City Council Takes Up Action On Roosevelt Center Concerns

by Barbara Bonham Young

The main topic for consideration and action at the December 17 regular Greenbelt City Council meeting was steps to take to improve conditions at Roosevelt Center. Council also approved a plan to expand the dog park and install new fencing, discussed a petition drive to repeal CB-40, took note of an award received by Green Ridge House and met three new code enforcement officers.

Roosevelt Center

City Manager Michael McLaughlin submitted a staff report containing five suggested action steps to discourage the problems recently occurring at the center due to the gathering and loitering of youths and adults. The first suggested step, a public information campaign to include more of the public forums held by Police Chief James Craze, passed easily with minimal discussion.

The second action step, posting of a code of conduct in Roosevelt Center Mall, received lengthy consideration. City Attorney Robert Manzi said that he was working on an amendment to the city code which would contain the new language. Councilmember Alan Turnbull said he did not believe such a code "gets us any place much," explaining that "in the Youth Center, you have to play by the rules or you're out, but in public space, you can't simply eject people. The thing that backs up these [code of conduct rules] is the law," warning that "if you look the other way"... [and don't enforce the law]... you undermine the seriousness of the situation."

Craze pointed out that police now have juvenile citations to use with respect to enforcement in the Center. Mayor Judith Davis spoke in favor of additional enforcement. Councilmember Edward Putens speculated that perhaps the city needs "a separate force" under the police department with enforcement authority in Greenbelt's parks and the Youth Center.

Councilmember Rodney Roberts said he thought it was important to have a uniform set of rules which would be applicable in any city setting. Manzi said such rules will be part of the ordinance he is preparing. Manzi suggested that Roosevelt Center be closed at dusk to all except those having business there, but the idea was not followed up by council.

Greenbelt Homes, Inc. board member Sylvia Lewis joined Turnbull in cautioning that the council should not post anything that might not be enforced, and said it was imperative to look at the city's capability for enforcing a

Greenway Updates Council On Occupancy, Other Issues

by Marat Moore

Greenway Center is fully leased following the decision by a beauty supply store to occupy the former Rack Room Shoes space, according to Brian Miller, a representative of Combined Properties who serves as property manager for the shopping center. Miller met with City Council at a stakeholders' meeting on December 19.

City Council schedules stakeholders' meetings every 1 to 2 years with organizations and businesses that have a major presence or involvement with the City of Greenbelt. The meetings are structured as informal worksessions, and offer councilmembers a chance to discuss common interests or problems with the organization's management and to identify emerging issues. The council's last meeting with Greenway was held in March 2000.

"Greenway Center is a major player in Greenbelt," Mayor pro tem Rodney Roberts told Miller. Combined Properties manages Greenway properties for Aquiport Midatlantic Retail Inc., which has owned the property since 1996. Commenting on the center's occupancy, Miller said that Rack Room Shoes had moved to the former Crown Books space.

Councilmember Ed Putens asked about the status of the Royal Gourmet Restaurant. That property is not owned by Aquiport, Miller said, adding that he understood that the property was for sale.

Assistant to the City Manager David Moran said that the Prince

George's County economic development office would be contacting restaurants to determine if any are interested, and added that a chain restaurant with broader name recognition might attract more customers.

Trak Auto has announced the closing of some outlets, noted councilmember Tom White. He asked if the Greenway store would be affected. Miller replied that there was no plan to close the auto store in Greenway, and added that the parent company is in "a holding pattern" while dealing with bankruptcy and reorganization.

Putens then asked about the ownership of the driveway off Hanover Parkway located behind the Exxon, and about the possibility of allowing buses to enter Greenway Center to reduce the danger to people who stand along Greenbelt Road. On the first issue, Aquiport bought the driveway and resurfaced it, Miller said. Mayor Judith Davis expressed the council's appreciation for the repaving.

Bus Access

Regarding bus access, Davis said that council is working with state highway officials to move the bus stop slightly further east on Greenbelt Road, to reduce the hazard to pedestrians who shop at Greenway.

Allowing buses into Greenway's parking lot, Miller said, is a liability issue for the owner and would compromise the "integrity of the parking lot"

New Year's Festivities Are Fast Approaching

by Patti Brothers

There are only a few days left to solidify last-minute New Year's Eve plans. Those who haven't already made plans for the evening are invited to join their friends and neighbors at Greenbelt New Year 2002. The evening will start out with a wintertime display of fireworks at 6:45 p.m. on Braden Field.

