School Board Chair Plogman Reflects on Major Accomplishments

by James Giese

There are only two county-wide governing bodies of elected officials in Prince Georges County—the County Council and the Board of Education. Currently, the Chairs of both are Greenbelters. Previously, the News Review published an interview with Richard Castaldi, Chair of the County Council. This is the first of a series of articles based on an interview with the Chair of the Board of Education, Suzanne M. Plogman.

In between her morning run and the time to pick up her son, Alex, from Kindergarten at Center School, Suzanne Plogman took more than two hours from her busy schedule to be interviewed by this reporter. A previous interview appointment had had to be rescheduled because she needed to attend a meeting of the County Council.

The interview was conducted in one of the meeting rooms of the Swimming Pool, a location not only convenient to Center School, but one which gave her the opportunity to check on her older son, Luke, who was swimming there as part of the Recreation Department's Kreative Kids Camp program.

Plogman was born and raised in Baltimore. She earned a B.A. degree in education at Hood College in Frederick and an M.A. in Special Education at the University of Arizona. She has lived in Prince Georges County since 1978, when she became a teacher in the county school system. She and her husband, Rennie Mihalovic, moved to Greenbelt in 1981 and now reside on Ridge Road in the North Ridge Subdivision with their two young sons. A third child is expected to make her debut in the middle of August.

Plogman became interested in local politics and became active in the Franklin and Eleanor Roosevelt Democratic Club in Greenbelt. She also took an active role in the election campaigns of Parris Glendening and was involved with the National Organization for Women (NOW). Later she was appointed by Glendening to the Commission for Women and served for a number of years. In 1986, she declared herself a candidate for the Board of Education and won the election. However, before that could happen, incumbent Leslie Kramer resigned and the County Executive appointed Plogman in October to fill out the balance of the term. Plog-man was re-elected to a four-year term in 1990.

Accomplishments

Plogman is proud of her contributions to the school board to date and the changes she has achieved in the school system. When asked to identify those accomplishments, she listed eight as being of particular importance to her.

(1) Plogman sponsored a board resolution that was enacted requiring high school students to have one-half credit in health education in order to graduate. Before the requirement became effective for the class of 1988, the course had been an elective which was taken by only 10% of students. Plogman believed that it was essential for students to have a better awareness of health matters, such as the spread of AIDS.

(2) Another resolution authorized by Plogman and enacted by the board called for a survey of school system employees to determine their needs for child day care. As a result of the survey, the school system opened a child care center at the Glenridge Elementary School in New Carrollton. The facility is operated by the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission. It is filled and there is a waiting list.

New School

(3) Plogman is very excited about the construction of the new elementary school in Greenbelt and is pleased with her role in resolving the issue over whether there should be a new school or whether Center School should be rehabilitated and expanded. "After the many years of debate, the school will be completed in another year" she hopes. "I think the community center is an exciting concept as well. There has certainly been a lot of organizational interest in the facility."

(4) Plogman became concerned when a group of kids ganged up on a couple of kids at one school. "I wanted to send a clear message that gang attacks are not acceptable behavior in our school," she commented. As a result, she sponsored a resolution that was adopted to automatically expel students involved in group, or gang, fights.

(5) Plogman is proud of the Howard B. Owens Science Center located east of Greenbelt near DuVal High School. Its Challenger Learning Center is directly connected to the Johnson Space Center in Houston and is heavily used by public school children. "I proposed a resolution that would enable the private and parochial school kids to use the center when it was not being used by public school students," she advised. The resolution was adopted.

Management Audit

(6) Last May, Plogman co-authored with board member Marcy Canavan a resolution that was adopted that called for a management audit of the school system. The county will be funding the audit and the Chamber of Commerce is actively involved as well. A management audit of the county is also to be done. The school audit will be done by outsiders. "Marcy and I feel that there is a need to demonstrate to the public that there is little See SCHOOL BOARD, page 9

Labor Day Festival Features More Booths, Bands, Rides

by Sandy Smith

The 1992 Greenbelt Labor Day Festival is just one month away and the Festival Committee has signed up an impressive array of live entertainment for the four-day community festival, marching groups and bands for the Labor Day parade, and activities and special contests for every age.

The Labor Day Festival will have a record-breaking number of food and activity booths in the carnival area, representing many community and civic organizations in Greenbelt which use this occasion to raise funds for their year-round programs. To help support those activities and to fund Labor Day expenses the Festival Committee, working with Greenbelt's Rotary Club, has launched a fund-raising drive asking local businesses to support the Festival in any way they can.

