Hoyer Visit Prompts Diversity Of Opinions on War and Bush

by Virginia Beauchamp

Congressman Steny Hoyer set the tone for Monday afternoon's public meeting on April 14 by reconfirming his "pleasure" during the 22-plus years he has served this city in the House of Representatives in that, however contentious might be the topics under discussion, the meetings themselves had always been conducted with "great civility."

For the most part that characterization remained true throughout the two hours that were to follow. Only occasionally did a few persons call out objections or loud endorsements of what others were saying. Only one person expressed his views with a loud voice and strong emotion; during the whole meeting the Congressman kept his cool.

The meeting itself, which developed from an invitation by the Greenbelt City Council, took place at 4 p.m. in the gymnasium of the Community Center, moved there from the originally scheduled venue in the council chamber of the Municipal Building. Before it was over, more than 100 constituents had gathered to exchange views with their long-time Congressional representative over the war in Iraq — far too many for the smaller room.

At the beginning aides to Congressman Hoyer set forth on a table printed copies of a speech Hoyer, who is House Democratic Whip, had delivered on March 12 at the Center for Strategic and International Studies. Titled "At Diplomacy's End: Only Action Will Secure Saddam Hussein's Disarmament," the speech set forth the general argument with which the Congressman also began the summary of his position in having voted for the U.S. military intervention.

"We had a moral responsibility," Hoyer said, "to stop human rights abuses." Referring to his earlier support for the too-long-delayed action in Kosovo on behalf of its Muslim population, he separated himself from endorsement of U.S. actions in Nicaragua and Guatemala during the Reagan administration. But he characterized the United States as in general using power "judiciously" and "nonacquisitively."

On the issue of Iraq, Hoyer said he took the position that the

2004 Budget

Public Safety Budget Review Reveals Expenditure Impact

by Diane Oberg

With a proposed budget of $7.2 million, public safety accounts for 40 percent of total city expenditures in City Manager Michael McLaughlin's proposed budget for Fiscal Year 2004. This represents an increase of 3.5% over the current budget. The Greenbelt City Council discussed the public safety budget at an April 7 worksession.

Police

The police budget accounts for 97.6 percent of the public safety budget with proposed expenditures of $7 million. Personnel expenses account for most of that at $5.5 million. New equipment accounts for $175,000 and other operating expenses total $1.36 million in the proposed budget.

Conversion costs to the new retirement plan for police officers, which are running 150% over state estimates provided prior to council's adopting the new plan also account for a significant increase in the non-departmental account. Since these costs will continue for 25 years, they will continue to put pressure on the city budget.

McLaughlin proposes eliminating the police cadet position and creating a new corporal's position to oversee the city's K-9 unit, which will increase by one dog-officer pair. The total number of sworn police officers would remain unchanged at 53. Springhill Lake has proposed a public-private partnership to fund an officer assigned to Springhill Lake. If an agreement is reached between the city and Springhill Lake, the total number of officers would increase by one. However, McLaughlin expects that all or most of the city's share, for the first three years, would be funded through grants.

McLaughlin and Police Chief James Craze propose to eliminate one of the city's red light cameras, located at Cherrywood Lane and Kenilworth Avenue. While the red light program as a whole covers its cost, with estimated fines of $600,000 exceeding expenses of $383,200, this camera does not catch many speeders. Only 221 citations were issued from this location, resulting in expenses exceeding fines by roughly $19,500 during calendar 2002.

At the April 7 worksession Councilmembers Rodney Roberts and Edward Putens argued that so long as the program as a whole pays for itself, the camera should be retained. Mayor Judith Davis asked them where they would find the $20,000 needed to retain this camera in a budget already calling for a hefty tax increase. Councilmember Thomas White agreed with the city manager's proposal.

The city had expected that tickets issued based on the cameras would decline during the course of the year as drivers became aware of the cameras and modified their behavior. At least during this first full year of operation, this has not been the case. Craze reported that tickets from the cameras have remained steady, prompting White to suggest that Greenbelt's "red light runners are not as bright" as those in other areas.

