Our "Socialistic" Town Is Now Praised in Print

by Virginia Beauchamp

What a difference half a century makes! Fifty years ago — that's the McCarthy era — Greenbelt was described as "communitistic" by some, or at least "socialistic" by the major papers of Baltimore and Washington. It was ridiculed by the county commissioners (predecessors of the present-day county council) for its citizens' opposition to growth and development and their whimsical insistence on preservation of green space. In other words, Greenbelt suffered from a really bad press.

How things have turned around! This month's issue of "Mother Jones" magazine has surprised local subscribers with a positive take on our town in an article by Sue Halpern entitled "New Deal City." Describing Greenbelt as "a community of doers," Halpern's article focuses on Rexford Guy Tugwell's belief in cooperatives and how that emphasis by this New Deal thinker and the institutions it engendered has resulted in the town's development of a "participatory ethos."

Halpern describes the New Deal Café as a new institution, among many others before it, that was based on this model. She quotes Wendy Turnbull on GHI: "... here was this huge housing co-op and the members had governed themselves for decades, with vociferous debates about policies and programs." Turnbull describes how she and her husband, Alan, a Greenbelt city councilmember, were "attracted by the underlying democratic nature of the co-op."

Cathy Knepper, who does not live here but who studied the city for her recent book, "Greenbelt, Maryland: A Living Legacy of the New Deal," is quoted in the article: "When they see a problem or want to start something new, they call a meeting and they organize." Knepper also looks at Greenbelt in this new light.

This positive view of the city is reinforced elsewhere at the present time. Greenbelt's earlier resistance to shoddy developments — hot dog stands and used car lots among them — has paid off in prestige within the wider region because of such upscale developments as the Maryland Trade Center in Greenbelt East, Capital Office Park next to the Beltway, and the Greenbelt Marriott Hotel.

An Inside View

Not as recent is another article touting the pleasures of living in Greenbelt. This one appeared in "Central PA," the monthly magazine published in Harrisburg, of the public television station WITF. Appearing in the issue of June 1999, it was written by Peter Durantine, who grew up here. (The article was recently brought to our attention by Durantine's former neighbor Jordan Choper.)

Durantine contrasts Greenbelt and earlier American cities with

Proposed Changes Go Unnoticed

by James Giese

The second public hearing on the proposed budget for the fiscal year ending June 30, 2003 proved to be, for the most part, a non-hearing. Held as part of the May 26 regular meeting of the city council, the hearing was for the Greenbelt City Council to hear citizen's views on changes to the budget agreed to by a majority of the councilmembers at final budget worksessions held on May 20 and May 22. It was also for the purpose of hearing citizen comments on levying a property tax rate that would be greater than the tax rate needed to yield the same amount of tax revenues as for the previous year under the Constant Yield Tax Rate formula. Although City Manager Michael McLaughlin had not proposed an increase in property tax rates, the changes made by the council will require a 0.4 cent increase per $100 of assessed value of real property.

After Mayor Judith Davis reviewed the list of changes proposed by the council [see box], she asked if anyone from the public wished to speak. Anne Zevallos was the only person who was recognized and her remarks were only that she had nothing to say as she did not object to the tax rate increase proposed. As it now stands, the council majority (with individual councilmember support varying from issue to issue) agreed to changes with a net increase of $47,200 in a general fund budget to total $16,612,700.

Greenbelt's Neighbor Is America's Proud Symbol

by Barbara Hopkins

It was a beautiful day last Wednesday, May 22, with clear skies and pleasant temperatures when about 20 fortunate nature buffs in Greenbelt and nearby communities braved briars, poison ivy, ticks, chiggers and mosquitoes to tramp through thick woods on the grounds of the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center to get a chance-of-a-lifetime, up-close look at a baby American bald eagle.

