Volunteers Begin the 64th Year Publishing Greenbelt's Newspaper

Small, yes, amateurish — well, that's a matter of opinion. Old-fashioned — sure, if by that is meant dedication to facts, an avoidance of sensationalism and a certain concern for the feelings of our citizens in their times of trouble. Sometimes warmly supported and sometimes vehemently attacked, but always central to the life of the community. We're talking, of course, about the Greenbelt News Review, which is now beginning its 64th year of continuous publication.

The paper is unique — the longest running, all-volunteer, cooperative weekly newspaper in the United States — and has been featured in numerous books and television programs, as well as graduate theses and other student papers on Greenbelt, planned towns, and the cooperative movement. Some of these researchers have focused on the paper's four-year David-and-Goliath struggle against a $2,000,000 libel suit in which the paper was finally vindicated by the U.S. Supreme Court in 1970. The News Review decision struck a blow for freedom of the press, and the case is still studied and quoted as a significant legal precedent.

In a town of many co-ops, the News Review is the next to the oldest.

Originally a letter-sized mimeographed publication consisting of 16 pages, then titled the Greenbelt Cooperator, the paper began publication on November 24, 1937 — six weeks after the first families had occupied their homes.

For those who have wondered how the paper gets out each week, the staff is largely volunteer (or, at least, minimally paid with member dividends) and, in the Greenbelt tradition, organized as a labor cooperative. The paper is unconnected with the city government, the other cooperatives in the city, or with Greenbelt Homes, Inc. The paper gratefully accepts support from any segment of the community — from the city in the form of advertising and in housing for its operation; the Co-op grocery and GHI in corporate ads; and from the citizens when the financial pinch gets too tight. However, it is essentially self-supporting.

The paper lives by its advertising revenues, which cover all formal operations.

History

The early pioneers recognized the immediate need for a news medium to keep people informed of local events and to provide a forum for the exchange of views. They laid down the principles that still guide the actions of the present News Review — a non-partisan, nonprofit cooperative endeavor, whose aims are to print the news accurately and fairly and to respect the Greenbelt "good neighbor" philosophy of life.

Office Space

In January 1938 the federal government (which owned Greenbelt at that time) made space available at the town commercial center, free of cost, and also loaned much-needed furniture, typewriters (we still have some) and office equipment. The paper moved its office five times before coming to rest in the present quarters in the Community Center.

With the withdrawal of the federal government from town, Greenbelt Homes, Inc., through its wholly owned subsidiary, Greenbelt Development Corporation, continued the federal policy of providing free office space for decades with the paper reimbursing the corporation for out-of-

Assisted Living Options Are Reviewed by Council

by Diane Oberg

Is there a need in Greenbelt for assisted living facilities or assistance-in-living services for seniors in their own homes? At a November 20 worksession with council, members of the city's Assisted Living Task Force discussed their recommendation that the city contract for a professional needs assessment regarding the assisted/assistance-in-living needs of senior citizens in Greenbelt. Council will consider this recommendation after staff has identified possible consultants, possibly at its December 18 regular meeting.

Assistance-in-living services are provided in the senior's own home and could include, for example, visits by home health aides, or assistance with cleaning or shopping. Assisted living entails a residential facility that provides some level of services to the residents, but generally falls short of that provided in a nursing home. Such facilities can range from small group homes to facilities with 50 beds or more. There are also "continuing life care facilities" that offer residents a range of options from independent living to assisted living to nursing home care. The committee's report includes a description of the various options along with the types of services offered and their advantages/disadvantages.

In an interim report issued earlier this year, the task force recommended that the city 1) hire a community resource advocate to provide information to residents on available resources, and 2) gather information for council on the present and future needs for assistance-in-living and assisted living services in Greenbelt. That recommendation was discussed during the budget review, but was not funded. The task force still supports hiring a community resource advocate. Therapeutic Recreation Supervisor Karen Haseley told council that there is such a wide range of options that it is very difficult to decide which is most appropriate to Greenbelt without knowing the projected needs of the city.

