Greenbelt Youth Shot and Killed

A 13-year-old Greenbelt youth was shot to death in Greenbelt East late last Friday afternoon (May 13) while anguished friends looked on helplessly. Greenbelt police apprehended nine male youths shortly thereafter, two of whom were arrested for first degree murder and other charges. The remaining seven were released and not charged pending further investigation. They have been subpoenaed to appear before the Grand Jury, according to police officials.

The youth who was shot, Carlton Frances "C. J." Brown II, had been among a group watching a fight between older teenagers occurring in a sloping grassy area at the intersection of Hanover Parkway and Mandan Road, according to eyewitnesses. The group had scattered and begun to run after a gun was produced. The shooting took place moments later.

The two suspects, although juveniles, have been charged as adults. Jarreau Newton, 16, was charged with first degree murder and assault with intent to murder, as well as use of a handgun in the commission of a crime. The second suspect, Nicholas Terrebrood, 17, was charged with first degree murder and released on his own recognizance pending trial by District Commissioner Tonia Joy. Both youths live in the 5400 block of 85th Avenue in New Carrollton.

Police have said little about the circumstances of the shooting, but eyewitnesses offered the following account: Brown slipped and fell on the grassy slope while fleeing. He was subsequently assaulted and beaten while being held on the ground, they said. While the beating was taking place, a youth came up alongside, they said, and shot him in the stomach. They said the victim was not a participant in the fight, which drew numerous on-

C.J. - A Life Remembered

The day following C. J. Brown's murder, the site of his death was turned into a makeshift shrine as friends, family members, classmates, and strangers came and went to lay flowers there and to mourn in a kind of spontaneous wake. It continued sporadically through the next day. Emotions were raw, and some were so overcome with grief that they simply sat silently on the hillside, or wept.

The site seems an unlikely spot for the horrifying scenario that had played itself out there the day before. The neighborhood of modern garden apartment condominiums and rentals is tidy and orderly, with neatly trimmed lawns. Hanover Parkway, a broad, tree-lined boulevard, curves gracefully away from the intersection toward Roosevelt High. Above the grassy slope is a richly-wooded area containing children's playground equipment.

Beloved

There was a common thread in what people said about him: C. J. Brown was a young man of great promise and good character, loved for his wit, his warmth and generosity as a friend, and his intelligence. An honor student at St. Bernard's School (a Riverdale parochial school) and a gifted athlete, he was beloved by a wide circle of friends.

Young Brown's father, Carlton Brown, Sr., attempted to soothe some weeping youngsters, saying, "I know where my son is. He's where no harm can come to him."

Rick Bowden, who lives nearby, had been Brown's coach on a Greenbelt Raiders football team, and remembered the short, slightly built youth as an outstanding football player and a joy to coach. He said, "He was a very happy kid. He was concerned about how his friends were doing. If they felt bad, he felt bad. You could sense the friendship in C. J."

Bowden said he arrived on the scene not long after the murder.

Carlton Francis "C.J." Brown

"I saw the yellow tape. I was thinking one of my own kids got hit by a car," said Bowden, who has four sons. "I felt like it was one of my own kids," he said. "I'll never be the same." Bowden wept quietly as he spoke.

A street preacher, Bowden said he will be eulogizing C. J.'s life in a short series of skits at Roosevelt Center over the summer.

Youngsters from the neighborhood and classmates from St. Bernard's strained to express their sense of loss. "Everyone liked his laugh, his smile," said one. Another said, "He never did anything negative." Several of his classmates added that they had been together since kindergarten. One said simply, "He was the spirit of our school."

Scholastic Achievement

St. Bernard's School in Riverdale, which Brown attended for all but a few years of his life, is a group of old-fashioned no-nonsense 2-story red brick buildings grouped around a small courtyard which serves as a playground. Against this muted background, a few religious devotional objects—mostly statuary—stand out. A small statue of the Virgin Mary, hands clasped in prayer, stands in one corner of the courtyard.

As its courtyard suggests, it is a haven, the kind of protected environment for learning where a youth like C. J. Brown could come into his own. Within its dark hallways and utilitarian classrooms, where he spent much of his waking hours and gave his best efforts for most of his life, there is a meditative quiet.

C. J. Brown had distinguished himself as a student, according to Karen Brennan, an English and reading teacher at St. Bernard's. See C.J., page 12, col. 4

GHI Annual Meeting Sunday Followed by Board Election

Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI) members will choose four members to serve two years on the board of directors from seven candidates at the annual meeting and election on May 22/23. The annual meeting will begin as soon after 1 p.m. as a quorum is established on Sunday, May 22 at the new Greenbelt Elementary School.

Only one item of business is on the agenda — a proposed amendment to the bylaws to allow use of absentee ballots in the annual election. If approved, this action will implement a decision made during the past two annual meetings. During the meeting the five positions of the Nominations and Elections Committee will be filled by election.

Voting for the four seats on the board of directors and the three seats on the Audit Committee begins after the Sunday afternoon meeting at the school and continues from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Monday, May 23, at the Greenbelt Municipal Building.

Incumbents running for the board are Keith Jahoda, Chuck Hess, Carole Levin and Don Comis. Challengers are Vonda Henry, Sherry Garten and Alan Turnbull.

The Lake Park Concession To Buy or Not to Buy

by Diane Oberg

The issue generating the most discussion at the May 10 Greenbelt City Council worksession on the capital improvements budget was Julie Greer's proposal that the city buy the Attick Park concession stand. The proposal was not included in City Manager Daniel Hobb's proposed budget.

At the end of the session, the only clear council consensus was that no action was likely by summer and that a public hearing would be required before any council action regarding the proposal.

Owner's Perspective

Greer argued forcefully that the city should buy the business—it only makes sense, she said, for the city to run a business located on city property. Sale of the business is made difficult, she said, by the fact that she only has a two year lease.

In addition to food service and boat rental, Greer said, the business provides an important service to citizens and the city by its presence. During her tenure, concession staff have rescued two people, alerted authorities to problems and fires at the lake and provided information about city history and services.

Since the business occupies the only structure at the park, visitors expect it to be run by city staff, according to Greer. She noted that the city's Park and Recreation Advisory Board (PRAB) supported her proposal. She agreed with PRAB's comment that "private ownership of the concession stand . . . makes for complex and complicated arrangements when improvements are desired." PRAB also suggested that buying the business would "simplify the City's ability to con-

Staff Analysis

If run by the city, the business probably would be a money-losing proposition, according to Senior Administrative Assistant Eric Berlin. Gross receipts for the business have declined steadily over the last five years, in part due to a reduction in the hours of operation. Currently, the boat-house is open only on weekends.

Greer argued that Berlin's analysis was flawed. The salaries he said would be required were unrealistically high and the hours of operation did not reflect the true usage patterns at the park. She said that business drops off significantly once the pool and beach season starts on Memorial Day.

At the worksession, Irving recommended that, if the city were to purchase the business, it not try to run it. Instead, it should hire a concessionaire. Only a "Mom and Pop" type operation, Irving said, could make such a business profitable.

Berlin offered three options for council's consideration—buying the business and subsidizing its operation; decline to purchase it; or purchase it, improve the facility and re-lease it. Improvements to the structure are included in the draft capital improvements program for the 1998-1999 fiscal year.

Mourners gather around flowers placed at the site where C.J. Brown was shot and killed. Numerous floral bouquets and other mementoes were placed at the site following Brown's death.

We All Mourn

All of Greenbelt grieves with Carlton and Judy Brown on the shocking and sudden death of their son "C.J." The outpouring of concern by his schoolmates and neighborhood friends is testimony to the strong qualities of character and spirit that they recognized in this young man. That his potentiality for leadership has been lost in one who was still so young deepens our sense of tragedy. We mourn as well the loss of our sense that this community, with its long history as a haven for children, could remain apart from the plague of violence that is tearing apart the surrounding cities, and indeed our land. Our hearts are with his family, and all of us are saddened and diminished by this needless death.

