Open Space Funds, Middle School And Legislation Occupy Council

by Thomas X. White

The only regular Greenbelt City Council meeting scheduled for November was held on Monday, November 24. It was a light one with only four business items on the agenda, four presentations and no petitions and requests. Councilmember Konrad Herling was unable to attend.

The four business items included a staff recommendation for council action to preserve the city's allocated share of State Program Open Space funding by reallocating funds for future land acquisitions to immediate park development projects, consideration of a draft staff-proposed state and county legislative program and recommendations by the city's Advisory Committee on Education (ACE) report relating to Greenbelt Middle School construction. (Discussion of the first season of the Farmers Market appears below.)

Program Open Space

Program Open Space (POS) turned out to be the only controversial topic of the evening. City staff provided an update on the city's allocated POS funds and a brief report noting that due to financial challenges facing the state, the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) has advised counties and local jurisdictions to encumber (i.e. program for use) all of their allocated POS funds by the end of this year so that unencumbered funds are not indiscriminately "swept away" for another use.

Staff noted to council that the city's POS monies are considered encumbered once a project application is submitted to the DNR POS staff and approved by the State Board of Public Works. The city's current POS account has $411,157 in unencumbered development funds (generally to be used for parks and recreation equipment or structures) and $868,235 in unencumbered land acquisition funds for a total of $1,309,392 in unencumbered POS funds.

These unencumbered funds, according to the staff report, could be threatened or otherwise lost if the state sought to use them as a partial cushion for their overall budget shortfalls due to the national fiscal crisis.

Staff has also learned from Prince George's County officials that, because the county has not met its own open space (acquisition) goals, it is required to use 50 percent of its POS allocation on acquisition projects, a requirement that also applies to local jurisdictions within the county. However, officials have indicated that the county is willing to allow the city as well as other jurisdictions to use all its encumbered fund balance on development projects, providing an opportunity for the city to protect its POS funds. The staff, therefore, has recommended that the city amend its Fiscal Year 2009 Annual POS Program to include only a total of five development projects in order to encumber the funds within the required time. Although this move would be a radical change from possible uses of the city's accumulated POS balances for strategic acquisitions of additional open space within or adjacent to the city, the staff argues that the POS program could be revised at any time.

Councilmember Rodney Roberts argued strongly against the staff recommendation. Roberts has been an ardent supporter of the city strategy to accumulate POS funds for possible open space acquisition and he consistently and strenuously has argued against the use of POS funds for other than land acquisition. He continued that position by voting against a motion made by Councilmember Leta Mach to approve the staff recommendation. The motion carried by a three to one

Greenbelt Farmers Market Discussed with Council

by Thomas X. White

Kim Kash, Kimberly Rush Lynch and Dorrie Bates discussed with council on Monday, November 8 the inaugural season of the Greenbelt Farmers Market and plans for next year. They reported that the number of weekly customers for the market was about 850.

The choice of the Sunday mid-day time for operating turned out to be good for the vendors and did not present parking issues for the site in the upper municipal parking lot.

Organizers of the market were pleased with the first year and noted that participating vendors were pleased with the Greenbelt community response to the market.

It was also noted that, instead of a possible negative impact on the Greenbelt Consumer Cooperative food store, the Co-op actually experienced a 6 percent increase in sales on Sundays this summer. In addition, the Co-op was able to build new vendor relationships and institute cooking demos at the store focusing on products available at the market.

The Farmers Market organizers have developed a nearly 850-person mailing list from the first season and, using an on-line survey, a method to assess the first-year operations and to obtain suggestions and ideas for approaching the second year of operations next spring.

The group is considering an earlier start in 2009, hoping to open the first weekend in May and continuing through the end of October. They informed council of some issues they are considering and may bring to council to discuss at another time.

One item was possibly providing more shade for the market's customers. Several options were mentioned and it was agreed that more thought has to go into a solution. Another item was possibly needing more space for additional vendors. One suggestion was to utilize the space immediately adjacent to the hillside between the upper lot and the small Community Center lot, which might also provide some needed shade.

