City Taxes to Rise Five Cents Pool, Bus Hours Are Restored

by James Giese

After numerous work sessions over a two-month period to review a 159-page General Fund budget document containing countless detailed budget items, the Greenbelt City Council made minor changes to the budget at a lengthy final worksession on May 17. Budgeted expenditures were increased by $45,800 or 0.3 percent. Left untouched was a proposed increase of five cents per $100 assessed valuation in the city's property tax rates, the seventh tax increase in a row. Although a great deal of sympathy was given to the complaints of city employees that greater wage increases were needed, council did not add any funds for that purpose beyond those originally proposed by City Manager Michael McLaughlin.

When the five-cent tax rate increase was announced, McLaughlin expected the county tax differential for Greenbelt to increase by three cents, thereby reducing the county tax rate for city properties by a like amount. However, he told the council at the meeting that that tax rate decrease will not happen. Instead, the county tax rate will decrease in the city by only 0.4 cents.

Changes were considered by the council for 33 budget line items over the four-and-a-half hour worksession. Some of these changes had been previously considered at worksessions and agreed to by the council. A few were added revenues that city staff had found. The council cut only three budget line items, two with the concurrence of those affected and also cut reserve for contingencies. Council increased the budget by restoring most service cuts, including restoring the hours of the pool and city bus proposed by the manager, and by funding various requests not included in the manager's budget.

Although the changes were small, the work was not accomplished without a great deal of discussion, soul searching and back-and-forth bargaining, some acrimonious. Thirty or so people looked on. The audience was comprised of city staff members, police officers and friends of the Greenbelt Fraternal Order of Police (FOP), and two reporters.

No one spoke of cutting expenditures in any substantial way, although Councilmember Alan Turnbull had proposed in a memo cutting $200,000. "I can't support a tax increase plus the draw-down of the fund balance," he wrote the council. McLaughlin proposed balancing the budget with $200,800 of the city's fund balance (surplus funds) in addition to the tax rate increase.

At the meeting Turnbull said that although he was concerned about both increasing taxes and using reserves, he would push only for cutting back on the use of the reserves.

Sparks Fly

Sparks began to fly when council reviewed the Public Safety section of the budget where Turnbull's first three cuts were proposed. He groused that "I recollect that I'm not going to get anywhere with a room full of cops."

A little later, when given a chance to speak, local attorney, former police officer and past FOP president Pat McAndrew, speaking as a private citizen and taxpayer, told council that he found Turnbull's statement about a roomful of cops to be "degrading" and, "in that tone of voice, offensive." "I've seen something here... a level of hostility that I've never seen before," he said.

Turnbull thanked McAndrew for giving him that feedback. "If words that I've chosen were offensive, you have my sincere apology. 'Picking a fight,' if that is the words I chose was a poor choice of words," he said. However, he reiterated that he didn't feel that he would sway any of his colleague's opinions with a roomful of advocates for more pay.

Council Presents Awards To Ace Greenbelt Students

by Mary Moien

The City of Greenbelt took pride in presenting Advisory Committee on Education (ACE) awards to some of its best students at the May 8 City Council meeting. A girl and boy student from each school were selected by their school staff. In addition to Mayor Judith Davis and City council members Edward Putens and Rodney Roberts, others congratulating the winners included State Senator Leo Green, State Delegates Joan Pitkin and Mary Conroy and County Councilwoman Audrey Scott.

Leta Mach, chair of the advisory committee, led off the introductions. "Tonight we will recognize 14 young people from the seven schools Greenbelt's students attend as their neighborhood school. The young people we will meet tonight have all made special contributions to their community. These students exemplify the spirit of Greenbelt."

Each student was given a plaque, a flag and other presents. As each came forward, Mach chose to emphasize the importance of the students' families and friends by asking relatives and friends of each student to stand and be recognized. A brief summary of each student's accomplishments follows.

Greenbelt Elementary School

Kiet Tran is a sixth grade student who is consistently on the honor roll. Understanding that education is the route to a meaningful future, he takes a serious approach to learning. A respectful and responsible citizen, he is supportive and caring of his peers. In addition, he is a member of the student council, helps produce the school's daily television show and serves as a safety patrol.

Keirra Shinault is a conscientious and excellent student who is always on the honor roll. She values being a good friend and demonstrates empathy and support for her friends. As a member of the school's safety patrol, she takes her duties very seriously. She is a representative on the student council, in the advanced instrumental group at school and enjoys basketball and computers.

Springhill Lake Elementary

John McDonald is in the fifth grade and is the kind of student every teacher would like to have in his/her classroom. He is a helpful student with a quiet approach to learning who always tries to do his best. He does exceedingly well in all academic subjects and is noted for his outstanding citizenship in the classroom.

Charlae Thompson is an exceptional fifth grade student who has been very active this past year. See ACE, page 11

The Pluses and the Minuses Of the City's Balanced Budget

by James Giese

Although the Public Safety budget held the greatest interest to most of those attending the May 17 final budget worksession, and caused the most heated discussion, council reviewed, discussed and made many other small changes to the budget proposed by City Manager Michael McLaughlin. The following is a review of these changes.

City inspection found some completed homes at the Lakes at Greenbelt Village which were not yet on the tax rolls. They will be added resulting in another $15,000 in property taxes, staff estimates.

The cable franchise fees will yield more revenue than first thought—an increase of $20,000.