Funding

As in past years, contributions from business are essential to carry on the Festival, which is a non-profit, all-volunteer event. Except for a small fee for expenses, the community organizations keep all the funds raised in each booth or with each activity. The city's contribution consists primarily of essential services, from the Public Works, Recreation, and Police Departments and other city employees.

The Festival receives a portion of the income from the carnival rides and then depends upon contributions to pay for bands, floats, stage entertainment, publicity, supplies, and all other expenses. This year's budget is $45,000. Some funds were available from the previous year to begin work on the Festival; the rest must be raised by the Festival's start. This year's ambitious plans require a successful fund-raising operation.

On the Stage

The Labor Day Festival is known for its traditional flavor, yet it is always changing, too, with new ideas welcomed and suggestions coming from all parts of the community. Each year the Festival brings back old favorites and identifies new groups and activities to entertain Festival goers. Nowhere is that more apparent than on the Festival stage. "Second Conspiracy" brings the sounds of oldies but goodies from the '50s, '60s, and '70s to the stage the opening evening of the Festival. "Blue Miracle", a modern rock group, takes center stage Saturday evening and "Bustin Loose," a country rock band, is on stage Sunday. The big band orchestra of Vic Simas has been booked for this year as well as the American Music Company with Top 40s, Rob Guttenberg's folk music, and Bill Fowler's musical review.

The stage will also be the setting for a Double Dutch jump rope demonstration, Sahara Dancers, Discovering Science, the Commodores Jazz Band and the annual Talent Show. Finding the best performers to provide non-stop entertainment each day from noon to midnight is the job of Entertainment Chair, Mary Ann Baker. She says that "we made every effort to provide new en-

HAZ-MAT Team to BARC

by Elaine Skolnik

The Prince Georges County Hazardous Materials Team (HAZ-MAT) was called to the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center (BARC) on Saturday, August 1. Around 9:30 p.m. BARC security personnel responded to an alarm that went off outside the Chemical Waste Storage Building on North Drive near Sellman Street in Beltsville.

Initially, it was believed that the alarm was triggered by a malfunction in a sump-pump. Later, a determination was made that "a minute amount of a solvent leaked out from one of the seams of a 55-gallon drum into the sump triggering the alarm," said Pete Peringer, spokesman for the fire department.

"There was no danger to the environment or the building," he noted, adding that the contractor, who is regularly scheduled to pick up hazardous materials temporarily stored in the building for disposal elsewhere, later performed clean-up work.

Fifty members from the county fire department were on the scene for about four hours along with BARC's security and safety personnel. A decontamination area was set up. Since the building contained some 80 chemicals, the situation was placed in the Level III category. At this level only the county's highly trained and experienced HAZMAT team is called upon to don the required yellow encapsulated suits before entering a building to take action to abate a potentially serious problem.

In checking out the Chemical Waste Storage Building, the HAZMAT team had an inventory of materials stored in the building.

Peringer said that all county firefighters are trained to identify hazardous materials.

Blocked View

To the Editor:
Old Greenbelt is a unique community because it is a planned community; service side facing the street where trash containers are closeted so they are out of sight, etc. The garden side facing inner block is designed to have gardens, etc. But now Greenbelt can properly be called "Shanty Town"—what with all the sheds everywhere.

From the doorway on the gardenside of my home there are four sheds within 100 yards. There is one place on Southway where you look across the yards and your view is blocked by three sheds.

The planners of this community never intended that it should be cluttered up with these sheds/shacks — of that I have no doubt. If GHI had any aesthetic comprehension, it would require these sheds to be placed flush up against the main house structure as a few of the homeowners have done.

I am sure the home-owners think these little "barn" structures are cute. But, nonetheless — they clutter up the landscape and the view across the area — blocking ones view.

In the center of the block is a sidewalk that used to be a joy to walk and look at peoples' gardens and yards. Now walking between these sheds reminds me of walking in an alley in the inner city.

If GHI can dictate such foolishness as telling me that I have to "paint my fence within the next two weeks" — most certainly they must be able to advise homeowners where their sheds can be placed once a permit has been gotten to erect one. And if GHI personnel have any aesthetic values — or any concern about following the original plans for this "planned" community, then certainly they can tell them to be placed against the main house structure and not block and obscure the views within the town.