More permanent signage for the market in areas of the city was also raised. Although

by David M. Johnson

If there is anyone who has perspective on teaching in different environments, it is 7th grade special education social studies teacher Marne Perez. Originally from the Philippines, this Greenbelt Middle School (GMS) teacher is in her first semester teaching and living in the United States.

Marne Perez

She was a little scared on the first day of class, she said, because of the language barrier but she is grateful that her team of fellow teachers and her mentor have been available to help each other out. According to Perez, she eventually discovered she had little trouble communicating with students. It was also encouraging for her to find out that children

Pamela Coffield Has Always Wanted to Teach Children

by Megan Gustafson

First grade teacher Pamela Coffield, who got her education degree from the University of the District of Columbia, easily takes charge of her busy classroom while her young students hustle and bustle about as the day begins.

Pamela Coffield

With 18 years of experience in elementary education, Coffield said she wanted to be a teacher from the time she was a little girl. In fact, she used to force her younger brother to play school with her, she said.

"We're a family here," Coffield said of Turning Point Academy, where the focus, she said, is on character education.

Coffield is "probably the most tenured teacher on staff," at the school, and leads the first grade

Not All Advice Is Good Advice

In the News Review November 27, 2008 issue (page 11), the article "Another Way to Save on Electric Bills" (no byline) is very misleading to your readership about power factor products to save on electric bills.

On the government's Energy Star website <http://energystar.custhelp.com>, here is what it says about power factor correction products:

"We have not seen any data that proves these types of products for residential use accomplish what they claim. Power factor correction devices improve power quality but do not generally improve energy efficiency (meaning they won't reduce your energy bill). There are several reasons why their energy efficiency claims could be exaggerated. First, residential customers are not charged for KVA-hour usage but by kilowatt-hour usage. This means that any savings in energy demand will not directly result in lowering a residential user's utility bill. Second, the only potential for real power savings would occur if the product were only put in the circuit while a reactive load (such as a motor) were running and taken out of the circuit when the motor is not running. This is impractical, given that there are several motors in a typical home that can come on at any time (refrigerator, air conditioner, HVAC blower, vacuum cleaner, etc.) but the unit itself is intended for permanent, unattended connection near the house breaker panel."

My work as a professional energy consultant corroborates this DOE statement. To reduce energy usage and save dollars, I performed hundreds of energy audits and analyses of energy usage in residential homes, apartment complexes, schools, hospitals and in light and heavy duty manufacturing plants. On only two occasions were the installation of power factor correction capacitors cost justified. In both cases these facilities used many high horsepower motors (>75 HP) in their manufacturing processes and were billed according to the factory's power factor.

In GHI homes electrical usage is primarily for non-reactive loads such as hot water heaters, space and baseboard heaters, lighting and electric ranges. These types of resistive heaters do not affect the electrical power factor. Additionally, residential customers are not charged by power factor but entirely on the number of kilowatt-hours used.

If readers want to reduce their energy bill here are some actions they can take. Start by reducing cold air infiltration into the house by caulking and weatherstripping all windows, doors, electrical outlets and around piping and wiring coming into the house; seal through-the-wall air conditioners with indoor or outdoor covers; seal and insulate attic door openings; install timers or programmable thermostats to reduce house temperatures according to occupancy schedules; set domestic hot water temperature to 120° F or less; install a controller (timer) for the water heater that shuts off the unit when there is no demand for hot water; install a low flow shower head (2 gallons per minute or less); install Energy Star CFL's lighting; and install motion detectors to activate outside lighting. Depending on the house and prior energy saving actions, these recommendations should reduce electrical usage by 25 to 30 percent.

Correction

Time flies In last week's edition it was reported that the 5K race scheduled on Saturday, December 6 celebrates the milestone of the 10th anniversary of the Wright Brothers' First Flight. While the race may be in its 10th year, the correct date of this historic flight is December 17, 1903, 105 years ago. Red-faced, the News Review wants to assure a correct historical record on this point.