Council at a previous worksession did not fully accept staff proposals for admission fees at the Aquatic and Fitness Center. The change reduces revenues by $20,000.

Instead of county recreation providing part-time employees for the city's two recreation centers, the city will receive a grant of $20,000. Offsetting the grant will be salary costs for part-time staff at the centers of $10,000.

Council rejected management's proposal to increase Greenbelt Connection fees for seniors and children, thereby reducing revenues by $1,000.

Council accepted Director of Community Planning and Development Celia Craze's proposal to increase inspection fees for commercial buildings after asking her if any fee increases were possible. Presently fees can be in less than $100 increments. (The amount of fee varies with the size of building.) Wilson proposed rounding fees up to the nearest $100. This change will yield $7,000. Greenbelt is one of the few municipalities to inspect commercial properties. Others charge a license fee.

Expenditure Changes

Cost of city insurance protection has been revised upward by staff. Another $18,000 was added to the budget.

Maryland Municipal League dues will go up. Cost: $500.

The $2,000 requested by the Education Advisory Committee for ACE scholarship grants was not funded after staff advised that the fund for scholarships is large enough to fund the increased scholarships.

The city will continue to pay the $200 cost of the city being a member of the Goddard Alliance. Public Works equipment purchases worth $10,200 were added, including a sign making machine, a tire balancer and a material spreader attachment for a tractor to spread ice melting compounds (not injurious to plants) on plowed sidewalks. Councilmember Rodney Roberts, in the minority, felt that the replacement fund should be used for these purchases.

Recreation

Concern for problems with disorderly patrons at the two recreation centers led the council to agree to add extra part-time help at night at a cost of $14,000. However, proposals for cutting back the closing time of the centers one hour ($5,000 savings) or

Letters

Police Department Selection Criteria

Letters to the Editor have recently appeared in the News Review commenting on the Police Department's selection criteria for the position of police officer, specifically prior drug use by prospective candidates. I thought it would be of interest to the writers and to the general public as to what the standards are and how they were determined.

Minimum selection standards for police officers for every police department in the state are set by the Maryland Police and Correctional Training Commissions, Department of Public Safety and Correctional Services. Individual departments may be more restrictive.

In February the Police Training Commission voted to set guidelines concerning the prior use of a controlled dangerous substance by prospective police applicants. The standards stipulate: 1) no allowance for the prior use of cocaine or cocaine metabolites, heroin, phencyclidine (PCP) or lysergic acid diethylamide (LSD); 2) for marijuana, a lifetime maximum of 20 uses or ingestions and a minimum of two years since the last use; 3) a maximum lifetime allowance of three uses or ingestions of any other controlled dangerous substance as defined in Article 27, Subsection 279 of the Annotated Code of Maryland; and 4) a provision that any individual convicted or found guilty of the sale, manufacture or distribution of any controlled dangerous substance may not be certified by the Commission. The Greenbelt Police Department endorses and complies with these guidelines, although I personally find the allowance for marijuana use extremely liberal.

It is not easy to become a police officer in Greenbelt or anywhere else in the State. Most applicants fail the background stage of the hiring process by being either disingenuous, or not forthcoming at all with unflattering personal history. Any deceit or attempt to withhold information is an automatic disqualifier. Past drug usage may also result in rejection. While it is true that the number of people who have experimented with illicit narcotics is high, there are still many who have not. It is not so much that we eliminate former drug abusers and others from becoming Greenbelt police officers, they eliminate themselves. Anyone aspiring to a career in law enforcement should realize that one cannot partake in criminal behavior and expect to be hired in the field. At least not in Greenbelt, not on my watch.

Thanks!

The Greenbelt Lions Club wishes to thank all who contributed to our very successful recent White Cane fund raising campaign. These funds will be used in our area primarily to help disadvantaged persons with sight problems as well as those truly in need of assistance. Some funds will be devoted to research projects to promote the health and general welfare, such as the Lions Club Eye and Tissue Bank, and research at the Wilmer Eye Clinic at Johns Hopkins Hospital.

Ditto to "Say No"

My complete support in reference to the eloquent letter written by Pauline Bordas of May 9. What was Mr. Turnbull thinking of? My family has been in this community for over 50 years and has volunteered with the Police and Fire Departments during many of those years. I thank God that I am secure knowing that the men and women who serve, protect, and put their lives on the line for us without hesitation have been and are "drug free." Common drugs such as marijuana, cocaine, "Crack," LSD, and inhalants cause nothing but negative consequences. I certainly do not want anyone I need to rely on in a possible life and death situation to have "experimented" with such drugs in the past. We are very fortunate to live in Greenbelt and have the security of the Police Department that we have. This is the main reason why many of us choose to live here. We also have a very active Drug Abuse Resistance and Education (D.A.R.E.) Program. Would Mr. Turnbull like to change this, too? I feel he should put more energy in finding ways to increase the salaries and benefits of the police who are so deserving.

Sarah Bates Checks Out Zero Gravity as Argonaut

by Luci Gorman

If you've been following Sarah Bates' journey as a student argonaut in the Jason XI program, you have no doubt been looking forward to hearing about Sarah's week-long learning expedition at NASA's Johnson Space Flight Center in Houston, Texas. In April 1999, Sarah was selected for the Jason Project (2000) to work side by side with a team of research scientists led by Dr. Robert Ballard, renowned oceanographer and discoverer of the RMS Titanic.