The Next Step

By the time this paper is distributed, "C. J." Brown will have been mourned at a candlelight vigil and at services at his church. The shock at the senseless loss of a 13 year old youth, gunned down on a city street in broad daylight, still lingers on, however.

Appearing before the City Council at a recent work session, Carol Leventhal posed the very important question of what will happen next. Can we work together to do something to stop this from happening again?

It is time to begin the arduous task of dealing with that question. We hope that in the weeks to come a meaningful dialogue will develop on what can be done to prevent violence in our city and throughout our country. In particular, we hope that the students at Eleanor Roosevelt High School will join, and perhaps lead, that dialogue.

Letters to the Editor

An Acre Here, An Acre There

The few remaining smaller pieces of undeveloped land within urbanized areas are vital to our quality of life and should remain undeveloped. The eight acre Yeager tract on the north side of Good Luck Road (across from Parkdale High School) and bounded by Greenbelt Park on three sides is slated for development. Plans call for construction of approximately 30 upscale single family homes.

Who among us will be one of the chosen few that gets to live within Greenbelt Park? Well, all right, off Good Luck Road, bounded on three sides by Greenbelt Park! Can you picture the slick, glossy, full color sales brochures?

These eight acres should be purchased and added to the park or protected in some way as unspoiled green space vital to adjacent Greenbelt Park.

B-W Ramps to Goddard Closed for Thirty Days

Effective May 16, the northbound ramps of the Baltimore-Washington (B-W) Parkway entrance/exit (Gate 3) has been closed for approximately thirty (30) days due to construction activities.

The ramp closings will affect employees of the Goddard Space Flight Center entering the Center via the Parkway entrance from points south (from Washington or the Beltway) and those exiting the Center and proceeding northbound (toward Laurel and Baltimore). Alternate routes for access to the Center are: 1) Route 193 (Greenbelt Road) through the Main Gate, and 2) Powder Mill Road to Soil Conservation Service Road through Gate 4.

At the completion and reopening of the northbound ramps, the southbound ramps will be closed for a period of approximately thirty (30) days. During this phase, employees traveling southbound on the B-W Parkway (from Laurel or Baltimore) and those exiting the Center and proceeding southbound (to Washington or the Beltway) should use one of the alternate routes outlined above.

Please exercise extreme caution when driving the B-W Parkway construction zones, and be especially alert for drivers who may not have been informed of the ramp closings.

Tailgater Alert

I am writing to alert your readers of a serial tailgater driving a late model Ford pick-up truck who forces victims to stop their vehicle and then escalates the altercation.

The latest attack came last Thursday on the BW Parkway (northbound near I-495). Although the suspect was physically and verbally aggressive, proper intervention saved the driver victim from physical harm.

The suspect is a white male in his mid 20's to mid 30's, short brown hair neatly cut (but not a crew cut), medium-thin build, athletic looking, about 5'11" or 6', no facial hair and no eyeglasses.

The Ford pick-up truck had standard Md. registration plates (no vanity or Bay tag) which contained 3 numbers, a space and 3 more numbers (no letters).

I urge people to remain alert to their surroundings.

Archives Recognize Internship Program

The National Archives will recognize the Eleanor Roosevelt High School Social Studies Internship Program for excellence in education in ceremonies that will be held at 10 a.m. on Wednesday, May 25 at the newly dedicated National Archives building #2, 8601 Adelphi Rd. in College Park.

The featured speaker at the ceremony will be acting archivist, Trudy Huskamp Peterson, the nation's top official in charge of preserving documentary sources for the United States government. The ceremony is open to the public.

Linda Brown, assistant archivist for public programs, and Gerald Boardman, Eleanor Roosevelt High School principal will also participate in the ceremony.

In 1992 the National Archives first offered Eleanor Roosevelt students an opportunity to serve an internship with the Exhibits and Educational Programs Division, under the direction of Edith James. Students selected for the internship program are scheduled to work with staff three mornings a week for the school year. Each April students compete in the Maryland History Day Contest.

A second component of the internship program is student service. In addition to researching areas of personal interest, students volunteer to assist with a variety of projects for the National Archives. Roosevelt students Michelle Jones and Sahran Pegram will be recognized for their work in researching photos for the development of a poster representing the historical themes of African American life.

Smallwood has a nature program for young people and is looking for weekend tour guides. Merkle Wildlife Sanctuary would be glad for help taking care of the animals and helping with visitors. Cedarville State Park and Calvert Cliffs need volunteers to help maintain the trails and Calvert Cliffs can use help on the beach cleaning up and helping with fossils.

Details on these and other volunteer positions available throughout the county can be obtained by contacting the Prince Georges Voluntary Action Center at 779-9444.

Volunteers Needed

The Prince Georges Voluntary Action Center needs volunteers to answer phones and help potential volunteers find the right job, prepare material for general mailings and perform a variety of other clerical tasks. Hours are flexible, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., and training will be provided on the job. The Center's office is accessible by bus. Call Norma Jean Fazendaker at 779-9444.

Volunteers Needed

Looking for a way to make a difference in someone's life? People can give a precious gift of time. Through concern, others can be educated in cancer prevention and the need for early detection. Volunteers are needed to distribute literature and present information at various health fairs throughout Prince Georges County. The hours are few but the personal rewards are great!

The American Cancer Society offers training for individuals and groups willing to offer a valuable service to their community. For more information, call the American Cancer Society at (301) 261-6000 and ask for Gwen.

Volunteer Jobs Open

The Chesapeake Wildlife Sanctuary in Bowie has jobs available for volunteers, 13 years and older. For younger volunteers there are tasks of cleaning supplies and grounds working at festival booths and doing data entry. Older teenage volunteers are eligible for the Sanctuary's internship program, and for the mature volunteer with a background in library work there is a job to catalogue the center's collection.

To volunteer contact the Prince Georges Voluntary Action Center at 779-9444.

Service Exchange Workshop June 4

On Saturday, June 4 from 10 a.m. to noon, representatives of more than 20 religious, civic, and social organizations will meet in the conference room of the Aquatic and Fitness Center for a Service Exchange Information Workshop.

This event is sponsored by the city's Senior Citizens Advisory Committee. Over the past two years, the committee has gathered information from a variety of sources on how a community such as Greenbelt can benefit from a service exchange program. Now it is seeking input from church groups and others to help determine what needs currently exist and how best to meet them.

The exchange would pair those who request assistance (transportation, grocery shopping, household chores, etc.) with volunteers to help. The care givers would receive a time credit in return. Credits can be used for services, banked for future need, or donated to someone else.

Individuals, or groups not already contacted, are welcome at the workshop. Interested parties should call the committee's city staff liaison, Karen Haseley, during the day at 474-6878.

Eleanor Roosevelt High School students Robert B. Wolinsky (center) and Brian I. Goldenberg (right) finished first and second, respectively, in the Maryland Citizen Bee. (Wolinsky placed first last year as well.) They are shown with Wayne Mills, vice president of the Maryland Division of Washington Gas, which sponsored the bee. The students, both Laurel residents, will represent Maryland in the National Citizen Bee, which will be held in Washington, D.C. June 25-29.

Boating Safety Tips

Make the Seal of Safety a part of your boat by getting a Coast Guard Auxiliary Courtesy Marine Examination (CME). It is a free check of a boat's equipment, covering federal and state safety related requirements plus additional standards recommended by the Auxiliary.

The examination is conducted only with the owner's consent.

The examiners performing this service are all members of the Coast Guard Auxiliary who have been carefully trained to look for some of the more common problems which might occur in a boat or its associated safety related equipment.

If a boat meets the CME requirements, the award of the decal is an assurance that the boat is properly equipped for fun and safety on the water. At the conclusion of the examination, a copy of the CME checklist is given to the owner.

A CME is not a law enforcement activity.

For additional information or an At-Home exam in the Beltsville, Glenn Dale, or Greenbelt areas contact Steve Klein at 301-572-5565.

