Six Candidates, Advisory Question 4-Year Term Pros and Cons On Ballot on Tuesday, November 5

by Elaine Skolnik

Six candidates vying for five city council seats on Tuesday, November 5, are winding up their campaigns this week in a flurry of activity. Since Sunday, they have participated in two election forums, sent out last-minute mailings and are now immersed in organizing teams of telephone and poll workers. Previously video-taped interviews with Greenbelt Access Television (GATE) were also cablecast.

The advent of universal registration — responsible for most of the sharp increase in the number of Greenbelt's registered voters (see chart) — makes it difficult to predict the percentage of residents who will trek to the polls. The council members they will elect will head the municipal government for the next two years. Incumbents Gil Weidenfeld, Thomas X. White, Edward Putens and Antoinette M. Bram are seeking reelection. The challengers are Robert C. Zugby and Rodney M. Roberts.

Of special interest is the order in which the candidates finish. Councils have traditionally chosen the top vote-getter as mayor, although the city charter is silent on this point. Because only six candidates are in the field, it could be a horseshoe for the top slot.

Attracting attention over the past several weeks is the lone ballot advisory question. Voters will be asked whether they favor changing the elected council's term from two years to four.

Issues

So far, the political scene has not been dominated by major issues dividing the candidates. However, there were some lively exchanges and differences of opinion at last Sunday's Citizens for Greenbelt (CFG) Candidates Forum. (see separate article.) One issue involved the perennial problem of incidents occurring at Roosevelt Center and the degree and type of police presence needed.

Another — carried over from the last election — dealt with Northway Fields, located at the end of Northway Extended. The question continues to be how to balance the needs of those who desire the acquired 72-acre site adjacent to the existing fields to be maintained in its natural state and those who envision that in the future additional ballfields may be needed to accommodate the recreational needs of a growing population.

The protection of the environment — preservation of woodlands and wetlands and only limited development around the Metro station — was also on the minds of many attending the CFG forum.

Because the election forum sponsored by the Greenbelt East Advisory Committee and the candidate interviews by GATE were scheduled too late to meet the News Review's deadline, reports of these events are not included in this last issue before the election.

Concerns about increased traffic congestion, pedestrian and automobile safety, the impact of increased development in Greenbelt East — including the Sunrise Apartment saga cliff-hanger (now in the courts) — and crime prevention are expected to be raised at the GEAC forum.

In making their selection in the voting booth, citizens are expected to look at individual candidates' degree and length of involvement, leadership and experience in the city, their performance at various candidate forums and interviews, their responses to questionnaires, the views contained in their literature and advertisements and their personalities.

The city election questionnaire will be available at the polls. As in past years, residents will be asked how they feel about city services and life in Greenbelt in general. For those who do not fill out a questionnaire at the polls, one is published elsewhere in the News Review. It can be mailed to the City Office, 25 Crescent Road.

The Greenbelt Connection will be transporting voters to and from the polls next Tuesday between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

An innovation this year will be the availability of live election night reports and results on Channel 7.

Procedures Outlined

Voting on election day, Tuesday, November 5, will be held from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. at four polling places — the Greenbelt Municipal Building (Precinct 3-Center), the new Police Station, 550 Crescent Rd., across from Attick Park (Precinct 6-North End), Springhill Lake Recreation Center (Precinct 8-Springhill Lake), and Greenbriar Community Center (Precinct 13-Greenbelt East).

Greenbelters will elect five council members, all at large, for a two-year term. In order to be elected, a candidate must receive 40% of the votes cast. If fewer than five candidates receive such a vote, a run-off election will be held one week later on Tuesday, November 12.

At CFG Forum, Candidates Differ Over Ballfields and Council Terms

by Mary Lou Williamson

By the time vice president Konrad Herling welcomed the crowd, every chair was filled at the October 28 Citizens for Greenbelt (CFG) Candidates Night. The six candidates for five City Council seats read prepared answers to questions from CFG, then answered questions from the audience. Al Freas served as moderator. The program was cablecast live and rebroadcast twice during the week.

The issues of more ball fields at the Northway fields, police foot or bike patrols, and two vs. four-year terms for council separated the candidates. Most other issues found little variation in responses.

Term Length

Question: Citizens will be voting on an advisory referendum on the question of extending council terms from two to four years. How would you urge citizens to vote and why?

"Citizens can make an intelligent decision," responded Mayor Gil Weidenfeld, who declined to offer any recommendation. He gave as advantages for a four-year term: the work of council would not be disturbed every two years, adding greater continuity, and that about $10,000 in costs would be saved for each election not held. He noted that no member of council elected during the last 20 years has served less than four years and said that provisions could be made for citizens to petition a special election after two years if they are dissatisfied with the council. By contrast, he said, the two-year term offers more opportunity for voters to make changes in council and for new candidates to run; candidates do not need to make a four-year commitment; and the council members get out to the voters more frequently through door-knocking and newspaper ads.

Councilmember Antoinette M. Bram also left the decision to the voters. As for herself, she said, "I have demonstrated my accountability to the citizens. I return phone calls and answer questions." The longer term, she said, would not affect her availability to citizens.

"It's your decision," echoed incumbent Edward Putens. The first time the issue came before council, "I voted no."

Challenger Robert Zugby added some advantages of the two-year term: frequent oversight by citizens and expanded voter rolls. On the other hand he noted the intimidating cost of running for council every two years. If voters chose the four-year term, he said, he would want council to provide a recall procedure.

Favor Two Year Terms

Incumbent Thomas X. White and challenger Rodney Roberts both urged voters to support the two-year term for council.

"I am on record as being opposed to the change and believe there is a correlation between the vitality and health of Greenbelt's city government and the two-term election cycle," said White. "I would like to keep the council responsive to the electorate through forums such as this," he said, "while providing citizens with measurable benchmarks to evaluate our performance."

"I believe the greatest privilege as a Greenbelter and an American is the right to participate in our government," said Roberts. Extending the term from two to four years would

Four Polling Places

This is Greenbelt's first city election under the new universal registration procedures. Now the city no longer maintains its own voter registration list. Instead, citizens are automatically registered for city elections when they register for county, state and federal contests.

Parkway Construction Starts On Ramp, Bridge Widening Letters

by Mary Lou Williamson

Work has begun on the new ramps connecting the northbound lanes of the Baltimore-Washington Parkway with Greenbelt Road. Shirley Contracting of Lorton, Va., won the $6.99 million contract. Completion date for the project is May 1994.

