Community Center Cost Estimate Increased 19%, Council Shocked

by Jeannine Fielding

A volatile September 7 City Council work session dedicated to receive an update on the community center provided more questions than answers.

All council members were extremely concerned about the $935,563 increase in cost estimates from the $4.8 million estimated in August, 1992.

Particularly heated, Edward Putens demanded accountability from the Florance Eichbaum Esocoff King architects (FECK), the consulting firm hired by the city to evaluate Center School for a future community center.

Russell Perry, one of the architects, said he could only offer apologies, but no reasons. Council member Thomas White wanted to know why there were increases rather than decreases in the updated cost estimates when the theater had been dropped from the community center plans, as requested at the June 1, 1993 council meeting. Antoinette Bram clearly wanted to know if the city was being taken advantage of simply because it had recently become "more affluent" with the acceptance of certain grant monies. "We must constantly be responsible to the taxpayer," she said with authority.

The review of cost estimates took most of the evening. Perry outlined the changes from the '92 estimates to the '93. The five main areas where the increases occurred were costs for the electrical system, window replacement, adult day care, location of chiller units, and Davis Bacon wage rates.

Electrical System

The most dramatic change, and the one Perry attributed the largest increase to, was the cost of the electrical system. Originally estimated at $5 per square foot, it more than doubled to an estimated $11.50 per square foot. Putens stated this was unacceptable and demanded to know the reason why. Perry said when the firm confronted the mechanical and electrical engineers with this very question they only "shrugged their shoulders." Perry did provide one possible reason for the inaccuracies. Oftentimes, he said, electrical and mechanical drawings are less detailed than architectural drawings, thus allowing for building estimates to be more accurate than for electrical systems.

Window Replacement

As more investigation was done on the building, it was determined that all the windows needed replacement, rather than only some as part of the original estimate. Perry said one-third of the windows would need to be replaced immediately due to damaged lintels.

Adult Day Care

The adult day care has been expanded from its original plan and relocated to the lower level of the building. This procedure required reconfiguration of the space, including demolition, new wall partitions, a new door and plumbing.

Due to a fresh air problem, the air conditioner chiller units

Shaw's Classic Androcles and the Lion in Rehearsal

by Hopi Auerbach

Starting October 1, Greenbelt's own community theatre will perform George Bernard Shaw's "Androcles and the Lion" for three consecutive weekends. This marks Greenbelt Arts Center's first production under a roof it can call its own, since it was located in the Utopia Theatre, now the P&G Old Greenbelt Theatre.

In "Androcles and the Lion", Shaw gives his take on the familiar fable. A humble Christian removes a thorn from the paw of a suffering lion, and later is spared by the very same lion in a Roman Coliseum.

Shaw's version emphasizes the humor and irony of the tale. For example, Caesar (to be played here by the unmistakably female Kerry Newman of Bethesda) is portrayed as terrified of the lion, and then later boasts of having tamed it.

In addition to the animal-loving Androcles (to be played in the GAC production by Lloyd Rawley of Greenbelt), the Romans are preparing to throw a variety of other Christians to the lions. There is Ferrovius (Bill Fedorshik of Lanham), the gentle giant who wrestles with his own temptations to lash back at the Roman oppressors, rather than turn the other cheek. There is Lavinia (Jeannette Connors of Greenbelt), the beautiful and intelligent patrician who admits to having doubts and fears, but who conducts herself bravely.

The story is originally supposed to have taken place in about 150 A.D. Shaw's version was premiered in Berlin, London and New York in 1912, 1913 and 1915 respectively, and has been found relevant by contemporary audiences in every decade since.

As a socialist and a vegetarian, George Bernard Shaw was himself a thorn in the paw of aristocratic theatre goers early in this century. But even they could not resist Shaw's "Androcles and the Lion." The play is not only superbly entertaining but also celebrates the value of life, and illuminates the same questions we ask ourselves today. It will be fascinating to see how the director of this upcoming production, Steve Blais of Greenbelt, will choose to present this play.

Candidates Respond

To provide voters with information concerning the eight candidates for city council, the Greenbelt News Review herewith presents their responses to the first of a series of questions that we will publish in successive issues preceding the election. The order of the candidates' answers was determined by lot. Questions 2 through 6 are listed in a separate box. (See page 9.)

