Incumbents Reelected to Council Bond Issue Wins by over 4 to 1

by James Giese

In an election with little controversy, Greenbelt voters chose to once again reelect the five incumbents for another two-year term. Also reflecting voter satisfaction with the way the council has been governing the city, Greenbelt voters, by a greater than four-to-one margin, approved the $3.5 million bond issue referendum.

Judith Davis was again top voter getter and is expected to be reelected mayor by the council at its organizational meeting this Monday. The council chooses one of its members to serve as mayor, whose additional duties are largely that of chair at council meetings and spokesperson for the city. While the city charter gives the council full discretion as to who serves as mayor, long established tradition has pretty much obligated the council to select for mayor the person elected with the greatest number of votes in the at-large election.

Also by tradition, the person with the second highest vote total is elected mayor pro-tem at the organizational meeting, which, by charter, begins at 7:30, a half-hour earlier than the normal council meeting time. This year, and for the first time, Rodney Roberts should become mayor pro-tem. The past council's mayor pro-tem, Alan Turnbull, dropped in vote totals this time from second to fourth place. Thomas White, reelected to his fifteenth term, and serving far longer than any other person on the council, came in fifth this year. White was still well ahead of the closest challenger, Sylvia Lewis. In his long career upon the council he has ranged in rank of those elected from fifth to second, but has never either been defeated or gained sufficient votes to become mayor.

Votes Cast

Voters turned out in larger numbers than at the last election in 1999, with 22% of the registered voters participating. While all precincts were up in numbers, the North End precinct 6 led in percentage of votes cast, 35%, while Greenbelt Center precinct 3 cast the most votes, 784. The Springhill Lake precinct 8 had the worst turnout at less than 4%. Still, its voter turnout was an improvement over that of the previous election.

Bond Issue

Voters in all precincts strongly supported the bond issue proposal. The greatest support by percentage of votes cast was in Springhill Lake (94%) where $2 million of the $3.5 is to be spent on an addition to the Springhill Lake Recreation Center. The least support came from the absentee ballots (77%) and North End precinct (79%).

Davis led in votes cast in all precincts. At the last election, she placed second in two of the four precincts, even though she still garnered the highest vote count. Roberts came in second in the Center and North End precincts, but lagged in the other two. Lewis placed second in Springhill Lake where the fewest number of votes were cast, but seventh in Greenbelt East. Challenger Kelby Brick also did his best in Springhill Lake, finishing fourth, but surprisingly, came in only sixth in Greenbelt East, his home precinct. Edward Putens, who placed last in the 1999 election and who some felt was the incumbent most likely to be defeated this year, moved up to third place in votes cast. While placing in the top five in all precincts, he did best in his home precinct, Greenbelt East.

Hello, Springhill Lakers! The News Review Is Back

With this issue we return to our long-standing policy of delivering the News Review to all the homes in Greenbelt. For you — in Springhill Lake — this means copies of our weekly editions will again be dropped in the lobby of each apartment building and at the front door of each townhouse.

B.U.I.L.D.I.N.G. — the mentoring group under the leadership of Brian Butler — will do the delivery. In return, the dollars they earn each week will help fund their special activities and trips. The boys may need some time and experience to get all the papers out on a Friday. We hope you'll give them encouragement. You can give us a call if you think your building has been missed — 301-474-4131 or 301-441-2662.

Some great Springhill Lake stories are in the works that we especially want you to read. The first one, which appears this week, tells about a show put on by the boys in B.U.I.L.D.I.N.G. at the Springhill Lake Elementary School on Friday, November 16. Check it out.

City Okays Theater Deal; Some Issues Unresolved

by Virginia Beauchamp

"Hooray!" said resident Eileen Peterson from her front-row seat at the Greenbelt City Council meeting on October 22. She expressed the feelings of many in the audience when, after more than a year of study, council voted on a motion by councilmember Rodney Roberts to authorize the city staff to work out arrangements for the city's acquisition of the Greenbelt theater.