GHI Board Discusses Current Computer System

by Sandy Smith

A spirited discussion of the Greenbelt Homes Inc. computer system kept the Board of Directors meeting until after midnight on July 2. The Board received a report from the Audit Committee presented by Chair Virginia Moryadas which itemized a number of observations on the computer system and recommendations for improvements.

The Audit Committee had also made arrangements to have a consultant review the system and evaluate its current status. The Board sought to formalize the status of the consultant and the amount of access which could be permitted. It was finally agreed that Manager Ron Colton would review the Audit Committee findings and report back on the current operations of the computer system and how it conformed or did not with the Audit Committee observations.

In response to another aspect of the Audit Committee's report on access to salary information, the manager was directed to make available at the next board meeting a copy of the various salary ranges

Information Systems

Based on information provided by GHI management and staff, the Audit Committee made a number of recommendations to strengthen the computerized system as it was installed a year ago. The Audit Committee recommended that GHI have a policy of using only registered software, make several changes in its security system, establish a computer manager to control all aspects of the system, and to move toward a more integrated data base management system. This year the Audit Committee plans to embark on an audit of the computer information systems maintained by GHI.

Woodlands Committee

The Board adopted a charter for the Woodlands Committee which among other provisions authorizes the committee to make recommendations concerning the management and preservation of GHI woodlands, to advise the Board on forest management practices, to review and recommend changes to GHI's forest management plans, to inspect the woodlands, and to organize and promote projects where members can assist in the care of the woodlands. A motion to have unlimited membership on the committee failed as did a specific motion to limit membership to nine members. A number of members have indicated to Board President Ray McCawley that they are interested in serving on the Woodlands Committee.

Other Business

GHI approved contributions to the Greenbelt Arts Center annual Art Show and Auction and the 1992 Greenbelt Labor Day Festival. It tabled a motion to prepay the 1986 loan with the National Cooperative Bank for rehab of the larger GHI homes. A draft letter requested proposals from accounting firms to perform the 1992 audit was reviewed and approved.

Deadline for School Transfer Requests

Student school transfer requests must be received by the Prince Georges County Public Schools Transfer Office by August 15 in order to be decided upon by the opening of school. Parents whose requests are received after August 15, and who have not received a written decision should enroll and send their children to the assigned schools until their request is acted upon and a written reply is received. No decisions are given by phone.

Volunteers Needed

Representatives and volunteer coordinators of community organizations and non-profit agencies in the county are invited to a meeting on Monday, August 17, at 10:30 a.m. to be held in Riverdale. This meeting is being called to develop community service opportunities for volunteers recommended by the Prince Georges Department of Social Services. If interested please call the Prince Georges Voluntary Action Center at 301-779-9444.

Tie a Yellow Ribbon Bring Qusay Home

In her quest to "Bring Qusay Home," Qusay's mother Lucy Nuaimy plans to cover Greenbelt with yellow ribbons for her missing son. Qusay was not returned home after a 30-day visit with his father. According to a friend, the father took the boy to Iraq. Nuaimy has legal custody of the five-year-old Qusay.

Volunteers from St. Hugh's and Mowatt United Methodist Churches have offered to help Nuaimy, but more volunteers are needed to put up ribbons all over Greenbelt. The project is "therapeutic for me," Naimy told the News Review. "I'm very fortunate to live in Greenbelt. There are a lot of caring people here. I'm getting a lot of suport."

Channel 8 and channel 4 have aired the story. Greenbelt police, FBI and State Department officials are now assisting Nuaimy in her effort to find out where her son is and bring him home. Others who have had children abducted and taken out of the country

1991 Outstanding Citizen Reflects on His Selection

by Virginia Beauchamp

"I was surprised as all get out," said Ben Rosenzweig, commenting on the experience of being tapped last year as Greenbelt's Outstanding Citizen. "I was caught flat-footed." Ben's wife, Ethel, he went on, had urged him to put on a tie and jacket when they decided to drop down to the opening ceremonies for the 1991 Labor Day Festival. "But I resisted," he said, "because it was too hot."

When Tom Renahan began listing the contributions of the mystery person, Rosenzweig said, "I wondered who this person was who had been doing all the things I had been up to. When Tom said my name, I was tickled and pleased. It was quite a show." Of the many gifts he received as last year's awardee, the best was the "Greenbelt Is Great" tee shirt from the Co-op Nursery School, he said. He wears that regularly when he walks around the lake.

