Greenbelt New Year 2004 Is Enjoyed by Record Crowd

by James Giese

For the third year my wife Bernie and I attended Greenbelt New Year. This time was a little different as we agreed to be volunteers. Doing so not only got us in free but also resulted in us getting golden yellow T-shirts with the Greenbelt New Year logo in green on them. Volunteer coordinator Dan Hamlin assigned us to Magic Mike for the first part of the evening.

Although Magic Mike was making a repeat appearance in Greenbelt, we had not seen him before. Magic Mike does a good magic show. He does the usual tricks of making one rope become several and then become one again (don't ask me how). He also pulls a rabbit from the hat. What we found the best about Magic Mike was his rapport with the little ones who gathered on the floor at his feet. They were totally fascinated and entertained by him.

The magic show lasts nearly an hour. As soon as it is over, Magic Mike begins the next session, which is to make balloon sculptures for the young ones. With an endless supply of skinny balloons and an air pump to quickly blow them up, Mike made one imaginative thing after another. There were dogs on leashes, aliens, swords, guns, crowns and just an endless variety of things. Sometimes he would simply twist a balloon into a shape. Other times he would make knots. Occasionally he would cut off an unused part of a balloon. Sometimes he used Magic Markers to paint on faces, etc.

Keep in Line

Our job was to control the line of kids waiting for balloons. For the most part, it was orderly, the only problem being with kids who edged closer and broke the line so they could watch Mike at work.

Also helping Mike were three women who I presumed to have been his wife and daughters. One of them brought the rabbit in the hat around for the kids to pet. This white rabbit has dark lines around the eyes. I asked if that was eye shadow, but was assured that it was a natural feature of this special breed of rabbit. The rabbit was well trained. Ever since it first appeared in the hat, it stayed put, never trying to get out, perfectly content to let the little ones pet it.

After about a half-hour, the line for balloons was still long and newcomers to the line quickly replaced those walking away with balloons. Mike's wife closed the line to newcomers so that he could finish making balloons before the time of his next show and take a break. Bernie and I then spent a lot of time telling mothers and dads arriving with children to come see the next show and get their balloons after that show.

Mike finished making balloons just in time to begin his next show, for which another crowd quickly gathered. Linda Edwards and Marcia Voigt relieved Bernie and me at that time. Linda told us later that things got a little hairy after the balloon line was closed following that show. She had a couple encounters with irate parents unhappy that their young ones weren't going to get balloon sculptures. One demanded to see the mayor, Linda said.

Cabaret

Off duty, Bernie and I headed for the multipurpose room, called the cabaret for the evening, for the double delight of hearing John Hill perform and tasting Chef Lou's goodies. Bernie had key lime cheesecake and I had chocolate mousse cake – scrumptious and decadent. We were lucky enough to arrive when the line was short and surprised when a few minutes later

Tom Renahan Sends Greetings And News from His Post in Iraq

Greenbelt resident Tom Renahan is in Iraq helping to establish democratic processes. He sent this letter to his friends back home. It is reprinted with his permission.

Merry Christmas from Amarah, Iraq. Due to circumstances, this will have to be my Christmas card for this year. So it's not that nice-looking; but how many other Christmas cards did you get from Iraq?

For those unaware, I am now an International City/County Management Association staff member, working on the democracy project in Iraq. I am in Amarah, in the Maysan governorate (province) maybe 100 miles north of Basra in the southern part of the country and about 50 miles from the border with Iran. Amarah has probably 100,000 to 200,000 people, but this is a largely agricultural area, with a little more green than the desert areas to the south.

I am safer here than in most other places in Iraq, but nevertheless surrounded constantly by security details (when traveling anywhere) and several security guards (when in our compound).

We don't have pro-Saddam demonstrations here, where 95% of the people hated Saddam, many for personal and heart-wrenching reasons. His arrest set off a full day and night of celebratory gunfire into the air (a favorite practice around here – for weddings and for special occasions, like when you just feel like it). I am in the British zone and it has been fun working with them and with Ambassador Bremer's representative here. We are working at the decision-making level, having an impact and feeling great so far about the experience.

Time Stands Still

It has been just a couple of weeks so far, but it seems so much longer. Time stands still here, due to some psychological factor I don't understand. It has been a busy time, however, as I have already written detailed agendas and ballots for the new Maysan Provincial Council (it's wonderful to see your work translated into Arabic), a detailed plan to implement the democracy project in Maysan and a detailed set of standing rules for the new council. (I feel bad for the translator who has to put those 13 pages into Arabic!) Our numerous Iraqi staff are impressive, including some great young people working as interpreters and demonstrating excellent English skills. As for my Arabic skills, I have learned to say hello (As-salam alaykum).