Because the structure is part of a larger building, with walls and utilities shared with other businesses, making these arrangements will be complicated. Financial arrangements with the owners of the commercial buildings in the Roosevelt Center, George and Lisa Christacos, will also be complicated.

Currently a Memorandum of Understanding has been agreed to, which includes a forgiveness of debt owed by the Christacoses, valued at $204,000, and a reduction of their monthly payment to the city on the loan made to them when the Center was renovated. If legal issues can be resolved and papers signed by Dereduction is calculated at $185,226, bringing the total cost of the acquisition to $389,226.

Future Plans

Many other issues must be worked out when the transfer of ownership is complete. One is creating a contract for operation of the theater itself, according to Mayor Judith Davis. Other possible uses for the space will be developed under the direction of the Department of Recreation, Davis said. "Once we acquire the facility, there will be public hearings on its uses."

Gwen Vaccaro, owner of Pleasant Touch, which is located in the basement area under the theater stage, indicated other areas of concern. The city had tried to incorporate that space in the purchase agreement, Davis said, but it could not be worked out.

Vaccaro was concerned about shared utilities, which Davis hoped could be separately metered. Although the city will not have ownership of the basement,

Letters to the Editor

THANKS

The Friends of the Greenbelt Library's (FOGL) annual book sale held this past weekend was a rousing success. I would like to thank the many volunteers who staffed the sale of used books, magazines, and records so generously donated by the citizens of Greenbelt and neighboring communities. A special word of thanks to Les Magnus for his unstinting help. The volunteers, as well as the large number of book lovers who turned out, contributed greatly to its success.

The FOGL book store, located off the children's section in the library, is open during regular library hours. Donations are gratefully accepted at the circulation desk. For further information call Eileen Peterson at 301-441-8249.

THANKS

I want to thank all the voters in Greenbelt who gave me their votes on Tuesday. Thanks also to my family, friends, committee members, and supporters who really made this victory possible. I am very grateful for this vote of confidence, and I look forward to serving the citizens of Greenbelt with energy and enthusiasm.

Lions Reach Fifty

Started in 1951, the Greenbelt Lions Club has now survived one-half century, and is proud of its record.

Many individuals, groups, organizations, and projects, especially those involving the indigent and less fortunate, have been helped by the Lions in that time.

On November 16, many past and present Lions will celebrate this milestone at the La Fountain Bleu in Lanham. City dignitaries and residents, Lion officials and Lion members will be invited. The public is also invited. The guest speaker will be Clement Kuziak, the past Internal Director and candidate for third vice president of Lions International.

THANKS

This is a letter of thanks to two residents for helping me find my two little dogs, Bichon Frises. The two little rascals, Sally and Lucky, managed to get loose from where I had tied them while transacting business in the post office last Wednesday, October 31. When I came out and found them gone, I was desperate. My first Good Samaritan used his cell phone to call the police for me, gently chided me for leaving them unattended, and offered me his support and sympathy. And then two hours later, Mr. Benson, who lives in Greenbriar, called to say that he had picked up the dogs and had them safely in his home and I could come and get them. The first person even called me that evening to see if I had found my dogs!

In the course of alerting all the proper people for help in locating my dogs, I had the opportunity to meet Greenbelt's new animal warden, Susie Hall. We are fortunate in having a person who is so very resourceful and concerned. My thanks to Susie for her support.

Besides being so terribly distraught at the prospect of losing my dogs to a thief, I just could not believe that this could happen in Greenbelt ... not in Greenbelt! And so, in addition to my joy at having my dogs safely back home, my faith in the basic kindness of people, and especially in the helpfulness of Greenbelters, has been reaffirmed.

it will have the right of access to deal with pipes, telephone lines, and other equipment. "As a resident of Greenbelt," Vaccaro said, "I'm not sure what we're buying."

City attorney Robert Manzi said he was not sure about separate metering. "Actually we're buying the four walls, the entrance, and the marquee," he said.

