volunteers need not feel obligated too far ahead. Some work only a few times a year; others work every month. "It's the easiest volunteer work anyone can find—no one can call you on the phone and you can finish that library book you've been meaning to return," comments Eileen Peterson, who can be called by those wishing to try a few hours. (345-2454).

JOE'S TIPS OF THE WEEK

Hello Again!

It won't be long until we get hit with the first blast of sub zero temperatures, not just frost on the windows, but the birdie bath in front of the house is frozen solid. WOW, just last week it was in the mid 50s and you forgot about doing the antifreeze check in the family wagon. You get out there and undo the radiator or peer into the coolant recovery bottle and it looks like a lemon lime slushi, probably good enough to eat. Well, you wonder what to do now and if anything could be damaged. Well, we hope not. This is a common condition that we see here at the repair facility.

As preventive maintenance minded people this condition should never happen. Like anything else be prepared for the worst. If your vehicle blew a hose in the summertime make sure all the rest of the hoses are in good shape. In most cases someone just added water into the system because it didn't matter, winter was a long way off, so this is no area of concern. Let's consider the rules of the preventive maintenance bible. If belts and hoses are more than 4 years old, they should hit the trash can. The thermostat and ordinary coolant servicing should be performed at least once a year. Don't forget to use windshield washer antifreeze in the washer bottle, not water, and, last but not least, if you service your own coolant system, DON'T WASH YOUR OLD ANTIFREEZE DOWN THE STORM DRAIN. THIS IS A NO NO AND ILLEGAL. IT MUST BE COLLECTED AND RECOVERED FOR PROPER DISPOSING. IF SOMEONE CATCHES YOU DOING SO, DON'T SAY I DIDN'T TELL YOU!!

Here at the repair facility we participate in a recycling program which makes disposal a lot easier to deal with and we don't contaminate the water or storm drains.

TILL NEXT TIME!!!!
THINK PREVENTIVE MAINTENANCE!!!!
JOE!!

911 FEE RISES
An increase in the 911 fee has been approved by the Prince Georges County Council. The fee increases from 30 cents to 50 cents a month effective January 1.

The action was required after the General Assembly this year decided to no longer return to local jurisdictions 10 cents of the 30 cent fee. This results in a county loss of $360,000 a year. However, by increasing the fee to 50 cents the maximum allowed by the state the county will be able to cover the cost of the emergency service in Fiscal Year 1992.