I am working incredibly long hours. However, it is not as tough as the total hours might make it seem. Consider this for time-saving convenience: I never have to cook, or clean or take the dog out or the trash or do errands or buy groceries or drive

Two Greenbelters Were Killed In Crescent Road Accident

by Mary Lou Williamson

Seventeen-year-old Graciella James-Hinds and her 8-year-old sister, Jovanni Phillips, died as a result of an automobile crash on Crescent Road near Northway on Tuesday, January 6 about 3:45 p.m.

The young woman, who was driving a green, 2-door Honda Civic, had crossed the double yellow center line, smashing head-on into one of the city's public works trucks, according to MPO George Mathews, Greenbelt police public information officer.

The car, according to Channel

7 news reporter Doug McKelway, may have been traveling 50 to 60 m.p.h. – based on how demolished the front half of the Civic was. There were no apparent skid marks. Karl Pena, News Review photographer, equated the front end of the car to crushed aluminum foil.

The young woman was transported to Doctors Hospital where she was pronounced dead.

Rescue workers removed the roof of the car to extract the

Heartwarming Story

Thank you so much for the December 25 story that you ran about the mother who forgave the hit-and-run driver who had killed her daughter. The message of tragedy and forgiveness brought tears to my eyes.

It was truly a special Christmas gift to me and my family.

Good Feelin', Good Eatin' – A Great Night at Home

by Sandra A. Lange

Imagine coming home one night and being greeted by a tall, slender, smiling young woman with honey blonde hair who has prepared a gourmet dinner just for you and your spouse, partner or special friend. But first, she invites you to experience the ultimate in relaxation and pampering, a deep-tissue facial or Swedish massage. This is what Greenbelter Sandy Greene offers in her business called "Table to Table" – a massage and a meal in the comfort of your own home.

Sandy grew up in Greenbelt, graduating from Eleanor Roosevelt High School in 1983. She worked as a cashier at the Co-op for several years. After completing her studies at Towson State College, she worked in the Greenbelt Nursing Home as an assistant activities director and occasional cook.

She always loved food and worked for a while in the bakery at Whole Foods. She took classes part-time at L'Academie de Cuisine in Bethesda and got a job as a cook and manager of Le Bon Café on Capitol Hill. While she enjoyed the restaurant work, she found the profession hard on her body and social life. Since she was interested in massage therapy, she decided to attend the School of Massage in Baltimore part-time. Since becoming certified, she continues to take classes in order to stay fresh and learn new techniques such as sports massage and massages tailored for elderly clients.

When a friend suggested Greene combine her two talents of cooking and massage therapy to start her own business, she decided to quit her restaurant job and take the plunge. Using her contacts on Capitol Hill and advertising in the Metro Services Guide, she targeted Montgomery County, Northern Virginia and the District of Columbia. The advertisements and personal endorsements and a review in the Washingtonian Magazine helped her business grow so that now she is completely booked until March.

She has also learned to pace herself. She doesn't usually book Table to Table clients on Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights. She gives herself a night off during the weekend to pursue her own social life. She likes to eat out herself and, "When people cook for me, I am so happy," she exclaimed.

In a typical week she will do several massages during the day. On her Table to Table days, she will grocery shop, usually at Whole Foods, in the morning. In the afternoon, she will prepare as much as possible in her own small Greenbelt kitchen. Sometimes people ask for a special menu and she will accommodate them, especially if there are food allergies or strong dislikes. Or she uses menus she creates herself. Always she bakes her own bread because, as she says, "It is so easy and so wonderful to have fresh bread."

When she arrives at people's houses, she will do the 40-minute massages first. Often the person has purchased the event as a special birthday or anniversary surprise. Then she will serve the four-course meal consisting of appetizer, salad, entrée and vegetable dish and dessert. Wine is included for an extra charge. The entrée is prepared while the couple are eating their appetizer. She is packed up and ready to leave in less than three hours. Her pleasure is listening to the couple talking and enjoying each other's company. "I've never had a bad experience," she proclaimed.

She remembers in particular the weekend following September 11 and wondering if her business would suffer. On the contrary, "people wanted to snuggle up in their own homes," she commented.

Greene enjoys her work and plans "to do it until I don't love it anymore," she stated. Because the massage therapy is very physical, she tries to stay healthy herself. She finds that she needs to take time off and has learned to say "no" on occasion. She accepts the perils of being her own boss with no sick or annual leave to fall back on if she can't work.