The budget also provides for seven new police cars. Craze pro-

Greenbelt East Residents Air Their Crime Concerns

by Anne Sucher

Do residents feel safe in Greenbelt East? About 12 people attended a meeting on March 19 in the Greenbriar Community Room to express their concerns to Greenbelt's Public Safety Advisory Committee on that topic. On hand were committee members Mary Crawford, Edward Hickey, Walter Moody, Silke Pope, Ted Shafer, James Thompson and Sherre Washington, as well as City Councilmember Ed Putens and staff liaison to the committee, Connie Harris. In addition, representatives from the fire department and the police department were present to answer questions. Committee leader Pope re-emphasized that the goal of this series of meetings was to hear what the concerns are directly from Greenbelt citizens so that the committee can fairly report back to the council when it comes to future budget allocations.

Again, topics raised by citizens ranged from crosswalks and drug dealing to terrorism. The first man to come forward requested more painted crosswalks at the bus stops to increase children's safety when walking to and from school when there are no crossing guards. The committee said it would take this back to council.

Regarding terrorism and "acts of God," the police reiterated that in case of an emergency each school has an evacuation

City Has Wins and Losses During Legislative Session

by Peter Curtis

The Spring 2003 Maryland General Assembly was "challenging" to work with, according to David Moran, assistant to the Greenbelt city manager. Many delegates and senators were new to Annapolis. Different parties controlled the administration and the legislature and Greenbelt is now in a new electoral district following re-districting. Added to all of this was the serious and politically contentious fiscal crisis facing the state.

The city identified 18 bills submitted to this session which were important enough to publicly support or oppose. Given the factors noted, it is not surprising that just four of the bills supported by Greenbelt passed; the two measures it opposed were defeated.

The four successful bills were a diverse group. One allows Prince George's County more flexible authority to impose surtaxes on developers in order to support public school facilities in local areas. Another permits counties and municipalities to purchase electricity in aggregate amounts for customers in their jurisdictions. Under a third new law drivers coming from both directions will be required to stop for pedestrians who are using a crosswalk.

Finally, in a very controversial measure, the Assembly gave local jurisdictions the right to use radar-directed cameras in giving speeding citations to motorists. This last measure may yet be vetoed by Governor Ehrlich because of privacy concerns. The two measures the city opposed and which the Assembly failed to pass both concerned red light cameras. One

Letters to the Editor

Unfairly Maligned

A letter in last week's News Review misconstrued the nature of anti-war civil disobedience and unfairly maligned Esther Webb, a Greenbelter who was recently profiled in the paper. The letter also decried the News Review's choice to profile Ms. Webb in a positive light. On the contrary, the News Review is to be congratulated for presenting alternative coverage in the face of the uncritical pro-war bias of the "mainstream" media.

Civil disobedience is a noble tradition and has long been employed by people of conscience such as Mohandas Gandhi. It is a nonviolent way of expressing opposition to unjust laws and policies, especially in the absence of other effective recourse. It is specious to compare antiwar civil disobedience to stealing, since nothing material is gained by crossing police lines and no one is hurt or deprived of property and it is absurd to insinuate that by profiling Ms. Webb the News Review is somehow encouraging lawlessness in Greenbelt.

When police lines are used to stifle dissent, it becomes relevant to challenge those officially imposed boundaries. Here is a case in point: last fall I was with a small group of anti war demonstrators in Baltimore who had assembled to ask President Bush not to attack Iraq. Well in advance of Bush's arrival at a downtown hotel, the police confined our group to a small area more than a block away from the hotel, behind tall buildings, where Mr. Bush would never see us. In doing so the police were abusing their authority in order to ensure that our dissent would be effectively silenced. None of us chose to "martyr" ourselves by leaving our designated site, but had some done so, they would have been acting as patriotic citizens invoking their right to freedom of speech and assembly, which the police were trying to deny us.

I remember most vividly being ordered by a policeman to move off a sidewalk where other citizens were allowed to move freely, just because I was carrying an antiwar sign. Thus for simply expressing a view, I was being denied my right as a citizen to use a public sidewalk. That was a chilling feeling indeed, and I think a sad measure of how far this country has deviated from the so-called freedoms that the pro-war letter writers think we are bringing to the rest of the world.