Vaccaro said her facility shared water with the theater. "I'm also very concerned about the noise," she added, "which has been unrelenting."

"When the city owns the building," Davis said, "we'll have to deal with the noise level problem." Council-member Thomas White added that he hoped the city staff would vet any problem Vaccaro has.

Value of the Deal

Roberts said that financially this was "a good deal" for the city. The cost to the city amounts to a good deal less than the owners' valuation, which Roberts said was $500,000. According to City Manager Mike McLaughlin, the assessment for the entire Center buildings is $1.2 million.

Vaccaro responded: "I applaud your efforts. It's a good move for the city."

Councilmember Alan Turnbull noted, by way of conclusion to the discussion, that if Christacos puts the rest of the buildings up for sale, the city will have the right of first refusal.

Obituaries

Adele E. Trumbule

Pioneer Greenbelter Adele E. Trumbule, 86, died on November 1, 2001. Although she had been under constant medical maintenance for the past six years, she had been able to be about until two days before her death. During the week before she died most of her family were able to come and visit with her. Even the very young great-grandchildren were brought to see her.

Born April 29, 1915 in Pittsburg, Kansas, Mrs. Trumbule was the youngest of seven children. She took courses at the Pittsburg Business College.

Her first job was in a nursery where she earned $1 a day working from 7:30 a.m. until sometimes as late as 6 p.m. Her future husband, Eddie, would come and sit on a bench and watch her work. He had a part-time job so he could finish high school. Because he was not a member of the Lutheran Church, Adele continued to date other men but love won out and she married him. He was baptized into the Lutheran faith a few months after their marriage.

Their first child, Robert Edward, was born Sept. 20, 1936. In March 1937 her husband, who had previously filed an application for a civil service job, received an offer of a job at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. Because of the Depression, they decided to leave their home and go to Washington, D.C. After living in a crowded apartment in the District, they decided to apply for Greenbelt in the fall of 1937. In April 1938 they were accepted and in May they moved into a 1½ bedroom house.

They loved Greenbelt and their spacious home and yard. However, when their son Gerald was born in 1940, they had to move into a two bedroom house at 35L Ridge Road. They bought furniture made for Greenbelt and Mrs. Trumbule still had two chests and a bed frame from that early purchase.

After their third son and a daughter were born, the Trumbules had to move to an even larger house at 56C Crescent Road. Rules about the number of people who could live in a house were strictly enforced.

The Trumbules attended services in a Lutheran Church in Mt. Rainier. With the help of the pastor there, the Reverend Edwin Pieplow, a congregation was formed in Greenbelt. The first service was held Easter Sunday, April 9, 1944 in the Trumbule's home. After two months the congregation outgrew the Trumbules home so they met in the Home Economics room in Center School for eight years. Later the congregations obtained property at 22 Ridge Road. The Trumbules were among the members of the congregation who helped to build the Greenbelt Lutheran Church there (later named Holy Cross Lutheran Church).

Although she did not participate in many activities outside the church, Mrs. Trumbule was an active participant in the affairs of the Greenbelt Lutheran Church, working for the Lutheran Women's Missionary League and other church groups.

In those early years there was a definite division of labor. Mrs. Trumbule sewed and made clothes for her family as well as canned fruits and vegetables.

In 1953 when the government prepared to sell the Greenbelt houses, the family moved to Hyattsville.

Mrs. Trumbule worked a total of 15 years for the National Geographic Society in Washington, D.C., quitting when her office moved to Gaithersburg.

She volunteered for the American Red Cross and also for a government program that helped the elderly with their utility bills. She also visited the sick in hospitals.

After her husband's death she returned to Greenbelt in 1990, living in Greenbriar. She became a docent for the Greenbelt museum.

As her son tells it, Mrs. Trumbule had an unusual gift -- the ability to communicate and get along with people of all ages. She knew how to listen and give advice. People who needed someone to talk to seemed to gravitate to her. Her son remembers long distance phone calls, cards and letters. Wherever she went, even to the hospital, people sought her out to talk with her.