The project also includes widening the bridge over the Parkway, adding a lane (extended ramp) to each side of the Parkway under the bridge, resurfacing and reconstruction of the Parkway for .8 mile, and reconstruction of the on-off ramps that connect to Southway and the four ramps on the north side of the Capital Beltway.

The Bridge

The north side of the Greenbelt Road bridge over the Parkway will be redecked. All of the asphalt and concrete base will be removed and replaced. Both sides of the bridge will be widened about three feet and resurfaced. In order to accomplish this, the stone facing on each side of the bridge will be removed and later replaced. The contractor will probably use the same stones, after the old mortar is cleaned off, so that the bridge will continue to look as it does today.

The redecking will require extensive lane closings, but not for six months, according to Robert Brooks, Shirley Contracting official.

Maryland's Historic Preservation Office had scuttled earlier plans that would have further widened the bridge but would have sacrificed its character.

Louis DeLorme, National Park Service Chief of Roads and Trails, told the News Review he was pleased with the Preservation Office's efforts to maintain the appearance of the bridge. DeLorme designed the masonry guardwalls that are being installed where renovation is underway along the parkway. The walls are made of pre-cast concrete to look like stone and are a significant savings and much quicker to install than the real stone walls, he said. These walls have been in use on the Skyline Drive in Virginia since 1983. The Park Service's experience there, DeLorme explained has been the "walls do their job" — saving people's lives, keeping vehicles on the road and surviving "hits." The fact that cars are badly mauled when they hit the stone guard wall, said DeLorme, encourages drivers to be cautious. These stone or masonry guard walls will be added in the parkway median to protect the Greenbelt Road bridge pier and along some of the ramps and outer edges of the parkway.

Sidewalks

Concrete sidewalks will be constructed on either side of the new Greenbelt Road bridge. Those on the north side (west bound lanes) will tie in with the existing sidewalk to the west. New sidewalks will be constructed east to Hanover Parkway. No sidewalks meet the bridge on the southside. DeLorme said the Prince Georges County Transportation Department told him there was little traffic on that side. They would consider building a sidewalk if the situation warranted.

In response to a question from the News Review, DeLorme found that masonry guardwalls would block each end of the bridge sidewalk on the north side. He hopes to eliminate that problem by talking with the contractors. The sidewalk should be easily accessible to pedestrians and bicyclists.

Construction Schedule

During the first stage, about six months, temporary paving will be put down along the shoulders of the parkway to carry traffic while work takes place along the inner sides and near the bridge. Also, the grade under the bridge must be lowered. Park Service officials promise two lanes in either direction will be kept open during rush hours morning and evening.

The off-on ramps connecting the southbound lanes of the parkway to Southway will also get temporary paving to carry traffic while the present ramps are reconstructed.

No work will interfere with travel along Greenbelt Road during this first stage.

Ramps

Clearing of trees is well underway for the new ramps to be constructed on the Greenbriar side of the parkway. A sediment basin must be installed before clearing can be completed, according to Harry Sloat, National Park Service official.

The excavation between the new construction compound and the parkway will allow telephones lines to be "jacked" under the parkway. PEPCO is resetting some poles on the Greenbriar side.

Road Work

Road work is scheduled on Saturday, Nov. 9 on the Baltimore-Washington Parkway from Riverdale Road to I-95, from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. Major traffic delays are expected.

On the Money

To the Editor:

Leonie Penney is right on the money: Our city council members deserve better pay for their service. The present allotment for a councilmember is only about 25 cents per citizen per year. Penney's letter (Oct. 24) documents how this works out to something less than the minimum wage, even with a very conservative estimate of their hours on the job. We cannot continue to expect good government if our representatives are not fairly compensated.

My suggestion: After you vote on Nov. 5, pick up the election questionnaire, and write on it: "Double the pay for City Council."

Steel Cans Will Be Recycled in January

Prince Georges County Executive Parris Glendening recently announced the expansion of the County's Residential Curbside Recycling Program in January 1992. Two major enhancements to the County's program include: — the addition of 70,000 single-family homes to the program; — increasing the types of materials collected to include steel food and beverage cans. Currently all households in the program are able to recycle mixed-color glass, aluminum, plastic, and newspapers. — the addition of six new recycling collection contractors; and — the designation of Georgetown Paperstock in Bladensburg as a second processing center for the County's residential program. The recycling program is presently the largest residential multi-material program in the state of Maryland. Currently, 60,000 single-family households are serviced by the program. More than 1,000 tons of recyclables are collected each month which results in savings to residents and municipalities of $56,000 per month or $672,000 per year in landfill disposal costs.

Beginning in January, 1992, 130,000 of the 160,000 single-family homes in the county will have recycling collection. Steel cans will increase the recycling collection by an additional 300 tons of materials per month.

The Heritage Singers Open Arts Center's Music Series

by Sandy Smith

The Heritage Singers, Prince Georges County's premier vocal ensemble, will open the Greenbelt Arts Center's 1991-92 Music Series with a November 16 concert, 7:30 p.m., at the Mishkan Torah Synagogue. They will offer a program of classical and patriotic music, folk songs and Broadway show tunes.

The Heritage Singers is a 12-member male chorus which has been in existence for a year and is the resident choral ensemble at the new Harmony Hall Regional Center in Fort Washington. The group performs throughout the county to large and enthusiastic audiences. This year's schedule includes concerts in Bowie, Hyattsville, Suitland, and their first-ever performance in Greenbelt.

The Prince Georges Journal says that "the Heritage Singers claim as its heritage the music of the world, which gives the group an unlimited field of musical literature." The program for the Greenbelt concert will be in several segments. First there's a group of patriotic numbers, from "This is My Country," to "Let There be Peace on Earth," to the closely harmonized rendition of "The Navy Hymn." Then they sing a selection of sea shanties, a speciality for the Heritage Singers. The shanties represent a particular class of music, the working songs of English and American sailors. Sea shanties were almost always sung while the sailors were doing heavy work and the rhythm of the music reflected the rhythm of the particular task. For example, there's a lively tune for the handling of the gib sail and a slow tempo for hauling up the anchor. Also on the Greenbelt program is a salute to Broadway with highlights from many Broadway shows. Soloist, Sara Pattie, is featured in several of the musical numbers.