Councilmember Edward Putens laid out current realities. "I don't think an assisted living facility is in the picture at this time," he said. Assistance-in-living is already happening on an informal, neighbor-to-neighbor basis. He worried that many seniors in need of services may

Marquee on New Year T-shirt

by Christopher Cherry

To commemorate the restoration of the Greenbelt movie theater's marquee, the Greenbelt New Year Committee asked artist Anne Reeves Edgin to include the marquee in her design for the Greenbelt New Year 2001 collectible t-shirt. Edgin chose to use the marquee to proclaim the new year celebration, as if the party were a feature playing at the theater. Her design is doubly appropriate, because the theater is one of several venues for this year's celebration. Magician Eric Henning will present three shows of Victorian-era magic in the historic 500-seat theater. The Greenbelt Community Center, the Greenbelt Youth Center, and the Greenbelt Arts Center will also present entertainment throughout the evening, as Greenbelters celebrate the end of an eventful year and the beginning of a new millennium.

"The year 2000 saw the dedication of the restored Greenbelt Theater marquee, the restoration of the Mother and Child statue, and the renovation of Roosevelt Center. The Greenbelt New Year Committee thought it would be fitting to commemorate these events on a piece of wearable art," said committee member Patti Brothers. The Mother and Child statue by Lenore Thomas is featured prominently on the t-shirt.

Edgin, who lived in Greenbelt for 14 years, says she loves the city and is delighted to create artworks for the annual new year's celebration. Last year's t-shirt, which featured her whimsical transformation of one of the Lenore Thomas friezes on the Community Center, quickly became a collector's item. "We expect the new t-shirt will sell like hotcakes," said Brothers. "Everyone in Greenbelt is so proud of the theater, the statue, and the Center." The t-shirt is now on sale at the community center, along with tickets to Greenbelt New Year 2001.

Greenbelt New Year t-shirt emblem was designed by Anne Reeves Edgin.

Finally a Decision — Pool Winner is 83 Degrees

by Maria Piazzola

Greenbelters attended the November 13 regular meeting of the Greenbelt City Council to argue about the temperature of the indoor pool at the Greenbelt Aquatic and Fitness Center. After much debate, council directed that the pool temperature be set at 83 degrees, a compromise that most listeners appeared to agree was appropriate.

Council has received various complaints and petitions about water temperature requesting temperatures ranging from 76-78 degrees, preferred by athletes, to 86-88 degrees, more comfortable for those using the pool for therapeutic purposes. With the new control module and compressor recently purchased for the pool, the temperature will remain more stable at whatever temperature is decided upon.

Dr. Adah Strobell of Lanham said that the National Arthritis Foundation recommends a minimum of 83 degrees, although 84 to 88 is more desirable, and that air temperature should be at least five degrees higher. She said that she and other seniors are "making a compromise on 83 degrees." Dr. Strobell recommended that a survey be distributed to all Greenbelt residents to determine what the majority would like to see as the set temperature.

George Rogala, Aquatic and Fitness Center supervisor, said that he did not receive the same information when he contacted the National Arthritis Foundation. "I was told that it does not have a recommended temperature for air."

Rhea Cohen of Greendale Place said that water exercise classes are getting smaller, because of the low water temperature. "Classes that used to have 20 people now have about six," Cohen said. "This means that people are not being served and the city is not getting revenue." Cohen also said that a one-degree change in water temperature is comparable to a 12-degree change in air temperature.

Harvey Geller of Northway agreed that slight changes in water temperature are noticeable, but, unlike Cohen, he believes

GIVES Helps Neighbors

On Saturday morning, November 18, students from Eleanor Roosevelt High School joined several eighth grade students from St. Hugh's in a joint community service project. The beneficiaries were nine residents of Greenbelt who needed assistance with leaf raking and yard cleaning.

The morning began with a snack at Greenbelt Community Center after which two vans carried the leaf rakers to various yards, where everyone worked diligently until lunch time. The hungry workers enjoyed pizza and drinks at the office of Greenbelt Homes, Incorporated, then the remaining clean-ups continued. All in all nine yards were cleaner by the stopping time of 3:30 p.m.

This is the second year GIVES has participated in a community service credits project. The project represents the philosophy of Greenbelt Intergenerational Volunteer Exchange Services which is to match the needs of the frail, disabled and the elderly with the desire of healthy persons of all ages to meet those needs and to help students reach the community service credits required for graduation.