Question 1: Why do you seek elective office? Why should you be elected?

Edward V. Putens

Since my election to the City Council in 1981, I have met both new and old challenges with enthusiasm. I have represented Greenbelt in its entirety with loyalty and understanding. I have established a record of performance.

My re-election would bring 12 years of Council experience to building a safer and more prosperous tomorrow. I want to brighten the spirits of our youth through recreation programs and adequate child care. I want to continue my initiatives for senior citizen programs and adequate senior housing. I pledge to continue working with you regardless of age to make our city even better.

I have made a commitment to help lead this city. It is impossible to accomplish anything worthwhile, however, without the help of other people. By supporting my re-election, you support a commitment to the people, a commitment to Greenbelt, and a continuation of effective and progressive leadership.

Judith "J" Davis

To enjoy the freedom of a democracy, a citizen must also be willing to serve her community in order to insure that those rights and advantages are maintained and expanded. Since moving to Greenbelt 18 years ago, I have served in many capacities in various civic organizations, committees, and boards for the express purpose of understanding and furthering the goals and philosophy of this historic planned city. Through leadership roles, such as with the Advisory Planning Board, the Labor Day Festival Committee, Greenbelt's Fiftieth Anniversary Committee, the Roosevelt Democratic Club, and Greenbelt's Phase I Board, I have gained experience and knowledge of how the City Council functions, how the city is managed, and what the people of Greenbelt hope for and need. My background, leadership abilities, and enthusiasm for my hometown make me highly qualified for Greenbelt's City Council.

Council Reviews 90% Plans, Parking at Community Center

by Jeannine Fielding

In addition to the review of cost estimates, and deduction alternatives, the other two items discussed at the September 7 Council work session were the 90 percent complete plans for the community center, and a proposed revision to the parking lot plan.

Where To Find It

Changes were made from the 65%-complete drawings in 1992 to the present drawings which are 90%-complete. Some changes were due to further investigation of the building and others because of relocation needs. Karl Riedel, architect with the firm Florance Eichbaum Esocoff King, (FEEK) presented the updated plans.

The Greenbelt News Review offices, formerly scheduled to be in the basement, will now be located on the ground floor with its own access. "The lights from this space will make it look like the building is in use (day or night)," said Riedel.

The adult day care originally was only going to be a few rooms but now will use the whole basement. The reason was to accommodate an increase in patrons, up to 55.

The space originally designated for the theater (eliminated at the June 1, 1993 Council meeting) will be used for a dance studio.

The Greenbelt Museum workrooms will move from the library to the top floor of the new building.

Handicap access was added to the drawings. There will be two new elevators, and a ramp at each entry to the building. Their intent, Riedel said, was to make the community center a "multi-generational facility." Specific access for the adult day center will be a raised platform with a semi-circular drive for easy drop-off and pick-up.

Inside Materials

After removing the old floor tiles in the main corridor, contaminated by asbestos, they will be replaced by "historically accurate chocolate brown tiles with specks," said Riedel. The ceiling will be made of concealed acoustical tile hiding a full sprinkler system. Riedel said the classrooms, which will be used for offices and general work space, will have new ceilings, as well as better lighting.

Outside Materials

A lighting change drew much attention from council members. Riedel said new lighting on the facade will be "pencil beams which will add a soft glow to the limestone and will give the building the importance it has never had."

In agreement with the Historical Society, the windows on the front of the building will be repaired to maintain their original "purity." The side windows will be replaced, and the aluminum windows on the 1967 building only need to be recaulked, he said.

The green paint on the lower base of the school contains lead, according to Riedel. This hazardous material will be removed and replaced with materials to look like the original cement.

A dramatic change from earlier plans is the replacement of the roof. Originally, only scheduled for partial replacement, Riedel said that after careful re-investigation the entire roof needed to be replaced. This can be done over a three to five year period, he said, although the roof over the kitchen needs replacement immediately.

Some changes were due to further investigation of the building and others because of relocation needs.

Scrutiny of 90% Plan

The roof created quite a stir for the council members. Originally estimated to cost $108,420, the roof with full replacement will now cost $168,500.