The Heritage Singers are directed by Gordon Gustin. A former music educator, Gustin is well-known as a choral conductor, clinician and dramatic tenor soloist. Gustin has sung with the Bamberg Symphony Orchestra and the Kings' College Madrigal, Cambridge University, as well as in ensembles and oratorio societies in this country. He is also familiar to local opera and musical theatre audiences and is founder and former director for the vocal ensemble, Con Vica Musica. Since 1975 Gustin has served as the music specialist for the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Tickets are on sale for the entire musical series at a substantial discount or for the performance of the Heritage Singers, in advance by calling 441-8770 or at the Coop. Tickets will also be available at the door.

City Leaf Collection Program Starts Soon

The city's leaf collection program will begin the week of November 4. Temporary signs, advising when leaves are to be collected, will be placed at all major entrances of areas to be collected.

In the detached housing neighborhoods such as Boxwood, residents should place their leaves at the edge of their property next to the street. Leaves should not be placed in the gutters. Placing them in the gutters may cause the storm drains to clog.

In the Greenbelt Homes Inc. (GHI) areas, leaves should be bagged and kept in the yard. City crews will collect the leaves from each individual yard. Only leaves should be placed in these bags as they will be used for leaf compost. Any other materials, such as sticks, brush or rocks, should not be included.

The Greenbelt City leaf program will continue for as long as the weather permits. As one area is completed and another one started, the signs will be relocated. As much advance notice will be provided as possible.

The city appreciates cooperation in this effort. It is needed in order to make this project work. For further information call 474-8004.

Sierra Club Endorses Roberts, Weidenfeld, White

The Sierra Club is pleased to announce its endorsement of Mr. Rodney Roberts, Mayor Gil Weidenfeld, and Councilman Tom White for Greenbelt City Council. The Sierra Club appreciates the willingness of these candidates to go the extra mile to encourage recycling, bicycling, and walking in Greenbelt.

The Sierra Club appreciates the strong stand that Rodney Roberts has taken on woodland preservation. Natural communities sometimes are fortunate enough to have a voice; in Rodney Roberts these woods have a champion.

The Sierra Club circulated a questionnaire to all City Council candidates. Their responses were distributed to the ~120 Greenbelt Sierrans. To obtain a copy of the questions and candidate responses contact Clara Kuehn, Conservation Co-Chair, 345-1569.

Hanover Parkway-Ora Glen Light Is Subject of October GEAC Meeting

by Pat Scully

PEPCO was scheduled to begin its work on the traffic light at Hanover Parkway and Ora Glen Drive in mid-October, announced Sheldon Goldberg, chair, at the Oct. 3 meeting of GEAC (the Greenbelt East Advisory Committee).

The work, which involves moving poles, restringing wires, and reshaping the median, is expected to take about a month. The light will blink (yellow on Hanover, red on Ora Glen) for another month to get drivers used to the idea of a light at the intersection. The light should be fully operational, including left-turn signals, by Christmas.

Frankfort Drive

City Manager Daniel Hobbs and School Board Member Suzanne Plogman had been invited guests at Windsor Green's meeting in September. Based on the discussions at the meeting, the School Board called a meeting with the State Highway Administration, city council, GEAC and residents for Oct. 15 to discuss the traffic problems at Eleanor Roosevelt High School and Frankfort Drive.

Plogman originally scheduled the meeting for 6 p.m. GEAC members, however, directed Goldberg to suggest rescheduling the meeting at 7 p.m. to allow more residents to get home from work and attend. She agreed with the request. (See News Review, Oct. 24, for a report of the meeting.)

Overpasses

Goldberg also reported that the city council has approved an effort to get grant money or state funding for pedestrian overpasses over Greenbelt Road at Frankfort Drive and over Kenilworth Avenue at Cherrywood Lane. The overpasses would provide safe pedestrian access over major highways, unite the city trail system and, especially with the Kenilworth overpass, make walking or biking to the Metro station more feasible.

Councilmember Ed Putens noted at the GEAC meeting that these would be long-term projects and that money would not be readily available given the current state budget problems. However, council's action has "put them on notice" that the city is going to be pursuing the overpasses.

Other Traffic Issues

Goldberg had requested that the city conduct a traffic study to determine how much through traffic uses Ora Glen and Mandan Roads to avoid the Hanover Parkway and Greenbelt Road intersections. City staff will complete the study within the next couple of months.

If the study confirms residents' impression that there is a significant amount of cut-through traffic, the city could erect "No Through Traffic" signs to discourage such traffic.

Dorothy Pyles asked if any decision had been made on the suggested closing of the Eleanor Roosevelt High School entrance on Greenbelt Road. She wished to go on record as opposed to this proposal, which would result in "a tremendous volume of additional traffic" onto Mandan Road and Hanover Parkway.

Police Presence

Tim Sechrist of Greenbrook Estates asked about the police presence in the east side of the city. While he formerly saw frequent patrols, he said it had been some time since he had seen a police officer on routine patrol. He perceived a decline in patrols over the last year.

Martha Price of Windsor Green said that long-time residents shared his perception and that the issue was talked about at the Sept. 15 Windsor Green meeting attended by City Manager Hobbs, Ed Schilling of Windsor Green noted that this has been a recurring issue and was on GEAC's legislative agenda at the last council election time.

Councilmember Antoinette (Toni) Bram said that the number of officers assigned to patrol has not decreased, but that there are more miles of streets to patrol since the numbers were set. Putens wondered whether the decreased patrols are a perception or an actual problem. Patrolling officers are often called to crime scenes, he said. "If you look at the activity reports, where crime is happening, the police are there."

Schilling asked how often patrols are made of each street and whether an overview, not a specific schedule, could be obtained from the police chief. Goldberg was directed to request the information and report back.

Street Lights

Alice Trenholme of Greenbrook Village reported that all of the street lights in the development are now working, after the city declared the developer in default on its construction bond for failing to have the lights working by 8 p.m. on Oct. 1. Celia Wilson, the city Director of Planning and Development, was out checking on the lights at 6 a.m., said Trenholme, and called in an electrician the same day to complete the work at the developer's expense. While pleased with the results, Trenholme and Katie Calder noted that it took "three years of letters and badgering to get it done."