She rarely has had to cancel a job because of weather. In last year's giant snowstorm, she credits the City of Greenbelt's Public Works Department for allowing her to get out of her court and to her clients' homes.

While she has only a few massage clients in Greenbelt, her business is expanding. "No one else does what I do," she exclaims. Local residents who want to take advantage of Greene's skillful massages and creative meals can contact Table to Table by phone on 301-474-1501 or by email at lgreene@msn.com. But be prepared to take a number!

Correction

In the Top Stories 2003 article last week Tom Renahan is incorrectly identified as Ed Putens in the photo and caption of the Candidates Forum. Renehan was representing Putens. When the article first appeared months ago the photo and caption were incorrect then as well. Therefore the News Review has the ignominious honor of blowing it twice. As to the statement that Leta Mach was unable to attend, she was available and participating in the forum by phone.

Obituaries

Carol Dean Shifflett

Carol Dean Shifflett, 74, died on December 23, 2003 at his home at 19 Hillside Road, where he and his wife Betty had lived for 50 years. Born December 2, 1929 in Norristown, Pa., he was one of eight children and as a child moved with his family from Pennsylvania to Berwyn Heights. He was a 1947 graduate of Greenbelt High School, where he met his future bride, Betty Gussio. She graduated in 1950 and they were married in 1951. Two years later, with their infant daughter, they moved to their home on Hillside Road.

Mr. and Mrs. Shifflett raised their daughter Dorothy and son Dean in Greenbelt. Mr. Shifflett worked in numerous capacities in the Washington area: for the federal government in Washington, D.C., at Harvey Dairy in Brentwood until the company closed, at Southern Railway as a steward and at the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission until his retirement in 1989. Mrs. Shifflett retired three years later from her position at the University of Maryland Graduate School.

Following their retirement, the couple divided their time between Greenbelt and their home in the peaceful community of Piney Point, Md. A devoted family man and a beloved neighbor, Mr. Shifflett spent long hours trimming the hedges of 19 Court Hillside, as well as the extensive public hedges across Hillside Road. In the court he mowed neighbors' lawns, shoveled their snow, pruned their trees and always had a kind word for everyone.

Mr. Shifflett is survived by his wife, Betty; daughter Dorothy Chrismer; son Dean Shifflett; son-in-law Ron Chrismer; daughter-in-law Paula Eardley; brother William Shifflett; four sisters: Winifred Daves, Opal Mitchell, Margie Schinner and Sue Long; and grandsons Jeffrey Chrismer and Wesley Shifflett. Two brothers, Norwood and Ronald Shifflett, preceded him in death.

The funeral was held on December 27 at Borgwardt Funeral Home with interment following at Greenbelt Cemetery.

Memorial contributions may be made to Prince George's County Hospice, 11700 Beltsville Dr., Ste. 100, Beltsville, MD 20705.

Annie Roberta Butler

Former Greenbelter Annie Roberta Butler of Laurel died on January 1, 2004. She and her late husband Floyd raised five sons on Gardenway. They lived in Greenbelt over 30 years.

She is survived by sons Charles, Douglas, Wayne, Glenn and Roscoe Butler, five grandchildren and three great-grandchildren, many relatives and friends.

Funeral services were held at Fort Lincoln Cemetery Mausoleum, Brentwood, on Tuesday, January 6, 2004. Interment was in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

In Memoriam – Carol Shifflett A True Greenbelt Neighbor

Greenbelt is known for its good neighbors and the residents of 19 Court Hillside lost one of the best in Carol Shifflett, who died two days before Christmas. Carol – whose name was supposed to be "Carroll" according to his wife Betty, but wasn't because a typo when he was a baby was never changed – was, as former neighbor Ed Chabot put it, "the grandfather of the court."

He was also our court's sage, storyteller, groundskeeper, historian and a Pied Piper to the canines of the court with a steady store of delicacies for the squirrel-hunting Peaches, the skittish Bear who feared all men except Carol and the late Daisy, who would drag her owner to his porch for a treat. Cardinals flocked to his feeders. People, too, gravitated to Carol. "When you were talking to him, other people would always come up. People liked to be around him," noted my husband, Steve Lindner.

I think it was because of his twinkly eyes and big heart. As a close neighbor, he had the gift of tact, being the eyes and ears of the neighborhood without being nosy, added neighbor Juanita Beck. When Ed Chabot traveled to Bosnia, Carol called his parents to alert them about an open window or any other problems.