On this day, Woody Martin, biologist at the Patuxent Research Refuge, was scheduled to climb 81 feet up a willow oak where a pair of America's avian symbols had nested and were raising young for the second year in a row. Using a type of piton on his shoes and with leverage from a rope around the tree attached securely to a belt around his waist, Martin scaled the tree with apparent ease, a task he has performed for about 40 years. Every so many feet, he would adjust the rope higher and then walk up the tree to the rope's new level. Once he reached the nest, Martin would band both eaglets.

Banding the birds may help Fish and Wildlife Service track their progress. Reports of banded birds can be made to the Fish and Wildlife Banding Office at 1-800-327-2263. The band number and the bird's location should be noted.

Doug Bolt, an amateur birder who helped organize the observation, explained that sometimes only the stronger of two eaglets in a nest are raised to fledge. The weaker one would most likely be extruded from the nest,

Benefit Ball Will Feature USO-Style Entertainment

by Mary Moien

The USO Benefit Ball to be held at the Greenbelt Marriott on Friday, June 14 — Flag Day — will be a full evening of dinner, dancing and fun. Sponsored by the City of Greenbelt and Greenbelt American Legion Post #136, guests at the ball will dance to the sounds of the Starlight Octet. Dancers, singers, skits and a silent auction will also be part of the evening.

Carl Dentinger, past commander of the Greenbelt American Legion and chair of the ball, emphasized that the event is for all adults, young and not so young. Although the USO is familiar to those of the World War II, Korea and Vietnam eras, "a whole generation is not that familiar with the USO," he said. Tickets can still be obtained by contacting Jackie Shabe-Rochefort by phone at 301-345-4967 or e-mail at jackieUSN@hotmail.com.

Entertainment

Maria Rose is the featured singer. She has recorded five solo albums and has traveled internationally for the USO/Department of Defense. In late September, 2001 Maria Rose wrote, "(We Need to Be) The RE-United States," a powerful statement in tribute to the heroes of this country. She also usually performs World War II favorites such as "The Boogie Woogie Bugle Boy of Company B," as well as a medley of service hymns and songs.

Dancers from the Avalon Studio, under the direction of Leslie Coombs, will also contribute to the entertainment. Amateur skits are planned, sure to include many city residents and Legion members. A silent auction will be held and includes a rare and collectible Bob Hope USO doll.

The grand finale will be performed by Wayne Miller, a wounded Marine Corps Vietnam veteran, who renders a moving patriotic song, "Stand Up for America."

Nearby Hiker-Biker Trail Receives More Funds

Further construction of an off-road pedestrian and bicycle facility in the former trolley right-of-way between Greenbelt Road and Berwyn House Road is assured by just-approved state open space funds in the amount of $198,267.

The hiker-biker trail consists of a nine-foot wide paved asphalt trail with one foot gravel shoulders, landscaping, and amenities including two small plazas, benches, trash receptacles, banner poles at key trail locations, bicycle racks, and a community bulletin board located at the Berwyn Road Plaza. A 21-space parking lot is adjacent to the trail next to the plaza and commercial area.

This segment of the trail is the second phase of a multi-phased trail project and construction will begin this fall. The City of College Park and the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission have entered into a Memorandum of Understanding for the construction and maintenance of a 10-foot wide hiker-biker trail and two bridges between Pierce Avenue and Paint Branch Parkway.

This system provides connections to numerous recreational facilities, residential and commercial areas, two Metro stations (College Park Metro and Greenbelt Metro), local schools, and the University of Maryland. The trail will provide an alternative to the heavily congested U.S. Rt. 1 corridor. The trail will serve a diverse group of people including residents using the trail for commuting and recreation, recreational users of the area-wide trail system, students and employees attending/working at the University of Maryland, and riders of MARC and Metro.

The trail is expected to have a positive economic impact on the Berwyn commercial area by improving access for customers and providing an alternative to driving in the area.