All About SAT/PSAT Presentation Tuesday

On Tuesday, December 9 at 7 p.m., the Berwyn Heights Elementary School PTA and Educational Advisory Committee are sponsoring an educational presentation for county students in grades 7 to 11 and their parents, "All You Ever Wanted to Know About the PSAT & SAT (and Why You Should Know About These Tests)."

The presentation will cover who runs the tests, what they are and what they test; where to find information about the tests; why the tests are important even if they are not predictors of future success at anything; what doors they open and their relationship to college funding (with examples of how much money various universities can offer); how often they can or should be taken and how scores can be combined or withheld; when the tests are held (including which ones the public school system will pay for) or when the best times are to take them; and why it's never too early to start preparing for them. There will be sample test questions and other suggestions to illustrate what students can do to help themselves and what parents can do to help their children to ace these tests or at least to score as well as they possibly can. There will also be information about how many National Merit Semifinalists there are every year and the scores needed in Maryland and around the country to become a National Merit Semifinalist (including the states where it is easiest or hardest to become a National Merit Semifinalist).

The presentation will be held in the auditorium/multi-purpose room of the Berwyn Heights Elementary School, 6200 Pontiac Street in Berwyn Heights. (A Berwyn Heights Elementary School faculty member will offer Spanish interpretation.) Free parking is available.

On Screen

Wedding Is Occasion For Range of Emotion

"Rachel Getting Married" is the occasion for the prodigal daughter to return home. Kym (Anne Hathaway, last seen in Greenbelt in "Becoming Jane") emerges from rehab to be the maid of honor at her sister's wedding. The girls' estranged mother, played by Debra Winger, and father only add to the turbulent family dynamic, amplifying the emotional highs and lows of the story.

Directed by Jonathan Demme (who won an Oscar for directing "Silence of the Lambs"), the film was nominated for the Golden Lion prize at this year's Venice Film Festival. Rated R for sexuality and language; runtime is 113 minutes.

People of Many Faiths Join In Thanksgiving Service

by Rick Ransom

Wednesday evening before Thanksgiving, leaders and followers from the Catholic Community, Lutheran Church, Baha'i Community, Mishkan Torah Synagogue, Methodist Church, Rumi Club (Muslim) and St. George's Episcopal Church joined with the Greenbelt Community Church to hold a joint service of celebration. Sponsored by the Greenbelt Interfaith Leadership Association (GILA), this annual service rotates to the different houses of worship each year.

This year's theme seemed to be "one God, many faiths" but then it's kind of the same theme every year. In fact Roya Bauman of the Baha'i Community sang a song with her husband about the concept of "One God" as her part of the program. Other spiritual leaders read from the Old Testament, the Koran and other sources. Rabbi Jonathan Cohen cited in his Thanksgiving message the concept that we should start by being thankful just for each day and build our thankfulness from there.

The respect that these leaders hold for each other and for each faith was evident throughout with an occasional amen ringing out at the end of a reading or message. The congregation sang several songs to complement the messages, including "We Gather Together," "For the Beauty of the Earth," "Come, Ye Thankful People, Come" and closing with "America the Beautiful." I think the real message was in the service itself. It was a great reminder that we have many more similarities than differences in religious practice as well in life. Some of us may be experiencing some difficulties with the economy and certainly things could get tougher. But it was nice to look around and know that there are so many others going through the same fears and problems with whom we share our daily lives right here in Greenbelt.

I have a magnet on my refrigerator that reads, "As long as we're together, the rest will fall in place." You could have read the magnet and saved an hour, I suppose, but then you would have missed some grand sentiments and a wonderful aura that enveloped this group and from which all who participated could take some solace in togetherness. That's worth the price of admission to me. Oh, that's right, there was no admission. There was a free-will offering collected at the back of the church designated for the Good Samaritan Fund (food and gasoline) and for the Emergency Relief Fund (rental assistance). That's the Greenbelt way and it's great!