He took care of everything and everyone around him. Since he was retired, Carol was at home much of the day but was rarely idle. He was a meticulous hedge-trimmer, even in stifling heat, using manual shears on the court's hedge and on the two long public hedges across Hillside Road. In winter, he shoveled out sidewalks. In summer, he mowed neighbors' serviceside yards. When Betty Price worried about a large tree too close to her home, he pruned it. He offered his tools and his shed space freely and, having lived in the court for 50 years, filled us in on the history of the trees, hedges, buildings and their occupants.

From his porch at the intersection of Hillside and Research Road, he kept a close watch on the scofflaw drivers who sped through the stop sign, finally alerting Greenbelt police. More often, he could be seen returning waves from passersby or calling a greeting.

How lucky we were, I realize now, to move two doors down from Carol and Betty in 2001. Those of us who knew him will never forget Carol Shifflett, a true Greenbelt neighbor.

Lucille Mary White

Former Greenbelter Lucille Mary White, age 76, died on December 30, 2003, of emphysema.

Mrs. White grew up on a farm in Wisconsin. Later her family moved to Washington, D.C., where she graduated from Eastern High School. She taught ballroom dancing and jitterbug until operations on her legs curtailed that career. She could still dance and enjoyed dancing at Blob's Park on Friday evenings.

She was an operator at the telephone company until she married Hosea White in 1951. They raised four children in the 2 Court of Southway. Mrs. White stayed home with the children but returned to work after her divorce.

She worked nights at the Government Printing Office to be at home with the children during the day. She eventually went back to the telephone company starting out as a supply clerk and proudly retiring as a central office technician.

Mrs. White is survived by four children – Steven, Karen, Ruth Ann and Elizabeth; seven grandchildren – Steven, Michael, Meghan, Blair, David, Kelly and Sarah; three great-grandchildren – Angela, Riley and Amy; her son-in-law Aaron (Elizabeth's husband) and grandson Steven's wife Leanne.

The service was private.

In Memoriam – Lucille White

My mom, better known as "Mema" by many, was born March 18, 1927 in Wisconsin. Later her family moved to Washington, D.C.

After her marriage to my father she stayed home with us children until after her divorce when she had to work. Then she worked nights so she could be with us during the day.

My mom was always there for her children and grandchildren. I couldn't have raised such a fine son as Blair if it hadn't been for my mom's never-ending help. I believe she received her most joy out of doing things for us and others. She was active in Center School's PTA.

For a while she lived in Green Ridge House in order to take care of my grandmother, Katie Basinger. She was proud of retiring as a central office technician from the telephone company. She wore her watch with the telephone with a ruby in it on her wrist throughout her illness.

Unfortunately the last two and a half years she spent in assisted living and nursing homes were not happy for her. I believe it was because she could no longer help any of us.

Lots of times she'd call me and

Senior Resource of the Month GovBenefits.gov

by Christal Parker Batey, Community Resource Advocate

GovBenefits.gov is the first government-wide resource for citizen benefits. It is a website that helps people determine if they or someone they are helping may be eligible to receive government benefits or assistance. GovBenefits.gov helps people access benefit eligibility information and conduct eligibility screening through a free, confidential and easy to use online questionnaire. Launched in April 2002, GovBenefits.gov consolidates information about hundreds of government benefits and assistance programs including federal and state programs, previously spread across nearly 31 million web pages. New programs are regularly added to the site.

There are three easy ways to search for government benefits for people or someone they are helping: 1) search all programs – answer questions about the situation and find all the benefit programs that may be applicable; 2) search specific programs – search by benefits program categories, answer questions related to those categories and find benefits programs that may be applicable; 3) keyword search – search by keyword for benefits programs administered at the federal and state levels.

GovBenefits.gov helps any citizen, social service case-worker, person working for a professional or faith-based organization, community center, library, college or university. Federal, state or local benefits agency or other interested party determine the full spectrum of benefits and assistance programs that are available. Whether it is a direct payment, loan, insurance, training or other assistance, there may be a government program that can help.

The categories of benefits are: caregivers, children, disability, disaster assistance, education, employment, farming, food and nutrition, health care, housing, parents, retirement, senior citizens, teaching and research, taxpayers, veterans and more.

For more information visit www.GovBenefits.gov. Anyone who would like to access this service but does not have a computer can contact Christal Parker Batey, Community Resource Advocate, City of Greenbelt Assistance in Living Program at 301-474-8000, ext. 2012.

New Organization For Education

Prince George's County business and education leaders will conduct a press briefing on Monday January 12 to announce formation of a new organization designed to mobilize the county's business community to advocate on behalf of public education. The Prince George's Business-Education Alliance, which includes major firms and business organizations, will work to secure the financial support needed for county schools and colleges to provide a world-class education for all students and to improve public perceptions of the school system.