Bring Pets to Rabies Clinic on May 22

The Greenbelt City Police Department is investigating a series of traffic altercations that have occurred in the city between April 21 and May 6. Once the suspect physically attacked the driver.

The suspect is described as a white male in his mid-twenties to late thirties, with a slim build and brown hair. The vehicles in two of the incidents is described as a dark-colored compact passenger car, possibly a Ford Escort. My Point of View

Courthouse - Better Inside than Out

by Dorothy Sucher

Architecturally speaking, the new U.S. District courthouse, now nearing completion on the edge of Greenbelt, is a multi-faceted, interesting building that struck this visitor as more successful inside than outside.

Designed to accommodate the rising number of cases in fast-growing Montgomery, Prince Georges, Charles, St. Mary's, and Calvert counties, the massive structure is located on Cherrywood Lane off Kenilworth Avenue.

As in all such complex projects, input, ideas, regulations, and constraints (financial and otherwise) came from an inordinate number of sometimes conflicting sources and had to be reconciled—no easy matter.

It is precisely here, in the reconciliation, that the building disappoints. Although it is full of good ideas, as well as less good ideas for which persuasive arguments can be and have been made, the overall effect is somewhat disjointed. Too many disparate elements have been stuck together. One feels continually the lack of a strong, visually compelling, organizing form to serve as a satisfying symbol of the vital significance of the Law in a democratic society. Visually, the courthouse suffers by comparison with the structures in the neighboring Capital Office Park, even though the latter symbolize nothing more exalted than commercial aspirations.

Building is Backwards

Perhaps the major mistake is that the building is, quite simply, backwards, as visitors seem instinctively to feel. It could have presented its splendid, lofty arched glass portal to Cherrywood Lane on which it fronts, while stretching out (as now) an administrative wing, to screen future, unpredictable construction on the adjacent land to the west as well as to cradle the entrance courtyard with its still-to-come gardens, sculpture, flags and fountain. Some such arrangement would have conveyed a message that was sufficiently majestic (the portal), sheltering and protecting (the wing), and even consoling (the garden).

These praiseworthy messages were certainly intended by the architects Hellmuth, Obata and Kassbaum, and also perhaps by some of the others with input into the project, among them the General Services Administration, the Army Corps of Engineers, the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission, the Hyman Construction Co., the Maryland State Historic Preservation Office, the City of Greenbelt and the Federal Art-in-Architecture Program, as well as certain judges and politicians who took a special interest in the project.

Convenience for Motorists

Why, then, is the courthouse backwards?

It was a conscious decision, according to Project Architect Lisa Welgehausen. "Since this was a suburban site, unlike most courthouses which are in urban settings, the visitor's initial experience would be by car, followed by walking from the car park. And no one wanted to see cars out front."

In other words, since the parking garage was to be in the rear, entrance to the building should be there, too. Anything else would be "inconvenient"—which seems a case of the tail wagging the dog.

The reason sounds persuasive—more so if one adds that, for reasons of security, the building was to have only one entrance for the general public (the judges have their own, as do prisoners admitted under guard). Also some influential individual wanted the courthouse to have a "grassy, green front yard"—a nice idea, but this isn't domestic architecture and you can't have every-

The unfortunate result of the choices that were made is that the building presents its massive, 160-degree, barrel-shaped posterior to the street, as if hunkered down in a defensive posture against the attacking hordes—perhaps an all-too accurate commentary on today's society.

A sand-colored stone from Minnesota was chosen for the circular front wing, and on the sunny day of my visit the warm color was effective against a deep blue sky. The massive wall is varied by a mixture of smooth panels and rusticated blocks in the same Mankato Kasata limestone, and is pierced by windows with beige concrete "eyebrows."

One rounds this wing trying to adopt a philosophical, "Oh, well," approach to the disappointing front, while anticipating the first sight of the still-hidden entrance. Unfortunately, what swings into view is a parking garage in a most unfortunate cold grey concrete paneling, which clashes with the strong statement made by the color of the building. Another "Oh, well." Perhaps it can be painted.

The entrance, when one sees it, is an anticlimax, especially since it still isn't in a straight line from the fairly important steps that lead up to it; on the contrary, one must climb the steps and turn left, before facing the portal crowned by its atrium window, which rises nearly a hundred feet to the roof of the courthouse. One simply ought not to approach a major public building this way. My guide suggests that the News Review photographer shoot his picture from the top of the parking garage, since that's where you get the best view of the building. This says it all.

Inner Atrium

The interior of the courthouse is more satisfying. One enters a lofty, barrel-vaulted atrium with a terrazzo floor. Light pours through the enormous, arched window. Elevators with doors of woven brass and steel mesh rise to the upper levels; each level has its corridor/balcony overlooking the atrium. Escalators soar upward, capable of accommodating the large crowds generated by jury calls and naturalization ceremonies.

From this central space all the main parts of the structure are readily accessible, their different functions clearly articulated. It is a complex, well-thought-out and, it appears, very workable scheme.

The long, rectangular administrative wing contains the offices of the U.S. Attorneys, the probation department, and Congressman Steny Hoyer.

The circular wing houses the courtrooms, the generously-windowed judges' chambers and library and court support functions (such as the U. S. Marshall's office). Seven courtrooms of different sizes are provided, and without being cushy they are handsome, thanks to their coffered, arched ceilings, the warm brown mahogany wall-trim that was being installed on the day of my visit, and the antechambers with their recessed circular ceilings. The many circular and semi-circular elements noticeable throughout the building, although doubtless adding to the cost and difficulty of construction, have definitely enlivened the resulting spaces.

Holding Cells

We find no arches, no warm wood paneling in the holding cells for prisoners. Instead there are metal grilles, walls of heavy concrete block faced with scrubable tile—prisoners, my guide informs me in terms suitable for a lady's ears, sometimes throw "awful stuff" on the walls—and thick steel doors that swing shut on massive, silent hinges. Vans carrying prisoners will pull into the building through a special "sally port"; the accused will exit the same way at the end of the day.

Throughout the building, confidentiality and security are matters of constant concern. Entry to certain areas is to be monitored nonstop on CRT screens. The ribbon window in the U. S. Marshall's Office is made of bulletproof glass. Walls are heavily soundproofed; if jurors accidentally overheard a discussion between lawyers, a mistrial could result.

The need for future expansion has been fully taken into account in planning the courthouse, according to Project Manager Harry Debes of the General Services Administration, who commented, "Future generations might thank us" Probably they won't, but he's right, they should. A 50,000 square foot, 4-story addition could economically be added to the administration wing, which ends in a glass curtain wall. The parking garage, too, is designed for easy expansion.

The way things are going, it may be just as well.

A Greenbelt Gardener

by Rosie Rhubarb

It is getting late in the season to plant summer annuals so plant as soon as possible. If you want to plant seeds, read the back of the seed packet to get an idea if it is too late to plant them.

Many seed companies will tell you a special time frame, for example "as soon as the danger of frost is passed." This translates into very late April or early May since our average last frost date is in late April. And some seed packets will tell how long the plants will grow. Some just need too long to grow to start from seed now. For example, tomatoes, peppers, and eggplants should be planted as plants now.

It can't be said often enough—prepare the soil before you plant. Work fertilizer, decomposed manure, and/or compost into the soil so your plants will have food.

Two shrubs that are in bloom now that are under used are rhododendron. Rhododendron with their large evergreen leaves and large clusters of flowers can grow to be big shrubs, so so they can provide quite a focal point in the garden. Although they come in a lot of colors, here in the city most seem to be light purple. They can grow with azaleas in the same shady, acid soil conditions.

Mock Orange (philadelphus is the latin name), is tough, beautifully scented and the flowers are a classic shape, four white petals. Mine needed watering only during the worst of the dry summers. This spring it is an eight foot tall mass of deliciously scented white flowers. There are very few of these old time favorites around the city. One is at the corner of Hillside Road and Northway. But it is unscented so if you get one of these plants make sure it smells good!