This year's student and teacher argonauts studied the physical, mental, and social challenges humans will face in working as a team in the International Space Station. Sarah took a week off from her studies at ERHS, where she is a freshman in the Science and Tech program, to learn what it takes to be an astronaut and work in a space shuttle.

Sarah, her roommate Logan Blue from Michigan, and a group of seven other student argonauts (ages 14-16) spent their days in shifts at various locations in the Johnson SFC learning how astronauts train for space missions and the importance of suits and robotics in space. Supervised by teacher argonauts Caren Menard of Connecticut, Marianna Steele of New York, Linda Arnone of Nevada, and argonaut coordinator Jude Kesl, the nights were filled with challenging activities for the group as a whole, allowing students and teachers to get to know each other.

Zero Gravity

The argonauts visited the Neutral Buoyancy Laboratory which houses a 202' long, 102' wide, and 40.5' deep water tank used for the realistic training of astronauts. The tank simulates a weightless water environment - zero gravity - and allows scientists to perfect techniques for building and operating the International Space Station. The tank contains 6.2 million gallons of water. The group's teacher argonaut Caren Menard is one of the first civilians to dive into the water tank there.

Sarah thoroughly enjoyed being a rider on the "air chair." This astronaut training chair simulates zero gravity by shooting out such intense beams of air from the bottom that both the chair and the rider are raised 1/9000 of an inch off the "precision air bearing floor." Made from steel sheets 10" thick, the floor is almost perfectly flat. The rider's controls are located on the armrests of the air chair. Sarah experienced firsthand the feel of maneuvering in space at zero gravity. She simply describes it as "sloooow."

Film

The argonauts visited Old Mission Control long enough to watch the movie "Apollo 13" in the very building from which it was filmed. They met Bill Shepherd, NASA Astronaut and Commander of the ISS Expedition 1 Crew, and Kathryn D. Sullivan, the first American woman to perform a space walk, in October 1984. Sullivan is now president and CEO of COSI, a center of hands-on science learning in Columbus, Ohio.

Sarah is a bit overwhelmed by the amount of media attention her trip has generated this past year. On March 6, she helped to host a live national broadcast from Johnson SFC. Student argonauts on-site often participate in broadcasts with the scientists via telepresence. Participating classrooms all over the country come annually to a live up-link site where students may ask questions and interact with scientists via satellite. Mrs. Sparks, a science teacher who integrates the Jason Project in her curriculum at St. Hugh's, brings her students to the Owens Science Center Planetarium for the annual up-link. Sparks' involvement was the vessel that guided Sarah to the student argonaut program and ultimately sent her to the Johnson SFC for this incredible week of learning. Another media broadcast featuring Sarah and Jason XI aired April 1 on WJLA, Channel 7.

Sarah's experience as a student argonaut in Jason XI has created lasting memories for her. Her group became very close by the end of the week and will keep in touch via the message boards on the Jason Project website, www.jasonproject.org. At the moment, however, this busy 14-year-old is glad to be back at home in Greenbelt with sister Abby, 11, and mom and dad, Richard and Dorothy Bates of Ridge Road.

Pets on Wheels Seeks Volunteers

Pets on Wheels recruits volunteers with temperamentally suited pets to do friendly pet visitation in long term care facilities and institutions that house the most severely mentally and physically disabled, who are often the most socially isolated people in society. Volunteers are asked to commit to one year and a minimum of two visits per month. Retired persons are encouraged to volunteer. Youths under 18 must have a responsible adult as the primary volunteer. The pet must pass a temperament evaluation, health certification, and be under the control of the handler. Volunteer orientation will be held on June 10. For more information call 301-853-3330.

GHI Honors Nat Shinderman During the Annual Meeting

by Barbara Bonham Young

Nat Shinderman was introduced as a "vibrant example of cooperative principles" who volunteered fine work on 12 committees during his years in Old Greenbelt. Former Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI) director and president Shinderman was given an award and a standing ovation by members who attended the GHI annual meeting on May 17. Due to health problems, Shinderman has sold the home his family had occupied since 1952 and moved to Potomac, MD.

Nat Shinderman

For the first time in recent memory, an outside speaker was presented to the annual meeting. He was Michael Payne of Affiliated Power Purchasers, Inc. of Salisbury. Payne described the approaching deregulation of electricity generation and distribution and the new ability of consumers to select a supplier. He noted that "if consumers do nothing," they will continue to be served by PEPCO and may expect a probable two percent reduction in their electric bills.

Payne's company acts to purchase electricity on behalf of a group such as GHI and is compensated with a portion of the savings it is able to achieve on behalf of the group. He estimated that of such savings, which he expects to surpass those of PEPCO, 80% would go to residents and 20% to his company.

Money Matters

Concerning the treasurer's report supplied to attendees, member Wayne Williams noted that several years ago a broader range of investments by GHI had been approved. Subsequently, he said, no report had been made on the status of such investments, including investment in bonds. Director Chuck Hess, chairman of the Investment Committee, responded, noting that approximately $600,000 was invested in bonds and that GHI plans to hold all bonds until maturity, so that "assuming nothing catastrophic happens, the $50,000 we lost on the bonds ... would only be relevant if we cash them in now."

In response to member Mat Amberg's concern that GHI has more than $100,000 in one bank (Crestar), GHI Board President Keith Jahoda stated that the money is collateral for loans. Amberg also expressed concern about information on replacement reserve funds. Jahoda responded that the Board has a study on the matter which he would be happy to supply.