Letters to the Editor

Wandering . . . And Reminiscing

I read with great interest the News Review article about "Growing up in Greenbelt" by Ray Bochert, Jr. on March 8, 2001. I have saved it because I was there during that period. Our family moved to Greenbelt in 1938. Ray was one year ahead of me in Greenbelt High School and his younger brother, Wayne, was in my high school class.

Ray always had a smile on his face. I used to think that he was plotting something. I had no idea he could write so well! Wayne was very small. Ray was about five feet four with a big crop of curly blond hair. There were two other short boys in town also.

When the time came for the "Class Picture," Gladstone Lewis and I were always seated in the middle with the short girls. We thought of ourselves as the town midgets. Years later, I walked out of the McCarl Dental office on Ridge Road in my white operating gown to confront Gladstone Lewis, who had walked out of his dad's house toward our office dressed as an Air Force captain. We both gaped at each other! We had both grown twelve inches in one year! I said, "Gladstone, I have heard an incredible story about your Air Force career. It seems that you were landing your fighter plane and the wheels collapsed! The plane skidded along the runway for miles on its belly, leaving a trail of smoke, while you prepared for an explosion that did not occur. You got out of the cockpit, ran out on the plane's wing and ripped off your wings and threw them, shouting, "I quit!"

Gladstone laughed and said, "That is exactly what happened." He soon went into scientific study. In 1956 I went into dental practice in Greenbelt with my dad, Dr. James W. McCarl and my brother, Dr. James T. McCarl.

After a short time, my dad died and, later, my brother Jim died, too. I began to wonder if I would soon die due to unknown circumstances. Well, I am seventy-two years old and ugly, but I am physically very healthy. I had a tussle with a pickpocket a short time ago, and I won. There was a small article about it in this paper.

Since I retired from the practice, I spend my time wandering around with my wife, Jane, who keeps me from "wandering off!" Our two sons, Clayton, Jr. and Jay, came into the practice in 1984 and were shortly joined by their cousin, David McCarl. Our daughter, Sally, has worked in the office as a dental hygienist since 1982. The McCarl Dental Office keeps getting bigger and better. Besides my family, Greenbelt and dentistry are my other two loves, and my most precious memories.

Feeling [sic] Re: Correction

I must apologize for making an error in my review entitled, "A different perspective on Romeo and Juliet" that was printed in the May 23, 2002 edition of the Greenbelt News Review.

I incorrectly quoted a line of text by William Shakespeare in my article as "All the world's indeed a stage and we are merely players" and a [sic] notation was placed after the faulty quotation to indicate the error.

When I was a teenager growing up in Greenbelt, I attended Eleanor Roosevelt High School and did what many of my peers were doing back then: I listened to a lot of rock and roll music. One of those rock and roll bands is the Canadian rock trio Rush.

The Shakespeare quote that garnered the [sic] notation is actually a portion of the lyrics to a Rush song, which I recalled in my haste to complete the review before deadline. The [sic] quote is an exact match to lines from a song entitled "Limelight" (4:19), the fourth track on the Moving Pictures album released by the Canadian rock trio Rush in 1981. I could tell you that I graduated from Eleanor Roosevelt that same year, but then you would be able to do the math and figure out that I'm too old to admit that I still enjoy listening to music by Rush.

As I indicated in my article on May 23, I have a solid appreciation for the works of the Bard — but I do not claim to have perfectly memorized every line of text that William Shakespeare ever wrote. However, since my first degree is in journalism from Cabrillo College in Aptos, California, I feel I owe it to the editorial staff of the Greenbelt News Review to correct the [sic] lest the next generation of journalists decides to write a review without doing the proper research.

The correct quote of text for William Shakespeare comes from the play "As You Like It," Act II, scene VII and is spoken by the character Jaques: "All the world's a stage, And all the men and women merely players."

I applaud the editors of the Greenbelt News Review for finding the erroneous quote and placing the [sic] in my article, thereby making me take the time to pull my Pelican tome of Shakespeare works off the bookshelf when I returned home, to review the exact nature of my [sic] error.