If you have a crepe myrtle and it looks dead after this harsh winter we had, don't despair, for it may leaf out as late as mid-June. Greenish under the bark it indicates it may be alive.

Iris, peony, rose are old time favorites that bloom this time of year. Most people when they think of iris think of the German iris with its big flowers of three petals standing up and three flopping down. They come in a full rainbow of shades and when put in a place they like are as tough as nails. They have one pest, the borer, and it can wipe out a clump in no time.

A more pest free iris is the smaller Siberian iris. There are two clumps of Siberians in the beautiful display to the side of the municipal building. The other blue flower in this display is false indigo (baptisia).

Peonies look like bright powder puffs of color, but what color! To see a large peony covered with handful sized flowers of pink or rose is to see a real treat and it is wonderfully fragrant.

Hadassah to Meet

The Judith Resnik Group of Greater Washington Hadassah will hold its final meeting of the year on Tuesday, May 24, at 8 p. m. at the home of Sheila Leiss.

Gil Weidenfeld, former Mayor of Greenbelt, will perform the installation. Following the ceremony, "Music to Sing By" will be led by Farley Farber.

GHI BOARD

Vote Lever 3

GHI Candidates Answer Questions

by Mary Lou Williamson

Seven candidates for the four seats on the Greenbelt Homes, Inc., (GHI) Board of Directors and six candidates for the three Audit Committee positions answered questions from an audience of members that was barely larger than their total. The Candidates' Night, sponsored by the Nominations and Elections Committee and chaired by Kris White, took place in the City Council Chambers on Tuesday, May 10. It was broadcast live on Cable TV.

Candidates for the board are Alan Turnbull, Carole Levin, Sherry Garten, Don Comis, Chuck Hess, Keith Jahoda and Vonda Henry. Running for the Audit Committee are Jim Maher, Marsha Barrett, Charles Braun, Betty Deitch, Bob Buzzanco and Ray Stevens.

Worst Problem

Question from Wayne Williams: What is the single worst problem you believe is confronting all of GHI and what are you doing about it?

Sherry Garten said she thought the most serious problem is the 50 year old electrical wiring that is dryrotting. "Our houses could burn." She would get an electrician to come to GHI, as she recently did for her own house, to determine what can be repaired and replace what cannot. She said she paid $1,000 for work (with more needed upstairs). She told the audience, you know it's necessary, and you'll feel good about it when it's done."

Chuck Hess could think of two major areas of importance to everyone. The emergency service is one of the advantages of living in GHI that he likes to tell friends about. "Within one or two hours from my telephone call after work someone will come to fix my stopped up toilet and I don't have to worry about finding the money to pay the plumber." Hess is particularly concerned with the adequacy of replacement reserves to replace old components in a systematic way. He warned that cutting maintenance could lead to GHI becoming substandard housing as it happened in the 60's and 70's resulting in the large scale rehab, which, he thought, would have cost $50,000,000 in today's dollars.

Don Comis recommended looking at the process of how information about maintenance needs travels from the member to the maintenance worker and on up to a department head, the manager or the boards. It is important, he said, for everyone along the way to recognize when information needs to be passed along to someone else. Communication is important, he said.

Alan Turnbull was concerned with where individual members set maintenance standards. For example, he said, members show extremely variable levels of pride in their yards. Some members neglect their property and GHI neglects some property. He spoke of peeling trim paint on some homes that have not been repainted in the three years he's lived in GHI.

Carole Levin believes the infrastructure — sewers, parking lots, lights, etc. — has not been included in the reserves and should be. Also there are no replacement funds for toilets which are currently GHI's #1 maintenance item.

Keith Jahoda said the single problem that affects every member is the maintenance of the common areas — green space between groups of homes and the area under forest management. He felt GHI could improve on caring for this common asset which can send a message of pride in our community to visitors and prospective home buyers.

Bob Buzzanco said that this question is a good project for the new Audit Committee. He recommended solutions be long-range and not piecemeal.

Marsha Barrett suggested systematic quality inspections of individual GHI homes to be sure they meet county building codes — perhaps every six months.

Ray Stevens recalled the auditor's concern this year, in response to a board question, about adequate funding of replacement reserves. He is interested in investing reserves at a higher than current rate of interest. He noted the $1,200 cost of replacing a leaking tub drain — the amount of money each home contributes to maintenance for one year. He cautioned members to be careful about cutting maintenance fees.

Betty Deitch said that the few people who regularly complain to her are concerned about the common areas and people's yards. She added, "they want more work done for less money." She asked more cooperation from members to sweep common sidewalks.

New Auditors?

Question by Eunice Coxon: Isn't it time to change auditors after 10 years? Vonda Henry noted there is no law against continuing to use an auditor for a long time. She recommended not changing auditors in less than five years. She said if they're around too long they become too chummy with management.

Chuck Hess noted that 75% of the major companies have kept the same auditors for longer than 10 years. There will be changing personnel even though the company is the same. More important, he thought, are the changes that have occurred at GHI during the time the auditors have been employed: three different managers, two finance directors and a major revamping of the bookkeeping from manual to computerized — all of which are more drastic than a change of the auditors would be.

Don Comis noted that the board did require that GHI ask for bids. The present auditors, Stegman & Co., won with a bid lower than GHI had been paying. While we didn't get a new auditor, he said, we did pay less every month. "I think we should go a step further."

Alan Turnbull thought GHI should go out for bids when the current three year contract is up.

Carole Levin explained that the board had more pressing business last year in hiring a new general manager and so put off greater discussion about the auditors. "It's time for a change," she said.

Keith Jahoda said there is value in having periodic bids but not every year. Ten firms had responded to the last bid. He was satisfied with their selection of the lowest bid.

Bob Buzzanco and Marsha Barrett both spoke for change. Ray Stevens said he thought the auditors were more professional this year than last. Charles Braun admitted he didn't know much about auditors but would "make an effort to learn immediately," if elected.

Refinancing?

Question by Margaret Hogen: Noting there had been some comments about refinancing the rehab loan at a lower interest rate, she asked Chuck Hess to comment on the board's problem in trying to refinance.

The board has been interested in keeping the interest payments as low as possible. Hess responded The Co-op Bank loan has a three-year adjustable rate which, Hess said, had come down almost three points. When the board asked to convert to a fixed rate loan, the bank said no. Other lenders, sought by GHI, were concerned about environmental problems which "might exist," Hess explained. The asbestos that remains in floor tiles and mineral siding on some homes is not friable. All of the friable asbestos that can get into the air and thus into the lungs — all was removed in a major clean up several years ago. Hess said that if GHI were to tear out the remaining asbestos and put it in the dump, they would break no laws. Friable asbestos, he explained, is a different story. It is a carefully controlled hazardous waste requiring special handling and storage.

The other item of concern to lenders is the underground heating oil tanks which were filled with sand and abandoned — a project which at the time followed county permits. He claimed there is no evidence of leaking oil — i.e. brown spots where vegetation has been killed. To remedy these problems, said Hess, (Continued on next page)

GHI Board of Directors

I will make GHI work for you by:

- Developing secure, innovative investments of our reserves (some $1 million) which earn only 3-4% interest.
- Enforcing uniform yard standards.
- Making the annual budget process more member-friendly.
- Keeping monthly coop fees low by reducing non-essential member services and/or personnel.

... And More Questions

(Continued from page 8) could cost GHI members three to five or more million dollars. The savings from refinancing the loan at a lower interest rate, he noted, might save one million dollars. Therefore, refinancing was not cost effective. "Is it necessarily the way that appears to be right on first blush," he asked rhetorically and answered "No." But we have been trying to preserve member's assets.

Sherry Garten expressed surprise that the environmental report hadn't been given to the board until this week since it was dated in 1992.

Don Comis went a step further. The report has now been given to the board "without our asking for it" — a mark of the openness that he found lacking under the previous manager. "It's embarrassing to me," he said.