Issue Updates

Disagreement between the city and Prince Georges County is the latest snag in the continuing saga of Schrom Hills Lake. The county may decide to put the contract for design of the lake out for bid; the city would like to waive the bid process and continue dealing with Dames & Moore, which did the preliminary design for the wetlands permit application. The decision will be made by the county.

The city has filed an amicus curiae brief with the court of appeals in the Sunrise case, which will not be argued until late winter or early spring.

Upcoming Events

The next meeting of GEAC

Boys & Girls Club Hold Cheerleading Competition

The Prince Georges County Boys and Girls Club annual cheerleading competition will be held at Cole Field House, University of Maryland, on Nov. 3, at Noon. A total of 86 teams representing 1,204 children from different Boys and Girls Clubs will compete over a six hour period. Teams will compete in age groups from 7 & under to 16 & under which have been classified either AAA, AA, or A depending on the results from last year's competition.

Qualified judges from the National High School Federation will evaluate all of the cheers. It is helpful for the spectator to know that the judges look for good projection, well executed routines, creative composition, and specific jumps, stunts, and level of difficulty. Deductions from the final team score include no original cheer (-10), overtime (1 x # of sec.), coaches out of designated coaching box (-10) and illegal pyramids (-25).

These children practice extremely hard for a competitive routine that is usually over in three minutes. Therefore, it is important that as many people as possible try to come out in their support. This event is free to the public.

St. Hugh's News

October has been a busy month for St. Hugh's School. New principal Phil Robey and several new teachers are all getting into the swing of life in Greenbelt, and the students have been involved in a variety of interesting and exciting activities.

On Oct. 14, Mrs. Marjorie Sparks and Miss Mary Foeckler took their first and fourth graders on a field trip to the cider mill. The entire school became involved in candy marketing this month, and the annual World's Famous Chocolate drive, which began on Oct. 3, came to a sweet and successful close on Oct. 21.

Visits from representatives of local Catholic high schools were also October highlights: Pallotti and Gonzaga High School representatives visited the school to talk to the graduating class of 1992 on Oct. 16, and Mon., Oct. 28, the eighth graders had an opportunity to hear the representatives of Carroll, Seton and DeMatha High Schools.

Volunteers Needed

The Salvation Army of Prince Georges County is in need of volunteers to assist with their Christmas Kettle Effort. Some paid positions are also available. Please call 277-6103 for information.

will be held on Thursday, Nov. 7, at Greenbriar.

Greenbrook Estates will be taking part in Maryland's Tremendous grant program. They will receive young trees from the state in mid-November and will have a day of tree planting by volunteers. The date is not yet fixed.

This past March, Penn State University honors student, Alexander Barnes, along with 34 other classmates, participated in the EUREKA conference held at the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena. The conference highlights undergraduate research.

Alexander Barnes's research is currently featured in an article entitled EUREKA, I've Got It! by Nancy Marie Brown in Research/Penn State magazine. Barnes is the son of News Review staffer Sandra Barnes of Lanham, and Alexander Barnes of Greenbelt.

Eleanor Roosevelt Child Development students won top honors for the tenth year in the Prince Georges County Write-A-Book Contest sponsored by the Educational Media Association of Prince Georges County.

Students received ten awards for children's books they authored as a class project. Cheryl Gerring, school media specialist, guided the project through a series of demonstrations and lectures. Students entered the books in a school wide contest last year and were selected to represent Roosevelt in the county contest which judges all types of books.

In the Individual Picture Book Category, senior, Lateefah Freeland, took first place with her book, Sam 'n Lloyd. Alumna, Juanita Fisher, received second place for her title, The Get Dressed Book.

Three groups of students received awards in the Group Picture Book Category. Counting With Animals, by Nicole Sylver and Dwayne Sylver received second place. Becoming Friends, by Lori Byrd and Dara Lida ties for third place with Picture Pages, by senior, Kelly Klein and alumnus, Jason Marlow.

Senior, Robin Tillery, won first place in the Individual Illustrated Fiction Category for her book, Frederick the Lion. Second place was awarded to alumnus, Laura Tervo, for her story written in Spanish, El Gato Que No Podia Patiner de Ruedas.

Roosevelt students took all three places in the Group Illustrated Fiction Category: The Little Wizard, by seniors Charles Reuter and Angel Otero, received first place. Boots and Squeaky, by alumnae, Sharon Rosenberg and Laura Tervo, won second place. Third place was awarded to seniors Donna Britton and Adam Smith for their book, Rainbows.

First place winners received plaques in the school's name, and winning books will tour with the 1991-92 Write-A-Book display.

Army Spec. Bridgette M. Singleton, a personnel records specialist, has arrived for duty in Wiesbaden, Germany. She is a 1980 graduate of Redford High School, Southfield, Mich.

Her husband, Army Sgt. Randolph Singleton, is the son of Thomas Singleton of Mathew St.

Airman 1st Class Lora E. Katz, a french horn player, has arrived for duty at Robins Air Force Base, Ga. She is the daughter of Jessica N. Katz.

Airman Katz graduated from Bowie Senior High School in 1982, and received a master's degree in 1990 from Ithaca College, N.Y.

Candidates' Forum

"cut our right to participate in half." The only reason he had heard at council meetings and workshops this year in support of a four-year term is "the reason of convenience" to the incumbents. "I urge all to vote no on the four-year term," said Roberts.

Ball Fields

Question: The city council has been discussing the possibility of building ballfields on the parkland on the north end of town. Would you favor the use of some of the land for additional ballfields? If so, how many fields of what total size would you support and would you support lighting? If not, how would you respond to the groups asking for additional ball field space?

Roberts contrasted the 1500 citizens who have signed a petition asking that the entire green belt be preserved as woodland with the fact that he had heard no groups come before council asking for more ball fields at the Northway site. He would support needed improvements and lighting of the existing fields, but no new fields at that site. More ball fields, he said, would impact negatively on neighbors, the city budget and the environment.

Incumbents White and Putens strongly supported new ball fields. "I have always been in favor of ball fields in that area," said Putens. We still need to determine what size and what kind and how many. The fields, he said should be for city youth.

"I have a longstanding commitment to fields with lights in that area . . . an identified need for organized athletic programs," for Greenbelt youth, said White. "I will be sensitive to the adjacent woodlands we just acquired."

Bram spoke of the struggles of parents in raising children and the importance of team sports for those children who are interested. More information is needed, she agreed, before determining what is needed. Preserving green space is a priority for her. Bram gave some historical background to the present Northway Fields. "When I moved to Plateau Place 31 years ago, that site was the city dump.