Awards

Besides the award to Nat Shinderman, Joyce Abell was recognized as Committee Person of the Year for her work on the Marketing and Deregulation committees. Retiring Board member John Taylor and Margaret Hogensen, board treasurer from 1998 to 2000, also received applause and awards of appreciation.

Tom Simon, chair of the Nominations and Election Committee, then introduced candidates for the Board of Directors and Audit Committee, each of whom made brief remarks. Introduced were Board candidates Sheila Alpers, Dorothy Lauber, Sylvia Lewis and Bill Phelan and Audit Committee candidates Ray Stevens and Hopi Auerbach. Bill Phelan stated his wish "to make it easy for employees to move to GHI" to increase their sense of commitment, and his wish also to provide them with lower-cost health insurance. He said he wants to explore the possibility of a GHI guest house for out-of-town visitors as well.

Lengthy and spirited discussion ensued about how to provide a candidate and vote for the one vacant Audit Committee position.

Eventually Gail H. Alexanderwicz stepped forward to accept nomination as a candidate. Andy Carruthers and Pat Adelaide were also nominated and elected as members of the Nominations and Elections Committee (N&E). Other N&E Committee nominees elected were Roger Brown, Andrew Nitz and Tom Simon.

Bylaws Changes

There being no old business, discussion turned to new business; namely, bylaws changes. A motion was passed to increase the maximum amount of annual total charitable giving by GHI from $1,500 to $2,000. Board candidate Sylvia Lewis commented, however, that she felt it was inappropriate for GHI to make gifts on behalf of members to organizations that members might or might not wish to support.

A motion to increase the limit of a GHI expenditure without prior board approval from $5,000 to $7,500 also passed.

Finally, a motion was made to change the bylaws to allow for expenditure of funds in excess of $7,500 after only one reading if approved by two-thirds of the Board. The motion failed.

Door Prizes

A door prize of $200 toward co-op fees was won by member Betty Allen, a prize of $100 toward the fees was won by member Barbara Havekost, and $50 toward the fees was won by Esther

Norman Evans Plays at Roosevelt Center

by Patti Brothers

On Saturday, June 3, as part of Greenbelt Day, Norman Evans, who has performed at recent Labor Day Festivals, the 1999 New Year's Eve Celebration, and concerts sponsored by the Arts Center, will be performing a free jazz concert in Roosevelt Center from 5 - 8 p.m.

Originally from Connecticut, Evans has been performing his brand of contemporary jazz as a solo artist since 1991. Reared in New Haven, Evans has performed with noted jazz musicians in the New England area.

Evans relocated to Maryland in January of 1996 and since that time has been performing with some of this area's best musicians. He has opened for a number of national artists and has appeared on several local television talk shows. He has also performed at various regional functions including the Fort Dupont summer theater in Washington, the Fallfest celebration in Westminster, the City of Baltimore 200 Celebration, Upper Marlboro's Marlboro Day, and Greenbelt's 1997, 1998 and 1999 Labor Day Festivals and its 1999 New Year's Eve Celebration.

In addition to these high profile venues, Evans has performed at numerous fund-raising, community-awareness, and humanitarian events. He released his latest CD, Heirloom, last year and is in the process of working on his next one.

Evans' love for what he is doing and for those fortunate enough to hear him is evidenced by his wonderful, filled with enjoyment and emotion, music. Evans plays all of his own instruments — from keyboards to soprano and tenor sax to drums and also composes all of his own music. Don't miss this opportunity to experience this wonderful musician. Come to Roosevelt Center on Saturday, June 3 from 5 - 8 p.m. and enjoy the surroundings of the Center while listening to wonderful, relaxing jazz! (In case of rain, the concert will be held in the Community Center gym.)

adding security cameras to the centers were not funded, with council going along with the manager's suggestion to see how things go with the added staff.

A cut-back in hours at the Aquatic and Fitness Center proposed by staff as a cost savings measure to save $17,000 was not approved. Putens felt that the loss of passholders using the pool at the late hours would offset any revenue savings.

The Greenbelt Association for the Visual Arts (GAVA) asked for less than the manager budgeted for its contract for city services and the $21,000 budget was cut to $12,600.

At the Community Center, proposals to buy a commercial refrigerator for the kitchen ($5,000) and a darkroom ($4,000) were approved, but additional stage lighting equipment ($6,000) and renovation of the multipurpose room kitchen were removed from consideration.

Contributions to the Greenbelt Boys and Girls Club, the Aquatic Boosters Club, and the Greenbelt Double Dutch League were increased by a total of $4,700 but a proposed donation of $3,500 to the Greenbelt Arts Center was set aside.

A non-recreational group, the Washington Ear, was dropped from funding in the proposed budget. Council restored the traditional $1,000 contribution. Washington Ear provides radio reading services to the blind.

A staff-proposed cutback in Greenbelt Connection service, the city's bus service primarily used by the elderly and handicapped but available to anyone, was rejected by the council, which added $2,000 to the budget to maintain existing service. The proposal would have eliminated service on Sunday after the morning "church run."

In an opening statement at the worksession, Council member Rodney Roberts stated his desire to cut out all proposals that were not for services to citizens. His principal objection was for a $2,000 increase in the museum budget to fund a full-time curator. Davis supported

Theatre Shows Films Produced by Kids

Saturday, June 3 will be a busy day at the Old Greenbelt Theatre.