Keith Jahoda reminded those listening that there are three separate rehab loans. The loan for larger homes was refinanced at a lower rate during his now ending two-year term on the board. The largest loan, he said, no one suggests we should refinance — because the interest rate is 3%. For the third loan reserves are in place, he noted, to pay the interest if it should increase to the limit allowed. If on the other hand, the rate stays the same or goes down, we'll be able to use those funds for something else.

Bob Buzzanco didn't like Hess's answer. Either the bank has a problem lending to GHI or it doesn't. He had not found any mention in the report of $3 to $4 million to remedy the problems. "They dodge and they stall," he challenged. That the board was not privy to the report is an "outrage." He wanted to know if there is a potential health problem for his five year old son.

Tenants?

Question from Doug Love: "What do you think you are in GHI; a benevolent tenant, a stockholder of a corporation or a member of a voluntary commune?"

Sherry Garten rejected the tenant concept. She liked the idea of combining the other two. Unite the stockholders' stock, the housing unit, with the community of people who use and enjoy their stock.

Chuck Hess commented that others, too, have suggested changing GHI to a condominium or even splitting it into 1600 fee simple homes with the adjacent land. "We have a legal structure we have to work within — each of the 1600 members owns a share of the whole. At the same time, each of us is a tenant of the corporation which we own. He rejected typical landlord tenant relationships saying GHI needs to charge its members the lowest possible monthly charge but at the same time give maximum possible service. We all want to live in the nicest possible community while getting at least a dollar's worth of benefit for a dollar spent.

Don Comis was angered by Hess's response. "Boy are we open. This is the first time I learned we are tenants." He called on the board to add that to the agenda of the first meeting after the election. He said only in landlord-tenant court do we need to be seen as tenants — so judges will accept the right of GHI to collect money owed it by its members. "I want to find out a lot more about this."

Alan Turnbull joked with the audience: "I am not a communist or a tenant. I'm a stockholder."

Carole Levin didn't like any of Doug Love's terms. She believes "we are looking for a community, we're forgetting we are all in this together. Members always have to come first. Member directives, such as making employees' salaries a part of the open books, are the law she said.

"I think GHI is a community," said Keith Jahoda. "I moved here because it was close to my work. I've stayed here because it's a community. That's a value that's very important," he explained, "no dollar value can be attached." He likes the fact there are all kinds of people in his court — some with children, others with grandchildren, some single, some retired, and others just starting out. He spoke of the underpasses decaying when he moved in, but now brightly lit, with pretty landscaping and no graffiti — change he suggests brought about by the return of pride in a community where everyone can walk to stores, library, the lake. "People are using those underpasses again."

Vonda Henry said, "I'm not a tenant." She too, attacked Hess for contradicting himself. "He called us tenants and then said we're owners," she said. Henry didn't like the idea of the commune which she said had a negative connotation of rule by one person. We are stockholders and are governed by ourselves, the members.

Bob Buzzanco spoke movingly about his community — the 8 Court of Southway — where he has neighbors to speak to everyday and who showed him sympathy and concern after the death of elderly family members earlier this year, and where his son has plenty of children to play with who live close by. We see ourselves as shareholders, he said. "It's outrageous to be called tenants."

Marsha Barrett said she studied about Greenbelt in college and eventually was able to move here. She, too, sees Greenbelt as a community and GHI as a corporation built on cooperative principles.

Ray Stevens said "we need to look into this. In some sense we are tenants, but we are also shareholders." He urged everyone to get more involved. In the early days of Greenbelt, people on the outside thought it was a commune and those inside were proud of their community.

Charles Braun said he became involved in Members First and if elected, he promised, "I will be working for you."

Council Considers Response To May 13 Fatal Shooting

by James Giese

At an executive work session that delayed the start of the budget public hearing on Monday, May 16, Chief of Police James Craze briefed the members of the city council on the fatal shooting of 13 year old Carlton "C.J." Brown II beside a city street on Friday, May 13. Following the public hearing, the city council again met in public work-session with Craze, Police Lieutenant John Lann and Carol Leventhal, Director of Greenbelt CARES.

At the public meeting, Craze reported on the circumstances of the incident and the arrests made by the department. He told council that the department was taking extraordinary measures for security at Eleanor Roosevelt High School. Greenbelt Police Officers were posted at the school on Monday morning and afternoon. The department's presence will continue as long as needed. In addition, the school system has increased its security, Craze advised.

Leventhal then presented the council with some written observations she had made concerning the murder. There is a need to identify those factors that increase the risk of a problem developing and then find ways to reduce the risks. She asked what is the norm of the school students regarding firearms and violence and what can be done to change those that conflict with the common good. To what extent do students possess weapons in their homes and vehicles, she questioned. Urging that a climate for change in young people's acceptance of the inevitability of violence be created, Leventhal proposed a community forum about youth violence. Open to everyone, the forum would feature panelists who can speak directly to the issues.

Mayor Antoinette Bram expressed concern that Leventhal's statement accepted the inevitability of crime and violence occurring. "I don't want to accept that it should happen here," she stated. "I want to keep it out of Greenbelt to the extent possible." "We are fortunate that this hasn't happened before," Councilmember Edward Putens declared. "The macho crap going on around here is ridiculous."

Councilmember Thomas White supported Leventhal's proposal for a forum. He saw it as serving two purposes, reinforcing the type of community Greenbelt is and identifying what can be done to keep this from happening again. Councilmember Rodney Roberts was skeptical about the idea, however. He felt that the persons committing the crimes won't come to a forum. He also criticized the juvenile justice system for not working.

Putens was concerned that many students knew that an incident was going to take place, but that no one told anyone of authority about it. He felt that the students were victims of peer pressure, that persons of that age wanted to belong. He doesn't know how to change it. Putens stated that he understood that there were three rival groups at the high school and that they have existed for ten or more years.

"I was in a gang when I was a kid in Washington," White announced, pointing out that gangs were nothing new to society. "The difference is we didn't have the weapons. The distinguishing character of our society right now is the abundance of weapons."

Lola Skolnik, Chair of the Park and Recreation Advisory Board spoke in that capacity and as a parent of two children at Eleanor Roosevelt High School. She appreciated the police presence at the school that day and felt that it sent a message that the police have paid attention. She urged council to continue the funding of the recreation programs. "We have at-risk children. There is a need to build self esteem," she advised. Skolnik believes that this can be done with recreation programs.

Skolnik also urged increased funding for education. She stated that Roosevelt is overcrowded. It is the largest school in the state, she said. (Bram believed it to be the second largest. Roosevelt has a student population of about 2,900. To accommodate the students many temporary classrooms have been erected in the school parking lot.) Noting crowded hallways and other pressures resulting from the excess number of students, Skolnik stated, "Even though it is not a city issue, we have to be sure that our schools are large enough to effectively handle their students."

"I think that the city needs to be involved in the school system, too," Putens contended. "We have to look at policy in the schools."

Bram announced that at the executive work session, the council had agreed to meet with the school administration and Greenbelt school board member Suzanne Plogman next week. She asked whether council should ask City Manager Daniel Hobbs to provide cost information for an expanded public safety force for budget consideration at its work session later in the week. Councilmember Judith Davis felt that the council needed more information before it could consider budget changes.

The council also discussed the candlelight vigil planned by students scheduled the following evening. Bram had been contacted by Mrs. Brown, the victim's mother, who was concerned that the event lacked structure and requested the assistance of the city. The council felt that its role, except possibly for the mayor, should be low key—one of condolence and prayer.

Leventhal asked what will happen after the candlelight vigil Tuesday night and the memorial service at St. Bernard's church the following night. "Will the kids get together to try to do something to stop this from happening again?"

In closing, councilmembers commended the police for their work relating to the incident not a school issue," he said. He confirmed, however, that Newton was currently a student at Roosevelt and Terrebrood had graduated from there.