It has gone from dump to landfill to ball fields."

"If the ball fields prove necessary," said Zugby, "and I suspect they will, I would not be opposed to using some of the area for ball fields. I am open to discussion." He based his assumption of the need on his conversations with people and by observing the over-used condition of the present fields. "With today's financial problems, I don't expect the city to be building anything in the next year or two."

"More data and citizen input is needed at a public hearing before setting a policy," said Weidenfeld. The city staff is currently studying the need for ball fields. Alternatives to the Northway site are two new fields being constructed at Schrom Hills and possibly use of open fields at BARC (Beltsville Agricultural Research Center). He pointed out there is some cleared land adjacent to the present Northway fields.

Metro Site

Question: What would you regard as the ideal use for the A.H. Smith property south of the Greenbelt Metro station? What would you do to ensure such a future?

"I don't think any candidates here want anything different for the Smith property," offered Putens. "Buy it, restore it, preserve it."

Roberts showed the audience an enlarged aerial photo of the Smith property he had taken last year. He pointed out the "highly disturbed" areas of the sand and gravel business. He also showed a "white area" which he said is a 20 to 30 foot thick slab of concrete left behind by years of washing out the cement trucks. Neighboring green areas he called "high quality wetlands." Roberts would like to see the entire area preserved.

"Most of the Smith property is wetlands and should not be developed," explained Weidenfeld. "My ideal use of the remaining portion is to leave it undeveloped." However, he expects strong efforts by the owner to develop. The TDO zoning process by the county allows input from the city. The city staff, advisory boards and council will need to study options, he said.

Bram also favored a wetlands park. She called the Smith property "a gravel pit blighted area" with a "shabby image." The problems in that portion of Greenbelt, she continued, are larger than just the Smith property. Beltway Plaza should be included. The city is "tapped out" of funds right now, she conceded. Money to purchase the wetlands "will have to come from many sources." There is no way the city can do it. She strongly supports Metro — with no delays. "It's an ecological necessity. Auto traffic is burning out our ozone layer."

"I would work energetically to ensure that all of the wetlands around the Metro stop are protected," said White. "Our biggest ally is the environment. The next council will have to spend more time and give more attention to the TDO zone and development proposals for the area around the Metro station. He urged council and citizens to renew their efforts to control undesirable development in and around Greenbelt. He spoke against the extension of Kenilworth Avenue and construction of the Inter-County Connector which would not only increase traffic but also put pressure on BARC and invite more development.

"Keep it wet, in its natural state," agreed Zugby, speaking of the Smith property. "We must use the resources of the city to come as close as possible to that ideal."

More Questions

The following questions were asked by members of the audience.

Considering today's fiscal crunch, how are you going to finance conversion of the Center School into a community center, asked Betty Maffay, of Northway.

A successful referendum of the citizens two years ago gave the city the authority to raise $3 million through the sale of bonds, responded White. The city has also another $400,000 to $700,000 earmarked for the community center, he said. "We must tailor our renovations to that price tag."

"Not everything has to be done immediately," added Weidenfeld. Some renovation can be staged. He reminded the audience he had asked the state for a million dollars. "They gave us $150,000 for engineering studies," he said. Weidenfeld promised to go back and ask for the rest of the million. Block grant monies could also be used.

The money available is more than enough to open the facility, said Roberts. He is concerned the building not be allowed to stand empty and idle. He suggested using city employees and community volunteers to help keep costs down and get the building open so that people could use it.

The city doesn't get Center School until the new school is built, reminded Zugby, who is currently PTA president at Center School. The starting point is down the road. By then, he hopes, the recession will be over.

Bram cautioned that asbestos needs to be removed and the building brought up to code before the community can use the facility.

There are grants available for such things as adult day care, added Putens. "We have enough to get going."

Unice Coxon, of Research Road, asked Zugby whether his position as a member of the Prince Georges County Board of Zoning Appeals would be a problem if he were elected to council.

"Legally, as far as I know, there is no problem," said Zugby. He has asked for guidance from members of the county council who appointed him and from attorneys. Ethically, on any issue involving the Greenbelt council he would have to recuse himself, eliminate his vote, at a time when his vote would do the most good." From a practical or political standpoint, he said, he would need to determine whether his place on the council would increase or decrease his influence and effectiveness on the board. If these concerns bring negative responses, he said, "I would resign" from the Board of Zoning Appeals.

Traffic Light?

Dial Silvers asked about the status of the Lakeside Homeowners Association request for a traffic light at the intersection of Lakecrest Drive and Greenbelt Road. "There has been a fatality there," she said.

The intersection, said White, failed the State Highway Administration's (SHA) tests. "We have to continue to push for it."

The last study was made at the request of the developers of Belle Point who offered to pay the costs if the SHA approved, said Putens. SHA did not. The study should be redone when Belle Point is completed, he added.

"We need a light, or we need to reconfigure the intersection," said Bram, who had gotten stuck in a jam trying to enter Lakecrest Drive last week. "It is hazardous to make a left turn" out of Lakecrest, she said.

"Do not make a left turn," Weidenfeld urged. "It is not safe." He recommended using Southway with its traffic light, even though it takes longer.

Interlude

Paul Downs, of Parkway, startled both audience and candidates with the leadin to his question. First, he directed the question to White, "because it's been weighing on his mind." With the major disappointments and hardships of the past several years, Downs began, and look-

A Message to the Voters of Greenbelt from Bob Zugby

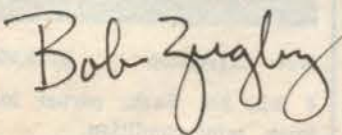

Dear Neighbor:

As you may be aware, I have been active in the Greenbelt community for many years in various capacities. In every activity, my major goal has been the same - to build bridges, to strengthen bonds that hold the city together, even as its population increases and becomes more diverse. In GEAC and GATE, Greenbriar and Northridge, I have attempted to build a consensus on the foundation of mutual respect for each neighborhood's differences. I now seek your support to move this effort to the Greenbelt City Council.

Greenbelt belongs to no individual and holds no single point of view. Rather, this community belongs to all of us who have chosen to live and raise our families here. We need not agree on all issues, but we must share the vision that preserves us and moves us forward.