Her husband Edward F. Trumbule and sons Robert and David preceded her in death. Survivors include her son Gerald H. Trumbule, daughter Mary A. Hoffman, 10 grandchildren and 10 great-grandchildren.

Relatives and friends may call at Holy Cross Lutheran Church, 6905 Greenbelt Road on Thursday, November 8 from 7 to 9 p.m. and one hour prior to services that will be held at 11 a.m. on Friday, November 9. Interment will be at Fort Lincoln Cemetery, Brentwood.

In lieu of flowers, expressions of sympathy may be made to the Statuary Fund at Holy Cross Lutheran Church, 6905 Greenbelt Rd., Greenbelt, MD 20770.

Frank A. Loftus

Greenbelt Pioneer Francis A. (Frank) Loftus, 78, of Dover, Delaware, died October 15, 2001 in Dover. He had cancer of the esophagus.

Loftus was the son of the late Mrs. Winfield McCamy, first and longtime city clerk of Greenbelt.

Born in Dallas, Tx., Loftus moved from Washington, D.C. to the new town of Greenbelt in 1938 with his mother, brother and sister. He graduated from Greenbelt High School in the class of 1940 and served in the Army in World War II.

Mr. Loftus received a master's degree in human development from the University of Chicago. He worked first at an institution for disturbed children, and later for the State of Delaware Department of Corrections. He retired in 1989.

He was a volunteer at the Bombay Hook Wildlife Refuge Center in Delaware and Delaware Hospice Center. He also drove for the Neighbor-to-Neighbor program in Delaware.

He is survived by his wife Elizabeth, of Dover, and two daughters from his first marriage (to pioneer Greenbelter, Shirley Friedman), Susan Daly and Carol Cahill, both of Columbia, Md., five grandchildren, a brother, Michael J. Loftus of Federalsburg, Md, and sister Patricia A. McCamy, of Atlanta.

Costumed Children Enjoy Halloween in Greenbelt

On October 30, a festive gathering of approximately 160 costumed children came out to enjoy the annual Halloween costume contest and parade at the Youth Center. With costumes ranging from "The Magic School Bus" to Harry Potter, picking the winners was a daunting task for Recreation Department judges Greg Varda, Harry James, and Kateri Hull (Miss Greenbelt). All who came out in costume were recognized for their enthusiasm. The prize-winning finalists were: Kayla Opsahl, 2 1/2, as Mickey Mouse; Lily Sombar, 3 1/2, as a chicken; Abraham Shaw, 5, as George Washington; Emily Elkonoh, 6, as the Statue of Liberty; Erin Donn, 9, as Bazooka Gum on the Bottom of a Shoe; and Rachel Bailey, 10, as the Dead Bride. AMERICA RECYCLES DAY NOVEMBER 15, 2001

A Great Time to Renew Your Commitment to Recycling

Help celebrate the Fifth Annual America Recycles Day

Keep recycling working - buy products made from the materials that we separate for recycling!
Look for "safe bets" that always have recycled content: steel products, aluminum cans, and glass containers. Other items that may have recycled material include: greeting cards, door mats, decking, clothing, paper products, carpet, pencils and playground equipment. To make sure, read product labels and look for the percentage of recycled content.

Visit the Recycling Display in the Community Center during the week of November 12th and fill out your recycling pledge card.

By pledging to recycle and to buy recycled you will be eligible to win:

Regional Contest

- $300 gift certificate at a bicycle shop
- an Adirondack chair made of recycled plastic lumber

National Contest

- Recycled Product Prize Package that includes $2,000 worth of furniture, playground equipment, and composting tools.

Sponsored in part by the City of Greenbelt and the Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments.
For more information on recycling in Greenbelt call the City Recycling Office at 301-474-8308 or visit the city web site at www.ci.greenbelt.md.us.

