Lake Gets Go-Ahead Again; Bike Route Policy Approved

by Diane Oberg

Council tried once again, at its January 23 regular meeting, to move forward with the construction of Greenbrook Lake, approving the latest site plan. In other actions, council adopted a new bicycle policy, authorized city participation in a county tricentennial project and agreed to the renovation of a portion of the community center for office space for city staff.

Greenbrook Lake

Council approved the final site plan for Greenbrook Lake, to be constructed adjacent to Schrom Hills Park. The plan envisions a 1.3 acre lake and development of the property will disturb less than 5,000 square feet of wetlands (within Army Corps of Engineers guidelines). The project has been delayed for years as Wetlands restrictions became increasingly tighter.

Construction of the lake is supposed to be paid for by Prince Georges County. The city is concerned that if the project is not sent to bid during the current fiscal year, the county may withhold funding.

Bicycle Issues

On behalf of council, Mayor Antoinette Bram accepted a certificate of achievement from the Washington Area Bicyclists Association for the city's actions towards becoming a bicycle friendly community.

Later in the meeting, council approved the Bicycle Task Force's recommendations for a city policy on future bicycle routes on city streets. This calls for the city to evaluate all existing city arterial streets for possible designation as bicycle routes, and to install bike lanes where feasible. In addition, the city agrees to retain bike lanes when roads are improved and, when that is not possible, to ensure that the road remains as bicycle friendly as possible.

Community Center

Council, on a 4-1 vote with Rodney Roberts opposed, approved staff's recommendation that a portion of the community center building be renovated as office space for the Department of Planning and Community Development. According to Deputy City Manager Michael McLaughlin, plans for the center had always allocated most of this space for city offices. One area had been designated for storage of costumes and props for the Arts Center. However, he said that those plans were made before the Arts Center moved into its current space in Roosevelt Center.

Development of this area of the building had been deferred, to reduce the renovation costs. However, in examining ways to reduce future budget costs, staff concluded that moving the community development staff from leased space to the community center would save money in the long term. In the short term, community center costs will be increased by approximately $42,000 to be financed from the capital projects fund.

In approving the change, council required that the city be treated like other tenants and assessed rent in the center. Roberts opposed use of any of the center for city offices, saying that is not the purpose of the community center.

Other Actions

Council approved joining a photographic display of the municipalities as part of the county's tricentennial celebration, if the other large municipalities join in. The cost of the project is estimated at $10,000, to be divided among the participants in proportion to their total tax base. Greenbelt's share would be $1,260.

Council approved a protest of the new state sentencing guidelines, to be sent jointly with College Park, New Carrollton and Berwyn Heights. The new guidelines would significantly reduce the recommended sentences for serious crimes. Council already has concerns under the old guidelines about the treatment of suspects and the sentences meted out for recent crimes in the city.

Advisory Groups

Council made the following additional appointments: Arts Advisory Committee - Judith Holland; and Park and Recreation Advisory Board - David Hilliard.

Second Trial on Hold

Rico Young, one of three youths indicted for offenses which allegedly led up to the murder of a Greenbelt boy last May, may not go to trial after all. After a separate trial resulted in the acquittal of one defendant on all charges, Beverly Woodard, chief of criminal trials for the State's Attorney's Office, requested a continuance from Circuit Court Judge Steven I. Platt on Feb. 3.

"We have to consider the fact that the codefendant accused of being an accessory after the fact was acquitted," she told the judge. A jury acquitted Nicholas Terrebrood Feb. 2 of being an accessory after the fact to murder and transporting a handgun after Judge Platt dismissed other charges earlier in the trial. Terrebrood's codefendant, Jarreau Newton, was convicted of second degree murder and use of a handgun in a crime of violence. (Details will be published next week.)

Young's attorney complained that the delay was due to the State's Attorney's having fired the prosecutor in the cases,

Bicycle Task Force Reports to City Council

by James Giese

The Greenbelt Bicycle Task Force (BTF) submitted three reports to the Greenbelt City Council on January 17 urging bike lanes on Cherrywood Lane, evaluating all city streets for designation as bicycle routes and changing "No Bicycle" signs at Roosevelt Center. The council is expected to consider the reports after it receives staff recommendations.

For Cherrywood Lane, the BTF recommends establishing bicycle lanes from the federal courthouse to Greenbelt Road. To do this, on-street parking along the street in Capital Office Park and Springhill Lake would have to be eliminated. The city council earlier banned parking on Ivy Lane to establish bicycle lanes through Capital Office Park. Since the bridge over the Capital Beltway is only four lanes wide, because it does not accommodate parking, the BTF recommends making two of the travel lanes bicycle lanes, leaving one lane in either direction for automobiles. There are sidewalks on the bridge. The task force also recommended that council hold a public hearing before implementing the recommendation.