Esther Webb Is An Inspiration

In contrast to your letter writers who were "unsettled" about the story of Esther Webb, I found her an inspiration and a good role model for young people. The tactic of submitting to peaceful arrest was instrumental in calling attention in this country to the injustice of apartheid in South Africa and in our own nation's struggles with racial inequality. Remember the Boston Tea Party — certainly an unlawful and violent act that we hold up today as a brave demonstration against the injustice of "Taxation Without Representation." Mrs. Webb's gentle act was not one of throwing tea or wrecking property, etc. It was an act that says she not only marches but is willing to pay the arrest-and-fine penalty of expressing her disagreement more demonstrably. Would it have played a part in the majority's support if each of us had been charged the price of this war up front? (Minimum $500.)

How apt that one writer would use GHI as an analogy for adhering to the law and regulations. The United Nations could be portrayed as the GHI of the world. When you have a complaint against your neighbor, you take it to the board. You try to convince the board (Security Council) of your position and win their votes for whatever action you deem to be appropriate. If you do not prevail, however, you are not then allowed to storm your neighbor's house and "liberate" it from whatever evil lies within, no matter how right you think your cause is, even if you're a member of the board.

I was one of the apparent minority who did not support this action and will not support the next one against (pick one: Syria, Libya, Iran, North Korea, etc.) in the name of forceful "regime change." I support our troops and agree they are indeed brave and will gladly "stand up next to them to defend . . ." but I fervently hope not to send them again under these circumstances.

I support the concept of obeying the law, as well as cooperative living. I suspect Mrs. Webb does as well. But she feels so strongly about war that a special act of controlled civil disobedience is warranted in her eyes. In the face of such a large and vocal majority, her act stands out. We need our servicemen and women to "preserve all our freedoms," but we need people like Esther Webb, too, to warn us of the perils of resorting to war. Call me next time, Esther. I'll come and bail you out.

Get Facts Straight

This letter is not in defense of Esther Webb, because I do not feel that she did anything wrong. This letter is to get the facts straight. Just because you are arrested does not mean that you broke any law. I was arrested many years ago when a group from the American Public Health Association attempted to present a petition to the Embassy of South Africa requesting that they end apartheid. The case was thrown out by the courts that ruled we had a right to petition a foreign government. I do not know if Esther was found guilty in all or any of her arrests.

Even more important is the implication in the letter that it is never correct to violate the law. If a law is unjust or discriminatory, one has not only a right but an obligation to violate that law, in order to bring these facts to the attention of the public. I suppose Ms. Coleman would have castigated those who participated in the Boston Tea Party for breaking the law. Or would she have advised Rosa Parks to stand in the back of the bus rather than occupy a seat that was reserved for "Whites only." How about telling those who "sat in" at a segregated lunch counter to eat at a diner that serves blacks. There are many more examples but I think I have made my point.

Regarding the other letter saying that some wars are necessary . . . The facts concerning our entry into WWII are not quite accurate. Our entry into WWII occurred after Japan bombed Pearl Harbor. We then declared war against Japan and then Germany declared war against us. It is anybody's guess as to how we would have become involved in the war had this not occurred. As a combat veteran with the 35th Infantry Division during WWII, I am opposed to any war, unless it is for direct protection of this country. There is no provable evidence that Iraq was threatening us. If we are to change all governments that are ruled by nasty dictators, where do we stop?

My experience during WWII was ample demonstration that everybody suffers during operations that include massive bombing, with great civilian casualties. I can understand why France, Germany and Russia were against the war in Iraq. The populations of these countries were directly involved in WWII. Any killing affects both those who do the killing and the population where the killings occur. I am glad the war was swift and is near an end. I still have questions as to what is going to happen in Iraq after the fighting is over. The fighting in Afghanistan has been over for some time, but everything is a mess there. I believe that the problem in Iraq could have been solved in a way other than with the mass destruction that took place there.

The "Good Guys"

Kathy Reynolds was very gracious in her letter of thanks about the 'Good Guys' band. I would be remiss not to name my partners, John "Rock" McBride, Donald Nickolson and Kenny Nickolson. I should also point out that Tim Leech, owner of the Riverdale Pizza Pub, is a Greenbelt boy. Our thanks to him and to all of the Greenbelters and others who came out for a friend in need, Bill "Santa Claus" Devlin. Greenbelt is great!

Greenbelters Serving In the Military

In response to our call for articles regarding Greenbelters serving in the military, we received the following:

Major Frank Cook is the Operations Officer for the Combat Support Battalion at Camp Doha in Kuwait. As Operations Officer, he plans the work of over 1,200 soldiers. He reported to Camp Doha in November 2002, for a year's assignment. Before leaving for Kuwait, Major Cook drove his wife Beth and six-week-old daughter Jessica to Texas, where they will spend the year with Mrs. Cook's parents.

