Charrette III Elicits Opinions; Concentrate On Highway Access

by Virginia Beauchamp

"I hate these chair-ettes...." An enlargement of Izzy Parker's cartoon from the September 10 News Review at everyone's place got the third charrette off to a welcome laugh. But as the day wore on, his sketch of that oversized man on that too-small chair began to assume a metaphorical meaning — a problem with a scope too challenging for our limited process. Or, put another way: could this Catch-22 be resolved?

The third charrette to study the Greenbelt Metro Area Sector Plan took place on Saturday, September 19 in the College Park Municipal Center. For this purpose, as with the two earlier charrettes, it brought together representatives of nearby communities with professional staff from the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission. The latter began the process with reviews of what had taken place before in developing the preferred land use concept.

But suddenly, when Transportation Planning Coordinator Harold Foster began to describe how transportation elements and the land use plan — with their different timetables — were interwoven, the group began to comprehend the true complexity of the issue before them.

Everyone had earlier agreed that upscale development of the WMATA tract, the Green Line Metro parking area, with or without the adjoining A. H. Smith property, was dependent upon access from the Capital Beltway. Yet since this was part of the Federal highway system, Federal as well as State regulations would apply.

Everyone had earlier agreed that upscale development... was dependent upon access from the Capital Beltway.

Federal guidelines require that any new exit ramps not be close enough to existing ramps that they interfere with traffic acceleration and deceleration. A second regulation requires that exits from Interstates lead to public, not private, roads.

In addition, since the Beltway is part of the national highway system, its impact on the environment must also be evaluated, including whether nearby roads are adequate for projected traffic volumes. This requirement, in turn, depends upon studies of the current traffic situation.

"It will be a little bit of a problem to tie these four [studies] together," Foster said. He projected some 15 to 21 months of study before all these issues could be resolved.

Other Problems

At this point Greenbelt City Councilmember Rodney Roberts threw two new twists into the discussion. The city had been informed, he said, that WMATA may consider selling its property, as it had done previously in northern Virginia. (And indeed seven days later the story broke in the Washington Post that Metroland Developers LLC had agreed to purchase the Metro acreage for $6.4 million.)

If this were no longer public land, Roberts suggested, the problem of locating exit ramps from the Beltway would be further hampered. The only possible road remaining would be Cherrywood, he pointed out, "a residential street." He vowed that making Cherrywood the point of interchange would never get his vote.

The slow-moving transportation timeline suggested to others that the whole land use study in the charrette process seemed not worth pursuing. On the contrary, both Foster and Project Leader Joe Chang emphasized, the Master Plan was absolutely crucial. Only if the proposed land use is designated as requiring the Beltway interchange can enabling legislation begin. Otherwise no

Metro Site Developers Selected By WMATA; Sole Proposal Reply

by Elaine Skolnik

Board members of the Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority (WMATA) on September 24 officially selected Metroland Developers, LLC as the developer of the Greenbelt Metro Station site. Although WMATA received only one proposal for the site in response to their October 1997 advertisement, the hush-hush review process of WMATA's various committees took over eight months to complete. Until WMATA announced its selection, the public was kept uninformed.

In unveiling the selection, the full 12-member WMATA Board agreed with its Rail Capital Program Committee's (RCPC) report which recommended that "the Board approve Metroland Developers, LLC as the selected developer of the Greenbelt Metrorail site and authorize the staff to negotiate an agreement with Metroland for the development of the site." Six Board members sit on the RCPC.

According to the RCPC report, Metroland was formed by affiliates of Clarke Realty Capital, LLC, developer of commercial and residential projects, Petrie Dierman Kughn, developer of retail projects and A.H. Smith Associates, owner of the tract adjacent to WMATA.

The report states that the Metroland proposal ties 78 acres of WMATA and 45 acres of Smith properties together into one 123-acre, $1 billion mixed-use development consisting of a 1.2 million square foot regional shopping mall "with an emphasis on upscale retail... a hotel and conference center, comprising 395,000 square feet; 270 residential units; and 1 million square feet of office." The project will be constructed in phases over 10 years.

WMATA's Technical Evaluation Team opined that "Metroland has offered a plan that optimizes the use of the WMATA site and provides significant benefits to the community, particularly the "provision of upscale retail outlets that are a recognized need in Prince George's County; the improvement of access to the WMATA site from the Capital Beltway with the cooperation of Federal, state and local agencies; and increased Metro ridership" (8,000 new trips a day).