Community Center

The evening's activities will then move indoors at five different locations. The Community Center will host the steeldrum band of Trinidad and Tobago. People are urged to wear island apparel. Kaydee Puppets will delight the audience with "let your imagination take you away" puppet shows and Magic Mike will perform for both children and adults with his mystical magic and balloon sculpting skills. The children's craft room, run by resident artists, will be open once again for a night full of creativity. For those who feel like dancing, the St. Columba's Scottish Dancers will have everyone up on their feet dancing; lessons will be provided. The duo Hill & Dietz will provide the partygoers with a full night of music from their acoustic guitars, as will the barbershop quintet, High Five. The Goddard Storytellers will tell stories for both kids and adults. Get your "once in a lifetime" hairstyle, both artful and fun, in the Wacky Hair Salon. DC Motors will begin the final celebration and ring in the New Year in fine style with energetic, non-stop sounds that span the last four decades.

Youth Center

The Youth Center will have lots of "get involved" activities for everyone: sumo wrestling, and an obstacle course, both provided by Talk of the Town -- and a karaoke DJ provided by Sight

Dumpster Dispute Leads To Lights-Out, Rumors

by Marat Moore

On Wednesday, December 19, Greenbelters in the vicinity of the Co-op were startled when a large display of Christmas decorations and lights at the Step Club at 155 Centerway went dark.

Tensions rose as rumors began to circulate that a neighboring business owner had obtained a court order and called the police to remove the lights.

Like most rumors, however, this one proved untrue. The real issue, according to the people involved, was not the bright holiday display in front of the building, but the homely dumpster that sat nearby.

"From what we understand, the dumpster rented by the Step Club for our use began migrating around the corner, closer to the barber shop," said Dave D., the Step Club's treasurer and a former board member. (The last names of Step Club members are kept confidential at their request.) The problem began in early December. The barber shop owner, Anwar Saleh, "rightfully had a problem with that, and we didn't communicate well enough about how to resolve it," he added.

Not Clear

It is still not clear what prompted removal of the holiday decorations. Saleh said he did not request they be taken down. According to Jerry H., a Step Club member, the lights were taken down on December 19 at the suggestion of a club board member.

The dismantling of the holiday display provoked emotional responses by some people gathered near the club. In the barber shop, Saleh said he felt threatened that day and made a series of calls to Greenbelt police, who responded and also sent code enforcement officers. Although on the scene when the display was taken down, the city police had no involvement in the action.

Jerry H. made arrangements to move the dumpster, which was heavy with Christmas decorations, on the following day. "It was full, and physically we couldn't move it until then," he said.

Dave D., the Step Club's treasurer and former board member, said that the organization's board of directors hasn't had a chance to formally meet about this situation. "It happened very fast, and we were dealing with a lot of hearsay.

"We want it to all settle down so we can be good neighbors," as well as possibly endangering customers walking to their cars.

White recalled past discussions concerning the weight of buses, noting that the Greenway parking lot was not constructed to handle heavy Metro buses.

Davis asked Miller if Aquiport would consider allowing "The Bus"—the local service using a vehicle not much larger than a van—to enter the Greenway lot. "We'll ask about it," Miller said, but added that he thought the problem "is the whole idea of it, not the size of the bus."

When invited to share concerns of Greenway tenants, Miller mentioned improved signage, the need to thin out vegetation near I-295, and a continuing desire to have the maximum number of parking spaces.

Signage

Referring to the wish for more signage, Davis said, "I'm sorry to hear that. We have pointed to Greenway Center as an example of what can be done" without massive signage.

"I know tenants think signs lure people, but it's more the quality of the stores," she said.

Davis suggested that the monument sign be modified to change its lighting or width, but that the city preferred to maintain the sign's current height.

Overgrown vegetation on the area near the I-295 ramp restricts visibility to the center and needs to be trimmed or thinned, Miller said. He asked who owned the property. Davis referred him to the city's Planning and Community Development Office.