K. C.'s Host Family Fishing Tournament

by Austin L. Conaty

The Saint Hugh Council of the Knights of Columbus hosted a Family Fishing Tournament on Saturday, September 29. Participants in the tournament were Mark and Robert Bailey, Harrison and Wesley Hilliard, Billy Scott, and Emilia Pedersoli. Chuck Hatcher instructed the children on how to bait the hooks and catch the fish. John Low, Joe Ritondo, and Austin Conaty assisted him. Larry Hilliard, Scott Legendre, and Sean Bailey sponsored and supervised the young fisher folks.

Knights of Columbus Family Fishing tournament participants and volunteers.

After a slow start, Mark Bailey caught the first fish. Shortly thereafter Robert Bailey had the second catch of the day. Then in a flurry of fishing prowess Harrison Hilliard caught the remaining four catches. All of the catches were carefully released after quick measurement.

Harrison Hilliard won first place for most fish caught and for longest fish (6.375"); second place went to Mark and Robert Bailey. Citations were presented by Chuck Hatcher and District Deputy Knight John Winfrey.

ACE Plans to Aid Area Schools with Job Fair

by Barbara Hopkins

Planning for a job fair to help area schools dominated the discussion when members of the Greenbelt Advisory Committee on Education (ACE) met Monday night, Nov. 5. The job fair was suggested when ACE members, area school representatives and Greenbelt City Council met last month in a stakeholders work-session. Mayor Judith Davis asked ACE to take on the project in an effort to help ease problems at the schools that have arisen because of shortages in teachers, bus drivers, and other school staff. According to Leta Mach, ACE chair, preliminary discussion about the fair with a school board contact yielded much enthusiasm. The committee agreed on Dec. 1 as a tentative date and decided to contact Greenbelt businesses about participating.

Also on the agenda was discussion about the renovation of Greenbelt Middle School, which has been delayed for one year. Mach said it is likely that next summer the school board will request county funding resource projections and ACE needs to make them aware that they should not be postponed again.

She read from a recent article in the Prince George's Journal quoting Howard Burnett, executive assistant to Schools Superintendent Iris Metts, to the effect that "every stakeholder group with an interest in education" was contacted for input for the revised Master Plan concerning school issues. However, no ACE member present had been consulted regarding the revision.

Mach informed the committee that the reading club program is $8,000 short of being able to fund the program to past standards, even after obtaining grant money from the state. Also, she reported the program was off to a slow start; due to events on September 11, schools took longer to be ready for special programs. Members were encouraged to learn that in a survey, students polled did want the reading club program to continue.

Plans were then made to contact local businesses for donations, with the businesses receiving recognition at ACE events, including those that would be broadcast on the Greenbelt cable channel. Mach passed the first results of such fund-raising activities to Wendy Wexler, city liaison, in the form of a check from the Greenbelt Co-op.

Dates were set for the PTA Presidents' Meeting, Monday, November 19, and the Principals' Meeting on February 4, 2002.

The date of the next ACE meeting will be January 22, 2002. Mach said the group would need to prepare two reports for council at that meeting. One would deal with school needs that are appropriate for the city to handle; the other would be on ACE funding needs.

The Pupil Accountability Office had been contacted to learn how many schools have Greenbelt residents as students; but the request must be made in writing. It was also learned that the Fact Book is no longer published but must now be downloaded from the Internet Web site. Wexler agreed to have the document down-loaded and copied for committee members.

The series is sponsored by the Eleanor Roosevelt High School Academy Programs and two grants that promote academic "rigor" and "relevancy": the U.S. Department of Education Smaller Learning Communities Grant and the Prince George's County Career Connection Grant. The series features a new twist to the traditional career day with an academic department hosting and choosing the theme. The English department will host the event November 14 using the theme, careerconnection@eng. Oral and Written Communication in the Workplace.

Greenbelt Police Recognized For Assistance at Pentagon

by Virginia Beauchamp

Though unforeseen when the agenda was drawn up, the Greenbelt City Council meeting on October 19 showcased the broad scope of responsibilities shouldered this fall by the Greenbelt Police Department. At one extreme, they carried out significant work of national scope outside the state. And on the other, they have been called again and again to focus on the city's very heart.