Bahá'í Teachings: Who, and what, are the Manifestations of God?

The Manifestations of God are like perfect mirrors that reflect the light of God. All these mirrors reflect the same Light. While God is beyond our reach, these perfect beings come to us from time to time, live among us, give us guidance, and fill us with the energy we need to progress, materially and spiritually. They are known by such names as Abraham, Moses, Buddha, Krishna, Zoroaster, Jesus Christ, Mohammad and Bahá'u'lláh.

City Continues to Fight Roosevelt Center Rats

The City of Greenbelt continues to address the rodent problem in the Roosevelt Center area. Steps that have already been taken to date include vigorously trimming the plant material lower to reveal burrows, covering trash cans, increasing the number of traps and increasing the number of exterminator visits.

While all of these actions have had some impact on the current rodent population, there has only been a minimal decrease in their activities. As a result, it was decided to call in a new exterminator with a fresh view of the situation.

The new contractor has suggested a more aggressive control program and also a long-term control program for Roosevelt Center. This program includes increasing the number of bait stations and more frequent monitoring. Eight bait stations will be placed in the shrub area of the courtyard. These will be mounted on paving stones and locked. Additionally, they will be placed within the shrubs so it will be difficult for them to be seen by passersby.

Two more bait stations will be placed near the statue along the fence line. These will also be secured and locked. Six bait stations will be placed in the basement of the movie theater. The contractor will begin to service the existing bait stations. The buried one will be excavated and relocated. This company has been contracted by the city for initial and long-term control and will be advising staff on other aspects of keeping the Center free of pests.

It is important for residents to be aware of the following information from the Centers for Disease Control: "The best way to prevent a rodent infestation and contact with rodents is to remove the food sources, water and items that provide shelter for rodents."

Public Works can effectively mitigate some of the concerns but others must be addressed by business owners and operators as well as residents using the Center. The cooperation of all those concerned is vital in controlling this problem.

2008 Gobble Wobble

In what is quickly becoming a Greenbelt tradition, the Greenbelt Recreation Department held the third annual Gobble Wobble on Thanksgiving morning. Despite the cold and damp weather, a record crowd was on hand for the event. A total of 91 individuals registered for this year's Gobble Wobble. Many runners were on hand either competing for a top 3 finish in their category or just seeking a good run before their Thanksgiving meal. This year was by far the most competitive racing year. Numerous walkers also participated in the event. Keeping with the goal of the Gobble Wobble, many families registered for the event. Once again, Sergeant Chuck Dyson from the Sergeant's Program led a warm-up activity for all participants prior to the race/walk. The 3.1 mile race and 1.5 mile family fun run/walk began with the firing of a starting gun and the now well-famous turkey mascot of the Gobble Wobble leading the way. The course began on the path beside Braden Field and took runners around Greenbelt Lake. All youth participants received a medal upon completion of the race/walk. Prizes were awarded to the top 3 male and female finishers. The top finishers are listed below.

Kindergarten Teacher Lucas Makes His Classroom Fun

by Megan Gustafson

Having parents who took care of foster children and the birth of his own child were two factors that led Turning Point Academy kindergarten teacher Demetrius Lucas into education.

Children's minds, he said, are like sponges and "if you give them good academics, my thought process is maybe they'll have a good outlook toward education in the future."

Lucas, who holds a master's degree in education, is in his first year of teaching in Prince George's County and taught previously in Southeast D.C. for six years, he said.

According to Turning Point Academy principal Dr. Kenneth Jones, Lucas's kindergartners will have learned a lot by the time they leave his classroom. As a teacher, Lucas is "creative in trying to impart knowledge to youngsters," he said.

And, Lucas makes his classroom fun for the students: "If they [the children] do well, they get treats. He does a Thanksgiving dinner. When he had a birthday, he gave them [the children] a party," Dr. Jones said.

Lucas said he likes to incorporate liberal arts as well as urban music in his teaching. "We play a lot of games, we do a lot of work," he said of his classroom.