Future Lanes

In its second report, the BTF supports the placement of bicycle lanes on all city streets with enough width to accommodate them and for bicycle lanes to be included in the design for any street widening project or new arterial road constructed. It requested council to evaluate all existing arterial streets for possible designation as bicycle routes and, where feasible and appropriate, to install bicycle lanes. The report particularly takes note of Hanover Parkway, where paved shoulders exist that are suitable for use as bicycle lanes. If the two-lane section is widened in accordance with long-range plans, the BTF believes that the existing bicycle lanes should be included with the widened road.

Roosevelt Center

Although the BTF has no objection to bicycle riding, skateboarding and rollerskating being prohibited at Roosevelt Center, it does object to the existing signs. They read "No Bicycles/No Skateboarding/No Rollerskates." Instead the BTF urges council to erect signs prohibiting the activities rather than the vehicles used for the activity. This change would enable bicyclists to walk their bikes to a store and park in front of the store. In the past citizens have objected because bicycles were left lying in the middle of sidewalks.

Sheila Robinson, four days into the first trial for reasons unrelated to the case. He requested a speedy decision. The judge set a hearing in his chambers on the issue for February 13.

A Review

"Whose Mind Is It Anyway."

by Anne Sucher

A woman lying prostrate on the ground being spoken to by a man in a dialect she can't understand. "What happened, where am I?" are the questions she asks. "Why can't I understand you?" And we spend the rest of the play trying to find out. Ostensibly Susan Gannet (played by Sheila Marie Crossley) stepped on a rake. But is that enough to explain her symptoms? Perhaps, or is it more seriously the onset of schizophrenia?

Enjoyable and presented with lots of energy. "A Woman in Mind" is a fine evening of entertainment now being offered by the Greenbelt Arts Center. This clever and witty play by British playwright Alan Ayckbourn takes place in England and doesn't lose its interest from beginning to end. Sheila Marie Crossley is convincing as the charming woman who is just not getting what she wants or feels she deserves from life. She vacillates between loyalty and commitment to her real family and her deep inner desire for the fantasy family, who are able to love her in a way she really wants.

It is the fantasy family who come up with the adjectives to describe her husband, Gerald (Stephan Cox): "smug, self-satisfied and conceited." Gerald is zealously involved in his work, which includes writing what Susan considers a long and boring treatise, "a history of the parish since 1386." At the end of the play the two families, worlds, come together and run out of her control, doing what they want, not what she wants, as the characters that appear in our dreams are often likely to do.

The doctor, Bill Windsor (Steve Newman), who was especially charming and amusing, tripping over the frog and such and struggling with his doctor's bag, is already on the scene even before we meet the two "families": the fantasy family that loves her unconditionally and will do whatever she wants, at least at first, and her real family with whom she has "problems" or "issues."

When the real husband, Gerald, appears in ministers' robes, we have our first inkling of what those problems might consist of. And we find out that her real son, Rick (Lloyd Rawley), has joined a sect and has refused to speak to them for two years, we have even more insight. Gerald and his sister Muriel (Debbie Kozak), who lives with them and seems to have a very difficult time making her way around Susan's kitchen, appear dressed in black, possibly symbolic of the darkness they represent to Susan.

Lucy (Jeannette Connors), dressed in a cute little tennis dress, later in floral regalia, and lastly in a wedding gown, represents the daughter Susan always wished she could have and whom she somehow imagines she would have done better with than with Rick. Jeannette does a great job as the perky, loyal daughter.

Susan also hallucinates an ideal husband, Andy (Andy Hait), and loyal brother, Tony (Keith Brown), described as "tall, fair, and goodlooking in a rather weak sort of way." The brother tends to "take care of things" for Susan that she might not have the nerve to do herself. At one point he enters with a gun over one shoulder and a mysterious heavy-looking bag. This entrance occurs simultaneously with the disappearance of the neighbor's annoying dog.

A finely selected cast does a good job of bringing Ayckbourn's work to the Greenbelt Arts scene. A simple garden set is enough to provide the backdrop, with just one stone frog and a few rose trellises. The scene changes little, making it an ideal selection for the small stage.

Costumes were well done, generally appropriate and well-fitting, but I had to wonder about Andy's hat in the wedding scene, and Dr. Bill's pants seemed a mite tight at the end there. Lighting and sound during the storm scene could have been a bit more dramatic, to heighten the fact that they were all supposed to be getting soaking wet in the garden. There were a few significant oversights in the Playbill, such as no information about the playwright (I was curious about him and possibly I was not the only one), and some rather obvious typos, which might have been caught with a single proofreading, but you know, working out the kinks is what community theater is all about.