Council member Thomas White questioned whether the increased cost was a result of the last four years of neglect by the School Board. He said the board had agreed to "necessary maintenance" until the school was handed over to the city, and didn't think they had complied with this standard. Mike McLaughlin, Deputy City Manager, said he had been advised that school maintenance staff had tried to maintain it as best as they could.

After discussion of a list already presented to council on specific items which were not in "working order" at the time of the estimates, it was determined that staff should recirculate this list for further evaluation. In particular, White wanted to appeal to the Board of Education for the increase in roof repair, citing their neglect as the reason for the increase. Council member Antoinette Bram agreed and said, "I don't want to delay working, but I don't mind sending the bill." Mayor Gil Weidenfeld asked for an update from the architects on the changes in both window and roof estimates and suggested a separate work session be set up to discuss the list at length.

In addition to the roof and windows, other questions arose. Council member Bram asked if there were historical precedent for such lighting on the facade, and if this would lead to an increase in vandalism. Riedel said there was no precedent. Also, he suggested the lights may abate vandalism.

There will now be three kitchens—a central facility, one for the child day care, and one for the adult day care. Riedel explained their collective needs. The central kitchen will receive pre-prepared foods, will be used for the Food and Friendship program, and will serve up to 60 patrons at lunchtime. The child and adult day care each need kitchen facilities because "making cookies and bread is part of their program."

Parking Lot Reconsideration

The engineering firm of Greenman-Pedersen, Inc., (GPI) hired by the city to develop the parking proposal for the community center, presented changes suggested by the council at an earlier meeting. Some were: the visibility from the driveway—solution, seven spaces will be removed, and the aisle will be widened; using the basketball courts for overflow parking—solution, these will be left partially accessible for playing; and water drainage — solution, the parking lot and sidewalks will be sheet flow and not curb/gutter.

William Stratton with the Community Center Task Force presented an alternate parking plan. The main concerns the Task Force had were: dead-end parking created by using the basketball courts as overflow parking, circulation beside the Youth Center, and the perceived amount of paved area on-site. Additionally, he said the Task Force felt "out of the loop" and was not consulted on the parking lot plan.

After both sides had the opportunity to present their plans,

Book Signing Sept. 25 At Beltway Plaza

On Saturday, September 25, from 2 to 4 p.m., Harry Hone will be signing his book, "Light at the End of the Tunnel," at Bookland in Beltway Plaza. The book gives an account of his near-death experience.

Hone writes that he died of cardiac arrest at Riverside Hospital in Newport News, Virginia in 1986 for two minutes. In those two minutes he left his body and traveled through a dark tunnel into a white light. He watched as doctors and nurses tried to resuscitate him. He was soon revived.

Dr. David Tuthill and Sheila Maffay-Tuthill are proud to announce the birth of their son, Jacob Elijah. Jacob was born Aug. 24 at Holy Cross Hospital, weighing 7 lbs. 10 oz. In attendance at the birth, in addition to Dad, was aunt Julie Maffay-Erickson, R.N.

The happy grandparents are John and Elizabeth Maffay of Greenbelt, and Dr. and Mrs. Dean Tuthill of Adelphi.

Cost Estimates

(Continued from page one) will now be located on the roof, rather than in a lower level mechanical room. The costs incurred for relocation were: additional piping, connections, a roof closure and remote condenser.

Davis Bacon Wage Rates
These labor rates are required by Prince Georges County if the City of Greenbelt accepts financial assistance from the county in the form of a $200,000 federal grant.

The wage rates could potentially increase the cost of the project from $200,000 to $400,000.

After lengthy discussion, Rodney Roberts asked, "Is $200,000 worth it if we don't know whether the cost will be $200,000 or $400,000?" He acknowledged support of the Davis Bacon rates only if the city could break even.

In response one of the architects said, "The problem is the city won't know until the bids are in."

Mayor Weidenfeld suggested the option of subcontracting the project and putting the federal funds toward a portion of the construction, perhaps the adult day care center. He also entertained the idea of reversing the use of the block grant from the community center to the parking lot expansion. Mike McLaughlin, Deputy City Manager and City Treasurer, said it had already been established the city could not use block grant monies on the parking lot.

Al Herling argued for fairness to the workers over any attempt to circumvent the Davis Bacon Act. He recommended the council acquire a copy of the law and read it carefully.