"I really enjoy teaching, [and] I hope to retire from this profession," Lucas said.

New Middle School Teacher Enjoys Life on the East Coast

by David M. Johnson

Even though 8th grade English teacher Kathryn Eissfeldt has only been living in Prince George's County for a few months, she already feels at home here. "I've found Greenbelt to be a very welcoming place. I like the people and the location a lot," said

Kathryn Eissenfeld

Eissfeldt about her new home and job. "Everyone has been so nice."

Being a first-year special education teacher at Greenbelt Middle School has given her a renewed energy each day in the classroom after years of being a student herself. According to Eissfeldt, the opportunity to be helpful to children was one of the reasons she wanted to be a teacher. "There are not too many jobs where you get to be creative every day," said Eissfeldt.

She believes middle school is an under-recognized time for children to reinforce the skills introduced in elementary school before confronting the stresses of high school and then college. According to her, the importance of middle school can sometimes get lost in the shuffle.

"At the age of middle school students, most people can look back and remember an awakening in their education," said Eissfeldt. "If that is not accomplished, then by high school it may be too late to grasp the basic skills."

Even in her short time teaching, Eissfeldt has already grown to appreciate the special relationship a teacher forms with her students. "I love the way they pop in and say good morning," said Eissfeldt.

One story Eissfeldt already has that she finds touching involves a student who always seemed to be hanging out in her classroom, even at times she was supposed to be somewhere else. When asked to explain herself the girl said, "I like it here because I'm learning things."

One important aspect of the curriculum, according to Eissfeldt, is the 25 Book Campaign. Over the year each student will be encouraged not only to finish 25 books but also to be able to comprehend and answer questions about them. "I'm pleased to report most of the kids are on track so far and in general are pretty motivated to finish the 25 books," said Eissfeldt.

Originally from Peoria, Illinois, Eissfeldt earned her undergraduate degree at Illinois Wesleyan. Her post-graduate studies included spells at Bradley University in her hometown and at Syracuse University.

"This is not a knock on the Midwest but I really enjoy living in a place where people come from so many different backgrounds," said Eissfeldt about her move to the East Coast. Since moving to the area, Eissfeldt has also tried to take advantage of her access to the District of Columbia and has enjoyed visiting all the different museums.

are alike no matter what country they are in.

"The kids are the same here as they are in Manila because they develop the same and have the same likes and dislikes," said Perez. According to her, food, books and the school bus system are not as good in the Philippines compared with those in Prince George's County because there is not enough money.

When it comes to what goes on during class, her attitude is the same no matter what time zone she happens to be in. "In class the work time is everything; the kids should be focused," said Perez.

Consistent Rules

Perez tries to keep simple, consistent rules that help everything run smoothly. She lets students choose from a prize box for good work and she also has a way to deal with the occasional problem. "The first day of class, of course, they are going to try to test you; it's in their nature," said Perez with a smile. "I just ignore the little things because it is up to you how the class goes from there."

In her classroom Perez incorporates reading into her lessons on the Eastern Hemisphere and current events. She tries different methods of teaching for each individual student because everyone is unique.

Currently Perez is a thesis away from a master's degree in education from the University of the Philippines. She is exploring options that would allow her to finish her thesis online. According to her, she was lucky to land in Greenbelt. "It is true, it's a livable place," said Perez.

To sum up her teaching philosophy, Perez looks to a poem by Haim Ginott that was given to her by one of her former teachers. She is eager to share the poem with anyone who cares to ask. It ends with some advice for teachers: "In all situations, it is my response that decides whether a crisis will be escalated or de-escalated; and a child humanized or dehumanized."

teachers, Dr. Kenneth Jones, principal, said. And she has been able to take some students who were behind and help them catch up, he said.

She has "great classroom management skills [and] uses a lot of innovative structure [and] tools," Jones said.

"She makes it fun for them as well," he added.

Coffield often sees her former students and they come up and say "Hi" to her. In fact, one of them, whom she taught in kindergarten in 1994, is now playing basketball at Syracuse University, she said.