WMATA has reserved the right to "approve access, locations and phasing of the replacement of surface parking on the Metro site and of any other facilities that may be displaced by the project."

WMATA notes that these will be replaced at Metroland's cost.

According to the RCPC report, a "new interchange or other traffic accommodation from the Capital Beltway will probably be required. The State of Maryland is currently conducting a feasibility study of alternatives."

Negotiations between WMATA and Metroland are expected to involve Metroland's entering into a lease or a development agreement with WMATA during the pre-development period. Over the next five years Metro will be paid $300,000 in fees. Ultimately Metroland will purchase the property for $6.4 million. With respect to the financial impact, the report states that in addition to the funds received from "pre-development payments... the sale of the property and revenues generated from increased Metro ridership generated by the project, Prince George's County will realize substantial tax revenues..."

Meanwhile, the Metro Park LLP group is drawing up a conceptual plan that will include the remaining acreage on the Smith tract which is estimated to be about 260 plus acres. The plan is also expected to depict Metroland's 123-acre Metro Station mixed-use complex.

BARC Director Tells City Buildings Need Updating

by Diane Oberg

The director of the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center (BARC), Dr. Phyllis Johnson, met with the Greenbelt City Council on September 23 to discuss the budget, programs and problems of the facility.

Johnson said that Agricultural Research Service (ARS) programs in Beltsville have a total budget of $154.6 million dollars. Its 2,091 employees work in five major divisions: plant sciences, livestock and poultry, natural resources, human nutrition and the National Arboretum, plus administration and the library.

Although Beltsville's budget has increased over the years, she said, the increases have not been sufficient to maintain the research program at its previous levels. Over the past ten years, the number of Ph.D. level scientists has declined nearly 25 percent. During the current fiscal year, this trend appears to have begun to level out with a net gain of two scientists. The issue is not merely an individual scientist's salary, but instead the cost of the research program the scientist oversees, including technicians and research materials.

Program

Johnson was obviously proud of the continuing research program at the center. BARC plays a major role in dairy, potato, swine, bee and honey, and poultry research. The floral and nursery industry is currently the fastest growing sector of the agricultural industry, she said, and BARC has 65 percent of the national budget for research in this industry.

The BARC has also gotten into more high tech research. Johnson pointed out that BARC is the leader in soybean genome research. BARC has also been involved in developing instrumentation for field equipment.

A discovery by a BARC scientist has increased the value of chicken feathers from six cents a pound to 95 cents a pound. He found a way to make a fiber for use in paper, diapers, and other purposes from the feathers. This could result in chicken farmers earning more from the feathers than from the meat.

Facilities

BARC was established in 1910 and many of its facilities are showing their age. Most of the buildings, Johnson said, were built in the 1930s and 1940s and most have never been renovated. Almost 15 years ago a 10-year modernization program was launched, but the level of funding was significantly reduced after 3 years. Instead of the $20 million per year envisioned under the modernization program, last year the center received just $2.5 million. The center staff has estimated that it would cost $399 million to bring all BARC buildings up to modern standards. The state of some of the facilities is so poor that it is affecting the center's ability to recruit scientists, who lose interest after seeing the laboratories in which they would work.

The center does now have several excellent facilities as a result of the modernization effort. It features one of the best plant horticultural facilities anywhere, she said, and recent improvements include a compost making facility and the newly opened controlled environment building. This latter facility contains plant growth chambers in which environmental factors such as temperature and humidity can be precisely controlled.

The new Sunnyside facility is now expected to only house ARS employees. Although Sunnyside had originally been slated to serve as a "swing space" for employees from downtown Washington facilities while their offices were renovated, downsizing and the reluctance of those employees to move have apparently killed those plans. Currently, it is at about half its potential occupancy.

The University of Maryland expects to begin work within the next year on a new animal research facility to be operated by BARC. In addition, a contract has been let for a new feed facility.

Council Concerns

Council and Johnson spent some time discussing ways that the city could support BARC. Councilmember Thomas White suggested making the city's support for BARC clear to its Senators and U.S. Representative. Johnson said that she is willing to talk to anyone interested in learning more about BARC's work. However, federal legislation prevents her from actively seeking out support or lobbying for increased funding.

Visitors Center

City Manager Michael McLaughlin suggested keeping the visitor's center open on weekends. Johnson said that she would like to do so, but that the center is not actually covered under BARC's budget. She is working with USDA headquarters to try to arrange for this, even volunteering to fund the expanded hours from BARC's budget.