Councilmembers raised several issues, including security, maintenance, and the possibility of meeting with a larger group of Greenway stakeholders. Regarding security, Combined Properties has employed off-duty Greenbelt police officers for five years or more, which has worked "very well," Miller said. They patrol common areas and talk with tenants.

"Installing security cameras would be a liability and cost issue. To do it right, the cost is prohibitive," he said, adding that no major incidents have been reported recently. He told the council that tenants also had security concerns when closing, and that he had encouraged them to "buddy up" when going to their cars.

Regarding the larger meeting with Greenway stakeholders, councilmember Putens said, "We'd like to hear what their concerns are. We've never had a meeting like that." A merchants' meeting with police and code enforcement officers was suggested.

Maintenance

Davis asked for an update on maintenance issues. Miller said a new contractor had been hired to cut the grass, and more upgrades were being discussed. The city maintains a list of plants that grow well in this area, Davis replied, and suggested Miller contact city horticulturist Bill Phelan.

The two banks and three restaurants—Wendy's, Denny's and Royal Gourmet—are not managed by Combined Properties, Miller said, so landscaping is handled separately.

Davis asked about trash behind Safeway, which she described as a "continuing problem."

Putens recounted an incident in which a dark trash bag flew up from that area and got stuck on the windshield wiper of the car in front of him. "He couldn't see a thing, and had to get out of the car and pull it out!"

Miller replied that the center's cleaning maintenance program has been increased, and noted that each tenant contracts for trash pickup.

"Whether it's litter, trash or overflowing dumpsters, we've been aggressive this year," he said.

Davis pointed out that Safeway shopping carts - which cost several hundred dollars apiece - have been discarded in the parking lot of the office building across from the center, and at Greenbriar. Miller offered contact information for the affected stores.

Everyone shared concern about the congestion in the parking lot, and they explored the idea of changing the traffic pattern. Davis suggested that Miller meet with Celia Craze of the Planning and Community Development Office.

During the latter part of the evening, the Old Greenbelt Theatre will be the setting for GAVA/GATE animated short films, Family Fare starting at 10 p.m., and "Blood and Guts," starting at 11 p.m. Barbara Simon and George Taylor will be putting on this production.

ERHS Begins Concert Season

by Judy Bell

With the Color Guard on stage performing with flags, the Eleanor Roosevelt marching band, with Paul Dembowski directing, was heard from the balcony, ushering in the school's fall concert on November 8 and treating the audience to a rousing rendition of "ET Fanfare" and "Robinhood." Newcomer Lisa Sharer followed, conducting the concert orchestra - performing an unusual piece called "African Accents" - as well as the chamber orchestra. The concert chorale, under the direction of Dr. Barbara Baker, sang several numbers, and collaborated with the chamber choir on a lovely arrangement of "America the Beautiful."

Concert Bands I and II also performed, as well as another vocal group, the Chamber Choir. Sally Wagner's wind ensemble ended the evening, receiving a standing ovation for "Ascension" (from Divine Comedy), a wonderful rendition using many unusual percussion instruments. Overheard from an audience member was a comment on how refreshing it was to see so many young people participating in a positive and uplifting activity.

St. Hugh's Honors Police At Mass of Thanksgiving

by Leslie Hilliard

Father Thomas Crowley celebrated a Mass of Thanksgiving at St. Hugh's Church on Sunday, December 16, honoring the Greenbelt Police Department for its actions on November 19. On that day a fleeing armed suspect, being pursued by the police, drove a stolen vehicle through the school property onto Braden Field where St. Hugh's school fifth graders were doing soccer drills in their gym class. Terrified children ran to avoid the fleeing suspect. Janice Bistany, a parent who was a substitute gym teacher that day, herded the children onto the bleachers to avoid the melee. The Greenbelt Police quickly resorted to containment methods to stop the vehicle and apprehended the suspect.

Along with the congregation attending the Mass were Mayor Judith Davis, Chief James Craze and his wife Celia, Patrick Ceresa (communications), Officer Gordon Rose, PFC Eddie Holland, MPO Robert Lauer, MPO Seung Lee, MPO John Barrett, Corporal Dave Buerger, MPO Chris Field, Sgt. Danny Allwang and Lt. Thomas Kemp with his family. A reception followed the service.