Volunteers Needed By World Heritage

World Heritage, a non-profit student exchange program, is seeking local area representatives to volunteer time and skills to provide students from several countries including Germany, France, Spain, Brazil, Thailand, Japan, Mexico, and the former Soviet Union countries with local program support.

Local representatives plan an annual student orientation, meet with local high schools, provide support counseling for participants, screen potential host families, and meet with the exchange students on a monthly basis. Representatives also attend an annual training workshop and report to the regional coordinator. Participants should enjoy fostering new international friendships, be community minded, and enjoy working with teenagers and adults. Local representatives spend an average of 2 - 4 hours a month with the exchange students. Time and expenses are reimbursed by the organization.

Anyone interested in becoming involved in the World Heritage International Student Exchange Program or who would like to find out about hosting an exchange student may call Karen Ehrhardt at 864-576-2210 or at 1-800-785-9040.

by Judith Ransom Bell

The Lions Club, in conjunction with Beltway Plaza Management and Merchants, began gearing up for their ninth annual Toy Drive with a rousing parade on November 18 outside Beltway Plaza Mall. OBITUARIES

Sidney J. Brown Dies

Sidney J. Brown, owner and developer of the Beltway Plaza Shopping Center died on November 26, 2000. He resided in Potomac with his wife Leah.

Although inactive in recent years, Brown closely followed the operation and development of the Beltway Plaza which began construction in 1962. Brown developed and owned other commercial centers in other parts of the country including the Gold Coast Mall in Ocean City. With the Beltway Plaza, Brown had a continuing struggle to make the center a viable regional mall. It was long billed as "coming soon, the first enclosed mall," but began as a small strip mall anchored by A&P Food Store and Drug Fair. In 1962, with two other regional malls proposed in Greenbelt, Brown beat out the competition by constructing the giant S. Klein Department Store, a discount store out of New York City. It opened in 1963. While the store drew much business, it prevented Brown from attracting other major tenants who did not want to compete with the store's low prices. Finally an enclosed mall was built and opened in 1971 without a second major tenant. In 1975 S. Klein closed its Greenbelt store, leaving the building vacant for many years. The other 53 Beltway Plaza merchants suffered for lack of a major tenant, and Brown took over the operation of some stores in order to keep up the appearance of a successful mall. Gradually, after subdividing the Klein store building into smaller stores, new business was attracted to the mall. The last major addition to the mall in 1993 replaced part of the original strip mall to accommodate a super-sized Giant Food Market. Just this year, a portion of the Klein building was modified and expanded in order to accommodate a Target department store.

In all the time that Brown worked on developing the Plaza, he was frequently in conflict with the Greenbelt City Council and

Gerald Soffen

NASA scientist Dr. Gerald Soffen, who led the Viking science team that performed the first experiments on the surface of the planet Mars and a guiding force in NASA's effort to search for life in the universe, died November 22, 2000 at George Washington University Hospital in Washington, DC. He was 74.

Soffen was the director of the University Programs Office at the Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, a post he has held since 1990. For the past 10 years he directed activities and programs designed to maintain and broaden the Center's interaction with the university community. Soffen joined the Goddard Space Flight Center in 1983 where he helped to establish the Mission to Planet Earth program and served as the Project Scientist for the Earth Observing system at its beginning. He worked for NASA for over 30 years.

others over plans for his development and hillside erosion next to the Klein building. The council sought upper scale tenants and rejected Brown's grandiose but never accomplished plans for extensive further development. Brown was noted for his strongly worded letters to the council and others complaining about their actions against his objectives.

Besides his wife, Brown is survived by four children and six grandchildren. His first wife, Sarah, and a daughter predeceased him. Services were held at Beth Shalom Congregation in Potomac on November 27 with burial at Mount Lebanon Cemetery in Adelphi. Expressions of sympathy may be made as donations to the Beth Shalom Congregation.

Combined Choir Sings Christmas Carols

The Greenbelt Combined Choir will give its annual Christmas concert Sunday, December 3 at 7:30 p.m. in the Community Church.

This year's program includes the familiar "I Saw Three Ships" with bell ringers accompanying the choir and a medley, "Carols Old but New." Doug Love will play the zither and sing "Hail, Hail the Beautiful Morn." Virginia Williams and Jean Cook will sing a duet, "A Special Night" and Louise Piper will also be a featured soloist.