The mayor clearly stated that council was not trying to violate any federal law, but simply to assess whether or not to accept the federal grant if it could increase the overall cost, rather than reduce it. He said in a subsequent telephone interview that the council is waiting for more specifics on what the cost may be before reaching a decision.

Possible Deductions

In order to counterbalance these increases, White asked about possible deductions. One of the items mentioned was the floor tiles in the building. It was the recommendation of the FEEK firm to replace all the tiles for two reasons: (1) over 50% of the tiles would be disturbed during the renovation process, and (2) trying to match the color would be difficult.

Items already cut by the architects were the carpeting, new gym windows, and an equipment allowance, a $135,000 savings from the earlier estimates.

Marie Tousignant from the Art Center suggested that groups who will rent space in the community center should be responsible for some of their own furnishings, thus reducing the "Engineering, Sitework & Furnishings" allowance which is currently set at $1 million. Bram concurred, and stated the employees of the adult and child day care would better know the needs of their participants than the city. However, a member of the audience said if the space is not adequately "ready for use," groups will not want to rent the space.

Suggestions for Solutions

White stated, "the council needs to move forward because a brooding hulk stands neglected. He suggested creating a list of deductions in advance in case the bids were too high. "We need to take another attempt (at the cost estimates) so the city is not faced with a project beyond what it can afford," he said.

Bram's option considered a phase strategy prioritized as follows: (1) building preservation, (2) containment and removal of asbestos, and (3) bringing the building up to code electrically. Then, she said, would be the time to consider the rest of the work.

Concluding this issue temporarily, Mayor Weidenfeld deferred to the staff to set up another work session to iron out new deductions and discuss them in more detail. He said, "It is obvious that Council has reached some level of discomfort. We need to cut back, but the question remains what and how."

Positive Prospects for Lakes At Schrom Hills Told to GEAC

by James Giese

After a seven-year wait, Greenbrook residents may have to wait only a little more than a year longer for a lake to be built in Schrom Hills Park. This will happen if the residents, the Corps of Engineers and the State of Maryland approve of the latest plans by the city's consulting engineers, Greenman and Pedersen (G&P), as presented at the September 9 meeting of the Greenbelt East Advisory Coalition.

"I may be dead by then," equipped Greenbelt's Outstanding Citizen and GEAC member, Dorothy Pyles. Pyles also had difficulty believing the issue had been around for only seven years. "I was young then," she said.

Kim Panate of G&P presented a plan calling for two small lakes totaling 2.3 acres. The original plan for a 13-acre lake had to be abandoned when new environmental regulations restricted the disturbance of wetlands. Lakes are not considered to be wetlands. The proposed plan will disturb one acre of wetlands, the maximum amount of disturbance permitted under a national permit, the easiest kind of permit to obtain.

Greenbelt Planning and Development Director Celia Wilson advised that if more than one acre were disturbed, the city would have to show reason why it was necessary to do so. She believed that the State and the Corps would not agree to the further disturbance. As it is, the city will have to create .3 acre of wetland near the site. Although not yet determined, the mitigating wetlands will probably be located upstream from the lakes.

Members of GEAC withheld comment until the plan could be presented to the Greenbrook homeowners. If that approval is obtained, then the proposal will be presented to the state. With that OK, Panate said G&P could begin to prepare engineering plans, which would take two to three months. Then the county will have to make the necessary funding available, as this is a county project in which the city became involved only in order to expedite it. Construction will take another two to three months.

Overpasses

GEAC members discussed two letters sent by Maryland Secretary of Transportation O. James Lighthizer. Although the first was negative to the pedestrian crossing problem on Greenbelt Road at the entrance to Eleanor Roosevelt High School, Sheldon Goldberg, president of the Windsor Green Homeowner's Association, believed that the second, which indicated a willingness to participate in a study of the need for overpasses at the high school and at Greenbelt Middle School, was more positive. GEAC requested that the city council expedite a study as suggested by Lighthizer and consider this matter at its September meeting. Council member Edward Putens noted that city staff had been requested to see if Berwyn Heights wanted to participate in the study.

Recycling

When council member Antoinette Bram asked city Recycling Coordinator Tracy Vincent what was being done about collecting old refrigerators and appliances in Greenbelt East. She advised that the contract refuse collectors for that area should take them away but that the city probably could do it for a fee. "It might be cheaper to pay whoever delivers the new appliance to remove the old," Vincent advised.