Speakers at the press briefing will include Hubert "Petey" Green, president of the Prince George's Black Chamber of Commerce; Dr. André J. Hornsby, CEO of the Prince George's County Public Schools; Dr. Ronald A. Williams, president of Prince George's Community College and County Councilmember Thomas P. Hendershot.

The Alliance will outline its agenda for the coming year including plans to work for full funding by the Maryland General Assembly of the Bridge to Excellence Act, commonly known as the Thornton Bill. The group also will release the results of a recent public opinion survey of Prince George's residents on education and other issues. The briefing will be held at 10:30 a.m. in the Planetarium at the Howard B. Owens Science Center.

Artwork on Display At Research Refuge

The artist on display for the month of January in the Patuxent Research Refuge National Wildlife Visitor Center's Hollingsworth Gallery is Monica Marcu. Marcu specializes in paintography, or photography enhanced by brush strokes.

Marcu began taking photographs as a young girl but did not begin studying photography until a few years ago. Since then she has won several honors, including being accepted for inclusion in "Best of Photography" for 2001 and 2002. She is a member of several professional societies, including the Photographic Society of America, the Maryland Federation of Art, the National Geographic Society and The Nature Conservancy.

Marcu says her photography shows her view of nature and through it she strives to remind people to remember the wonder and greatness surrounding them. She has a strong conservation ethic. Sickly as a child, she credits nature for her current robust good health. She encourages all who are stressed and tired to take advantage of nature's restoring bounty. So take her advice and visit the Patuxent Research Refuge for a nature walk. While there, stop by to look at Marcu's exhibit in the gallery.

The National Wildlife Visitor Center is located off Powder Mill Road between the Baltimore-Washington Parkway and Rte. 197, just south of Laurel. For more information, visit <http://patuxent.fws.gov> or call 301-497-5763.

GIVE BLOOD 1-800-GIVE-LIFE

John Hill was as enjoyable as we had found him previous years as he played and sang a wide selection of popular tunes. We also enjoyed talking with old friends who joined us at our table. Konrad Herling, now a city councilmember, stopped by to chat. He was working on what he would say as Master of Ceremonies for the event. He was preparing a top ten list of reasons why you know that you have lived in Greenbelt too long. We gave him some ideas – some worthy, some not.

At around 10:30, we decided to check out other venues. We had already received a good review of the John Guernsey Jazz Group playing at the New Deal Café, but didn't feel like donning coats to get over there. So we headed for the room in which Don Bridges was offering family music. On the way we checked to see if we could still get a wacky hairdo or make a crown, but we were too late. Bernie was able to get an historic felt hat for the celebration with the help of Katie Scott-Childress at the venue operated by the Greenbelt Museum.

Don Bridges

There were only a few noisy listeners to Don Bridges music when we arrived. Strewn across the floor were a variety of tambourines and other noisemakers in the shape of fruits and vegetables or whatever. So we picked up the instruments of our choice and joined the other noisy listeners beating time to Bridges songs with our clanging, ringing instruments. We found Bridges' music to be enjoyable and were surprised the audience wasn't larger. Perhaps the lateness of the evening had something to do with it as the number of little ones roaming about was rapidly dwindling.

Bridges continued playing an extra 15 minutes, but ended his program at about 11:30.

It was then time for the grand finale in the gym with DC Motors. The place was jumping. As usual, by this time of the evening, seats were hard to come by, even though most of the crowd was up front jumping to the beat of the band. We found ourselves near the oldest volunteer of the evening at 94, Florence Holly. I asked her how her volunteer job had gone. She told me it had been a snap.

At about ten of midnight, the band, with difficulty, was stopped from playing and Konrad Herling came on stage to say a few words. By this time, recreation employees had passed out the necessary rattles and horns for bringing in the New Year and there was pandemonium. Only a few of us tried to listen to Herling and the din prevented that from happening. Herling quickly realized that the time was not right for his presence on stage and quickly departed as the band quickly resumed play. (Suggestion: New Year's Eve is not a time for speech-making, but it would be appropriate to give recognition to the Greenbelt New Year Chair Patti Brothers, the volunteer committee and others who make the evening happen. If done, however, it should be during a band break and not at the countdown for the New Year.)

Midnight

Finally the score clock on the wall to the left of the band, which had been counting down all evening, began to count in tenths of seconds and then it was the New Year and the crowd erupted in celebration. From the ceiling a measly (in my estimation) bunch of balloons fell onto the crowd which happily began pummeling them back and forth until they broke. The band continued to jump and played for a good while longer. (Once again it would have been nice if they had played just one slow tune for the lovers in the crowd.)