"Vids by Kids," a festival of short films made by young people from the Washington area, will take place at 10 a.m. The show is free and open to the public. It will include recent animation features made in classes produced by the Greenbelt Association for the Visual Arts (GAVA) and Greenbelt Access Television (GATE) as well as works by Greenbelters Nick Gervasi and Ryan McMullin.

"Vids by Kids" was sponsored by GAVA, GATE, and the Friends of the Old Greenbelt Theatre with assistance from the Arts and Cultural Heritage Division of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission. All GAVA and GATE programs are supported by the City of Greenbelt, Department of Recreation.

Then at 12:30 p.m. the Maryland Historical Society will hold a private wine and cheese reception, followed by a public lecture and viewing of the film "Navy the full-time curator as providing a service to many citizens and enabling the museum to be open on weekdays. Roberts responded that while it might benefit some people, it was not a direct service to the people. "I support having one as much as anyone else, but we have a tight budget and adding this will hurt other employees. It should be removed from the budget," he said.

Council reduced the Reserve for Contingency appropriation from $50,000 to $20,000. McLaughlin told them that the annual expenditure for unforeseen expenses has run between $25,000 and $30,000. Originally White and Davis had urged that this reduction be added to the funds to pay for salary adjustments, but that proposal was not approved.

At around 12:30 a.m., council concluded the worksession with budget adjustments that resulted in proposed expenditures exceeding estimated revenues by $4,800. McLaughlin was told to figure out what to do to wind up with a balanced budget. The film premiered in 1937, and is featured in the Filming Maryland exhibition currently on display at the Maryland Historical Society.

At 5:15 p.m. the movie theater will resume its normal schedule of "Small Time Crooks." Other show times that day (Saturday, June 3) will be at 7:30 and 9:30 p.m.

Finally, at midnight, Mike McMullin will take over with an adult version of "Vids by Kids." They will show "Inside Straight" by Mike McMullin, "Planet Onyx" by Chris Konkell, and Scott Mueller's sci-fi drama "Fade Out." There may be a few surprises and GATE's George Kochell and Chris Konkell will be on board as well.

Arts Center Presents Idyls of the Queen

The Greenbelt Arts Center will present the "Idyls of the Queen," a comedy by Heather Martin on Saturday and Sunday, June 3 and 4 at 2 p.m. The "Idyls" consists of two plays: "Gweny's Square Table" and "Three Chickens, One Kingdom and a Goat." Both are loosely based on the legends of King Arthur but focus mainly on Queen Guinevere.

"Gweny's Square Table" was produced by the young people of The Burtonville Players in 1999. "Gweny's Square Table" features a frustrated Guinevere who tries to re-write the Arthurian legend but finds she creates more problems than she solves.

"Three Chickens, One Kingdom and a Goat" continues their misadventures as Guinevere tries to defend Camelot from the evil Morgan Le Fay with the help of her incompetent companions. The entire show is being done by the young folks with a little sage advice from GAC's Ginny Zanner.

The cast consists of Michelle Burton, Angie Carpio, Diane Dwyer, Maureen Dwyer, Annie Loutsch, Heather Martin, Shauna Roos, Erin Whiting and Megan Whiting. It is co-directed by Tina Dwyer and Heather Martin. The cast's ages range from about six to 16.

Council Hears State Legislators, Presents Awards to Students

by Sandy Smith

There was standing room only at the May 8 meeting of the Greenbelt City Council, but as family and friends filed out after presentation of the ACE student awards, the audience quickly assumed its usual size and set of onlookers and participants. The Advisory Committee on Education presented awards to 14 students who had excelled at Greenbelt's elementary, middle and high schools (see separate story). Many proud family members and friends were present for the awards ceremony.

Members of the 23rd district delegation in the state legislature also attended to provide a legislative wrap-up, and later in the meeting council took the first step toward raising fees for non-resident daily admission at the Greenbelt Aquatic and Fitness Center and held a public hearing on the FY 2001 budget. With only three members of council present, all actions required unanimity, offering council offering council a challenge. Council members Thomas White and Alan Turnbull were out of town.

Legislative Wrap-up

State Delegate Joan Pitkin summarized the past session's legislative accomplishments. She said that state legislatures have often been the "Rodney Dangerfield" of government, getting no respect, but that with devolution — the transfer of many federal government responsibilities to the states — state governments have come into their own. Declaring that there has been "no better time to be a state delegate" than this year and that the state was in the best financial condition in two decades, Pitkin cited progress in education, social services, health, transportation and information technology.

She mentioned action to forward funding of school construction, reduce school class size, increase scholarships, increase teacher salaries to reach the national scale, and implement mentoring programs for new teachers. The legislature passed laws to increase health insurance coverage for low income children and to use funds from the tobacco settlement to support cancer programs and initiatives to reduce youth smoking. New services will also be provided for families leaving welfare and more staff for child protective services. Also coming in for support were assisted living programs for low-income seniors and increased wages for care givers in nursing homes.

Other legislative initiatives will attract information technology to Maryland, promote bicycle access, and provide tax credits for businesses providing transportation subsidies and increasing opportunities for telecommuting. Pitkin also mentioned her long-standing efforts to support local arts programs and hoped the next legislative session would bring these efforts to fruition.