Tue., Oct. 6, 7:30 p.m. City Board of Elections Meeting, Municipal Building Library.

Letters to the Editor

Disenchanted

Somehow I always thought that our politicians were supposed to represent us. I was disenchanted by the three members of City Council (Putens, Davis, and White) who passed the annexation of Parkside.

In the carnival of emotions and persuasive talk that surround the Parkside annexation issue, someone forgot to note that the only Greenbelters who spoke directly in favor of annexation were ones who had friends or family living in Parkside.

Few Greenbelters felt that annexing Parkside was a good idea. Almost all Greenbelters who spoke or sent letters opposed it vehemently. The council's technical specialists advised them against it. There were no convincing and concrete reasons for doing it.

But, hey, three out of five councilmembers can't be wrong! And anyway, it was a fun meeting. My favorite bit was after the decision, when Mayor Davis threw up her hands and exclaimed, "Vote again and again and again!" to the newly annexed portion of her voter base.

Next time I think I'll vote for candidates who listen to the vast majority of the people they represent, heed the recommendations of technical specialists, or at least put logic above pathos.

Naw, I'll vote for the same big three. They have no clue who they represent, but "they're good people!!!"

Free Popcorn?

Here is an idea for saving the Greenbelt Theater. Advertise the theater in the Val-Pak or similar mass mailings which are the coupons that are sent to every home. The coupon for the theater will have a map showing directions to the theater and entitle the bearer to a free bag of popcorn.

Sour Grapes

Back before Parkside was built Greenbelt residents stuck their collective noses into the tract. The tree huggers here in town wanted it to be part of Greenbelt then, but since they lost their bid for Parkside to be another "tree farm" they have held open attacks on the poor souls who want to share the great things that make Greenbelt special. These people are willing to pay for the same things you and I pay for. It was OK to include the tract then but not now? Face facts: the development is already built, and as far as the trees go, most of the trees here in Greenbelt have been cleared three to four times since our forefathers stepped foot in this land. Trees are a renewable resource. Give it a rest and accept these families. You are worried about transients? Look at the turnovers in Springhill Lake Apartments. Worried about erosion? Look at the Beltway Plaza hill and the Westchester Park landfill area. Worried you won't find more good people? Wrong! Look to the Parkside residents, you'll find them. And stop being such snobs.

Thanks

I would like to take this opportunity to thank you and all the citizens of the 23rd legislative district for taking my candidacy with an open mind and for your enthusiastic support. While campaigning door-to-door, I met with wonderful people who were not only kind but also provided me with tremendous encouragement to stay focused on this huge challenge to bring a change to improve the quality of life in our District and County. The results demonstrate that three out of every ten people voted for me.

The Primary is over and the people have chosen their Democratic nominees for the House of Delegates. I sincerely respect their choice and look forward to working as a common citizen to advance the agenda of school choice in the years to come. This was a wonderful learning experience for me personally. I thank all of you who believed in me and had confidence in my candidacy. I could not have done this without your warm support.

Shukoor Ahmed

Thanks

I would like to thank everyone who participated or ran in the Labor Day Festival race; in particular Mayor Davis for her proclamation, Hank Irving for the years of support from the Recreation Department, Joe Broderick and Shalom Fisher, and Bob Platt of the D.C. Road Runners Club, and especially Hugh Jascourt, who started the D.C. Road Runners Club and this race many years ago.

Bring a Friend

My husband and I were very upset to learn of the potential closing of our favorite theater. For us it is one of the highlights of living in Greenbelt. We attend the theater practically every week. We have decided to invite friends from out of town every week to go to the movies with us. Maybe if all the Greenbelters who love the theater do the same, we will build up the viewership.

Golden Age Club

by Dolores Capotosto

On Wednesday, October 7, the monthly business meeting will be held - preceded by a board meeting in the Senior Classroom at 10:30 a.m.

Golden Agers' luck prevailed when traveling to New Market, VA last week. The rain held off until the end of our tour - and some of us were nice and snug in a church when it came, listening to someone play the old organ. New Market, at the north end of the Shenandoah Valley, was a strategic point for the Union troops in cutting off food supplies from the Confederate Army. It was on a huge porch of a Civil War home that the tour ended, with local ladies selling lemonade and homemade goodies.

Correction

Dates for the Vincent van Gogh trips were misstated in last week's column.