Rosenzweig was a Greenbelt pioneer, moving here with Ethel in 1938. Almost immediately he became immersed in community activities—especially in the forming of the many cooperatives for which Greenbelt is famous. He was a founding member of the food cooperative, Greenbelt Consumer Services, of GHI, and of the Greenbelt Credit Union. He stayed with GCS until it gave up its grocery store in 1984 but he still serves with the credit union, where he has been president of the board for the last 25 years. He also serves on the finance committee for GHI.

Now he is embarked on what may become another cooperative in the city if the work of a senior housing committee comes to fruition. He is already vice-chairman of its steering committee. He continues to be active, as well, with the Mishkan Torah synagogue, where he acts as trustee of special funds.

Other Contributions

Retirement does not seem to be in Rosenzweig's vocabulary. He may have stepped down from his job as a civil servant with the federal government, but he continues to serve as a member, as he has since 1967, of the city's Community Relations Advisory Board, which provides advice concerning employee concerns.

Outside the city, he is a volunteer with the Consumer Credit Counseling Service for southeast Maryland. This organization, which consists of five officers and a staff of 27, was formed to advise people on how to get out of debt. Rosenzweig serves as vice president and chairman of the finance committee.

Another major organization in which he participates is the National Association of Retired Federal Employees (NARFE). He serves on the federal legislative committee of the Maryland State Federation where he is legislative liaison with Congressional District 5. "It puts me in touch with Congressman Steny Hoyer," Rosenzweig said. He also is legislative chairman of the local chapter.

He agreed that he attends a lot of meetings. "When I'm not doing that," he said, "I do windows!"

Asked to comment on his experience in the last year as Greenbelt's Outstanding Citizen, Rosenzweig said: "I want to wish all the best to whoever is the next lucky person."

New Park Opens In College Park

A new park featuring a 38-acre lake was recently opened by the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission. Lake Artemesia Park was developed as part of the construction of the Metro Green Line extension. Soil removed from the lake bed was used to form the rail bed, resulting in a construction savings.

The park features a concession/restroom facility, promenade area with observation tower, hiking/biking/equestrian trails, wetlands mitigation areas and a 52-car parking lot at the Berwyn Road entrance, off Route 1 in College Park.

Nominations for 1992

Who that person may be is still a mystery. Some nominations have already come in but the nomination period is still open. It does not close till August 16. ## Some '800' Calls Resulting in Fees

When dialing an 800-number, consumers could discover that what once was free may no longer be warns Maryland Attorney General J. Joseph Curran, Jr. in the latest issue of "Tips for Tough Times," a consumer alert publication.

"The abuse of 800-numbers could be the next big scam to plague the public," Curran said, citing complaints received by the Consumer Protection Division in his office about a company that billed consumers who called a "toll-free" 800-number.

A new one-page "Tips for Tough Times," prepared by the Consumer Protection Division warns that the questionable use of 800-numbers, long familiar to consumers as a toll-free means of obtaining information, is "a new twist to an old problem."

Curran said the monthly "Tips For Tough Times" is available to any company or organization that wishes to copy it for distribution to employees or clients.

Contact the Consumer Protection Division in Baltimore at (410) 234-1655.

Labor Day

performances with a variety of performances to appeal to many interests and many ages."

Rides and Booths

Festival carnival chair J Davis reports a similar new look should be expected in the carnival. Rosebud Entertainment, which has provided the carnival rides and carnival game booths for many years, will be bringing a number of new rides based on suggestions which children made after last year's festival

New groups to sponsor carnival booths include the Greenbelt Youth Double-Dutch League, Eleanor Roosevelt High School Senior Class and the Central Maryland Amateur Radio Club.

Marching and Spinning

Bands and more bands will be marching in this year's parade. The popular Yankee Rebels will return, after several years' absence. This spectacular band and precision drill team has been one of the most requested groups for the parade. A newcomer is the Camelot Lancers, appearing for the first year with their distinctive performance. The Alte Kameraden German Band will perform as well as more pipe bands, drill teams and precision marchers.