Nevin, 21 months, found a partner and enjoyed dancing to the music of Trinidad and Tobago.

We heard that ticket sales were up for this event and that they had run out of wrist bands for sale at the door and had had to use ones from a previous year. However, I thought the crowd in the gym was smaller, if anything. Later I checked with Julie McHale, recreation assistant director of programs. The final sales count is still not in, but sales were around 900, about 100 more than last year. Sales were very slow until after Christmas, she said. This year, however, advance tickets were sold at the Co-op Supermarket and after Christmas over 500 tickets were sold there making that change in sales procedures a great success. McHale couldn't comment on the size of the crowd at the Community Center because she was not there, but she felt that the crowd at the Youth Center where the teens gathered was larger, much like a grad night, she said. She also said that the band at the Greenbelt Arts Center, Adrenaline, was a big draw and that when its performance ended there was a large influx into the Youth Center. Unfortunately, a second band cancelled out from the Arts Center that evening.

Fireworks

Missing from this year's festivities were the fireworks. We had commended the beauty of the displays held in prior years and missed their presence this year. The budget for city special events for the current fiscal year had been cut by $3,000 and the fireworks were the event chosen for elimination. I am told that fireworks are an important part of the New Year's celebration among Hispanics and their popularity at this time of year is growing. However, the early hour of the city display did not seem to me to be an appropriate time for them and the crowd watching them was quite small.

Herling's Top 10

All evening at Greenbelt New Year 2004 designated Master of Ceremonies Konrad Herling worked on his top 10 list of reasons that tell you when you have lived in Greenbelt too long. Unfortunately, the celebrating crowd, armed with horns and rattles, was in no mood to hear speeches, even from Herling, and few heard his list, which we have printed below along with his attribution of authorship.

1. You bought your last suit from S. Klein's (Herling)
2. You know your way anywhere in Greenbelt (Jim Giese)
3. You remember when women couldn't wear shorts in the Roosevelt Center (Herling)
4. You remember when men couldn't be bare chested at the swimming pool (unless swimming in the pool). (Tom Hieber and daughter Janet)
5. You can remember when your tax bill went down (Jim Giese)
6. You think the "Center" is the center of the universe (Jackie Downs)
7. It takes two hours to shop at Co-op (Dan Hamlin)
8. You remember when you could shop at North End (don't recall)
9. When you know the "Little Miss Greenbelt" who's just moved to Green Ridge House (Kevin Hammett)
10. When you call the weekly newspaper The Cooperator (Dan Hamlin).

What the best answer is for future fireworks, I don't know, but we, for two, surely did enjoy them.

Activity Book Helps Kids with Surgery

Former Greenbelter Marjorie Bergemann has written a children's coloring and activity book, "Sweet Dreams at the Hospital," published by the American Association of Nurse Anesthetists. In writing the book, Bergemann sought to help children and their parents confront their fears about undergoing surgery and to understand what they will face in the hospital or surgical center.

Bergemann is a nurse anesthetist who lived in Greenbelt for 44 years and worked at several area hospitals. She is now retired and lives in Leesburg, Va.

The 27-page book, illustrated by Karen Monckton, features pictures to color, a connect-the-dots, a maze and a picture-word match game. Single copies may be ordered free of charge by email from shorton@aana.com or by calling 847-692-7050, ext. 3009.

Some Refinancing Costs Deductible

Taxpayers who took advantage of this year's low interest rates to refinance their mortgage may be eligible to deduct some costs associated with their loans on their 2003 federal tax return next year.

Taxpayers who itemize may deduct the "points" paid to obtain a home mortgage as interest. They may deduct the points on the mortgage related to a home purchase or a home improvement in the year paid but for other loans such as a refinanced mortgage they must deduct the points over the life of the loan.

To figure the annual deduction amount, divide the total points paid by the number of payments to be made over the life of the loan. Usually, this information is available from the lender. For example, a homeowner who paid $2,000 in points on a 30-year mortgage (360 monthly payments) could deduct $5.56 per payment or a total of $66.72 for 12 payments. Taxpayers may deduct points only for those payments actually made in the tax year.

A taxpayer who uses part of the refinanced mortgage money to pay for improvements to the home and meets certain other requirements may generally deduct the points associated with the home improvements in the year paid, spreading out the rest of the points over the life of the loan.

When refinancing for a second time or paying off a loan early a taxpayer may deduct all the not-yet-deducted points from the first refinancing when that loan is paid off.