The congregation will be invited to join in some of the old favorite carols.

Jean Cook is conducting the Combined Choir for the 27th season. Mary Shipley is piano accompanist.

Become a Host Family

Each year, Academic Year in America (AYA) enables more than 1,000 students, ages 15 to 18 1/2, to come to the U.S. from countries such as Brazil, France, Japan and Germany. Many of these students have dreamed of coming to the U.S. since they were young children and saw their first American movie. They dream of playing on a high school sports team and making academic achievements; of becoming a good host "son" or "daughter" and learning new customs.

AYA students have at least three years of English instruction, full medical insurance and their own spending money. The only things a Greenbelt host family needs to provide are a place to sleep and study and two meals a day. Most importantly, Greenbelt hosts must include the student in family activities and treat them like a son or a daughter.

To become a host family, call Danielle Carpino at 1-800-322-4678, ext. 5164 or email dcarpino@aifs.com or visit AYA online at www.academicyear.org.

Greenbelters Dr. Janet Kuhn and Seymour Zucker are Disaster Action Team members at the Prince George's County Red Cross. The couple drives the chapter's Emergency Response Vehicle to local and national disasters to provide emergency food and shelter supplies to victims of disasters. They were "on alert" for activation to Hurricane Debby. Also on the team is Greenbelt Mark Landomirak.

ASSISTED LIVING

never be identified, as they are too proud to ask for help.

Task force member Leonie Penney responded that because assistance in living would be a paid service, not charity, pride would not be an issue. Penney said that to provide assistance-in-living services, the city would work with an existing agency that is familiar with the types of services available. Although a senior can make use of these agencies now, the cost is high. By pooling needs, the city would reduce the impact of agency overhead costs, she said.

Task force member Betty Timer said that the county Department of Aging has a good system for social workers to assess a senior's needs. However, the individual then has to figure out how to get those services. The department, Timer said, has very few social workers to help people explore their options. "We need something better for Greenbelt," she said.

Putens said that the need for this type of service is so critical that the city should move as quickly as possible to get an identifiable base of what needs to be done. Councilmember Alan Turnbull disputed Putens' comment that an assisted living facility is not in the cards. However, he agreed that assistance-in-living is a more practical starting point that would give the city some experience in dealing with senior housing issues.

The development of new assisted living facilities in the area, Turnbull said, does not mean that Greenbelt does not need one. People want to stay in the community and don't want to run out of money before they run out of years, he said. The way to get there, he said, is having the staff capacity to do this kind of social work.

Alex Barnes, Task Force co-

chair, pointed out that the task force came into existence as a result of a city election questionnaire identifying a need for assisted living facilities, not assistance-in-living services. He urged council to continue to work toward an actual assisted living facility.

Councilmember Thomas White praised the report and called its recommendations straightforward. "Unfortunately, both have price tags," he said. The interim recommendation was not given much attention during the last budget review, he said because it was not timely and because the city's budget picture was "not pleasant." The next cycle may not be any more pleasant, he noted.

While supporting the task force's work, White pointed out that the needs to be addressed are those of individuals. There is still a question, he said, of whether the city is the appropriate fulfiller of those needs. It would be an expansion of "Greenbelt's current panoply of services," if the city were to provide these services, they would be subject to the same scrutiny as any other service supported by taxpayers but benefitting specific individuals.

Penney noted that Haseley already provides some referral services. With a community resource advocate, he argued, the city would simply be providing referrals.

Putens said that there are already residents in need of these services. People in Greenbelt do not want to leave, he said, and while this would cost money, it would also improve the quality of life of citizens.

Putens said that, although everyone's ideal temperature cannot be accommodated, it seems that most people are OK with 83 degrees and can live with it.

"I'm not confident — in fact, I'm 100 percent sure — that we'll never fully resolve the temperature issue," Putens said. "We might have to take it to a federal court recount committee."

Citizens also complained about mildew, rust, a broken stall and broken hooks in the ladies' locker room at the center. Rogala said that the hooks and stall would be repaired within the next two weeks and that he would address the mildew issue with the new cleaning staff. He said that lockers would not be replaced anytime soon, because there are many in good condition.