In this campaign, I have outlined my vision and my qualifications. I invite you to judge for yourself. If you share my vision and approve of my qualifications, then please remember to vote for me on November 5. Together we can continue to build and strengthen our great city.

Sincerely,

Robert C. Zugby

ing at the changes that have occurred this year, what do you think the outcome of the Redskins game will be tonight?
Redskins 17, Giants 14, responded a relieved White.

Roberts added he had given up attending the Redskins home games this fall in order to campaign. He's had season tickets for 15 years, he explained, and normally attends home games. "Can I buy your tickets?" said a woman in the audience who claimed to have spent 15 years on the waiting list. The tickets were not for sale.

Pedestrian Safety

Janet Parker, noting the increased traffic on local streets within Greenbelt, asked for signs directing motorists to yield to pedestrians. She was particularly concerned about the crosswalk on Crescent Road near the library. She had learned of a traffic study done on Hillside Road by the children of the Greenbelt Nursery School. First they had discussed how many cars they thought would travel along Hillside in a five minute period. They guessed seven cars. When they tested their theory, the count was 40 cars in five minutes. Moderator Al Freas added his own concern about drivers who run the stop signs at Southway and Crescent, particularly on right turns.

Bram responded there should be "more police visibility especially in the center of town." She said the new four-way stop at Gardenway is working well and suggested other Crescent Road intersections might benefit from stop signs as well. She recommended studying Crescent Road from the library to Lastner Lane.

"It's not just a matter of signs," said Putens. "It's a question of getting people to obey signs." He recommended looking at visibility and lighting and sidewalks as well.

"A message can easily be made by stepped-up enforcement from time to time," added Zugby. "A full stop at stop signs and slow speed during school hours . . . the word would get around that motorists should take more care."

Crosswalks, like the one near the library, that are not at an intersection give pedestrians a false sense of security, said White. In some communities drivers are trained to give the right of way to pedestrians. We need to "create that culture here."

Weidenfeld gave some historical perspective. When he came to Greenbelt there were virtually no traffic lights and people respected four-way stops. What can help today, he said, is for citizens to tell city officials or the police department what areas are particularly hazardous. The police then can give special attention to those areas.

"We have to start encouraging use of the underpasses again," said Roberts. "There is an underpass not 100 yards from the intersection (at the library)." He's been using the underpasses all his life. He charged that the new street-side sidewalks encourage people to cross roads instead. "We need to get back to using underpasses."

Police Patrols

Roberts also said he would seek police patrols on bikes to "increase police presence in our city."

While agreeing with the concept of bike or foot patrols, Zugby countered, "with the tight budget I would not be willing at this time to take our police out of their cars."

Bram objected to encouraging use of the underpasses at night or even during the day for young children alone. Studies, she said, show these are the kinds of places where crimes take place.

"If we can afford a $4 million pool and a 5 million community center," retorted Roberts, "we can afford to protect our citizens!"

"Keeping officers in cars is protecting our citizens," Zugby responded.

"I'm not proposing anything budget-breaking. Bike patrols are a lot cheaper than cars," stated Roberts. He never sees a police car on his street, Plateau Place. On bikes they could patrol the inner walkways.

Offered a last reply by moderator Freas, Zugby responded. "We'll continue outside."

If an advantage of a four-year term would be continuity for longer projects, said Robert Rashkin, Research Road, does that mean there would be no projects started in the second half of the term? He directed his question to Weidenfeld.

Weidenfeld pointed out that major city projects recently completed, the police building, the indoor pool, renovation of the center, Schrom Hills Park — all had taken at least four years from planning to completion. "If council changes, it takes time for a new person to come up to speed."

Staggered Terms?

Has council considered staggered terms? asked Larry Goldberg, of Hillside Road. Bram responded with a comment she received from a Cheverly council member who said "Thank God we got rid of staggered terms. We can all work together now."

If Greenbelt is considering staggered terms, Bram said, the advice was "Don't do it."

Recycling

What are you going to do to maintain the recycling program so it doesn't become a cancellable pilot project? asked Doug Love, Plateau Place.

Greenbelt's heritage and spirit calls for more comprehensive recycling than the county offers," said White, who opposed turning over the program to the county.

The county already had a program, said Weidenfeld. There would have been significant capital costs to the city to do it ourselves. The county already has announced plans to increase its program by adding collection of steel cans in January. Weidenfeld believes they can not get out of the recycling business, they are under state mandate to recycle.

Bram agreed. She pointed out that just since the program began, prices of recyclables have dropped. It's more economical to operate a larger (county) program.

Putens recalled Bowie's severe problem of mounds of recyclables they could not get rid of "If Bowie and Takoma Park can take control of their own recycling," countered White, "we can do it." The question to ask, he said is See FORUM, page 18

RE-ELECT ED PUTENS

Ed and Becky with Ryan, Amy & Kim

I have been honored to work for you on the City Council for the past 10 years. I hope you feel that I have indeed earned your trust. In those 10 years, my family has grown and changed along with the City.

In the two years since the last election, there has been major and visible progress in Greenbelt, including completion of the indoor pool and police station, the Roosevelt Center restoration, the opening of Schrom Hills Park, and the Cherrywood Lane extension across the Beltway. These goals have been accomplished with great community support (and tax dollars). I am proud to have contributed to this record of progress.

We still have much to accomplish together, including the Attick Park master plan, completion of Schrom Hills Park (including the lake), land use planning and wetlands protection in the Metro area, a City-wide system of pedestrian and bicycle trails, and the new Community Center (including a performing arts theater). There is a lot to be done, but this is Greenbelt and we can do it.

"Are we doing the best job we can?"

Leonie Penney, recycling committee member, praised the program.

"Yard and leaf waste can be recycled, noted Betsy Likowski. What is the city doing — in program or education — to encourage composting?"

Weidenfeld asked Likowski to meet with the city's advisory committee on recycling to pursue the issue. Roberts added the city should purchase a leaf mulcher.

Woodlands Plan?

Likowski also inquired about the planning process for Greenbelt's woodlands in Parcels 1 and 2 and the 72 acres in the North End. Will there be a master plan? White said that council first needs to learn the legal status: which lands were paid for with county, state or federal funds, and how are they restricted? Then a public hearing should be held.

A master plan should be a blueprint for preserving the park, added Zugby. But, he cautioned, it should show the area as undeveloped other than possible ballfields and trails.