Oh, and the brother Coffield used to force to play school with her? He now holds a Ph.D. and is a principal in D.C. public schools, she said.

Tennis Ass'n Wins Cassels Award to Teach Youths

by Steve Kane

The Greenbelt Consumer Co-operative, Inc. (GCC) awarded its third annual Jim Cassels Community Service Award to the Greenbelt Tennis Association (GTA) for its Kid's Tennis Clinic. In announcing the winner of the $1,000 award at the Co-op's annual meeting on November 1, Steve Kane said, "The selection committee was impressed by GTA's initiation of a tennis clinic that would include children who would normally not be exposed to tennis and all its benefits."

The award is given to a Greenbelt organization for projects or activities that significantly contribute to the community and is named in honor of the late Jim Cassels, who gave tirelessly to his community, whether helping local groups, mentoring new co-operatives, guiding the formation and realization of senior housing or getting up at the crack of dawn to deliver newspapers in Green Ridge House.

In accepting the award on behalf of GTA, Bill Wilkerson thanked GCC members and stated that "The tennis clinic is aimed at teaching tennis skills, the rules of the game and sportsmanship to approximately 20 boys and girls under 14 years old and is intended as an alternative activity for exercise, fun, and personal growth." Cam MacQueen, also of GTA, said, "This recognition will allow the GTA to create and manage a first-rate community tennis experience for the kids, while providing the program with important credibility."

MacQueen stated that the $1,000 award money will pay for professional instructors, purchase equipment for the tennis clinic and supply GTA T-shirts for the kids. Stipends to high school assistant instructors will be available.

To initiate the program, clinic leaders MacQueen and Wilkerson recruited Springhill Lake Elementary, Greenbelt Elementary and Greenbelt Middle School this past fall to participate in the program. Within a matter of weeks (and before applying for the award), GTA collected a sufficient number of donated racquets, thanks to the generosity of Greenbelt residents (including Mayor Judith Davis). The Greenbelt Recreation Department reserved court time at the Braden Field tennis courts and provided a place to store the racquets, ball hoppers and numerous tennis balls donated by the GTA. It also donated court lighting.

GTA solicited coaching assistance from area instructors – some professionally certified. Darryl Price brought his U.S. Tennis Association experience in teaching kids' tennis to help the other instructors. Two Eleanor Roosevelt High School tennis team players were enlisted, with senior Phil Wilson receiving community service hours for his participation. Senior Subodh Arora, won GTA's David Craig Tournament in September as Men's A singles and A doubles champion. He also plays on the ERHS tennis team. Professional coach Damon Austin gave the volunteer instructors tips on coaching, exercises to use with the kids and led one of the clinics. GTA member Sam Sain, a member of GTA for nearly 30 years, who has taught kids for much of that time, donated his expertise.

The 20 available slots were quickly filled with students, with others placed on a waiting list for next spring, when even more instructors will be recruited. The first of the six clinics was held on September 22 and was greeted with excitement by the children and their parents. MacQueen and Wilkerson were pleased with the diversity of students who came from the targeted local schools as well as the Friends Community School and St. Hugh's.

Student participants in the GTA included: Nelson Chen, Christopher Acha, Beatrice Acha, Alexandra Sherman, Christopher Sherman, Vanessa Phillips, Julia Pedersoli, Saad Akram, Dante McMullen, Grace Seo, Daniel Seo, Nia Brown, Nick Serra, Jeremy Tuthill, Julia Tartaro, Lenny Garner, Linda Kuo, Matthew Early, Jazmin Castrillo, Adrian Davis and Omari Williams.

The participants met weekly and to encourage continued interest in the sport, each student was presented with a tennis instruction manual, a racquet and tennis balls. By the last clinic held on November 10 the instructors were happy to note the progress of the students. The Greenbelt Tennis Association is looking forward to moving ahead with plans for the kid's spring tennis clinic just as the Jim Cassels Award Committee is looking forward to its search for the next deserving winner of its award in 2009.