The first van Gogh trip will be to the National Geographic Society's Grosvenor Auditorium on Tuesday evening October 13. There a combined lecture and photograph presentation by assistant editor Joel Swerdlow and photographer Lynn Johnson will detail "The Life of van Gogh." After September 30 there will be several seats for nonmembers of any age. This show's value is that it prepares you to understand van Gogh's life and shows the setting for many of his paintings.

Our second trip will be to view van Gogh's 70 paintings on exhibit at the National Gallery of Art on Wednesday afternoon October 28, 1998. Extra tickets and seats on the bus may be available to nonmembers after October 15. Contact John Taylor (301-345-1608) or Marie Kriker or Pearl Siegel.

Final enrollment and payment for the February 16-27 cruise through the Caribbean is due by November 9. This trip includes stops at several islands, one stop in South America, (Caracas, Venezuela), transit of the Panama Canal and a final stop in Acapulco, Mexico. A few staterooms remain on the Sun Princess Cruiser.

The Travel Committee advises members to sign up early for upcoming trips. Thanks to the efforts of John Taylor's Committee, and various other members, we will have the necessary tickets to attend the van Gogh exhibit at the National Gallery of Art. Fall activities are picking up speed - get involved.

Co-op Month Picnic Celebrates Co-ops

Frances Henegar Gresham Dies

Early Greenbelter Frances Henegar Gresham, born June 5, 1911, died on September 22 at the age of 87. Burial was at Fort Lincoln Cemetery last Saturday.

Mrs. Gresham grew up on the 2,700 acre Bel Air farm in what is now Bowie, where her relatives worked for 42 years. She and her husband Frank Henegar moved to Greenbelt in August 1959 and lived many years in the 6 court of Hillside.

She worked at Glenn Dale Hospital 25 years before retiring as an operating room technician. Her husband died in 1976.

In 1979, Mrs. Henegar married Thomas "Tiny" Gresham. Old timers remember Tiny as the part-time meat cutter at the Co-op Supermarket. They moved to Douglasville, GA, and later to Myrtle Beach, SC. She was widowed for the second time when Tiny died in 1994.

Mrs. Gresham is survived by three sons, John of Greenbackville VA, Robert of Surfside SC, and Douglas (Skip) of Hedgesville WV, and also eight grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren.

Irene Kaye

Long time Greenbelt resident Irene Kaye of Plateau Place died Thursday, September 22 after a short illness. Born in Cologne, Germany in 1937, Mrs. Kaye came to this country at the age of 18 months. She was raised in New York City and attended school there. She had lived in Greenbelt 22 years where she ran a day-care center for children.

She is survived by her daughter Apryl Keyser, and grandson Travis A. Keyser, Greenbelt; mother Lucy Weiss, Potomac, MD; brother Richard Weiss and wife Sandra, Potomac; sisters Sonya and husband David Maryn, Florida; Susie and husband Melvin Cohen, Potomac; Esther and husband Seymour Kotchek, Florida; and Sylvia and husband Milton Schneider, New York.

Interment was Thursday, September 24 at Judean Memorial Gardens, Olney. Memorial contributions may be made in her name to Hospice of Prince George's County or the Whitman Walker Clinic.

In Memoriam Irene Kaye

Irene came to Greenbelt about 22 years ago from New York. She never lost her New York accent and the stories about New York were always at the tip of her tongue. She said they made a wrong turn on their way to Springhill Lake apartments and drove through old Greenbelt and she fell in love with Old Greenbelt. After spending 10 years in Springhill Lake she found a home in GHI and spent the next 12 years taking in day-care children and loving her home and community.

Her day care center was started originally to give her preschool daughter company, but it grew to include all her neighbors and friends.

Irene's door was always open, for coffee, stories, or to come back to tell Irene about what was going on in the life of "her children."

Parents would come back to visit even after their children had moved on to other things or other areas. Some parents would come by to discuss a family problem and they always found a ready ear and maybe a little advice which might or might not help, but it was always nice to talk out a prob-

The clerk gave the robber the money and he stepped back, put the gun back in his pocket, and walked out of the store. No one was injured during the incident. The suspect is described as a black male in his 20s, 5'7", and bald, with a medium build. He was wearing a dark green button-up jacket, brown pants, a tan Panama hat, and brown sunglasses.