Prior to this assignment, Major Cook was an associate professor at the University of Richmond, where he earned his master's degree while teaching Army ROTC cadets.

When asked about his feelings toward the anti-war demonstrators, he answered that he does his job so that Americans can demonstrate and express their feelings. He is proud to be where he is, feels that he is fulfilling his duty and believes in his country.

Raised in Greenbelt, a graduate of St. Hugh's School, Major Cook is the son of Ed and Jean Cook.

Sunrise Service At Greenbelt Lake

An ecumenical Easter Sunrise Service will be held on Sunday, April 20 at 7 a.m. on the shore of Greenbelt Lake near the "Buddy" Attick Park bandstand. Arts Center Presents "The Tempest"

Norm Gleichman as Stephano in "The Tempest."

Just in time to celebrate Shakespeare's birthday, the Greenbelt Arts Center is presenting a four week run of "The Tempest," one of Shakespeare's most intriguing plays. In this classic masterpiece, Shakespeare's final fantasy-romance for the stage, a magical storm strands the enemies of a banished Duke on his isle of exile. Through magic, misadventure and forgiveness, the Duke, his daughter, his foes and his slaves are all liberated from the prisons of their pasts to the glorious promise of their futures. This play is full of comedy, romance, poetry, music and thrilling magic.

Performances are being held from April 25 through May 17 on Friday and Saturday evenings at 8 p.m. Matinees are scheduled for Sundays at 2 p.m. on May 4 and 11. The theater is located beside the post office just below Roosevelt Center. For reservations call the Greenbelt Arts Center at 301-441-8770.

Depression-Era Tale Will Be Discussed

Mildred Taylor's "Roll of Thunder, Hear My Cry," a tale of one family's struggle in 1930s Mississippi, is the topic of Greenbelt Library's Saturday book discussion on April 26 at 11 a.m.

Copies of the book – and books on tapes – can be checked out while supplies last.

This novel, based on real-life events of the author's family, has been translated into scores of languages and was a National Book Award Nominee, as well as the winner of various national awards.

Like "The Borning Room," the subject of the March 15 discussion, this novel's dialogues bring the reader into the family's experiences of love, fear and courage. "Roll of Thunder" was made into a three-part miniseries by ABC in 1978.

No registration is necessary; everyone is invited to read the book and spend an hour talking about the story – or listening to others' comments.

This series is presented by Friends of the Greenbelt Library. Questions can be directed to the library staff at 301-345-5800. To learn more about the Friends of the Greenbelt Library, call 301-441-8249.

policy and named websites where citizens can find specific information about this, such as <http://www.WTOP.org> and <http://www.MEMA.org>.

One woman wanted the News Review to release more specific information about crime sites, such as the exact building where a crime was committed. She felt knowing just the general block area of a crime was not enough to protect herself. Buildings in Greenbelt East generally have 16 units apiece. The police representative explained that the policy is not to give specific addresses because they frequently get retargeted for crime and also it is thought better to alert people in an area generally. They don't want people to just say, "Well, it wasn't in my building, so I'm not concerned."

Security Guard

Greenbelt East residents have hired a private security guard to patrol the apartment buildings, saying the policing by the Greenbelt Police Department just didn't seem to be enough. "Eventually we bit the bullet and got more patrolling going on," said one resident. But it was agreed that there was a need for more help from the Greenbelt police. One woman asked if the police could coordinate with the private security guards, which they do not do at present. The policeman emphasized that community policing is the most effective of all. Citizens should "be nosy" and report suspicious activity to the police, for it is the citizens themselves who know best what are normal happenings in their neighborhood.

Regarding problems with automobile theft, the police said car and radio theft can happen very quickly. Unfortunately, criminals have break-in techniques that make virtually no sound, but usually car thieves get caught because they speed when driving.

Drug Dealing

Several citizens made strong statements about their belief that the public basketball courts at Mandan Road and Ora Glen Drive are a magnet for drug dealing and other crimes. The community has been trying to get the courts removed without success. Residents say they find drug paraphernalia and bottles in the grass and complain that police are not doing enough to clean up this area. They say there is vandalism and "too much hanging out." One citizen jokingly threatened that if they don't do anything, "some anonymous citizen may come out one day with a hacksaw..."