A new sight for Greenbelt will be the many spinning members of Moonspinners who will operate their spinning wheels in Roosevelt Center as a special Labor Day Festival event. They will spin for six hours to turn fleece into yarn and collect pledges to assist a local woman in need of a liver transplant

How to Help

Festival Committee President Bobbi McCarthy says that there are many ways the business community can support the Festival from sponsoring individual activities, or events to providing general financial support or assisting with goods and services. Letters have gone to local businesses. For more information business leaders should contact Bobbi McCarthy at 474-5888 or Helen Svenson of Greenbelt Travel Services at 474-1300.

County Surpasses Recycling Goal

Prince Georges County has surpassed the state's recycling mandate 18 months ahead of schedule and now boasts a recycling rate of 20.7 percent. The Maryland Recycling Act of 1988 requires all large counties to recycle at least 20 percent of all solid waste by January 1, 1994. This achievement is especially notable because the County Recycling program is almost entirely a voluntary effort including the forces of government, business and the citizenry.

The county plans to begin construction in the fall of a Materials Recovery Facility that will process 300 tons per day of materials collected from the residential curbside program. For information about the county's recycling programs, call the Office of Recycling at 301-925-5963, TDD/TTY 301-925-5167.

School Board's Plogman

(Continued from page one) waste in the school system," Plogman observed. "We need to have an outsider take a look. If there are problems, they should be corrected."

The proposal for the audit has been a cause of friction between the school board and the county council. In his interview, Richard Castaldi expressed displeasure with a ruling of the school board attorney that only the school board could conduct a management audit. School board members were reported in the press to be unhappy with the funds being budgeted in the county budget rather than in the schools budget. They also felt that the school system was being singled out for audit when the original proposal was to audit the entire county government.

Plogman attributes the problems to misunderstandings that have now been straightened out. "It is our understanding that it will be a simple matter to transfer the money needed to pay for the cost of the audit," she reported.

(7) Last fall, Plogman initiated a resolution to amend the code of conduct as relates to sexual harassment. "It declares that the Board wishes to maintain an environment free of sexual harassment and makes the offense a violation," she advised. "In most cases counseling will be the method of dealing with the offense. When you are dealing with adolescents, there is partly a need for better education."

(8) The last accomplishment on Plogman's list was a resolution which she co-authored this spring that calls for the Board of Education to have fiscal autonomy and be able to levy its own property tax rather than going through the county council and executive. "In Maryland, all the school boards are under the county governments," she noted. "We realize that there is resistance to the idea and that we will probably have to involve the other counties in the matter."

While Plogman realizes that autonomy will not be won easily, she did feel that it was appropriate to raise the issue at this time. "I expect that there will be a bill introduced in the next legislative session," she stated.

School District Boundaries

There are nine school board members elected from districts, just as there are nine county council members. However, the boundaries of the districts are quite different. Whereas the Fourth Councilmanic District extends east from Greenbelt to Bowie and includes Glenn Dale, School Board District 2, which includes Greenbelt, encompasses part or all of five other municipalities to the south—Berwyn Heights, a large part of College Park, Hyattsville, Riverdale, New Carrollton and Edmonston, which was added by the most recent redistricting. The unincorporated Lanham-Seabrook area near DuVal High School is also in the school board district.

Another difference between the Board of Education and the County Council is that while both have staggered terms, the number of terms up at one time varies from five to four on the County Council while on the Board of Education, six members are elected at one time in one even-numbered year, while only three are elected the next time. Plogman is one of the group of three who are elected at the same time.

When it comes to selecting the chair, both governing bodies are the same in that the members elect one of their members to be the chair. Both also tend to rotate the chair among the members on a yearly basis, although the County Council is more apt to elect a chair for more than one year's time. Plogman's one-year term as chair will end in January. She looks forward to being able to step down and reduce the demands upon her as a member of the school board so that she can devote more time to her family, and in particular to the new baby.

Bikes in the Center

March, 1942—In an editorial, the Cooperator urged the town council to adopt a bicycle ordinance that had been placed on hold, calling it as "near perfect as possible." The paper called the regulation of children riding bikes on the sidewalks in the commercial center and the wrong way on Centerway, often without a light or proper reflectors after sundown as an important safety measure. "If through the lack of proper training by the parents of these children, the children see fit to ignore the simple safety instructions given by the Police Department, then it becomes necessary to pass a law for the protection of the many from the actions of the few," the editorial concluded.

(Note: There is a city ordinance now on the books prohibiting bicycle riding in the Roosevelt Center. It also includes a variety of other bicycle regulations, including the licensing of bicycles.)