Senator Leo Green had a no less rosy outlook on the past legislative session. "It was a great session for Prince George's and Greenbelt, almost a Christmas in April," he said.

All of the major bills supported by the city had passed and he thanked the city for its support. He mentioned the success in bringing substantial funds to the city for the Community Center and youth services and the ability to defeat the proposed merger of DuVal and Eleanor Roosevelt High Schools. He, too, mentioned new laws to improve education by making it possible for retired teachers and principals to join the system again and a series of bills to improve care for those in nursing homes.

Delegate Mary Conroy mentioned three bills which she had sponsored and which had passed. One ensures that health maintenance organizations will pay for wigs for patients undergoing chemotherapy or radiation. Another allows veterans of World War II, who left high school prior to graduation to join the war effort, to apply for and receive a high school diploma. The third dealt with signage on Routes 5 and 301.

Mayor Judith Davis thanked the legislative team for its work on behalf of the city and Councilmember Edward Putens declared the legislative team "the hardest working foursome." Both thanked Assistant City Manager David Moran, who serves as liaison with the legislature, for his work and knowledge in this area.

Budget Hearing

Councilmember Rodney Roberts regretted that council spent $15 million dollars (total proposed FY2000 expenditures) without much public debate at the first public hearing on the budget. A few comments were also made by city residents. Jean Snyder urged the city to spend the $100,000 open space funds to jump-start the effort to obtain the land designated for private development (Jaeger Tract) near Greenbelt Park to protect the park. She said there could be no better investment for this and future generations, and that Greenbelters and many visitors enjoy the park. Mayor Davis spoke of the city's longstanding interest in protecting the park and efforts to find funding from many sources.

Resident Kelby Brick applauded the array of wonderful services outlined in the proposed budget, but deplored that this is the seventh straight year of tax increases. He said that this was not acceptable in such a strong economy. He urged the city to expand its business tax base and to outline a vision for economic development. Mayor Davis said that this issue had been up for frequent discussion and City Manager Michael McLaughlin said that this situation was common throughout the county, not just Greenbelt.

Putens thought that the situation was really more than an issue of a business tax base to offset personal property assessments, that it really involves a choice between more economic development and life-style — crowding and traffic brought on by new business compared to parkland and a quality of life enjoyed by Greenbelters. Brick answered that he supported quality business with appropriate or manageable impact. Davis spoke of the efforts to bring in tourism, by working with the Greenbelt Museum.

Greenbelt East resident Sheldon Goldberg prophesied that development will come and that the choices will just be how and in what shape. Janet Parker spoke in favor of the services provided in Greenbelt. She said that we have the best police, more programs for children, and other services which make people want to live here. She quoted the late Al Herling, who used to say "Taxes are the price we pay for a civilized society."

Aquatic Center Fees

Citing problems of overcrowding during summer weekends and occasional rowdiness, the city council discussed raising fees for non-resident daily admissions and prohibiting non-resident daily admission to the Center on weekends and holidays. In a resolution presented for first reading, non-resident daily fees would go from $5 to $7 for adults, from $3.50 to $5 for seniors and from $3 to $5 for youth.

Both the admission fee changes and restrictions on admission to the Center were to

Students were asked to read their essays for their parents, teachers and members of the Greenbelt Post and Unit who were in attendance. After all winners were introduced, it was announced that Stephanie Holland was also a winner at the District level.

Greenbelt Unit #136 also recognized the educators from the three schools. Believing that the success of their essay contest is due in part to the educators who devote their time and energies to the program, the Unit wanted to recognize and thank the teachers and principals for their tireless efforts.

Dr. Metts Plans Full Day Kindergarten

Prince George's County Superintendent Iris T. Metts has announced plans for the implementation of full day kindergarten at the start of the 2000 - 2001 school year. The Board of Education supports this initiative and is committed to full funding.

"Early learning experiences are vital components to every child's education and our children will be best served by a full day kindergarten program," said Superintendent Metts. "I am committed to bringing full day kindergarten to all elementary schools in Prince George's County."

The planning process is underway and includes obtaining instructional materials and recruiting an additional 112 certified kindergarten teachers. Plans for full day kindergarten will be finalized by June 11.

Parents may register students during normal operating hours at their neighborhood schools for the remainder of the school year and specified days during the summer months. For specific information, parents should contact their local school directly.

For additional information about kindergarten registration, contact the Office of Pupil Accounting and School Boundaries at 301-952-6300.

Water Supply to Meet Demands to 2020

Washington metropolitan water utilities, including the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission which supplies water to Greenbelt, are expected to be able to meet unrestricted water supply demands even in the case of a repeat of the worst recorded drought since flow data has been kept. This assessment, made by the Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin, concludes that even with higher than expected growth, existing water supply sources will be adequate to meet future demands beyond the year 2020. However, releases of water from reservoirs may be needed to augment the flow of the Potomac River during this summer.

City Acquires Armored Old Personnel Carrier

by James Giese

A reader, Mark T. Papsun, recently E-mailed us with the following message: "As I drive past the police station everyday, I notice an APC (armored personnel carrier) in the fenced parking lot. I'm kinda curious how the police department acquired the military vehicle, and what they intend to do with it. It's very unusual."