Police responded by saying that when they cruise these areas they just find "kids hanging out, which is not a crime," and they are loath to take away one of the few outdoor recreational options for teenagers. Pope said the committee would ask the council whether they are for or against removing the courts.

A woman who lives in one of the apartment buildings said she knew for a fact that students from Roosevelt were coming over during the daytime to buy drugs at one of the units in her building and again she felt the police were doing nothing.

Police responded that by law they can't search without a warrant - they have to have "probable cause," something a judge can go on. Sometimes police use an undercover officer to try to make a buy at one of these alleged sites, keeping confidential the name of the informant. This can sometimes lead to an arrest.

Meanwhile it was agreed that in general more police presence and drive-by police cruising could cause criminals to think twice before they engage in crimes in Greenbelt East. However, community policing and resident nosiness were also considered "invaluable" in discouraging illegal activity.

To contribute to the discussion on Greenbelt safety concerns, contact Connie Harris, staff liaison to the committee, by email at charris@greenbelt.md.us or call at 301-345-7203.

would have directed revenues from this source to the District Courts rather than municipalities; the second would have banned such cameras entirely.

Ten measures the city endorsed were defeated outright. Moran pointed out that almost all of these either required new funding, which was in short supply this year or were environmental in nature. The latter were hindered by the pro-business stance of the state administration and the preoccupation of environmental groups with defeating the governor's candidate for Secretary of the Department of Natural Resources.

Included in measures which failed to pass were such items as bond funding for repairs and improvements to Springhill Lake, increased fines for littering, a tax on rental vehicles and a requirement that as of 2005, half of all publicly purchased vehicles in Maryland should be powered by hybrid or alternative (non-petroleum) fuels.

The status of the two remaining bills supported by Greenbelt is uncertain. Available information is currently unclear on the fate of a proposal to modify and increase taxes on admission and sales of concessions at amusements. And a bill which the city requested to simplify the process of altering speed limits on local streets was withdrawn at Greenbelt's request after officials of the State Highway Administration met with city representatives and agreed in the future to facilitate such alterations.

M.O. Seung Lee "Officer of Year"

Greenbelt Master Police Officer Seung Lee (shown in photo) was selected 2002 Officer of the Year and honored at an April 4 ceremony and luncheon held by the Police Chief's Association of Prince George's County. The event took place at FOP Lodge 89 in Upper Marlboro.

Officer Lee was nominated for his actions on November 19, 2001, which led to the arrest of a suspect for attempted murder, armed carjacking, multiple counts of first degree assault and numerous traffic charges.

A man, who was suspected in a stabbing which had occurred two days earlier at Roosevelt Center, was seen by a detective in the 5800 block of Greenbelt Road. The suspect was on foot and carrying what appeared to be a shotgun. As the detective attempted to turn his vehicle around, the suspect carjacked a vehicle at the Greenbelt Shell station and fled the scene eastbound on Greenbelt Road. A lookout was broadcast for the car and Greenbelt officers located and pursued it. During the pursuit the suspect rammed two police cruisers, two citizen motorists and several parked cars. He nearly struck a pedestrian.

The man then drove onto Braden Field near a Greenbelt elementary school, where 27 fifth graders were having recess. He attempted to run through the group of children at play. Lee and other officers attempted to stop the suspect vehicle by striking it with their vehicle but these measures failed to stop the armed man.

Without hesitation or regard for his own personal safety, Lee exited his cruiser, placed himself between the suspect, who was accelerating his vehicle toward Officer Lee and the school children and fired several rounds into the vehicle. The suspect was not injured, but did stop his attack and was arrested. No one was injured during the incident.

The computer check revealed that the tags were reported stolen. A non-resident man, 39, was arrested and charged with theft before being released on citation pending trial.

The Department is offering a reward of up to $500 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of a suspect in any of the unsolved crimes reported in the blotter. Citizens may anonymously report suspected drug activity by calling the Drug Tip Line at 301-507-6522. Victims of the theft of lawn ornaments, tools, lawn mowers, etc., should contact Criminal Investigations at 301-507-6530. poses that three of these cars be sport utility vehicles, which council has opposed in the past. However, if the city moves by April 22 they can purchase these cars under a state bid providing SUVs for the same cost as other city cruisers. The storms this winter, Craze said, pointed out the need for such cars, particularly in areas like apartment complexes, where property owners are responsible for plowing. Having officers ride in snow plows does not work – the officers and plow drivers have different priorities. While mileage on these cars would be reduced by not assigning them to patrol officers, the officers to whom they are assigned would take them home under the city's take-home car program.