Artists on the Avenue Open New Shop on Route One

by Anke Bettina Irgang

A sense of comfort and calm cheerfulness is the first impression that greets visitors as they enter Artists on the Avenue, a small shop selling locally produced, handmade arts and crafts. The store, which opened its doors in October at 5614 Baltimore Avenue in Hyattsville, is based on the cooperation of more than 50 local artists.

One of many Greenbelt artists featured in the store, Missy Dodd specializes in hand-painted Christmas ornaments. She also paints in-house murals for customers of her decorating business and offers counted cross-stitch patterns from photographs.

Dodd said she appreciates the opportunity to cooperate with other local artists: "Not only do we have a place to showcase our art but we have a network of artists to work with and to share ideas." Her tiny teapots won the grand prize several years ago in a Good Housekeeping Magazine holiday contest.

Kimberly Stark, another Greenbelt resident, works mainly with Shrinky Dinks, a brand of large plastic sheets that shrink when heated. However, she has also experimented with a number of other art forms, including embroidery and charcoal drawing.

The idea to open a cooperative store that displays and sells local art was first conceived by fused-glass artist Tina Van Pelt of Riverdale Park.

Local Art

"I feel strongly that our community deserves a place to buy locally produced art and our local artists deserve a place to sell to the community," she said.

Van Pelt, who has been teaching art classes at the Greenbelt Community Center for several years, uses fused glass to create jewelry and ornaments. Her colorful products are displayed alongside a variety of bead necklaces, candles, shawls, hand-painted greeting cards and woodwork.

The work of such Greenbelters as stained glass artist Richard McMullin; Maria Ross, who makes fused-glass jewelry; photographer Ron McWildier; and Liza Linder, who works with

by James Giese

There are generous donors to charitable and nonprofit organizations in and around Greenbelt. Prince George's County led all area jurisdictions in giving as a percentage of adjusted gross income reported on federal income tax forms in 2005. The $4,879 average deduction for donations to charitable groups per tax return with itemized deductions filed by county residents was 6.23 percent of reported income, a percentage higher than for the state, the District of Columbia or any other county in the Washington Metropolitan Area. This conclusion is based upon data accumulated by the Urban Institute's National Center for Charitable Statistics obtained from Statistics of Income provided by the Internal Revenue Service for 2005, the last year for which complete data is available.

Two area jurisdictions, Montgomery County with $5,073 and the District with $6,871, had higher average deductions for charitable giving for those filing itemized tax returns but with donations comprising only 3.03 percent of income and 4.54 percent respectively, these two jurisdictions fell far short of the 6.23 percent reported for Prince George's. The Virginia area jurisdictions lagged behind all Maryland area jurisdictions and the District both in the average amount of donations reported and the average amount as a percentage of income reported. Fairfax County led the Virginia group with average deductions for charitable contributions of $4,596. For donations as a percentage of income, the City of Alexandria and Manassas and Prince William Counties virtually tied for the lead among Virginia area jurisdictions at 2.8 percent.

State Data

According to 2006 data provided for the 50 states and the District of Columbia, also from the same sources, Maryland ranked sixth in average adjusted gross income reported at $66,643. Connecticut at $82,682 ranked first, the District second at $74,399 and Virginia 10th at $63,626. Betty Sonneveldt Honored With "Nice Guys Award"

by Kellie Woodhouse

Betty Sonneveldt may play many roles in life – wife, swim team volunteer, mother, tutor, grandmother, role model, scuba diver and full time teacher – but, in the end, she can be summed up with one simple word: unwavering. Throughout her 30 years of tutoring students, many of whom can't read a menu, subtract complex numbers or string together a sentence in English, Sonneveldt has not once given up on a student.

In her eyes, every person is worth a fight, whether that means combating a lousy home situation or the inability to do long division.

"She just never, never gives up on anybody and the people that she works with feel that," says Gail Drake, executive director of the Prince George's County Literacy Council. "People meet Betty and they see what she does and they wonder where the energy comes from because there seems to be an unlimited amount of energy to give."