Bram questioned the master plan concept for Parcel 1 because the land should be "left alone." She objects, for example, to a perimeter trail, long-planned to curl around the east and north boundaries of the woodlands. Putens agreed nothing should be built, but thought a plan should be put in place quickly.

Weidenfeld said the development of the lake park master plan, which has already taken more than 20 years, was needed because the lake park has varied uses and many details. "We don't want those kinds of things in our woodlands, he said. He envisions a statement of policy rather than a master plan.

Roberts charged that citizens petitioned council to hold a public hearing on plans for the entire 184-acre wooded tract 18 months ago. The present council, he said, has ignored the petition.

Center Problems

Oscar Savaryn, who lives on Crescent Road across from Roosevelt Center expressed deep concern about problems of noise and littering in the Center, graffiti in the underpasses, and unsavory youths congregating in the Center, smoking and drinking liquor. He questioned whether having a store open all night might be a cause. "Can't we ban smoking in the Center?" He questioned the sale of beer and wine from the grocery store. Could the convenience store be closed, he wondered, or its hours curtailed?

Roberts wasn't convinced the store was the cause. He can go there when he gets off work late and get a sandwich, he said. The problem, he suggested, is whether to allow people to hang out there.

Bram pointed out that hanging out at malls and shopping centers is a common occurrence in every community today. She thought one avenue to explore might be to enlarge the area covered by the closing hours of the lake park. The city owns playing fields and park land right up to the Center. "Greenbelt could close it down after 11 p.m."

Zugby suggested more police presence — perhaps a foot patrol or with a cadet. The new improved ambiance at the center needs to be protected," he said.

"The city has no legal authority to restrict the business hours" of any business in the Center, said White. The problem is enforcement. A lot of law-abiding citizens use the store, he pointed out.

The city has recently added more trash cans at the Center, Putens added. "Most citizens do use them." He produced and read a portion of a letter from the chief of police which said the department is aware of the problem and plans to increase the police presence in light of recent complaints. Weidenfeld said he was reluctant to blame the store. "The Center is a hang-out for some undesirables and some kids that just like to hang out. The Center can't close up at 11 p.m. The theater may finish late, people may sit on the benches and converse on a nice evening. "We have something unique to Greenbelt in our Center — a meeting place. We want people to feel safe and comfortable in the Center and we must protect that." He also spoke of the constitutional right of people to congregate. As mayor he has received complaints from people who felt harassed by the police. Police cannot make people leave the Center unless their actions are unlawful — more than making noises or shoving each other.

Hearing on American Indian Education

The Prince Georges County Public School System will hold a public hearing on the American Indian Education Program on Sat., Nov. 1, at noon at the Tantallon Marina, 900 Swann Creek Road, Fort Washington, Maryland 20744.

This public hearing will provide an opportunity for native American parents, students and classroom teachers to offer suggestions and recommendations on how to expand/improve existing educational options for native/Indian students in FY 1992-93.

Currently, this federally funded program provides summer jobs for youth, post-graduate scholastic/career counseling funding, tutorial services, and tribal-culture workshops for American Indian students. The program is designed to service students in grades kindergarten through 12. This year, there are approximately 400 students representing 30 different tribal affiliations who attend Prince Georges County Public Schools.

Christacos Knocks Hole in Center And Spirit of Cooperation With City

by Virginia Beauchamp

A kind of love-in between the Greenbelt City Council and Roosevelt Center owner George Christacos surrounded discussion and completion of a "public-private" agreement between the city and Christacos during the regular city council meeting on October 29.

At a later point in the same meeting, however, when the topic turned to plans for a video store in the rear of the building that houses the Mellon Bank, relations between the two parties took a sharply opposite turn. Suddenly the spirit of cooperation turned to acrimony.

Agreement

In introducing the topic of the special assessment and conservation easement agreed to about two weeks ago, mayor Gil Weidenfeld recessed the regular meeting in order to open the floor to a public hearing on the issue. The special assessment of $1,450,000 will finance recent improvements to the Center. Of this amount, $900,000 will be loaned to Christacos and the remainder utilized by the city to begin redesign and redevelopment of the east and west parking lots.

In addition, according to city solicitor Robert Manzi, the conservation easement, which becomes part of the county's land records on the property, gives the city control "in perpetuity" over the external appearance of the buildings. Councilmember Joe Isaacs described the agreement as "innovative." It will benefit the owner but also benefit the city, Isaacs said.

Only one resident raised a question during the public hearing portion of the meeting. This was Sheldon Goldberg's concern about what effect this action might have on the bonded indebtedness of the city. Manzi explained that this was not a "normal obligation bond." There would be no tax money behind it. Instead, because "an income stream is dedicated to it," Manzi felt that the action would have no effect on the city's general bonding capacity.

Referring to a charter change "about 15 years ago," which made possible that kind of financing, Mayor Pro Tem Thomas White called the agreement "a win-win in my mind." Councilmember Antoinette (Toni) Bram concurred. Describing the process of negotiation that had preceded the agreement, she praised "the spontaneity and creativity" that had brought about this happy conclusion. "We seemed to get along for a change," she said, referring to the relationship between council and Christacos.

On motions by Isaacs, who took an active role throughout what would be his last meeting on the city council, from which he is retiring, ordinances were unanimously passed authorizing the levy and collection of the special assessments and authorizing the issuance of tax anticipation notes in anticipation of the collection of the special assessment. Underwritten by Sovran Bank, the note will have an initial 90-day term, with 30-day renewals to a maximum term of 18 months. By this means the financing authorized by the special assessment can begin immediately. (Councilmember Ed Putens, whose arrival was delayed because of a prior engagement, was not present to vote.)

Asked to comment on the completion of the agreement, Isaacs said: "It's nice to see it happen."

Disagreement

In explaining plans for the development of a retail business in the north wall of the west building in the Center, the city's Director of Planning and Development Celia Wilson, showed drawings indicating interior and exterior layouts for the planned video store. The space is so designed, she said, that at a future time it could be sectioned into two separate small stores. At present two large holes, created for entrance doorways and adjacent windows, have been knocked into the wall. In light of Christacos' agreement that the city should control the external appearance of the Center buildings, the cutting into the wall without prior approval had brought dismay to city staff and councilmembers.