The first of these duties, beyond anything previously experienced, came upon them (and on the world) in the terrorist attacks of September 11. This story was recounted at the council meeting by Patrol Division Commander Lt. Thomas Kemp and MPO Barry Byers, supervisor of the Emergency Services Unit. Both were there to present to the city a special award from Arlington County.

On the evening of that shocking day, Kemp said, the city's emergency response unit answered a request by the U.S. Park Police to offer assistance at the Pentagon. The three men available at the time brought into service the city's armored citizen rescue vehicle, in which they rattled down the Baltimore-Washington Parkway to the Pentagon.

Arriving at about 11:15 p.m., they were assigned to provide initial incident perimeter security. According to Kemp, the Greenbelt officers worked all night until relieved at 5:45 a.m. on September 12.

That first night's call to duty kept being extended over the next eight days, Kemp said, as the Arlington County Police Department requested officers from surrounding jurisdictions to continue assistance with perimeter security.

Thus during investigation and recovery operations, the Greenbelt department rotated 20 officers to the Pentagon. Byers, who then took over the podium, described their experiences at the scene. To provide some sense of what they were working with, he quoted Police Chief James Craze (away in Florida following a death in the family) as likening the amount and chaotic nature of the debris around the Pentagon to what he had seen in Vietnam.

The Greenbelt officers could scarcely have been closer to the action, since they helped with traffic control at the immediate crash site. This was a very different view, Kemp said, than that of the public from the TV screen.

Reporters' cameras, he noted, were some three-quarters of a mile away.

For the next eight days the 20 Greenbelt officers replaced one another at the Pentagon, all of them working 12-hour shifts. According to the city manager's written summary, they managed "the movement of hundreds of emergency workers, military personnel, and media from around the world, as well as citizens who came to the area to observe the recovery operations and erect memorials to those who lost their lives."

Arlington County Award

On Sunday, October 7, the Arlington County Board of Commissioners held a special day of remembrance and appreciation at the Washington-Lee High School stadium, in part to acknowledge the services of area agencies providing assistance during the Pentagon operation. On behalf of the Greenbelt Police Department, Lt. Kemp had accepted a plaque at this program in appreciation of services rendered by his fellow officers. He and Byers then formally presented the plaque to the city council.

Each councilmember also received an information packet concerning the operation, as well as a basket of letters to share that had come from children across the country expressing gratitude for the work of emergency volunteers.

Following the disaster, the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) notified Chief Craze that the Greenbelt Police Department may receive reimbursement for its contribution to the Pentagon crisis. This would involve salary reimbursements, benefit expenses for employees, and vehicle use and rentals. The total request comes to something over $11,000, Craze estimates.

Roosevelt Center

When Mayor Judith Davis opened the floor for petitions and requests, resident Janelle Bjorlie-Ellis read aloud a letter she had written to council expressing concern about what she describes as "a significant problem" at Roosevelt Center. The constant congregation of teenagers there makes her uncomfortable, especially, she said, when she is accompanying her young children. She complained about vile language, threatening looks and gestures, and particularly about loiterers at the Centerway underpass and the smoking of marijuana.

Since Lt. Kemp was still in the room, Mayor Davis turned to him to respond about the situation. Having visited the Center with his own children, he sympathized with the petitioner, he said. "But we can only work with the resources we have;" however, he noted that the city's patrol squads are now at full strength, and that probably bicycle officers may be able to keep a closer watch.

He added that stepped-up patrols are now expected and that benches by the underpass are to be removed and brush at that site trimmed. Foot patrols have previously found bottles hidden in the bushes. The main problem with gatherings at the Center, he said, was with older alcoholics, "who have never grown up, and never will."

He emphasized the right of people to gather in the public open space at the Center, however. But threatening pedestrians is another matter. "That is a crime," he said.