Possible Cuts

Two possible cuts have been suggested by McLaughlin to trim the proposed tax hike. One re-estimates the costs of background investigations, now that the department is at full strength. Craze opposed the other suggestion, elimination of the city's work to obtain accreditation by the Commission for Accreditation for Law Enforcement Agencies, towards which $10,000 is budgeted for FY 2004. He said that accreditation would address two important issues: 1) is the department doing the right things and 2) are they doing those things right? Lt. Michael Craddock noted that, once accredited, the city would receive a 10 percent reduction in its liability insurance, which is a major goal for the department. The department began to seek accreditation during 2002; it expects the process to take roughly two and a half years to complete.

Another initiative set forth in the budget is to seek to obtain federal and state grants to centralize radio communications and records management for Greenbelt and Hyattsville at no additional cost to either city. The program, if successful, would expand to include Mt. Rainer, Bladensburg and Riverdale Park at some time in the future. The state and county police departments have also expressed interest, according to the budget book. This program, noted by Davis, was not discussed at the meeting.

Crime Statistics

The police department began its portion of the meeting with a presentation, complete with patriotic music, of departmental highlights. "Part I crimes" (murder, rape, robbery, assault, burglary, theft and auto theft) in Greenbelt decreased by 0.1 percent in calendar year 2002, compared with a 16 percent increase in Prince George's County and a 4 percent increase statewide. Traffic accidents increased by 0.5 percent, with four fatal accidents, although personal injury accidents declined 11 percent.

Putens asked about the low closure rate (17 percent) for crimes in the city in 2002, down from 26 percent in 2001. Craze attributed the drop to increasing reluctance by victims to come forward.

City officers participated in the sniper investigation and increased patrols of city schools and other public areas. They also assisted University of Maryland police during the basketball and football playoffs and during a visit by the Secretary General of the United Nations.

At the request of the Secret Service, city officers also assisted with security during the State of the Union Address. McLaughlin pointed out, when police officers did not, that because of the city's reputation for professionalism, they were assigned to a main checkpoint on the inner security perimeter.

The downside of these prestigious assignments is that city taxpayers foot the bill, raising the city's overtime costs. This practice irked White, who objected to the federal government's assumption that they can call on first responders at will – "are we supporting the federal government?" he asked.

Fire Department

The public safety budget also provides for a $54,000 contribution to a reserve fund for equipment for the Greenbelt Fire Department and Rescue Squad. Council also indicated its intention to transfer an additional $54,000 to rectify a staff oversight that resulted in the FY 2001 funds not being transferred to this reserve. The 2001 allocation will be taken from unallocated city reserves. Fire Chief Randy Krob said that they expect to purchase a new truck in three years.

Krob said that the department is applying for a Federal Emergency Management Administration grant to purchase two thermal imaging cameras. These cameras can be used to locate people trapped by a fire or lost in the woods.

In addition, the department seeks to renovate its original truck, a 1935 Ford. Members are looking for grants and contributions to raise the $125,000 needed.

Garden Club Meets

Joel Lerner, landscape designer, author and Washington Post garden column writer, will speak on "Do-it-yourself Landscaping" at the Beltsville Garden Club general meeting Wednesday, April 23 at 7:30 p.m. The meeting will be held in the cafeteria of Duckworth School, 11201 Evans Trail in Beltsville.

The public is invited and new members are welcome. There is no charge. For information, call Geoff White, 301-937-1539.

United States must work through the United Nations. He disagreed with President George W. Bush's characterization of U.S. action as "preemptive." "It was an enforcement action," he stressed. The UN had not enforced its own mandate.

And indeed Hoyer's printed speech devotes about a page to itemizing the 16 UN resolutions between 1991 and 1998 that were unenforced as Saddam Hussein continued his military violations. "Reaction by force, therefore, is not a preemptive action, but a response to armed breach of legally imposed conditions," Hoyer's written speech proclaims.