According to Roosevelt Principal Gerald Boarman "none of those involved are in school now. They either have been suspended or expelled according to the school system's Code of Student Conduct," as a result of this incident.

Police said they initially were called about a group fighting in the area at 4:30 p.m. While responding to the scene, they received a second call saying that shots had been fired. Witnesses provided a description of the vehicle, a Jeep Cherokee, leaving the area, occupied by several juveniles.

A vehicle matching that description was stopped by officers in front of Doctor's Hospital in the area of Good Luck Road and Hanover Parkway. Police found nine individuals in the vehicle and placed them under arrest, and also recovered a handgun from the vehicle.

Some observations following the murder of a Greenbelt Youngster

from Carol Leventhal, Director, Greenbelt CARES Youth & Family Services Bureau

- Violence among youths who live or attend school in Greenbelt has broken dramatic and horrifying ground with the killing of a youngster last Friday.
- How come it has taken this long for this type of event to occur here in Greenbelt, whereas elsewhere it is an everyday event? That is, what makes this community so different from other communities?
- How can that difference be strengthened in order to prevent subsequent violence of this nature?
- The Communities That Care model, a risk-focused prevention system, developed by Development Research & Programs, addresses a need to identify factors which increase the risk of a problem developing, and then finding ways to reduce the risks in ways that enhance protective or resiliency factors.
- What are the norms among the adolescent population at Eleanor Roosevelt High School regarding firearms and violence, how are those norms communicated, how disparate are those norms, group to group and from those held by the community at large, what can be done to identify and then work to change those which conflict with the common good.
- Are some Eleanor Roosevelt students harboring arsenals in their homes or vehicles? Many students describe either possessing or knowing others who possess weapons. We now know, witness last Friday's tragedy, that not all of that talk is bravado. On teacher at the school, whom I know about, recently retrieved bullet from a student.
- Create a climate for change in young peoples' acceptance of the inevitability of violence. Enunciate a clear, positive standard within the community. Conduct a community forum about youth violence. Open the doors to everyone. Have panelists who can speak directly to the issues; i.e., youngsters, parents, police officers, a juvenile court judge, teachers, an academician (Psychologist, sociologist/criminologist or all three), etc. Lay the groundwork for the identification of risk factors, so that prevention becomes this community's strategy.

Brown was gifted in a variety of subjects, including mathematics, said Brennan. He scored in the 98th percentile in mathematics on the SAT standardized test, which some youngsters of junior high age are permitted to take. "He liked to read," she said. "He talked to the younger pupils 'as though they were real human beings.' He used to give them a thumbs-up sign, a characteristic gesture. "He knew how to deal with both adults and children," she continued. "From the first grade up, everybody knew him." He also had an impish sense

Brennan cited as an example, a jesting protest against the school's policy forbidding boys to wear shorts to school on "no-uniform" days (when the parochial school students may wear ordinary clothing) he and another boy wore skirts to school. "We pretended to ignore him," she said, smiling, adding, "That was the worst thing for C. J., being ignored."

Liquor License Transfer Opposed by City Council

by Sandy Smith

The Greenbelt City Council voted to oppose the transfer of a liquor license to a proposed new fast food restaurant for the Greenway Shopping Center, at its regular Council meeting on May 9. Saying "fast food and liquor don't mix," Councilmember Edward Putens spoke out against a liquor license for an "All 'n One" restaurant on the site of the former Kangaroo Katie's restaurant.

Mayor Antoinette Bram objected to the process of dealing with a liquor license prior to approval of land use for this facility. Council members raised various objections, including traffic congestion. The application for transfer of the liquor license will be heard by the Prince Georges County Liquor Board on May 26.

In other actions, Council approved the traffic plan for the renovated Roosevelt Center parking lots and took up a petition on parking spaces from residents of apartments on Crescent Road.

All 'N One

Lawyer Linda Carter represented the new restaurant at the council meeting and defended the license transfer by addressing concerns raised previously by the council. She said that this license did not mean a new license for Greenway, but simply the transfer of an existing license. She also said that the shopping center previously had additional licenses at other restaurants, no longer in business. She emphasized that there would be absolutely no offsite sales. There will be no attempts to emphasize consumption of alcoholic beverages, she said, but they would be available to sit-down customers. She also said that bartenders would be 21 and other servers at least 18.

Council was not convinced and voted against the liquor license transfer. A fast food restaurant with its youthful staff and customers, drive-thru windows, and location in a busy shopping center where existing restaurants already offer alcoholic beverages seemed to council, to be an inappropriate facility for a liquor license. Councilmember Rodney Roberts questioned the shopping center's covenant that calls for a sit-down, full-service restaurant on that spot. He said that two restaurants had already failed and perhaps it's time to consider a different kind of business for that location. Mayor Bram will send letters to the County Liquor Board citing council's position as well as to shopping center management requesting that it rethink its plan.

Roosevelt Center Parking

Celia Wilson, Director of the City's Department of Planning and Community Development presented the parking and traffic management plan for the parking lots in the renovated Roosevelt Center. Over the past six months she directed a series of meetings, studies, and surveys of traffic patterns and use and staff has now developed recommendations for traffic and parking control. Only the proposed two-way traffic in the parking lot adjacent to the Coop raised objections. The Advisory Planning Board, which reviewed the plan, the Coop, and several council members questioned the advisability of two-way traffic in the congested lane near the coop. Libby Anderson, a Coop employee, presented the Coop's concerns that delivery trucks, customers loading their cars, parking and two lanes of traffic would not fit into the road alongside the Coop. Wilson said that the Coop space meets all standards for the proposed use. She said that when construction is completed and parking lanes and spaces appropriately marked there should be no problem. After much discussion council approved the plan for a six-month trial period, which would begin when the construction work is completed and signage in place. Wilson estimated that the work on the lot should be completed by the end of the month.

Parking on Crescent Road

In another parking related issue, residents of the apartments along Crescent Road across from the library objected to the elimination of three parking spaces adjacent to the library. Representing 43 residents who had signed the petition, Susan Conroy said that parking was already very difficult for residents and that losing those spaces made a bad situation worse. Council was sympathetic to residents' concerns of convenience and safety, when they must park at some distance especially at night. Many possible approaches were discussed, including reducing the size of the spaces to accommodate more cars and making more efforts to direct library patrons to the parking lot in the rear. Directing staff to study the issue and look for permanent solutions, council voted to allow parking in these spaces beginning at 9 p.m. when library hours are over. This would provide some relief to residents arriving home later in the evening.

Other Actions

Council proclaimed May 17 as Greenbelt Bike to Work Day. Members of the Greenbelt Bicycle Coalition were present to receive the proclamation. Council thanked them for their work in promoting the use of bicycles throughout the community. Mayor Bram, in presenting the proclamation, cited Greenbelt's promotion of bicycle riding through its task force, development of paths, and supporting regulations. A questionnaire to learn citizen's views of transportation services and transportation needs will be included in the next Greenbelt City News to be distributed throughout Greenbelt later in May. Council set up a work session to review the charter of the Greenbelt Advisory Committee on Education, to support education in the community.

Prince Georges Receives Tree City USA Award

Prince Georges County Executive Parris Glendening celebrated Arbor Day at Thomas Stone Elementary School and announced that Prince Georges County has been selected to receive a Ten Year Award for once again being named Tree City USA. Prince Georges County is only the second county in the nation to receive Tree City USA recognition for 10 consecutive years.

"The ten year award not only reflects our pride in our community trees, it demonstrates a strong commitment toward the improvement and preservation of our natural resources," said County Executive Parris Glendening.

The Tree City USA award is presented by the National Arbor Day Foundation, in cooperation with the National Association of State Foresters and the U.S. Department of Agriculture Forest Service, to communities that have established a history of providing excellent service and support toward the conservation of trees and the health of our urban tree resources.