Scofflaws Caught At Police Checkpoint

On Saturday, September 19, beginning at 6 a.m., units of the Greenbelt Police Department, working with the Department of Motor Vehicle Administration, conducted vehicle checkpoints on two city streets. The purpose was to verify the residency of car owners with out-of-state vehicle license tags. The checkpoints were in the 7700 block of Hanover Parkway and the 7500 block of Mandan Road.

As a result of the two checkpoints, 33 sets of tags were confiscated. In addition, 20 citations were issued.

Not only does the state of Maryland benefit from the sale of vehicle license tags, the city does as well. A portion of state highway user revenues, which includes tag fees, are rebated to each municipality based upon the number of vehicle registered in each city.

CHARRETTE

traffic studies could even occur. "It would be an academic process," Foster said. "You have got to start by putting the highway access symbol here," Foster said, pointing to the juxtaposition on the design map of the Beltway and the WMATA property.

"And what happens if the Federal government does not approve?" someone asked. Then no high-density development could go through, was the answer; but the rest of the development can go through.

"But everyone wants this," said Jerry Anzulovic from Berwyn Heights. "The governor wants this, the county executive wants this, the county council... No civil servant is going to stand in the way. Everyone above us wants this to go in a bad way."

Mary Mothersole, also of Berwyn Heights, suggested that an enlarged interchange with the Baltimore-Washington Parkway might be a solution. She referred to the interchange of I-270 and the Beltway as a possible precedent.

Development Phased-in

But with such a long time-frame before a decision could be made on the transportation issues, how could development proceed? It would have to be phased-in. "There probably ought to be a recommendation of staging of development," Foster said.

Suddenly Greenbelt Mayor Judith Davis demanded the microphone. "If the interchange is deleted, everything is null and void," she said, "and we start over. If you say we're going to do this in stages," she went on, hypothesizing development on the Smith tract and some new development in Springhill Lake, "and then — whoops — there's no interchange, then we have a whole lot of new problems we allowed to go in there," referring to traffic impacts on existing city roads.

Springhill Lake Node

At this impasse, after a short break, discussion was directed to a new subject — more detailed explorations of the general land use concepts agreed on at the previous charrette and represented on a colored map later prepared by Park and Planning staff. (This map appeared in black-and-white in the September 10 issue of this paper.)

On the map, similar striping, indicating mixed-use development, appears on the WMATA tract and on what had been called a node, or focal point, at the intersection of Cherrywood Lane and Springhill Dr. Since the former was being considered for high-density uses, the similarity of the striped patterns suggested commercial development as well as the Springhill Lake site.

Roberts, who had missed the second charrette, immediately challenged this concept, as well as the idea that a pedestrian link to the WMATA development would be created across the intervening wetland. He deplored any disturbance that would endanger existing wildlife.

Yet both teams from the first charrette, as well as all participants in the second, felt the need to create a connection between Springhill Lake and the Metro site, Urban Planner Jennifer Smith pointed out. To make it viable, it had to feel safe, she added. There must be activity. No one intended commercial development like a mini-mall, for example; but a coffee or sandwich shop, perhaps a book store and an open plaza, could invite people into the area.

Celia Craze, Greenbelt's director of planning and community development, then spoke up. She criticized the idea that a focal point must involve "the consumption of something." Currently no commercial facilities exist on Cherrywood between Springhill Dr. and the overpass, she pointed out. She was far more concerned that "all the world in Greenbelt West funnels through [that route] to the Metro site."

She opposed "a neighborhood-disturbing" commercial development, she said. Instead the focal point should be redefined to a "neighborhood-serving function."

Impact on Hollywood

John Krouse of North College Park then introduced an issue of concern to his community, which will overlook whatever goes into the WMATA property immediately across the railroad tracks. He was worried about the impact of a large new population upon the small park that serves his neighborhood, with only a softball field, a baseball field, two basketball courts and two tennis courts. Is Park and Planning going to establish active recreation areas for the projected new residents coming into this area to use, Krouse wanted to know.

Mayor Davis said that parks, ballfields, tennis courts, and bird sanctuaries should be incorporated into the planned development to occur on the WMATA property. "We don't want ballfields in the core area," she said — referring to the wetlands, adding, "The highrise would probably have gyms." Chang confirmed that about half of the WMATA acreage would be used for recreation and open space.

Scope of Project

Joyce Pierce, whose kitchen window in Hollywood overlooks the WMATA site, deplored a future in which a highrise might completely block her view. Krouse agreed. "All of the Hollywood neighborhood looks into the site," he said, because it slopes down into a valley at that point.