Nevertheless, Hoyer disputed Bush's "axis of evil" speech as "a strategic mistake" which he claimed set forth "a destabilizing policy."

Audience Responses

As the meeting progressed, it was clear that people had paid attention to the international scene – not only to recent war news but also to the larger long-term political and international contexts dating back even as far as World War II. Sylvia Lewis, who had survived the London blitz, quoted Winston Churchill in a speech during the 1950s as stressing "jaw, jaw before war, war." She distinguished between peace making and appeasement.

Jim Cassels said that Congress "should impeach both Bush and Chaney. The United States should have worked through the UN," he said to loud applause.

"But the UN didn't act," Hoyer demurred.

Speaking on the other side, Lowell Owens said that "a police state is not at peace." The recent war action apparently "gives hope to the Iraqis," he added.

Another man agreed. (None of the speakers throughout the two-hour session identified themselves, though many were known to this reporter through frequent appearances at city events.) This speaker suggested that the numbers of Iraq citizens killed in the brief war was probably far less than the number killed by the Iraqi regime itself. He was worried, however, about how to set up democracy in that country, given the "feeble democracy" so far established in Afghanistan.

"The only thing we can do," Hoyer responded, "is to set up the context to try to make that possible."

Partisan Views

Other speakers were more partisan. One deplored "the overwhelming judgment of other countries" that there had been "substantial movement" of the Iraqi regime toward compliance and that Bush had much earlier made his decision about going to war. No weapons of mass destruction have yet been discovered, the speaker said. "It was a political mistake to cede power to George Bush," he added to loud applause.

A woman declared the Greenbelt meeting with Hoyer "long overdue." But "how can you export what you do have?" she asked, referring to democracy. The current action looked to her, she said, "like a queer Christian oil brigade." Hoyer disagreed. He didn't believe it was about oil, he said.

Change in Tone

In the front row, but hidden from view to this reporter, was another speaker, who turned out to be a very young boy. His question to Hoyer was more personal: Had the Congressman received his letter? The question brought about a sudden shift in the meeting's tone as Hoyer directed his staff to get Julian's last name and locate the letter in his official mail. He promised to give the boy a phone call about his letter once he had read it.

The next adult speaker turned the tone back to a more somber note as he stressed what he saw as "a disconnect between what the U.S. says and what it does." He saw this "as the norm," he went on. Congress approves so much money for the military but "doesn't deal with the social needs in the United States."

Hoyer agreed. He deplored recent huge tax cuts to the very rich. He saw it as "a bad, negative policy," he said.

Another man stressed that according to the U.S. Constitution, Congress itself should declare war. "Why has Congress ceded its power?" he asked.

Other speakers zeroed in on administration policies. "The war on terrorism should begin at home," one speaker said. He referred especially to the School of the Americas in Fort Benning, Georgia, which, he said taught terrorism practices. Saddam, too, had "the complicit support" of many in the present administration, he added.

Karyn Pomerantz said "It's time to reevaluate how we do social change." Decisions concerning foreign policy are being made "by the non-elected," she said.

Another woman spoke on behalf of the Palestinians in the current conflict with Israel. She was followed by Bertram Donn, who said that "we're much less safe" because of the war in Iraq. "It opens the threat of nuclear war."

Bob Snyder broadened discussion to Cuba, which he had just visited. People there, he said, were concerned that their country might be next.

Hoyer replied that Congress "had no intention of attacking nations." He said he saw Iraq "as a special case." Another man replied that over the weekend he had heard Bush "sounding very aggressive" toward Syria.

Reconstruction

Turning the discussion, Alexander Barnes wondered how Hoyer "looked at constructing the Iraq we've destroyed." Hoyer replied that many other countries were willing to help in that effort. In particular he felt that the UN should become involved with humanitarian assistance.

Barnes rejoined that he noticed Hoyer was not among the Democratic candidates who were running for president. Someone else asked Hoyer's opinion of Vermont candidate Howard Dean, who had not voted for the war resolution. To which Hoyer responded that Dean was "a wonderful person." We have "a legitimate difference of opinion," he said.

By this time the meeting, scheduled to run between 4 and 5 p.m., was moving on till almost 6. Perhaps best summing up what had occurred in the previous two hours, another speaker said: "Some beliefs are more well-founded than others." With that, the Congressman and all the audience, could well agree.