Overall, thumbs up to this new production. It's worth the ticket admission. For the cost of renting two home videos, you get to see real live human beings.

Virginia Radcliffe

Virginia Radcliffe, age 59, was killed in an automobile accident in St. Mary's County on Sunday, February 5. Her three-year-old granddaughter Betsy Stampfer was also in the car. The child is recovering in Children's Hospital with a broken leg and cuts and bruises. Betsy was in a child's car seat. Mrs. Radcliffe and Betsy were going to a family 25th anniversary celebration in St. Mary's County. They never made it.

Mrs. Radcliffe was married in 1967 and moved to Greenbelt with her husband, living for a year at Lakeside North before buying a home in the 2 court of Research Road. She and her husban David raised their family there. She was active in the PTA during those early years.

Mrs. Radcliffe worked for the National Weather Service, Department of Commerce. She has been active in Grace Bible Church and a widowed persons support group.

She is survived by her three children Ariana Strahl of Riverdale, Mathew of Greenbelt and Kitty Stampfer of the home address; one grandchild, Betsy Stampfer; seven brothers and sisters and many other relatives.

The funeral will take place at Grace Bible Church in Seabrook at 12:30 today, with burial to follow. Friends and family will return to the church at 3 p.m. for refreshments. In lieu of flowers, the family suggests donations may be made to the Radcliffe Memorial Fund at Grace Bible Church (9920 Latham-Severn Road, Seabrook, MD 20706) to be used toward the purchase of a van for the church's teen program.

The play continues Fri. and Sats., Feb. 10, 11, 17 and 18 at 8 p.m. and Sun., Feb. 12 at 2 p.m.

Affairs of the Heart

Roses are red
Violets are blue
Vinnie, don't you know
Bubbie loves you.

My honor is true
My uniform is green
You're the greatest
Bunch of Girl Scouts
I've every seen!

from Sergeant Karen

Someone tapping at my door.
Whoever can it be?
She's left a pretty valentine
and it's addressed to me.

Daffodils are green,
Still under the snow,
My love for you
Continues to grow.
Snow drops are white,
They're already here.
A weekend with just you
Would really be dear.

Roses are red
Violets are blue
Vinnie, Mommy and Daddy
Will always love you.

Fancy hearts and flowers
And Valentine candy
Say Happy Anniversary
To Craig and Sandy

Dear Joe,
Some day you'll read this yellowed clipping and be embarrassed about what an idiot
your old man was to declare in print how much he loved you.
Happy 5th birthday. And pick up those dinosaurs!

Love,
Dad

Valentines are for lovers
That's why mine comes to you
So when you look at it
You'll know my love is true.

To my Grandson Vincent
on Valentine's Day
Vinnie you were special
In a very special way.
That when your little face lit
Up in that Vinnie sort of way.
We know that you are with us.
We know that you are here,
So let us have a Vinnie Day
Every day of the year.

Love you Valentine's Day and Every Day.

DOCTORS COMMUNITY HOSPITAL ANNOUNCES THE GALLUP QUALITY AWARD FOR OUTPATIENT SURGICAL SERVICES.

WE'LL RECEIVE THE PLAQUE. YOU'LL RECEIVE THE BENEFITS.

LaTbiya C. Payton, a young patient at Doctors Community Hospital, receives some special caring from Anita Smith, a Registered Nurse with our Outpatient Surgical Services.

We at Doctors Community Hospital are proud to announce that we have been named as a winner of the prestigious Gallup Quality Award for our outstanding work in Outpatient Surgical Services.

Our hospital was one of only ten hospitals in the nation, and the only one in Maryland, to receive this award for outpatient services.

And the importance of the award is that you receive the benefits.

The Gallup Quality Award has been granted to Doctors Community Hospital based on the results of on-going patient satisfaction surveys. Our patients have rated us very highly in a variety of areas, including the performance of our physicians and nurses, friendliness and caring of our staff, outstanding services in our ancillary departments, cleanliness and attractiveness of our facilities, the efficiency of our patient registration process and much more.

We are proud of the efforts of our physicians, nurses and support staff whose hard work and dedication to quality care are recognized through this award.

And we especially thank patients like you who choose Doctors Community Hospital for our excellent care.

For more information on our award-winning Outpatient Surgical Services and other quality services offered by Doctors Community Hospital, contact a Health Resources Representative with our Health Connection Information Center at 552-0044.