"This award shows that, for the past decade, Prince Georges County is serious about its natural resources and has acted out of a genuine interest in the health of our communities and our environment," said Laura Jean Kinch, DER's Forest Resources ReLeaf Program Coordinator. During the ceremonies, Glendening joined the school's students and planted a tree in honor of George Stanley Burdinski, Jr. ("Junior") who attended the school and who has been missing since May 24, 1993.

Department of Environmental Resources' (DER) staff along with the State of Maryland's Department of Natural Resources Foresters were on hand to coordinate tree planting demonstrations. Bell Atlantic Inc. of Maryland, donated 16 Red Maples and 17 Pin Oaks for the student planting and the Forestry Conservancy Board donated two Wye Oak seedlings, descendants of Maryland's National Champion Wye Oak.

Lecture on Talking To Teens about Sex

Prince Georges Hospital Center will sponsor a free lecture on "How to Talk with Your Teenager about Sex." The lecture, lead by Greenbelter Paula Scott Luddy, R.N., B.S.N., will be held Wednesday, May 25, at 7 p.m., in the Deitz Memorial Auditorium on the first floor of the hospital.

Paula Luddy is Perinatal Program Coordinator at Prince Georges Hospital Center. She has been conducting programs concerning adolescent health issues for 16 years and has worked extensively with adolescents in the Prince Georges County school system for the past six years. Luddy is one of the founding mothers of the Adolescent Pregnancy Prevention and Parenting Subcommittee of the Governor's Council of Adolescent Pregnancy.

Council Reviews Capital Budget

by Diane Oberg
 City Manager Daniel Hobbs set the stage for the Greenbelt City Council's May 10 review of the capital projects budget, saying "there will always be more needs than there are dollars." For capital projects, this is more true now than in previous years, as the annual contribution for capital projects has been reduced by five cents to meet the city's increased debt service payments for the Community Center.

At a retreat earlier this year, council supported 12 capital projects, totalling $994,000, that have been included in this year's budget. Hobbs recommends funding 11 additional projects costing $188,600.

Police Station

The two most controversial projects involved improvements to the police station. The first, recommended by Hobbs for inclusion, is for construction of an evidence/storage loft in the garage ($20,000) plus repainting and "recarpeting" the building ($20,000). Hobbs reminded council that the evidence loft had been included in the original plans for the building, but had been dropped to reduce construction costs.

In a straw poll, council unanimously supported construction of the evidence loft. Hobbs said this project is needed to maintain the "chain of evidence" in court cases and to provide adequate ventilation for storing contra-band chemicals.

However, council deferred taking even an informal position on the request to repaint and recarpet the facility. Hobbs argued for inclusion saying that it does not make sense to "pour money into new facilities" while allowing existing facilities to deteriorate or look second rate.

Mayor Antoinette Bram argued that the proposed work is cosmetic in a part of the building that the public does not have access to. She considered it unfair that some departments get funds for improvements to a new facility while other departments never get a new building. If a poor choice was made in choosing the carpet, she said, "they're going to have to live with it awhile." Councilmember Rodney Roberts agreed that council ought to be able to expect that the furnishings purchased for city facilities could last a reasonable amount of time.

Part of council's frustration may stem from the final police project that Hobbs included for discussion but did not propose for funding this year. That is improvements to the police stations heating/ventilation/air conditioning (HVAC) system. Both council and staff "distinctly remembered" (in White's words), discussions with the architects about the adequacy of the HVAC system.

Director of Planning and Community Development Celia Wilson said that a contractor hired by the city to evaluate the HVAC system recommended more than $100,000 in modifications. She said that the air conditioning system works but that there are "hot spots." "Continued problems" with the HVAC system are cited in the public safety budget as the major reason why station maintenance costs for the current year are $8,500 more than budgeted.

Roberts argued that the "people who put it in" should pay to fix the system. Wilson noted that the city got a partial recovery from the architect (of $7,000) for HVAC problems in the computer and dispatcher rooms. She believes the $100,000 estimate is inflated and said the city staff is looking into getting a study from a completely independent party.

White sarcastically suggested finding an HVAC system that works, then building a system around it. He noted that the city had had HVAC problems with most of the facilities it built—the police station, the municipal building, the youth center and the pool.

Improvements for Bikers

At its retreat, council supported $40,000 for two projects to improve access for bicyclists. These are $25,000 to complete studies for projects to improve access to the Metro station from the Indian Creek bike path and from Cherrywood Lane at Springhill Drive. The remaining $15,000 is designated as the "first installment" of a two-year plan to implement recommendations of the bicycle task force. The projects have not yet been defined.

"There will always be more needs than there are dollars."

Bill Clarke, representing the Greenbelt Bicycle Coalition, opposed the $25,000 Metro access project. Since the Indian Creek project is entirely outside the city limits, the coalition recommended that the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, not Greenbelt, should be responsible for it. The coalition took no position on the Cherrywood Lane project, saying that bicyclists would rather take the longer but flatter Metro access drive.

The coalition urged council to fund several additional bicycle related projects: paving the shoulders of Crescent Road from Lastner Lane to Northway and marking them as bike lanes; and improving bicycle access to Goddard Space Flight Center through either Northway or Hanover Parkway. Further, Clarke asked that the city resurvey each street for its ability to accommodate bicycle traffic and to use findings in developing future Capital Projects proposals.

Land Acquisition

The budget set aside $330,000 for land acquisition. In his written budget document, Hobbs said that no specific properties have been identified. However, comments at the May 10 worksession made clear that council is considering the purchase of property in Greenbelt East. The mayor and council declined to identify the property on the record, for fear of driving up the price.

Remaining Council Projects

There was little discussion of the remaining projects that council had supported at its retreat. These include $25,000 for projects to meet the requirements of the Americans with Disabilities Act; $16,000 for feasibility studies of four proposed pedestrian overpasses; $92,000 for a freestanding storage building at the public works facility; $30,000 for sidewalk repairs; $175,000 for the first phase of reconstructing Ridge between Lastner Lane and Northway (with $175,000 more to be spent the following year); and $135,000 for streambank stabilization and water quality work at Greenbelt Lake.

The long abandoned Jaycee's Clubhouse may become a thing of the past in mid-1995. The capital projects budget allocates $10,000 for seed money for community organizations willing to provide "sweat equity" to bring the building up to code. So far, the city has "no takers" for the funds. If an interested organization is not found by the end of June 1995, the budgeted funds will be used to demolish the building.

more needs than there are -Dan Hobbs, City Manager

The last major project is $108,000 for the third phase of the Youth Center renovation. The projects for this fiscal year include renovation of the main office and installation of bathrooms in the lower level.

Manager's Recommendations

In addition to those items supported at the retreat Hobbs recommended funding the following projects. Except where noted, council appeared to support their funding.

Community Signage - $20,000 for beginning a program of unified community identification and directional signage.

Additional Public Works Upgrades - $5,000 for fencing and lighting the equipment yard.

Underpass Improvements - Hobbs recommended $12,000 for resurfacing the four original underpasses. Council supported resurfacing just one underpass, to see how the proposed material holds up.

Springhill Lake Recreation Center - $5,000 for improving the entrance area to allow staff to better control and supervise activities in the building.

Aquatic Center - $52,000: for a maintenance catwalk ($12,500), whitewashing the outdoor pool ($20,000), installation of video equipment to monitor the exercise rooms ($10,000) and replacing carpeting with tile in the lobby area ($9,000).

Landscaping/irrigation projects - $11,200.

Museum Renovations - $7,400 to complete reimbursement of the Friends of the Greenbelt Museum for the renovation of the garage ($3,900) and to repair and repaint the exterior ($3,500).

Lake Park

 Council's Reaction

Although clearly sympathetic to Greer's situation—she no longer lives in Greenbelt and has a substantial mortgage on the business—council was not eager to jump into the concession business.

Mayor Antoinette Bram noted that the proposal presents a difficult policy question for council in a tight budget year. She noted that the city had never operated the concession, but said that, if council is to do something, they would have to "bite the bullet" and put in a new concession building with restrooms. Such a facility, roughly estimated to cost $160,000 is included in the Lake Park Master Plan.