"We don't thank people enough," said Father Crowley during his sermon, "especially those who risk their lives every day to protect the safety of others. Aside from these officers here," he continued, "let us not forget our parishioners who are members of Federal Protective Services, Intelligence Agencies, police officers from the District and other counties and jurisdictions and the firefighters, who also risk their lives for others. Thank you."

To each of the police officers Father Crowley presented a Medal of St. Michael, the patron saint of police. "May he keep you safe and out of harm's way," Father Crowley said. In addition, Eric Johnson, one of the fifth grade children on the field that day, presented Chief Craze with personal notes of thanks that the children had written to the officers.

"The children's notes were very touching," said Craze. "I have them displayed in our mail area so all the officers can read them." In speaking of the Mass of Thanksgiving he continued, "You know, in all my years as a police officer that was the nicest thing that anyone has ever done for me. We are all truly touched."

Local Choirs Hold Concert

by Mary Moien

Greenbelt's traditional Community Christmas Choir Concert was held on December 9, but with a significant difference this year. The Community Church was aglow with candles and the singers were dressed in their choir robes as in years past. However, for the first time in many years, the individual choirs sang their own selections instead of forming one Combined Choir. Jean Cook had led the seasonally-formed Combined Choir for many years prior to her retirement after last year's concert. Rick Ransom coordinated this year's effort.

Choirs from three Greenbelt Churches participated - Mowatt Methodist Church Choir, directed by Louise Craig; Greenbelt Baptist Church Choir, directed by Janice Wood; and Greenbelt Community Church Choir directed by Wei-Der Huang. Jean Cook sang two songs as a soloist. In addition, a small group of young people, "One Voice," from the Washington Bible College Choir in Lanham participated, also directed by Janice Wood. The choirs melded into the last arrangement of the Baptist Church presentation and then stayed on to sing on their own. All choirs and the congregation joined together for several well-known hymns as the choirs processed into the church as well as during the concert.

he said. "We don't want any adverse effects on Anwar's business."

Saleh concurred, saying, "I don't want any problems with the Step Club. Many of them are my friends." He added that one of the club members brought him flowers as a gesture of support.

Both sides agree they're ready to put the incident behind them.

new ordinance. Davis noted her belief that young people should be invited to read and comment on the proposed new rules.

"I think potentially you can do more harm than good with this," Turnbull stated, urging that the council see a draft of the program, "and really work it through." He said the code of conduct should appear to be a "list of reminders" because there is a risk of drawing unwanted attention to bad behavior by putting up a severely-worded, vandal-proof sign. He suggested rather, something on the order of "Welcome to our park—all the laws of the land will be enforced here." Davis asked if Manzi could phrase some of the new rules in a "positive way." Turnbull thought the Community Relations Advisory Board and the Advisory Planning Board should look at the proposed rules to make them "as harmless as possible." On this proposed action step, providing council with a code of conduct, the vote was 4 to 1, Turnbull voting against.

Code Enforcement

The third suggested action step, to supplement increased police presence with code enforcement presence, passed unanimously and with little discussion. Asked about covert surveillance, Craze said it is being performed.

New Lights

The fourth action proposal was adding lights and increased light wattage in Roosevelt Center. The council voted only to add two lights near the underpass, deciding to revisit at a later time suggestions for increasing wattage and adding more lights near tables and chairs in the center.

Merchants

Gwen Vaccaro of Pleasant Touch spoke of the need of her business for immediate increased wattage for its light(s). She also told the council that Roosevelt Center merchants do not want to depend only on what the city can do, and so are forming a committee to look into a merchants' crime watch.

Moving Benches

Council also passed suggested action number five, which involves moving the two facing benches now on the path between Centerway and the underpass. The benches will be moved about 10 or 15 feet away to either side of the half-circle plaza on the underpass side of Centerway. This will move groups that use the benches away from the path, and will also prevent the path from being blocked, according to the city manager's report.

Councilmember Thomas White said he favored removing the benches entirely, but Davis said she was reluctant to remove any benches from Roosevelt Center. Davis asked Craze about the clarity of surveillance camera pictures, and Craze replied that the picture is not entirely clear because of the cable.

David Lange said he wanted to make sure the council is aware of vandalism elsewhere in the community. There has been repeated vandalism at Greenbelt Elementary School. He cited the tearing apart of benches and a bike rack, and the breaking of a glass door. Such actions affect the sense of safety for both staff and students, he said, adding, "Teachers have enough challenges. . . they should not have to deal with vandalism or fear of possible assault."