That's a good question, so we checked. Our photographer Leigh Catterton went to the police compound and took a look. There is a big APC parked there amongst the police squad cars (see photo). So I asked Police Chief James Craze, "What are you doing with a tank in your parking lot?" He responded, "That's an APC. It is not an offensive vehicle. We have it for civilian use for the rescue of people. We got it free from the federal government under the Defense Reutilization and Marketing Office's 1033 program."

"I hope to God we never have to use it, but it is one of those things that if you need one, there is no substitute for it." He cited the recent situation in Baltimore County where a crazed ex-boyfriend killed three persons and barricaded himself in a house with other hostages as an example of when such a vehicle could prove useful.

Chief said that the APC was a $60,000 vehicle, and that this one, which had been used by the army, was in remarkably good shape. Although the batteries were dead and the brake system had been disabled, those problems have been fixed and the vehicle is operable and runs well. The only cost to the city was to send a Public Works truck and trailer to Indiana to pick up the vehicle and haul it back.

The new arrival in the police parking lot is an army hand-me-down armored personnel carrier.

The police department is now in the process of arranging for the APC to be refurbished before being put into use—it needs some cosmetic work and some minor mechanical tinkering. An arrangement has been made with Fort Meade to repaint the vehicle. The chief would like to have it a lighter color. The new paint job will look much like the old, as the choice of colors at a military base are very limited.

When it is refurbished, the APC will be put into use, hopefully for training purposes only. The chief advised that it will not be kept at the police station then. The department has arranged for it to be stored at the Greenbelt National Guard Armory. Craze credits MPO Barry Beyers with being instrumental in locating and obtaining the APC. This piece of equipment is highly coveted by police agencies, the chief said.

The city has been in the 1033 program since 1992. Previously it has received 50 gas masks and 20 night vision goggles.

The Recycling Bin

Dear Lorax, I'm a faithful recycler and sort all my recyclables out. But, when the crew comes through picking them up, they sometimes leave my cardboard boxes for the trash crew. What gives? Frustrated on Fayette.

Dear Frustrated, The truck we use for recycling will not crush cardboard boxes well, so if boxes are not knocked down, the crews often don't take them. When they run boxes in that aren't collapsed they don't crush completely. They end up filling the machine up very quickly. Knock the boxes down as flat as possible. If you have a large pile of cardboard, it would help us if you could take them to the recycling center at Buddy Attick Park. We will pick them up at your house, but often our trucks pack out. This creates problems completing the day's route. Thank you for a good question.

Dear Lorax, I've put off cleaning my attic for 10 years, but this spring I've got to do it. The ceiling is sagging from the weight and I've heard of the center beam in GHI houses breaking from excessive weight in the attic. If I pile it all by my regular trash, will they take it? Lamenting my Procrastination on Laurel Hill

Dear Procrastinator, Take a hard look at the items you have in the attic. If they were good enough to store in the first place, chances are someone might still find them useful. If it is clothing, small appliances, books, small pieces of furniture, tools etc. in good condition, please don't throw them away. Donate them to a thrift store first. The City has a truck from American Rescue Workers that comes every second Saturday of the month in back of the City Office building to collect donations. They would be glad to have donations of items in good condition...and you get a tax write off to boot! If the items are not in useable condition, please place them next to your regular trash and give us a call to let us know exactly what to take. The phone number is 301-474-8004.

Mail your recycling questions, comments etc. to The Lorax, c/o Bill Phalen, 25 Crescent Road, Greenbelt, MD 20770 or visit www.ci.greenbelt.md.us.

TAXES

My tone of voice, my aggravation is with the city manager only," he continued. (In this he was referring to a compensation study not yet completed that is to determine which, if any, city employees are presently underpaid.) Turnbull also expressed frustration at a budget process that puts a packaged budget before him making it difficult to make changes because every time something is proposed to be cut, someone is there to complain and defend it.

Mayor Judith Davis responded, "That's the council's job. I get pressured by a lot of people. I do not lean over to one side because they have five more people than the other. I listen to all concerned."

McLaughlin told council that he understood everyone's frustration. It was he who proposed doing a compensation study in last year's budget, but the study was still not completed because of workload and staff problems. There were other projects with higher priority, he told the council. Pending the study's completion, McLaughlin has proposed setting aside in the budget $125,000 for increased compensation based on the results of the study.

Councilmember Edward Putens added, "The city manager has his table full of jobs to get done. I don't blame you, Mike, and I'm not aggravated with you." Councilmember Thomas White added that there was no promise made as to when the compensation study would be done, only that one would be undertaken.

Greenbelt's Appeal

The discussion then switched to what it was about Greenbelt that caused people to live here. PFC Gordon Pracht started that discussion by telling the council that the FOP was not asking for anything that was not deserved. A pay increase was for the benefit of the police department. "It is the police department that causes Greenbelt people to want to live here."

White responded, "It's not just the police department. There is a panoply of services across the board that cause people to stay here."

Davis added, "We have to be concerned for all. People look to everything that the city does. The only thing that they possibly don't is the city council."

More Pay

Master Police Officer Ronald Walter then complained that police officers had not received a pay increase since 1986. "When were you going to do an increase if we didn't ask for it?" he asked.

White took exception. "I don't think you make your point when you say no pay increase since 1986," he said. He noted cost-of-living adjustments and merit pay increases that the city has provided. He also took exception to an FOP claim that there was a 20% disparity in city pay for police. He found Greenbelt pay to be pretty close to that of other municipal police departments in the county. He felt that the city manager budgeting $125,000 to implement a compensation study (with pay retroactive to July 1, 2000) was a demonstration of the city's intent to adjust compensation where necessary.