New Year

In other business, council approved plans for the New Year's Eve 2001 celebration, including a rough draft of the "passport" listing the various activities and sites to be used throughout the celebration. Council also passed a motion to authorize between $4,000 and $4,500 for passports, stamps for each event, trees to be planted in different sections of Greenbelt, publicity and the grand prize, a weekend trip for two to Berkeley Springs, West Virginia.

Murder Trial Ends In Guilty Verdict

Fifteen months after baby Victoria (Tori) Rose Dobbin suffered massive head injuries, her assailant was convicted of murder. William English, 22, of Laurel was found guilty on Sept. 18, of second-degree murder, first-degree manslaughter and second-degree assault.

The jury verdict, following a seven-day trial at Howard County's Circuit Court, capped 11 hours of deliberations. Bond was revoked and on Nov. 9, English received a 20 year sentence.

Eight-month-old Tori, the third and fourth generation of two Greenbelt families, was the daughter of Sherri Rippeon and John Dobbin, Jr.

And on June 2, 1999, Tori was injured at the home of her babysitter. The sitter's boyfriend was charged when the baby died after 16 days on life-support following brain surgery at Children's Hospital.

DECISION

that higher temperatures are more uncomfortable and more dangerous than lower ones. "I am 79-years-old, have arthritis in my hand and shoulder and I'm recovering from surgery, but 85 degrees is too warm for me to exercise." Geller said that warm water temperatures hinder the body's ability to cool itself down while exercising and that air hotter than the water is very uncomfortable. Geller recommended wet suits for those who find the water too cold.

Rogala, center supervisor, responded by explaining "wet wraps," which are like wet suits, but less bulky and less expensive at $50 for a top and $80 for a full suit. He said that water exercise classes in Fairfax, VA, regularly use "wet wraps" and that if enough pool users expressed interest, he could buy them in bulk and be able to offer a 10 percent discount.

Motion Passes

When debate over pool and air temperature was closed, a motion was passed to follow staff recommendation that the pool temperature be set at 83 degrees and air temperature remain at two to five degrees above water temperature. Mayor Judith Davis said that the survey suggestion would be sent to PRAB.

VOLUNTEERS

pocket expenses. For many years, the paper operated from offices in the basement of Parkway Apartments.

In February, 1996, the News Review moved to fresh, new, above-ground space in the old Center School, newly renovated and opened as the now-familiar Community Center.

Free Delivery

An important development in the history of the newspaper was the decision to deliver the Cooperator free of charge to every home in town, beginning with the issue of September 7, 1939. The policy of free distribution remained unchanged except for an unsuccessful effort to go to a subscription basis in 1953. Successive boards of directors have considered that the most important thing is to get the paper to each household in the city.

As We Are

Although some readers may recall when the News Review had only two pages, the standard size today is 12 or 16 and may be as large as 28 pages. The deciding factor each week is the number of inches of advertising, which determines the number of pages that can be paid for.

At present 11,000 free copies of the News Review are distributed weekly to homes in Greenbelt, including Springhill Lake, Greenbriar, Greenbrook, Greenwood Village, Windsor Green, Greenspring, Hunting Ridge, Belle Point, the Lakes of Greenbelt Village, and to Greenbelt office buildings and shopping centers.

New Look

In 1995 the paper joined the '90s when it moved to a cold type — computerized process at Chesapeake Publishing Company in Beltsville. This change enabled us to return to the longer page which allows more space for stories and larger photos. We added green ink. The paper looks good, our readers tell us.

Staff

There have been 39 changes in editorship during the paper's 63 years. For the last 28 years, the position has been held by Mary Lou Williamson. There are now 75 staff members, most of whom have joined the paper as their contribution to their community. Some, like Williamson, have been volunteering with the paper for well over 30 years.

An innovation begun 19 years ago, augmenting the staff through an agreement with the Departments of English and Journalism of the University of Maryland to accept placement of student interns, is being continued to the News Review's advantage. Students have participated in the regular work of writing and editing copy for this paper. The program is sponsored by the Alfred M. Skolnik Memorial Fund. This fund also provides for a yearly $100 Savings Bond to be awarded to an outstanding Eleanor Roosevelt High School graduate who lives in Greenbelt and is interested in the field of writing.