Kim Panate of Greenman & Pederson presented a plan calling for two small lakes totalling 2.3 acres.

Vincent was at the meeting to advise what was being done about the complaints received from Greenbelt East residents as a result of the change in recycling contractors. There have been missed pickups, but many people have failed to put out on the right day. These problems are being resolved, she advised.

Greenbriar will begin recycling shortly. Although the county usually provides the bins, the property manager will be doing so there and the county will reimburse for the cost.

Vincent gave some recycling tips. Newspapers should be put out in a paper bag or bundled. The recycling contractor may refuse to pick them up if they are in plastic bags. Glossy paper in the Sunday papers should be separated out and either taken to the recycling center at Buddy Attick Park or discarded. Vincent will deliver a bin to anyone not having one, upon request and at no charge. For missed pickups, call the county office. Vincent is available at 474-8004, the Greenbelt Public Works Department, on Tuesdays and Thursdays, and messages for her may be left at other times.

Other Matters

A meeting with school officials about students being off-premises during school hours and about other student-related problems failed to take place during the summer. GEAC will try for a meeting around the end of September.

GEAC will again sponsor a candidate's night for city council candidates, at the Greenbriar Community Building, October 13 and 20 were set as tentative dates. Pyles urged that new residents be contacted and urged to register to vote.

GEAC members were concerned about the potential development of a nearly two-acre parcel at the end of Mandan Road which has been advertised for sale, particularly about the possibility of Mandan Road's being extended beyond the city limits. It was agreed to look further into this matter.

The next meeting will be held on Thursday, October 7 at the Hunting Ridge Community Building.

Ballot Placement Is Determined

The official drawing to determine placement of names of candidates for Council member on the 1993 election ballot was held in the City offices on Tuesday, September 21. The placement is as follows: 2A—Antoinette Bram, 3A—Hopi J. Auerbach, 4A—Judith F. Davis, 5A—Council A. Nedd II, 6A—Rodney M. Roberts, 7A—Thomas X. White, 8A—Keith Chernikoff, 9A—Edward V. J. Putens.

QUESTION

Thomas X. White

The most direct response is that I will do a good job.

The reason is that I care about Greenbelt. I am sensitive to its unique needs and I have an appreciation for Greenbelt's traditions.

I will also bring a great deal of experience to the new Council. Involvement in Greenbelt organizations and in critical issues faced by the community since 1962 provide valuable knowledge and experience that can continue to be used effectively for Greenbelt.

If re-elected, I will continue efforts to enhance the quality of life for the Greenbelt community:

— Completion of Roosevelt Center and the new Community Center.

— Making Greenbelt a safe place to live and work.

— Completion of "Greenbrook" Lake.

— Completion of Lakewood storm drainage improvements.

— Address access, safety and environmental issues related to the Greenbelt Metro station.

— Focus efforts on pedestrian safety throughout Greenbelt.

With your support I will continue working on your behalf.

Council Nedd II

The people of Greenbelt East need at least one more voice when major policy issues are being decided for the city. I believe strongly in the idea of the citizen legislator. An individual assumes public office for a few years because he sees something wrong or would like to implement some sort of change. After that brief service the individual returns to private life. I am a strong advocate of term limits because after 20 or 25 years of legislating on a single body, elected officials tend to get a bit myopic and, inadvertently, lose sight of other important things that are going on around them.

I should be elected because I am a fresh voice to an entrenched City Council. I want to be an additional voice for the people of Greenbelt East to a city council that most east Greenbelters do not identify with or know exists.

Keith Chernikoff

I seek elective office because of an interest in community affairs that began as the son of community activists. They instructed by example the importance and expectations of community service, from PTA president, through the values of Scouting, to formation of the Seabrook Recreation Council meeting community needs for recreation programming.

Since 1978 and my work with the Ventoulis for Governor campaign, I worked on a variety of Federal and local campaigns including Richard Castaldi's first successful County Council race. This involvement provided valuable insight into the responsibility of elected officials to public service and community improvement.

Since moving to Greenbelt in September 1982, my service has spanned a variety of roles in civic, religious and community based activities. My experience provides the necessary background and dedication to hear and act upon the concerns of our entire community as a member of the City Council during the next two years.