Wilson indicated that this change could, however, result in "a great opportunity to make a visual entrance as well as a functional entrance from the west parking lot. Because of issues of grading, especially concerning an above grade storm grate, advice from a civil engineer would be necessary, she said. The new store front is to be developed in a way consistent with the other commercial facades along Crescent Rd., she added.

No entrance would be permitted along the loading dock. In fact, an aspect of the agreement with Christacos would result in the cleaning up of that area, currently considered something of an eyesore.

On the north wall, currently fronting on a narrow asphalt sidewalk, the walkway would have to be doubled in width, she said, because of danger from doors opening out. At present awnings like those along Centerway would cover the doorways, but eventually a roofed-over effect, like those above the dry-cleaner's and the entrance to the Mellon Bank, would be put in place. New landscaping between the building and the professional building to the north would be designed to make the entrance more inviting.

All of these proposed changes were discussed and agreed upon in a meeting recently between Christacos, his lawyer, and the city's Advisory Planning Board — or so Wilson and the APB members had understood.

Dispute

"Not so," said Demetrios Anagnostiadis, Christacos attorney. "We have serious concerns with it." He said that Christacos feels he should not be responsible for new landscaping, which will be placed entirely on the property belonging to the professional building. He would be willing to widen the sidewalk, continuing its asphalt surface, but not to excavate the current walkway and replace it with the more expensive concrete. He would want to see a cost analysis concerning the installation of a covered walkway. He favors improvements "because these benefit all," Anagnostiadis said, but in bringing in a new retail store, Christacos feels he is benefiting the city as a whole.

Following these comments,

White broke in. "I have a hard time containing myself," he said. "Nothing should have been done there until it was approved by the city. These alterations of a Center building constitute a major change. I want to hear some responsibility on your part in making it compatible with the rest of the Center. The existing walkway is a back door of the Center. In its present configuration it is not ideal for retail space. There have to be architectural and design considerations. You're objecting to that context."

Anagnostiadis interjected that digging up the present asphalt would be a large expense, to which White answered, "One option would be to repair the wall and forget about it."

"The video store triggered all this action," Bram agreed. "Without the hole in the wall there would be no need to go to the APB and the landscape issue would not have come up."

Anagnostiadis reiterated that an offer by William Edwards, spokesman for the corporation that owns the professional building, to contribute $300 to $500 toward the landscaping was too little. The APB has taken the position that Christacos should contribute some amount toward landscaping expenses.)

At this point J Davis, chair of the APB, went to the microphone. "What I'm hearing tonight is so counter to what I heard (at the October 16 APB meeting)," she said. "The holes are already in the wall. We were told (by the city) to cooperate so as to get the best possible outcome . . . They've already purchased doors and windows. If it were not for the work stoppage, we would have no control over what they look like." She continued that she felt the APB had been "conned."

Summarizing the situation, Weidenfeld suggested that Christacos' action had "precipitated that something had to be done." The present access to the proposed store front is like "a little back alley." Whatever is done needs to be "compatible" and "attractive like the rest of the Center. It needs concrete sidewalks, shrubbery and landscaping."

Without Christacos' action, "We would do it down the road when it's convenient to the city and when we could afford it," Weidenfeld said. "This is going to be one of those joint projects again. The amount will have to be negotiated."

At this point Christacos decided to speak for himself. Coming to the microphone, he said that the dollar amounts for the APB proposals he had not even heard "until tonight. I'm not objecting to sharing," he emphasized. "I'm willing to put up my share. Let's be reasonable. Your'e holding approval like a weapon over me."

Christacos said he had understood that when he got the County's license for the construction, "I thought I could go ahead. Excuse me for making a mistake. I'm willing to close it up."

At urging by Weidenfeld and at Manzi's suggestion, it was agreed that a future work session would be scheduled based on cost estimates for the various aspects of the project. "It's been a constructive dialogue," Weidenfeld said. He concluded, however, that nothing could be done prior to the election because the future composition of the council membership was currently in doubt.

When His Furnace Quit, He Didn't Have To Make Cuts To Meet His Monthly Payments.

Every now and then, something needs attention, no waiting. That's why Mellon has all kinds of loans. And at longer terms than most other banks. Now, the longer the term, the lower the monthly payment. So you can pretty much choose one that works with your budget. For more information about loans, or even to apply for one, stop by any Mellon office in Bethesda, Bowie, Columbia, Gaithersburg, Greenbelt, Rockville, or Wheaton. Or call 301 217-0691. Either way, we'll help you figure out a monthly payment that won't take too much off the top.

You're why we do our very best.™

Panic Awareness Subject of Talks

The Department of Psychiatry at Prince Georges Hospital Center will be presenting a free seminar on the anxiety disorders and agoraphobia in the auditorium of the Hospital Center on Tues., Nov. 5, from 7 to 8:30 p.m. The seminar will feature a talk by Dr. Ralph Wadeson, a board certified psychiatrist.

While admission is free, space is limited, so individuals who wish to attend must register in advance. Interested persons may register by calling Prince Georges Hospital Center's Department of Psychiatry at (301) 618-3162.

Washington Adventist Hospital will hold a free lecture on panic disorder Mon., Nov. 4, 7:30-9 p.m. Dr. Cyril Hardy will discuss panic attacks and their causes, diagnosis, and treatment. The lecture will be held in the sixth floor assembly room, Washington Adventist Hospital, 7600 Carroll Avenue, Takoma Park. No registration is required.

Republicans Consider Endorsing Judges

The Prince Georges County Republican Central Committee (PGRCC) will consider endorsing Circuit Court Judges Steven Platt and Larnzell Martin at its next meeting Nov. 4, at 7 p.m. in Republican headquarters at 9420 Annapolis Rd.

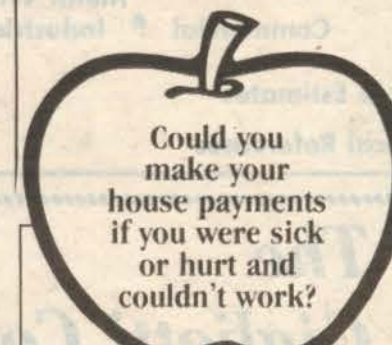

The judges have accepted an invitation to attend the meeting and will be given 15 minutes to address the central committee.

The forum will then be opened to questions from the central committee.

Any Republicans interested in running for the office of circuit court judge should forward copies of their resume to the PGRCC by Nov. 4.

The PGRCC encourages all Republicans to attend this meeting.