Mayor Davis expressed the hope that the Youth Advisory Council, now at full strength, may be able to determine what older teens in the community want. "Apparently not organized sports," she said. But "inappropriate and illegal behavior has to be taken care of." She noted that recently the disruptive behavior has moved at night to the corner by the bank and in front of the Domino's pizza shop.

Councilmember Ed Putens hoped that city ownership of the theater might help "a city presence."

Second Meeting

Earlier, Lt. Kemp had indicated that Police Chief Craze was planning to hold a second community-police meeting to open up communication with the young people. It was to be held sometime in mid-November in the Community Center.

On that point resident Eileen Peterson requested that it be held, like the first one, in Roosevelt Center itself. She praised that meeting, which drew over 80 participants, but expressed doubt that "they'll go inside." Even when the weather is cold, she noted that outdoor events sponsored by the New Deal Café had elicited large crowds.

Since the council meeting, a new date and venue for the chief's meeting with the community has been set for Tuesday, November 13, in the Community Center.

Hiker/Biker Trail Closed for Repairs

A one and a quarter-mile segment of the Northeast Branch Hiker/Biker Trail in College Park remains closed due to damage from the September tornado that struck the area. The Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission (M-NCPPC) has announced that the trail segment from Paint Branch Golf Course on Route 193 to Cherry Hill Road near the Home Depot shopping center is closed indefinitely due to dangerous conditions.

"Although M-NCPPC tree crews from Prince George's and Montgomery counties have been able to remove hundreds of trees that fell across the trail, hundreds more damaged trees remain on either side of the trail, creating a dangerous situation," said Joe O'Neill, Northern Area division chief for the Department of Parks and Recreation. "Unfortunately, sections of the pavement were also damaged by the large tree roots that tore holes in the paved trail as the trees crashed to the ground."

M-NCPPC is contracting with timber companies to remove the damaged wood, and will replace the trail surface. However, due to the extent of the damage and difficulty in having heavy machinery access remote sites along the trail, the recreation facility will remain closed through the winter. It is anticipated that the trail will reopen in the spring, after new asphalt can be installed.

The Northeast Branch Hiker/Biker Trail is open from Acredale Park south through the University of Maryland to Bladensburg. Trails along Lake Artemesia and the Northwest Branch remain open, and were not affected by the storm. For maps and more information on the complete trail network in Prince George's County, visit the Department of Parks and Recreation Web site at www.pgpc.com/places/parks.

SHL Young People Star In Game Show Nov. 16

by Dorothy Sucher

When kids get in trouble at Roosevelt Center, the whole town hears about it. But there's a group of young men in Springhill Lake who are working hard to put on a show to demonstrate to their parents and the community what they've been up to after school at the Springhill Lake Community Center. They are the members of the B.U.L.L.D.I.N.G. Project - Boys United in Learning, Developing, and Igniting the Next Generation. They will be presenting a free variety show at the Springhill Lake Elementary School on Friday, November 16, from 6 to 8:30 p.m.

The B.U.L.L.D.I.N.G. Project is the brainchild of Brian Butler, the charismatic Recreation Department staff member who had the idea of starting a mentoring program in Springhill Lake. Currently, over 25 boys from 11 to 17, eighty percent of them Springhill Lake residents, are participating in this after-school program. The goal of the program is to prepare the boys for the future, help them do well in school, and encourage a positive attitude. One of the mentors, Tyrone Barnes, a 20-year-old Springhill Lake resident, stated, "I got involved in the program as soon as I heard about it -

The goal of the program is to prepare the boys for the future, help them do well in school, and encourage a positive attitude.

I was all for it. I want to see the youth do better than I did and to be something when they grow up."

Creator of Program

Brian Butler, 26, has been recreation coordinator at Springhill Lake for the last two years. At first he found that the young men were not participating in the programs at the Recreation Center. There was a "large gap between the community and the staff," he said. However, Butler had been teaching at the Greenbelt Middle School Alternative Learning Center, where he learned how to bridge that gap. In the first year, he found it extremely hard to build trust. When the word got around that he had played some professional basketball, the kids became interested in him and began coming down to the Center. Butler said, "they were disrespectful, not because they wanted to be, but because they didn't know any better." He introduced athletic programs but since not everyone is athletic, felt it was also important to do things that would appeal to a broad spectrum of young people. "You would be amazed at the talent here in Springhill Lake that hasn't been tapped," he said. After kids have been in the program for a while, their parents tell him that their children's grades and attitudes have improved "incredibly."