I guess you could say that when I was writing my review, I was in a bit of a Rush.

Reviewer Thanked For Having Guts

I am the founder and president of the Rude Mechanicals theater group. I have just read Sabine Hentrich's review of our production of Romeo and Juliet ("Romeo and Juliet" Bombs in Production as Farce," May 16), and Trevor Siegel's response to that review (May 23). I wanted to thank Hentrich for having the guts to call them as she sees them. Her review was strikingly accurate: Jay, Elise and Rachel deserved the praise she gave them, and her less-flattering comments about distracting elements and vulgarity were also accurate, I'm afraid. My only dispute: I felt she was a bit hard on Kelley (Capulet).

As I understood it, Hentrich was offended, not by the crosscasting of women into male roles, but by the vulgarity of portions of the show, and by the way subplots and gimmicks distracted the audience from the main story. Her view has been supported, not only by audience members, but also members of the cast and the theater group. One cast member who supported Hentrich's view noted that Siegel, in attempting to praise "Romeo," was reduced to applauding the actors for knowing their lines, not dropping their props, good skateboarding, etc; the actor felt that such faint "praise" was actually more embarrassing than the beating which "Romeo" deservedly took from Hentrich.

How do we know that Shakespeare would have been offended by "Romeo?" We have his own words, in Hamlet's advice to the actors, wherein he warns the players not to let the clowns speak more than is set down for them, because excessive clowning can distract the audience from the main story. Shakespeare, like all actors, took a dim view of actors in secondary roles who hog the spotlight and distort the story pointlessly. This sentiment was seconded by a very accomplished opera singer who attended "Romeo": the singer, who can tell good drama from bad, had quite decisive comments about such attention-hogs (and about untidy directing) after seeing "Romeo."

My wife and I, who founded the Rude Mechanicals and managed it for three years, are moving to England in June. That issue, coupled with an exodus of group members in the last several months, has left the group with a leadership void which has proved impossible to fill, as "Romeo" showed. Accordingly we are shutting down the group forever. In the meantime I wanted to go to bat for Hentrich, because honesty and guts need to be encouraged.

With Appreciation

We would like to express our sincere gratitude to all our friends and neighbors for the prayers, condolences and support we received following Andy's passing in March. We would also like to thank St. Hugh's Church and the Greenbelt American Legion. Your support during that difficult time was, and still is much appreciated.

"I heard they found some bald eagles!"

HAPPY BIRTHDAY GREENBELT!

Corrections

The story, the Tax Rate May Increase but Council Undecided, on the front page of the May 23 issue had a misstatement and some garbled text.

The Law Enforcement Officer Pension System (LEOPS) proposed by the Greenbelt Fraternal Order of Police, while providing better retirement benefits than the current police pension plan, is still a 25-year plan, not a 20-year plan as stated.

The parenthetical statement beginning at the bottom of page one should have read: (McLaughlin had proposed using $45,500 of the city's anticipated surplus to balance the budget that he had submitted.)

The first sentence under the subhead, Stalemate, on page six should have read: With the new much higher assessed valuations for property now being used for the first time this fiscal year by the state, the city's tax rate for real property is 62.8 cents per $100 assessed value.

Bird Walks Offered At Indian Creek

Join Jack Saba of the Prince George's Audubon Society and the Patuxent Bird Club chapter of the Maryland Ornithological Society for three hours of birding on Sunday, June 2. The bird walk is co-sponsored by Citizens to Conserve and Restore Indian Creek and will be held at the Indian Creek-Braided Stream area of the Hollywood Swamp. Maryland has recently purchased 75 acres in the area to be saved, but intense development is under consideration at neighboring sites, which may leave this 75 acres so isolated as to be totally dysfunctional as an ecosystem. This walk and others will expand the biological inventory of the site.

Saba visited the area in March and spotted 35 different species of birds. Overall, he has counted over 100 species in his bird studies of the site.