Several of the councilmembers including Edward Putens, Rodney Roberts and Judith Davis, supported having a better facility at the park at some future time. Councilmember Thomas White argued against pursuing an improved facility until "we get the community center under our belt." Worth $55,000?

Putens questioned whether the Pepco back bills - $16,700 for relocation and installation of street lights performed over the last eight years but just billed by Pepco this year.

Northway

Northway resident Joseph Wilkerson objected to the removal last year of the proposals for installation of curbs and gutters along Northway and Woodland Way in the Woodland Hills area. He argued that the roads were over 30 years old and that the residents deserved the same consideration for repairs as other areas of the city.

Deputy City Manager Michael McLaughlin explained that the project had been deleted at the request of the Woodland Hills Civic Association. He said that the repairs that the Civic Association requested were made.

Despite Wilkerson's complaint that the roads were in very bad condition, Wilson said that in an evaluation of city streets conducted by her staff, Northway did not rate as needing repairs as badly as other roads.

Council asked Wilkerson to bring the issue up with the civic association.

business was worth the $55,000 asking price. He supported having a concession there for the security benefits it provides.

"Let's get real," said White. For most of the year, there is no one at the stand. "Today was beautiful," he said, and lots of people were at the lake while the concession stand was closed.

Hobbs said that, from a business standpoint, the concession was not something the city would want to get into. The question, he said, was how much council is willing to pay for the benefits of having someone at the lake.

In the end, council directed Hobbs to investigate how much it would cost to get an appraisal of the business. Bram and Davis urged Greer to increase her efforts to sell the business to a private party.

Recycling Corner

Newspapers are collected weekly in the curbside program, even if it's raining. Place newspapers in brown paper bags or tie them with string. No loose newspapers or papers in plastic bags will be accepted. Why? Loose newspapers will blow around and litter the city. Plastic bags are incompatible with newspapers for recycling. For more information about the county-run curbside program, call 925-5963. For a new yellow recycling container, call Public Works at 474-8004.

Recycling in Greenbelt is very convenient. Recycling at the office might be a different story. But there are plenty of things one person can do to encourage waste reduction and recycling. For example, bring a coffee mug to work so paper/stryrofoam cups aren't needed, make double sided copies so less paper is used, rethink the numbers of same-issue periodicals that the office receives, use E-mail for inter-office messages, and route items to office mates instead of making lots of copies. Work with the office manager about starting a "mixed paper" recycling program. Many offices are already recycling white office paper through their refuse hauler. Business recycling accounts for over half the tonnages in the County. For more information about business recycling in Prince Georges County, call Joe Sedlock at 925-5952.

Double Dutch League Sponsors Celebration

The Greenbelt Youth Double Dutch League will hold a series of events on Saturday, May 21 at the Springhill Lake Recreation Center, 6101 Cherrywood Lane.

A flea market and bazaar will run from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Recreation Center's parking lot. From noon to 4 p.m. a chicken and spare rib dinner sale will be served. Delivery in the Greenbelt area is also available.

A dance will be sponsored by the League from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m. This event is open to youngsters seven to 14 years old. Music will be presented by a local D.J. There is a fee.

For further information on these events, including fees, call Kim/Austin at 345-2770. (See ad).

Bike Lockers Come To Greenbelt Metro

Twenty bicycle lockers were recently installed at the Greenbelt Metro Station. Lockers were also put in at College Park (ten lockers), West Hyattsville (12), and P.G. Plaza (six) stations. The lockers are located on the Greenbelt side of the station at the far end of the bus drop-off site. In order to rent a locker, call Metro at (202) 962-1116 and, after the recorded message, people should leave name, address, and Metro station where they want to rent a locker. According to Sharonlee Johnson of Metro, the bicycle lockers won't be ready for use until sometime in early summer. People leaving their name and address at the above number will be mailed contracts for renting the lockers when the lockers become available.

Special Day for Pets

Greenbelt Homes, Inc.'s (GHI) Architecture and Environment Committee will hold the first annual GHI Pets Day on Saturday, May 21 at Roosevelt Center from 10 a.m. until 4 pm. The event, to be held rain or shine, is open to the public. The focus of the day will be responsible pet ownership. An important theme will be owners "scooping up" after pets. Pet-related organizations and businesses have been invited to participate.

Martha Fenn, Animal Control Officer for the City of Greenbelt, will be present to answer questions and hand out literature concerning responsible pet care. Allie and Adele Lee will hold their morning obedience classes at the center so that pet owners will have an opportunity to observe the classes. Greyhound Pets of America (GPA) will provide information about adopting retired racing greyhounds. GPA volunteers will bring their dogs.

A petition to the City of Greenbelt to provide a dog run for City of Greenbelt dogs will be available for Greenbelt residents to sign. More information concerning the petition will be available.

The Prince Georges County SPCA/Humane Society also will provide information about a variety of topics, such as low cost neutering and spaying. In addition, an officer from Prince Georges Animal Control will be available to answer questions and distribute information. Petstuff will participate as well. They will be distributing discount coupons which can be redeemed at their stores.

Miss Greenbelt Pageant Offers $1000 Scholarship

The 1994 Miss Greenbelt Pageant will offer a $1,000 scholarship to this year's winner, Natasha Chavrid-Jewell, the Pageant organizer, has announced. The pageant which is a major part of the annual Labor Day Festival, recently added a scholarship as one of the benefits accorded the participant who is crowned during the Labor Day weekend. Chavrid-Jewell successfully contacted local businesses to gain support for the scholarship. Numerous contributions were promised, including a $500 grant from Greenway Shopping Center.

The pageant is open to girls 14 to 19 years of age who live, work or go to school in Greenbelt. The pageant, which has always been an integral part of the Labor Day Festival, has grown in recent years to include a focus on community service and educational opportunities for participants.

A professional photo session, social occasions, summer-long rehearsals and several fund-raisers are also components of the competition. Using a beach theme, the participants this year will decorate the stage, plan costumes, and develop and choreograph stage entertainment. The pageant includes a group talent presentation, speech competition, and evening gown presentation.

In addition to the scholarship,

Cars for a Cure

The American Cancer Society has started Cars For a Cure, a program to accept used cars and trucks as donations.

The program is designed to be "hassle-free." The donor need only make a phone call to the American Cancer Society to start the process. The Cancer Society then handles all the details, including processing the paperwork, picking up the vehicles and selling them at auction. The donor also receives a statement from the American Cancer Society that estimates the retail value of the car for income tax purposes.

The program is open to anyone in Maryland and the cars and trucks can be picked up from any location in the state. Proceeds from the sale of the vehicles will benefit the American Cancer Society's research, education and patient service programs.

For more information, call the American Cancer Society at 1-800/787-4337.

Participants receive various prizes and gifts from local businesses and organizations. There is no cost to participate. Previous participants have praised the opportunities the pageant has provided to meet and make new friends, gain confidence and experience, and learn more about and be involved in the community.

For more information about the pageant or to register for this year's festival, contact Natasha Chavrid-Jewell at 345-0929.

Drs. McCarl, McCarl,
McCarl and McCarl:
Employee of the Week
Becky Geiger

Becky has been a dental assistant at the McCarl Family Dental office for one year, but is no stranger to the office. She and her family have been patients for many years. She has a close knit family, and is especially close with her niece and nephew. (It's true, most of office went down to watch Brittany in the Little Miss Greenbelt Pageant...) Becky also has several pets: a dog ("Tazman"), a parrot ("Peanut"), a parakeet ("George"), and an iguana ("Rex"). While Becky quietly and efficiently goes about her job, most people don't realize her terrific academic achievements at PGCC. She hopes to go to dental hygiene school at the Univ. of Md. at Baltimore. We are proud of Becky, and encourage her aspirations. (...And we love her cool purple metallic car...)

We salute Becky as our Employee of the Week, and thank her for her gentle spirit and dedicated service.