Mothersole reminded the group that when the Greenbelt/College Park Master Plan was developed in 1989, "We didn't want canyon development, where we had massive highrises that clustered in the area." But transportation impacts — "with the Marc train, the subway, I-95, the Beltway, and the Parkway — all are going to affect it. We're going to have to do something on a grand scale. The train's left the station!"

Chip Reed, representing the A. H. Smith Associates, agreed. "This is the County's best opportunity to put its best foot forward — to get the highest quality retailer. I'd hate to see us sell ourselves short.... It's a fabulous site," capable of serving both eastern Montgomery County and Prince George's. He likened it to Montgomery Mall, Pentagon City, White Flint and Annapolis Mall.

Earlier malls in the county were "too small," he said. There was "not a critical mass." To put it into perspective, he said White Flint had

Eviction Relief Discussed by CARES

Mary Linstrom, the volunteer Social Services coordinator for the City, visited with CARES' staff on Wednesday afternoon to discuss the eviction relief program with which she is involved.

Judye Hering spoke with the Advocates for Children/Scholars Program at the University of Maryland on Wednesday September 16. She described CARES' tutoring program and how the University of Maryland students can become volunteer tutors.

about one million square feet of retail space. (Tyson's Corner, which no one wanted to imitate, had an estimated 28 million, he thought.) The 1989 Master Plan, he said, calls for two million.

In contrast, Beltway Plaza has about 640,000 and Greenway Plaza about 400,000. "Can you imagine an interchange at the Beltway to serve Greenway Plaza?" he asked.

Next Charrette

In preparation for the fourth and final charrette, the Park and Planning staff agreed to scale down what was planned for the Springhill Lake node and to develop design concepts to help participants visualize how the WMATA site development might look and how much of the acreage would actually need to be used in the footprint of possible buildings.

The next meeting will take place on October 24 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Parks and Recreation Administration Building on Kenilworth Ave.

Windsor Green Prevents Crime with Mobile Watch

by Janet L. Norris

Do the numbers speak for themselves in the latest crime report from the Greenbelt Police Department? That's the question some residents in Windsor Green may find hard to believe.

According to police statistics, Class I crimes offenses in Greenbelt account for 1,054 incidents between January and July 1998, as compared to the 983 crimes last year. There was an increase of 71 incidents. Class I crimes are the city's more serious crimes and include the violent crimes of murder, rape, robbery and assault as well as the property crimes of burglary and theft.

But Windsor Green resident Kathie Jarva, co-chairperson of the Windsor Green Mobile Watch, declares that while police statistics do not sort out or isolate her community, crime has been deterred by an organized crime watch, and feels that mobile watch patrol has had a "good affect" in Windsor Green. Founded in 1993, the mobile watch consists of approximately 60 volunteers of the Windsor Green Community who spend a few hours each month in mobile patrol of neighborhoods during the day and evening in an effort to deter criminal activity. "We seldom see anything [crime]," said Jarva of the incidents of crime in her community.

However, "many communities become lax when crime appears low, or they elect not to participate in organized crime watch," states Crime Prevention Officer Britt Cave. "Without a doubt mobile watch has caused violent crime to be non-existent in Windsor Green, which has one of the most active in the city." But he emphasizes, "it is the responsibility of the whole community to help police with crime prevention."

Area residents have an opportunity to learn more about crime prevention during the Citizen's Police Academy offered by the Greenbelt Police Department. Twice yearly (currently in Fall session) residents also can participate and get a first-hand account of the training, techniques, and daily activities of police officers in their quest to combat crime.

"I really have a heightened appreciation for the men in blue," said Gayle Patterson, also co-chairperson of the Windsor Green Mobile Watch, and a former participant in the citizen's academy. Patterson said she enjoyed the experience and recommends the valuable education and training to all residents in the Greenbelt community.

These documents are available for public review at the City of Greenbelt, 25 Crescent Road. They may also call Palau at 301-474-8000, or e-mail her at Bpalau@ci.greenbelt.md.us.

The City of Greenbelt is continuing its efforts to reach agreement with Jones Communications through the informal process. Both the formal and informal negotiations run concurrently. Through the formal process, Jones Communications must respond to the RFRP by October 31, 1998. Jones Communications' current franchise with the City of Greenbelt is up for renewal by December 30, 1998.