The walk will take place from 7:30 to 10:30 a.m. High boots are recommended for stream crossings and wetland access. Meet in the southeast corner of the Greenbelt Metro parking lot.

Ruth Evans Dungan

Ruth Evans Dungan, 89, a long time Greenbelt resident, died of pneumonia April 17 at Sibley Memorial Hospital in Washington, D.C. After leaving Greenbelt in 1998, she lived in Heartlands at Ellicott City and was a resident of Ingleside Presbyterian retirement community in Washington, D.C. at the time of her death.

Mrs. Dungan was born in Kingston, Pa. to Milton R. and Edith Evans. She graduated from Syracuse University with a B.A. in interior design in 1934 and earned a master's degree in library science from Rutgers University in 1962. She worked in interior design in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Washington, D.C. and New York City during the late thirties and early forties.

In 1940, she married Allen Gould Dungan of Forty Fort, Pa. and New York City. He died in 1943.

After returning to Pennsylvania in 1945, Mrs. Dungan worked at the Hoyt Public Library in Kingston and the Wilkes-Barre Osterhout Free Library in the children's department. In 1962, she accepted a position as elementary school librarian in the Montgomery County Public Schools where she worked until her retirement in 1979.

Mrs. Dungan was active in the Riverdale Presbyterian Church, the A.A.U.W., the Metropolitan Washington Glass Club, the Prince George's County Genealogical Society, the Greenbelt Golden Age Club, the Quota Club and the Gray Panthers. She enjoyed painting and travel and made several trips to Europe and the Far East. Survivors include her daughter, Allenna Dungan Leonard of Toronto; sister, Dar Evans Heil of Studio City, Ca.; grandchildren, Tandra, Ariel and Corwin Leonard; and, great-grandchildren, Haley and Carson Leonard.

George E. Beauchamp, Jr.

Former Greenbelt resident George E. Beauchamp, Jr. died of complications following heart bypass surgery on Tuesday, May 21, 2002, in Kissimmee, Fla. For most of his career he worked for the Agency for International Development, serving in Lagos, Nigeria, from 1963 to 1965 and the following two years in Vietnam, where he was responsible for war refugees. He retired in 1983.

Mr. Beauchamp was also a member of the U.S. Army Reserve, from which he retired in 1991 at the rank of colonel. Earlier, during the Korean War, he served in the Air Force. As a refugee specialist, he wrote the Army's field manual on coordinating refugee relief efforts and taught at the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth for the Army's Civil Affairs Branch.

After his service in Vietnam, he helped to organize AID's Office of Foreign Disaster Assistance. It was his idea to establish regional locations, in Singapore, Naples, Panama, and Guam, to expedite the movement of needed relief supplies in times of disaster.

He also persuaded Sears to insert screened vents near the peak of their tents so that hot air inside could be dispersed—a necessary feature for their use as disaster shelters in desert climates. Such vents were later adopted in tents for the retail trade. He and his family tried out the prototype version in Greenbelt Park.

Mr. Beauchamp's work took him all over the world in times of natural or manmade disasters, such as earthquakes in Nicaragua and Peru, volcanic eruptions in Iceland, or the breakout of war in Angola and Cyprus. He was a graduate of Shimer College in Illinois and completed two years of graduate work in the social sciences at the University of Chicago. Prior to his service with AID he worked for a Chicago congressman on Capitol Hill.

In Greenbelt, where he moved with his family in 1957, he served on an advisory committee to the city which recommended the purchase of the Lutheran church property on Ridge Rd., the present site of Green Ridge House. He also served a term as president of the Lakeside Citizens Association.

His marriage to Virginia W. Beauchamp of Greenbelt ended in divorce. He is survived by three children from that marriage, Edith J. Beauchamp of Miami; George Ward Beauchamp of Port Orange, Fla.; and John W. Beauchamp of Greenbelt, as well as a daughter from his second marriage, Army Major Kim-Ngan Goodwin of Arlington, and five grandchildren.