Butler, who is married, with two sons, lived for a time at Springhill Lake and then moved to Cheltenham. He had studied mass communications at Delaware State University, and wanted to work with kids. He had come from the inner city in New Jersey and was helped by some of his coaches. He wanted to do the same for others. "I was blessed, being on the AAU team. It's a year-round program. We traveled. They exposed me to art galleries and the Princeton Prep SAT Course and Test."

Butler's program in Springhill Lake includes field trips to the University of Maryland on the weekend. The university has provided free tickets to musicals, ballet, and the opera. And the kids love it. Soon the program will be featured in an after-school special TV movie which will start filming soon. New kids keep showing up - three the day the News Review interviewed Butler.

Activities

Most of the young men in the program come down to the Recreation Center as soon as school is over and stay until the place closes at 10 p.m. They play basketball and games, do their homework, and talk with the encouragement of the mentors in the program. Lately, they have been talking about the bombing on September 11. Barnes commented, "They come down with crazy ideas and questions. We try to persuade them to read the Washington papers and not to believe everything they hear."

These young men have a lot of energy, and the program tries to find constructive ways to keep them busy.

Many of them want to get a job and work, but they are too young. The mentors persuade them to try new and different things, such as putting on the show November 16. They are calling it "One-Time Flashback," and the boys will be performing "old" songs - that is, songs from their parents' youth - and their parents can watch them perform and see what they have been doing at the Recreation Center. There will also be some comedy routines by aspiring actor Jamal Duckett and by Eric Fowler, who wants to become a comedian when he grows up. Audience participation will be encouraged when songs from old sitcoms are played. Audience members will be asked to "Name That Song." The young men are very enthusiastic about the show and "just want to rehearse all the time," according to a mentor.

The performance will include some "young ladies," said Butler, who "would kill me if I didn't let them be in it." They are 7, 9, 8, and 12 years old.

Soon the boys will begin a new project with the help of their mentors. They will take over the circulation of the Greenbelt News Review in Springhill Lake, an area that has not received delivery for almost two years. "It's a good job for them," Barnes commented, "because they want to work and it's something they can do right here, near home, without having to travel."

When asked whether there are any musical instruments at the Springhill Lake Community Center that these young men could use, the answer was "no." "Anybody want to donate some?"

Green Ridge House Is on the Go Again

by a Green Ridge House resident
Residents of Green Ridge House had a busy travel schedule during the month of October.

On October 3, about 35 residents of Green Ridge House enjoyed a wonderful trip down the Potomac River on the cruise ship "The Odyssey". The day was beautiful, the food excellent and the jazz trio was great. It was a most enjoyable experience and the residents would like to thank the city of Greenbelt for making it possible.

Originally reservations were made for September 12, but due to the tragedy that struck the nation, the trip was postponed. Anyone who has not made this trip down the Potomac River should do so. It's a great way to relax, see historical places, and enjoy the beautiful trees at this time of the year.

On October 11, the residents were invited to attend the celebration of Eleanor Roosevelt's 117th birthday at the Roosevelt High School. This too was a very enjoyable evening. The city of Greenbelt provided transportation to the school by bus. Students provided greetings, taking residents by the arm and escorting them to the auditorium.

The program was very well planned and the students were the participants in 90% of the entertainment. Their dance troupes, piano player, and the jazz band made it hard to believe that these artists are in high school - they perform as professionals.

Students also shared how Eleanor Roosevelt impacted their school and their personal lives. Mayor Judith Davis came over to our group to provide a welcome. With the performance that these students gave, their enthusiasm, and their ability, a great evening was made possible. ❧