Turnbull did get a reduction in one of the police budget accounts. He had wanted to eliminate $21,000 for the rental of undercover police cars. He felt that there were alternatives, such as acquiring old used cars since the cars were not used for police patrol or chases. Chief James Craze did agree to reduce the budget by $7,000 by eliminating one of three rental vehicles. If the department was at full complement, the car would be needed, but since it would be a year before new recruits are trained, the one car would not be needed.

He also announced that a former Greenbelt officer had just been rehired to fill one of the vacancies. The new employee can be put out on the streets immediately, since he is already trained.

Another savings that council felt it had achieved was shot down by the chief. Council had authorized the purchase of next year's squad cars on this year's state bid, thereby saving an expected cost increase for new vehicles of $7,000. However, it turns out that the police department budgeteers expected the council to authorize this early purchase and had budgeted the new vehicles at the old prices.

Turnbull also wanted the council to not fund a phase-in of an increased city contribution toward deferred compensation for police officers. He had opposed this benefit (the second of three planned increases) when it was approved by the council last year. The other members of the council did not support Turnbull's proposal.

Council did agree to fund bicycle equipment for the school resource officers at a cost of $4,600.

Besides adjustments to the public safety accounts, the council made a variety of changes in other departments. (See separate story.)

They have arranged and paid for eye exams, purchased eye glasses, and paid for the repair of glasses for a number of individuals unable to cover the cost of these expenditures. They also have received donations of eyeglasses and hearing aids, and paid for dental work for two individuals.

The Lions also delivered Meals on Wheels, collected stamps for veterans in hospitals, and supported the Peace Poster contest.

Donations were made for eye research, local Girl Scouts, and they participated in White Cane collections and authorized funds for blind students to purchase a computer.

The Lions Health Mobile Unit was at Goddard Space Center May 25 to offer vision and hearing testing.

Greenbelt CARES

Lorelei Schaffhausen, staff development coordinator, Prince George's County Department of Social Services (DSS), visited with the CARES Family Clinic on May 17. She provided staff members with a quick review of the department's range of services and current federal legislation regarding parental rights. Schaffhausen brought with her materials about the Protective Services division within DSS.

CARES' Crisis Intervention Counselors, Bonita James and Brenda Aker, joined with members of the Greenbelt Police Department at a recently held training on domestic violence, conducted at the Greenbelt Community Center.

Teresa Smithson attended a continuing education workshop entitled "A Coping Skills Approach to Treatment" taught by social worker, Dr. Kenneth Sharoff. The workshop was held May 17 at the University of Maryland School of Social Work.

A Review

Natural Capitalism Book Offers Solutions

by Jim Cassels

The U.S. economy, and that of Canada, Europe, Japan, China and Southeast Asia, is in the beginning of a great upheaval. Energy, electricity, food, drugs, air and water pollution, efficiency — all in turmoil. But great solutions are forthcoming.

Example after example are described in "Creating the Next Industrial Revolution — Natural Capitalism," a 396-page volume that is so extraordinary it has been chosen for sale at the Co-op Supermarket.

The automobile industry is undergoing a transformation that will spell the end of the petroleum industry and a shift away from traditional car models to hybrid-electric fuel cell-powered vehicles that will be both lighter and safer, produce negligible pollution, cost both the producer and consumer less, and have fuel efficiencies as high as 200 miles per gallon.

New houses designed with heat-trapping windows can remain cool in temperatures as high as 115 degrees F with no air conditioner, and warm at -47 degrees F with no furnace, and cost less to build. Today's best techniques for using wood fiber more productively could supply all the paper and wood the world currently requires from an area the size of Iowa.

Fuel cells are now supplying electricity, heat, air conditioning and hot water for all kinds of buildings — producing negligible pollution, and at great overall savings.

Amory and Hunter Lovins of the Rocky Mountain Institute in Colorado, and Paul Hawken of the Wuppertal Institute for Climate, Environment and Energy in Germany are the authors. Little, Brown and Company is the publisher.

Big Bugs on Display

Big bugs are on display in a free outdoor exhibit. The 14 giant-sized sculptures by noted artist David H.G. Rogers will challenge adults and children to think about bugs from a whole new perspective. The display is at the U.S. National Arboretum, 3501 New York Avenue, NE, D.C., June 1 - October 31, 8 a.m. - 5 p.m. daily.

City Notes

The horticulture crew weeded and mulched beds at Roosevelt Center, prepared the beds on Southway and at Greenbriar for summer plants, weeded the alle at Schrom Hills Park and planted bulbs at Roosevelt Center.

The parks crew purchased materials to build two bus shelters to be installed in Greenbelt East, cut grass throughout the city, prepared fields for league play all week and continued playground inspections.

The facilities maintenance crew installed a new air conditioner in the Municipal Building, repaired the flashing light at St. Hugh's school, and assisted with installation of a compressor for the air conditioner which serves the Aquatics and Fitness Center main lobby and repaired a bro-

Shop mechanics serviced police and public works vehicles.

The special details crew hung banners and moved the voting booths for the GHI elections, and returned everything on Friday, repainted the parking lot at Schrom Hills Park and handicapped parking spaces around the city, and transported donated risers from the National Cathedral School to the Community Center.