As to Roosevelt Center concerns, Lange said recent problems at the center "strike at the very heart of the community," because "Greenbelt is an unusual suburb with its opportunities and design for purposeful walking, but people do not walk if they are afraid." He noted that Greenbelt has a tradition of citizens taking action to improve the community, "but if individuals are assaulted for doing so, this will stifle their initiative." Lange also noted that businesses in Roosevelt Center depend on a limited number of customers, and that if customers are worried about their safety, they will go elsewhere to shop.

Donna Beck, chair of the CB 40 Committee, was introduced by Sylvia Lewis. Beck described how activists have gotten together to prepare a petition that is circulating in the county which calls for a referendum on CB 40. She described how the bill proposes a way for developers to "pay their way out of a wait" in the proposed new "Pay and Go" legislation which will seriously impact Prince George's County schools and on which there has been no opportunity for public comment and discourse. Under CB 40, called "a sledgehammer" by Turnbull, developers would be allowed to pay in order to build even where school overcrowding exists. Beck said 59 of 129 elementary schools in Prince George's County are now exempt from development "waits." Her group has the support of the PTAs and civic associations and several environmental groups including the Sierra Club, she noted. City Council members seemed supportive of the effort.

Linda Owens spoke on legal issues connected with CB 40. She stressed that the citizen group needs a large number of petition signatures by January 25, and that by 90 days, it must have 10,000 signatures and may need to get even more because of the possibility of challenges. It also is raising funds for the effort.

Dog Park

In other council action, expansion of the dog park and new fencing by Long Fence Company were approved. Priority will be given to installation of lighting, to be followed by water. Speaking for the Dog Park Association, Marjorie Whitaker told the council that the association has raised $1,300 to donate to the city in appreciation for its efforts.

Presentations

Among presentations made by the council was recognition for Salva Holloman, manager of Green Ridge House, for receiving an award of excellence for the facility from Prince George's County.

Two new Parking Enforcement Officers, Rudy Watkins and John Wojcik, and Animal Control Officer Susie Hall, new members of the city's Community Development staff, were introduced and received badges and words of welcome from council. Watkins is a retired Army sergeant who will be working evenings and weekends, and Wojcik is a retired police officer with 16 years of service who will be working full-time.

School Raises Money for Charities

by Leslie Hilliard

"Spirit Week" at some schools is celebrated with pom-pom girls and pep rallies. At St. Hugh's School, "Spirit Week" is celebrated wearing pajamas and crazy hair.

The Student Government Association at St. Hugh's School sponsored "Spirit Week" as a fundraiser for the charities of their choice. Monday was Pajama Day and students from kindergarten through eighth grade answered the morning bell in their favorite pajamas; $45 was donated to the Prince George's Humane Society.

Tuesday was Mix and Match Day, with $72 raised for the Feed the Children Organization. For fifty cents, students adopted the "I can dress myself!" look of two-year olds with mismatched socks and shoes, jeans worn backwards, shirts and sweat pants inside out. Students dressed as their favorite person or cartoon character on Wednesday and bought 270 cans of food to help stock the church's food pantry. Thursday was twins day, with some of the faculty dressing alike, which raised $57 for Catholic Charities.

But Friday was the wildest—Crazy Hair Day, with skinheads, Mohawk cuts, and multicolor hair. One student had an American flag cut into his hair in red, white and blue, while another sported the "electrocuted look," with multicolored braids stiffened with wire. Crazy Hair Day raised $99 for the Maryland Tornado Relief Fund.

In response to the President's request for compassion for the children of Afghanistan, the eighth grade sponsored a Red, White and Blue Day. For $1, students dressed in support and raised $282.

ERHS Students Make, Send 500+ Bears to Families

Students and faculty at Eleanor Roosevelt High School (ERHS) handmade more than 500 bears to send to families in Washington and New York affected by the September 11 tragedies.

The bears were the focus of a holiday disaster relief project started by ERHS teacher Jane Wright and students in her fashion design course. It quickly became a school-wide effort. Students and faculty worked together after school to construct the bears, each with a unique personality and message.

Bears are being distributed in the two cities through the assistance of local councils of the AFL-CIO.