Other closing costs such as appraisal fees and processing fees generally are not deductible. Taxpayers with adjusted gross income above $139,500 ($69,750 if married, filing separately) also face limits on the amount of deductions they can take.

IRS Publication 936, "Home Mortgage Interest Deduction," has details on deductions related to refinancing. It is available at the IRS website, www.irs.gov or by calling 1-800-829-3676.

City Notes

During the week of December 29 the main focus of the Public Works Department was staffing additional trucks to clean up the extra volumes of refuse and recycling. Also, several crewmembers were involved in preparations for Greenbelt's New Year celebration. Two crewmembers worked with the Recreation Department staff through the night to ensure the success of the celebration.

The facilities maintenance crew replaced ceiling tiles in the Senior Game Room at the Community Center, replaced damaged floor tiles in the Nursery School classroom in the Community Center, assisted the streets crew and contractor with forming and pouring concrete for the new natural gas filling station at Public Works and assisted with preparation for the New Year's Eve celebration.

The streets crew continued traffic control by flagging for the construction crew working on Hanover Parkway and assisted and supervised the contractor who installed the island for the natural gas pumps at Public Works.

The parks crew picked up discarded Christmas trees throughout the city and installed two benches at the Community Center.

The horticulture crew cleaned landscaped beds for the winter at the Community Center and planted several Adopt-a-Trees.

Legion Launches Support Website

The American Legion, responding to increasing public interest unveiled a new section of its Internet website that answers the question: "How can I support our men and women in uniform?"

Visitors to www.legion.org can click the "Support Our Troops" link to find ways to reach out to U.S. service members and their families, become a participant in prayer, or for volunteer opportunities, blood donations or making scholarship contributions.

The American Legion's Family Support Network is a key program providing crucial aid to spouses and children of military personnel. Through the Family Support Network, local posts adopt military families by helping to pay bills, providing childcare and other services.

Looking to the future, the American Legion September 11th Memorial Scholarship Fund is being funded to ensure the children of active-duty service members killed following September 11, 2001, including during Operation Iraqi Freedom, will have an opportunity for higher education.

Greenbelt's local American Legion Post #136, located on Greenbelt Road, is one of the largest and most active in the state.

count with HP.

Recently I had the pleasure of meeting Lisa to interview her for this article and was struck by her enthusiasm and love for her family and this community in which she was raised.

Athletic Family

The entire family was athletic; the parents were involved in their children's sports activities from the very beginning with the Greenbelt Boys & Girls Club. Lisa was the first girl on an all-boy soccer team. She also played basketball. Lisa's education began at St. Hugh's Catholic School and continued at Elizabeth Seton High School in Bladensburg, where she placed All MET. She attended the Catholic University of America and graduated with a B.A. in 1986.

Statistics

The following statistics are from the varsity records maintained at CUA: Lisa Kellaheer Doolan, 1982 - 1986; NCAA Division III Basketball All-American in 1986; leading scorer in CUA women's basketball history (1,592 points); scoring average (17.3 points); assists (253); holds the record for the most free throws made in one game (18); and holds the all-time single season field goal record (242); led CUA to three winning seasons and to the Franklin & Marshall Tournament Championship and the CUA Invitational Championship during her senior year. She scored 25 points as CUA stunned the defending national champions, Scranton University, for a 74-71 win that year. The Washington Archdiocese Catholic Youth Organization (CYO) selected her as the College Player of the Year in 1986. In 1984, 1985 and 1986 she was selected MVP of CUA's Invitational. She also was named to the "Catholic All-America Team" in Iowa in 1984 and 1985, and earned MVP honors at the Franklin and Marshall Tournament in 1986.

Growing Up

Lisa continues her interest in basketball, officiating at games at the college and high school level for the past 13 years in Prince George's, Howard, Calvert, Charles and St. Mary's Counties.

During the interview for this article, Lisa reminisced about growing up in a large family in Greenbelt and the heartfelt memories she carries of her brothers and sisters and of her wonderful parents and the great sacrifices they made to provide her and all her siblings with a Catholic education. She had earlier spoken of the intense passion she felt for basketball and winning; however, what truly touched my heart was her obvious love, actually her intense passion, sincere appreciation and gratitude for all that her family has done for her and her siblings. "I feel so blessed to have grown up in a place like Greenbelt," Lisa said.

I am truly blessed to know Lisa Kellaheer Doolan. Congratulations, Lisa!

a car or answer the telephone. Not bad for an official hardship post.