As the paper enters its 64th year, it remains primarily a volunteer effort — news put out every week without fail by neighbors for neighbors, from the editor to young carriers delivering the paper. Unchanged is the fact that contributions of time and effort are always needed from Greenbelters to assure the paper

Principals Meet with ACE

by Nelda Young

In the November 16 issue a page was dropped from the ACE Principals story which appeared on page 1. Those parts of the article that were mixed up or omitted are reprinted below.

When the local school principals met with the Advisory Committee on Education on November 6, they shared their successes and concerns.

Paired with U of M

Linda Sherwood, principal of Springhill Lake Elementary School, told about her school's receipt of three grants, an English for Speakers of Other Languages (ESOL) homework plan, and the school's professional development center with University of Maryland student teachers. (Their students are not in the expeditionary learning program, and they are not making quilts, as stated in the earlier story.)

Having served 30 years in the system, Sherwood is retiring in January. However, she hopes the school board will rehire her so she can continue to fight for the success of the students at the school.

Seeks ESOL Tutors

The principal at Magnolia Elementary School, Phyllis Gillens, spoke with enthusiasm of the school's progress. The staff have received two technology grants and hope to be fully wired for the internet by September 2001. Once a week mentors come from Goddard Space Flight Center to help the fourth, fifth, and six graders with math. In addition, an activity bus is available so parents know their children will come home safely from the afterschool programs.

The school needs tutors, Gillens said, particularly in the ESOL Program where there are many Spanish speakers. Non-English speaking parents can't help their children with homework, she said.

Needs Tech Support

Kathy Curl, principal of Greenbelt Elementary, said David Lange is the "light of my life." He has taken the school on as a project and organized their volunteer program and helped in many other ways. The school has a strong reading, writing, and math program and has received many grants.

Beth Novick, faculty sponsor of the expeditionary learning program (outward bound) at the Ridge Road school, told the group about their activities. It is a hands-on-program that has chosen the topic "U.S. multicultural which is what makes us strong."

So far, they have created 24 paper quilts which depict diversity from a kid's perspective. In the spring they will stitch 24 quilts from cloth and then hold a multicultural dinner.

Greenbelt Middle, also an expeditionary learning school, will have students making quilts as well. Their theme is "Are we there yet?" At the end of the year they will host a culture fair.

A Greenbelt Gardener

by Rosie Rhubarb

It is the end of autumn and the garden is winding down for the year. All but a few trees have lost their leaves. The few bits of green or colored leaves stand out in the increasingly bare landscape.

Foresighted gardeners put in a plant or two that stays green or colored or blooms into the late autumn, for now is when such a plant stands out. Between the Co-op supermarket and the dry cleaners, the cherry trees still bloom. This variety ("Autumnalis") will bloom off and on during the cooler months.

The sedum plants (variety "Autumn Joy") next to the Community Center have flowers that stay colored even as they stop blooming and dry out. Thus they provide color in the garden for weeks.

The last perennial flower in my neighborhood in bloom is physostegia virginiana, commonly known as obedient plant. The leaves and stalks are still green and a few purple flowers still remain. This is a plant native to our area. Hardy camillias are still in bloom near the Christmas tree by the Municipal Building and near the Youth Center.

Autumn Clean Up Tasks

This is the time of year to trim the perennial flower stalks close to the ground; dump the soil out of the flower pots; pull up and store stakes; and throw out the annuals killed by the frost. The chores seem endless, but cleaning up in the late autumn means a neater looking yard during the winter.

Taking dead plants out of the garden beds means bugs and plant diseases are less likely to over winter in the yard. This decreases the chances of their attacking the plants next year.

We in Greenbelt are very fortunate because our yard debris can be picked up right out of our yards. Call Public Works for Friday pick up at 301-474-8004. Sticks should be in bags or tied in a bundle. Leaf pick up varies by neighborhood. In Greenbelt Homes leaves must be put in bags, but in other neighborhoods they are picked up at the curbside on appointed days.

Leaves

Leaves can be very useful in the garden since they add nutrients to the soil as they decompose. Use fallen leaves to make soil or to use as mulch. Making compost turns the leaves into high quality soil. Compost piles are easy to make and use. In fact putting leaves in a compost pile is a lot easier than bagging up the fallen leaves. Just rake the leaves onto a cloth or tarp and dump them in the pile. That is much easier than the bending and stuffing involved in bagging leaves for pick up.