A funeral service was held in Kissimmee on May 25. Interment will take place at Arlington National Cemetery after a ceremony at 9 a.m. on June 25.

EAGLES

either by its sibling or by one of the parents, if there were not abundant food for fostering the growth of both. But Martin said that both eaglets in this nest are close in size and he thinks have an equal chance to survive to adulthood. The young will remain with the parents all summer learning from the adults how and what to hunt.

Martin remained in the tree to work on the second bird while he lowered the first banded eaglet to the ground in a gunny sack tied to a rope. Volunteers Jean Sparks and Gwen Robinette took turns holding the young bird while those assembled snapped pictures, or just took in the awesome sight of such a large bird (wingspan close to six feet) at close range. Estimates are that the birds were hatched around the first of April.

Meanwhile, overhead the parent eagles circled the nest, giving frequent high-pitched cries. Their young would be safely returned to the nest unharmed, but, for a while, to the anxious adult eagles it may not have seemed like such a beautiful day.

Our sympathy to John Beauchamp and family on the death of his father, George Beauchamp, in Florida.

Greenbelters were saddened to hear of the deaths of longtime Greenbelters Mary Spong Ward and Ruth Dungan.

News of service people includes the participation of Marine Corps Staff Sgt. Patrick Reddick in Exercise Sea Soldier '02. He is the son of Judi and Arthur Reddick of Spring Manor Drive. Reddick's unit is an expeditionary intervention force with the ability to rapidly organize for combat operations in virtually any environment.

The exercise was performed more than two weeks after Reddick's unit successfully completed offensive raids against Taliban and al Qaeda forces during Operation Enduring Freedom in Afghanistan.

Air Force Airman William L. Bowden, son of Shawn Bowden of Mandan Road, is a recent graduate of basic training at Lackland Air Force Base, San Antonio. He is an honor graduate of the Community College of the Air Force.

Kudos to Irene Hensel, who received a certificate for Outstanding Community Service from the Natural Resources Scholastic Achievement Association. Daughter Mary Lehman also received a certificate at the Charles Carroll Middle School in New Carrollton.

Sue Reitzig of Boxwood Village is a new grandmother. Her son, Ken, and wife, Liz, of Bowie recently welcomed Alyssa Marie, 7 lbs. 9 oz.

what is called New Urbanism. "The subdivisions of suburbia are conceived as shopping centers for housing and only later — if at all — as communities." Durantine is quoting Andres Duany, a contemporary town planner. In his own words, Durantine describes Greenbelt in the eyes of New Deal planners as "an alternative to big cities; New Urbanism," he says, "is an alternative to big suburbs." Throughout his piece he touts the importance of being able, as he did here, to walk to schools, to stores, and to the theater.

Travelogue
On March 31 this year, a short article by Lynn L. Remly appeared in the travel section of "The Prince George's Journal" recommending a visit to the Greenbelt Museum and to the town. "Taking a walk around Greenbelt . . . is like strolling into the hope and enthusiasm of the post-World War II world." And, yes, again we walk.

That late-40s enthusiasm was short-lived, of course, if one recalls the impact on Greenbelt of the witch hunts soon erupting out of Washington. Remly notes that Congress voted in 1952 to sell off the three green belt towns. On the brighter side, she says that walking tours prepared by the museum will "give visitors a feel for how well planning and cooperation work in creating a community."

Deeper Inside

The reader really has to be in the know to understand that an article in the April 28, 2002 Washington Post Magazine is also describing Greenbelt — not the planning that created it, not the pleasures of walking through it, not its values of cooperation. The writer is one of our own — Dorothy Sucher, author of three books and long-time staff member of the News Review. When she describes her house, with the children now grown and moved on, you have to know that that house is in Greenbelt — although she and Joe no longer live there.

In this new millennium our city appears in a brighter light. Is it nostalgia? Or did something special develop here?