Hardships

Not to say it's not a hardship in other ways. We cannot walk around freely or go anywhere without security, we are quite frustrated with the electricity going out every hour or so and the days without water to take a shower (and the lack of a real shower stall), though at least we have generators (which most Iraqis do not). The compound is a constant renovation zone, things frequently break down, I can't get American news or sports scores on TV (but get all the latest cricket and rugby scores on the BBC), have no newspaper to read and of course cannot read any of the signs (though many do have English versions). Then there are the quirky things. Napkins are apparently not used in Iraq, nor paper towels and although we are well fed, desserts seem to be banned in Iraq, along with canned or packaged anything.

The Team

The Team Leader, a Yemeni from New York City, is great to work for. Other team members include the utilities specialist originally from Haiti, the security coordinator from Western Australia, the Iraqi native from Arizona. You see the coalition from here: all the British, many Aussies, the non-governmental organizations from Denmark and Czechoslovakia, plus the Salvation Army. Then there is the Arab-American Naval Academy graduate who was casually perusing the list of new assignments from the Navy when he suddenly saw his name and then saw "Iraq" and was sure it must be some mistake.

It's all a strange and exhilarating experience and I feel every mile of the distance between here and there. It is the adventure of a lifetime.

Here's wishing you a holy and wonderful Christmas.

Student Playwrights' Work to Be Read

Plays written by students from the Hyattsville Middle School, Magnet for the Creative and Performing Arts, will be read at the Goldenhorn Recital Hall of the Clarice Smith Performing Arts Center, University of Maryland, on Friday, January 16 at 7:30 p.m. The readers will be actors from the National Players, "America's Longest Running Classical Touring Company." The actors are doing this reading as the culmination of a fall semester residency with the Olney Theatre Center for the Arts. The program is free.

Teacher Achieves National Honor

Greenbelt resident Ed Crowley is one of 8,195 elementary and secondary school teachers nationwide who achieved National Board Certification in 2003, according to the National Board for Professional Teaching Standards (NBPTS). This achievement brings the total number of National Board Certified Teachers to 32,130.

Crowley teaches Early Childhood Special Education at Fort Foote Elementary School. He has been a teacher for seven years and holds degrees in English (B.A.) and Recreation (M.A.).

"NBPTS celebrates and congratulates all teachers who went through the rigorous National Board Certification process," says NBPTS Board Chair Roy E. Barnes. "This impressive achievement is widely recognized at the national, state and local levels as a benchmark for teacher quality. This is also an indication that policymakers, educators, business and community leaders and parents recognize that when it comes to a quality education, quality teaching matters."

The NBPTS is an independent, nonprofit, nonpartisan and nongovernmental organization governed by a board of directors, the majority of whom are classroom teachers. Its mission is to establish high and rigorous standards for what accomplished teachers should know and be able to do. For more information about NBPTS, visit <http://www.nbpts.org>.

Magnolia Elementary Brings in the Cans

Magnolia Elementary School had a very successful can drive according to Wendy Deemer, counselor at Magnolia.

From December 1 through 12 children at Magnolia brought nonperishable canned food for the needy during the holiday, culminating in the grand total of 1,440 cans.

Beginning by sending out flyers for publicity, the drive gained strength as competition among the classes escalated. A long chart was put up in the hall with each teacher's name on it. For every five cans brought in, a shopping cart was added to each classroom teacher's part of the chart. Some math was involved, especially for the younger children, as the children had to decide how many more cans would be needed to make the five necessary for the shopping cart. Older children could figure out how many cans their classes brought in by multiplying, etc.

Members of the Magnolia Elementary Student Council executive board: Lauren Sanders, president, Jessica Ramirez, vice president, Callie Ellis, secretary, Erich Fredersdorff, treasurer, Jennifer Kim, assistant secretary and Jordan Tillman, assistant treasurer.

This drive was the work of the student council which is composed of two representatives from each class, including kindergarten. These representatives kept track of their classes every day on their own class chart and could visualize it on the chart in the hallway.

Mr. Price's fourth grade class won the competition with a total of 327 cans. The class was told they could choose something that was free as a prize. They chose a free homework pass (one assignment which didn't need to be completed).

Football Player Derrick Harvey Honored

Derrick Harvey of Eleanor Roosevelt High School has been nominated as an Old Spice Red Zone Player of the Year.

A Greenbelt resident, Harvey is among a select group of players who are eligible to be chosen and be honored in a full-page feature in USA Today in February.

For the third year, Old Spice is recognizing high school football players who go above and beyond the call of duty, particularly in the "red zone." These athletes embody leadership, performance and desire and serve as examples to their teammates on and off the field.

Harvey is also eligible to be named one of 50 national Players of the Year. The top 50 players nationwide will be named Red Zone Players of the Year and will receive a plaque and other awards.