Compost bins can be store bought or home made. The price and size varies, so get what you need. For example, a lot of leaves can be stuffed into a compost bin so a small bin is all that is needed for a small yard. Making a compost pile can be as simple as marking out a square, putting a post in each of the four corners, stretching the fencing materials around the posts, and tacking it onto the posts. Fencing material that is somewhat sturdier than chicken wire should last for years.

There are many variations on the theme of how to fill the compost bin. There are methods to speed up the decomposition process and change the acidity of the resulting product. The expert can read up on such things, here I'll stick to the simple method. Basically it is alternating layers of organic material and soil. Put in the leaves, then compress them. When there is an eight to 12 inch deep layer, add a one inch layer of soil.

This method will produce soil in 12 to 18 months. This is slower than some methods, but you do not have the bother of having to turn the pile.

Give some thought to where the compost bin or pile will be placed in the yard. The compost pile can definitely detract from the overall appearance of your property, just as trash cans or debris can. Once again it is the principle that what is furthest from the house is actually closest to the view of the people passing by. Any object that is big, bulky, or does not fit in over all with the rest of the landscape will be the most obvious object in the yard.

The bin will be much less obvious if it is next to another large object, such as a shed or house; is surrounded by tasteful fencing, or surrounded by plants, such as shrubs.

A well maintained compost pile should not smell. Vegetable peelings may smell in the hottest months if care is not taken. Animals and birds may be attracted to an open compost if table scraps are added, so keep this in mind when placing the pile.

Local Child Prodigy Plays at Ocean City

Kelley Jo Wallace, age 4, met Itzhak Perlman backstage for the second time when he returned last month for a concert at the Kennedy Center. Kelley Jo is a big fan of the famed violinist. She, too, plays the violin, having begun lessons at the ripe old age of 1 1/2. Accompanying her to the Kennedy Center were her parents, Leonard and Holley Wallace of Maplewood Court.

In September, Kelley Jo took the first step in what might be a promising musical career by giving a public performance at, of all places, the Boardwalk in Ocean City. On a summer visit she had been impressed with other musicians who were playing along the boardwalk and decided she wanted to do it too. So, on a return visit, she and her parents went to Ocean City Hall and obtained a street performer's license — the youngest person to have obtained one.

Then on to the Boardwalk, where she played for the passersby. Her repertoire consisted primarily of variations of Mozart's most famous work — "Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star." Before each song she announced the piece, and afterward she took a bow. Apparently her performance was well received by passersby, who rewarded her in the customary way for street musicians, by leaving tips.

MedSTAR Chopper Educates Kids

by Altoria Bell Ross

"It's a bird. No, it's a plane. No, it's a MedSTAR helicopter, and it's landing on the field behind the Youth Center." On October 20, Chet Nash of Beltsville, a former Greenbelt Nursery School parent and now a St. Hugh's parent, gave students of both schools a tour of the air ambulance.

Nash, who has been a flight paramedic for 12 years, guided children, including his 5-year-old daughter Samantha, into the chopper that serves Washington Hospital Center and the Children's National Medical Center. Allen Wolfe, a registered flight nurse of Arlington, VA, helped the pupils out of the aircraft. "There's always something different," said Wolfe, of the work he has done for the last 10 years. "You never know what you'll get."

This is because the helicopter personnel care for the ill and injured within a 60-to-80 mile radius of the Washington metropolitan area and also occasionally travel farther, including trips to New York and North Carolina. Pilot Darryl Johnson of Kempton, MD said the helicopter normally transports its patients at 150 miles per hour but can fly as fast as 172 miles per hour. In any case, the youngsters were pleased that they could explore the vehicle on the ground.

As the helicopter prepared for take-off, the children and adults took cover near the tennis courts, and yelled, "Thank you." While the wind produced by the propellers forced the grass to bow down at rapid intervals, the helicopter lifted off. Then it circled back, sounding its siren, proving that it was definitely not a bird, nor a plane, but a flying rescue vehicle that had touched down in the lives of children one fall morning.