Baby New Year '99 Arrives to Celebrate

by Earl Kepler

A reluctant Baby New Year '99 made a brief visit to the steering committee of the Greenbelt New Year '99 city celebration. Entering to resounding applause and ably assisted by the cantankerous and often grouchy Father Time, Baby New Year quickly warmed up to the job of representing the coming gala event at the Greenbelt Community Center. With celebrity-like aplomb, Baby New Year got down to the serious business of eating cake despite the annoyance of the constantly flashing cameras.

Dressed in traditional Baby New Year costume of top hat, sash and diaper, 3-year-old Anna Brennan conveyed to the assembled volunteers and city staffers the excitement that is the Greenbelt New Year '99 party. Her able assistants Father Time and Mother Nature (played by Dameon and Mona Brennan) will also appear as costumed escorts at GNY'99 functions.

Once settled with dessert in hand, the 20 revelers divided into two groups. They produced fresh and exciting new ideas to enhance the celebration of the last New Year of the 90s. Topics covered included limiting attendance to 999 guests, security, decorations, sponsors and entertainment.

Chairman Earl Kepler conveyed his thanks to Greenbelt's John and Gloria Winfrey for coordinating security and children's activities. Special thanks went to Citizen of the Year Larry Hilliard for his work on the Grand Procession from Greenbelt East, and to Patti Brothers for her expertise in securing quality entertainment for all age groups. Pat Brent as chair of the New Deal Cafe received the gratitude of the committee for supplying top-notch food service, and Kevin Hammett for agreeing to head up the decoration of the main ballroom.

The short, highly productive meeting adjourned at 8:45 p.m. From high school freshmen Joe Pugliese and Ben Kepler to representatives of the senior set, all agreed to pursue the best non-alcoholic, family-oriented New Year celebration possible with an invitation to their fellow citizens to join in the fun.

The Baby New Year 1999 (Anna Brennan) plans a happy celebration with the assistance of Father Time and Mother Nature (Dameon and Mona Brennan).

Join KMart Kids Race against Drugs

Beginning each spring, KMart stores throughout the country host racing events for kids ages 7 through 12. Participants race the clock by driving safety-modified tractors around a specially designed racetrack to win scholarships and other prizes. Representatives from local drug and alcohol prevention agencies attend each race to drive home the anti-drug message. KMart Kids Race Against Drugs will be held at 8829 Greenbelt Road on Saturday, October 10, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Sunday, October 11, noon to 6 p.m.

Racers must wear seat belts and helmets and are accompanied by an adult driver at all times. The driver with the fastest time in each of three age groups — 7 to 8, 9 to 10, 11 to 12 — advances to the National Championships in Orlando, FL.

The entire event is free of charge. For more information call 1-800-63-KMART or visit the World Wide Web at www.kmart.com.

Concerned Citizens Review Environment

A meeting concerning the environmental impact of the development of the Greenbelt Metro area will be held on Monday evening, October 5, beginning at 5:30 p.m. in Davis Hall, 9219 - 51st Avenue in North College Park. (The hall is two blocks east of Rhode Island Ave. along Indian Lane.)

The program will include (1) a presentation on the environmental sensitivity of the tract, by Stacy Miller, environmental planner for MNCPPC; (2) a statement on the wetlands mitigation effort by WMATA, and (3) a discussion leading to recommendations regarding specific environmental needs to be included in the MNCPPC changes to the Metro Plan for the area.

A Public Forum Information Brochure, published in 1998, can be requested from GMAS Project Secretary MNCPPC (301-952-4065), or from the Greenbelt Planning Department (301-345-5417).

Drive Seeks Items for Foster Children

The Prince George's County Department of Social Services is launching a campaign for donations to better meet the needs of children in foster care. The following items are sought: baby diapers, formula and toiletries such as lotion, powder, wipes, diaper rash ointment and toys; toiletries, gifts and gift certificates suitable for older children and teens; and luggage, blank photo albums and sleeping bags for teen retreats. For more information on how to help, call Sharon Young at 301-808-5633.

Isn't it nice to get a prize just for being yourself?

When we heard J.D. Power and Associates ranked us number one in sales satisfaction, we were a little surprised. After all, there are a lot of other cars out there. But then we found out that sales satisfaction includes things like having sales consultants who are sincere and easy to work with, who don't mind doing things like taking the time to go through the owner's manual with you. And once we knew that, it all made sense. Because, along with making a great car, those are the very things that are important to us. And if they want to give us an award for it, okay, great, whatever.