Hopi J. Auerbach

Right now developers are digging up valuable green space inside and near our city limits. The Greenbelt City Council has preserved Parcels 1 and 2, after the Committee to Save the Greenbelt and others exerted pressure. Likewise, the majority of proposals for "growth" should be met with opposition from Council, and any unavoidable development should be planned to reinforce Eleanor Roosevelt's original concept for Greenbelt.

Other issues that must be addressed include: (1) Crime prevention, partly by the teaching of conflict resolution, and enhancement and inclusion of Springhill Lake and Greenbelt East in Greenbelt's traditional community spirit. (2) Improving the quality of public education, partly through increased city-wide emphasis on intellectual and cultural activities, in addition to the many athletic and sports opportunities currently offered by the City. (3) Convenient bus, bicycle and pedestrian access to the new Greenbelt Metro, and other public transportation.

Antoinette M. "Toni" Bram

Greenbelt is, first and foremost, a collection of unique neighborhoods forming a special and elite community. I seek re-election because I want to continue to enhance and preserve that precious sense of community which I have known and understood for 33 years. We all know that this city has a quality, an ambience, a level of comfort which cannot be found conveniently or economically elsewhere. I am seeking a sixth term on City Council because I am qualified by my understanding of Greenbelt's uniqueness and by my experience as a City Council member for 10 years. I am qualified by my specific education and level of academic achievement. I seek re-election because I, truly, do care. Caring for the greater good of this community, including all its neighborhoods, is a personal commitment I want to continue to make.

Rodney M. Roberts

While growing up in Greenbelt, I benefited from all the unique qualities this city has to offer. There was the benefit of having hundreds of acres of woods and open spaces to explore, the best recreation department anywhere, the convenience of the inner walkway system that safely led to the Roosevelt Center. As I grew older, I began to see many negative changes. I saw Greenbelt's trees coming down and the crime rate going up; highways and automobiles proliferating while the idea of a city that was safe for pedestrians was all but forgotten. In 1987, I decided that it was time to make a stand, so that every kid that grows up in Greenbelt can have as many of the benefits that I had as I can preserve. During my first term on Council, I believe I have made many positive contributions towards that end.

Questions for Council Candidates

2. (Due Sept. 27) If elected, what would you wish to accomplish during the next two years?
3. (Due Oct. 4) How would you contribute to the fight against crime and the protection of public safety in Greenbelt?
4. (Due at Co-op box only by 8 p.m. October 11) What cuts in spending or increases in taxes/fees would you support to maintain essential services or finance new proposals?
5. (Due Oct. 18) What else would you like to say in support of your candidacy for city council?

Rules

1. Responses to each question shall be no more than 150 words. Entries exceeding that length will be cut off at 150 words.
2. Responses may be submitted either in the News Review box at the Co-op Food Store or by 10 p.m. at the News Review office on the Monday preceding publication.
3. The News Review will not edit responses except to delete material that the editors deem inappropriate, such as personal attacks on individual candidates.
4. Responses shall be typed or machine printed and the lines shall be double spaced. The candidate's name and signature shall be shown at the end of the text but shall not be considered as words counted in the response.
5. The order of the candidates' responses will be determined by lot each week.
6. It is the intent of the editors to provide an equal opportunity to all candidates to fairly present their views. Decisions of the editors are final.

JOE'S TIPS OF THE WEEK

Hello again !!!

Is a maintenance free battery really maintenance free?

The title maintenance free is a little deceiving. Most of those types of batteries come with sealed top caps which don't allow visual inspections to check electrolyte level. Although, some of these do in fact have removable top caps. Battery cables and terminal ends still corrode, no matter what kind of battery you have. So much for the maintenance free theory.

If electrolyte level is low, there must be a reason: damaged case, system over charging due to an alternator or voltage regulater or even wiring or excessive current demand.

On battery cables or terminal ends, the primary reason for low electrolyte level is poor connection or corrosion. When this occurs a resistance point is made. When there is a high resistance point, there are also high temperatures - high enough to melt the terminal ends and battery area.

Preventive maintenance scheduling still plays a big role in maintenance free automotive parts.

TILL-NEXT TIME
THINK PREVENTIVE MAINTENANCE.