Plucked out of nearly 100 volunteers and philanthropists, Acadia Federal Savings Bank awarded Sonneveldt its annual "Nice Guys Award" in October for her work with the Literacy Council. Along with a lot of unexpected attention, the award includes a $3,000 donation to the charity or nonprofit of Sonneveldt's choice – the Literacy Council of Prince George's County in Hyattsville, where she has served as a volunteer Instructional Specialist for more than four years.

The Literacy Council provides free tutoring in reading, elementary math and the English language. Sonneveldt initiated the council's high school diploma instruction program, which has also helped hundreds of patrons prepare for their G.E.D. tests. Since she began the program in 2004, the Literacy Council has helped over 100 adults earn Maryland high school diplomas. Over all, nearly 1,400 county residents of all ages benefit from the council's services.

The Literacy Council will use Sonneveldt's monetary award toward helping fund its adult literacy instruction program and its new family education program which targets children 3 and under.

Surpasses Most

According to Drake, Sonneveldt's efforts surpass those of most tutors. Whether it's a few encouraging words, a ride home, an open conversation or a few groceries, Drake says that Sonneveldt utilizes her benevolence and creative nature to find solutions to her clients' needs, even if these go beyond adding and subtracting.

"Every individual that she interacts with she accepts as a whole human being and she sees their potential," says Drake, adding that "being valued is new" for many of the students Sonneveldt works with. "Everybody who has been a part of Betty's world becomes a part of her family."

Sonneveldt said that ever since she's had kids, she realized that people on her street and in her life needed help of some sort and, since then, she's felt compelled to volunteer.

"You see people in the grocery store and you see them loading the groceries in their car and they go to work every day and you assume that they have the skills we do," said Sonneveldt, "and it's not always true."

And while Sonneveldt excels in the personal aspect of her volunteer work, she's an intuitive tutor as well.

"She really knows the pedagogy of what works and what doesn't. She knows the best practices and she uses them," Drake said, adding that one of Sonneveldt's unique features is "the level of energy she has to do constructive things."

In addition to her work at the Literacy Council, Sonneveldt is a Home and Hospital teacher for Prince George's County school system and a recently appointed member of the Parks and Recreation Advisory Board in Greenbelt. In the past, she has volunteered as a Brownies leader, room mother for her children's classrooms, president of the Greenbelt Nursery School, president of the Lakeside Citizens Association and a Greenbelt Boys and Girls Club helper. She also spent over 13 years volunteering for her children's swim team.

And she's passed on the volunteering bug to her children, her friends and her neighbors, who, she says, have all helped promote adult literacy.

Sonneveldt says that of all her volunteering activities, she has a passion for working with adults.

Worthwhile Work

"It's really worthwhile to work with adults because they can become your friends and it's an amazing gift to be part of their journey," said Sonneveldt; "you realize that they have the same problems as you."

But more than creating friendships, Sonneveldt says that a person who has been helped will give back tenfold.

"I'm gonna be gone some day but I'm leaving behind a lot of grandkids and I want the world to be a better place for them," said Sonneveldt. "The bottom line is if somebody becomes better educated they're gonna get a better job and they're gonna pay more taxes and they're gonna give back. It just makes sense."

vote.

Middle School

In other matters council agreed with an ACE recommendation to send a letter to the governor supporting project funding for construction of a new Greenbelt Middle School (GMS) by keeping the GMS project a high priority for state funding by the Interagency Committee for school construction.

Legislation

Council is planning for its annual legislative dinner with the city's state and county representatives and the city staff provided recommendations for state and county issues. Council amended the staff recommendations with only a few minor changes.

The four top state issues for the city will be legislation to enable new site plan authority for the city, public safety funding for the municipal costs associated with a required upgrade to the emergency radio system, funding for the dredging of Greenbelt Lake for water quality purposes and state legislation to encourage or require gas stations to offer alternative fuels.

At the county level, the highest priorities are the funding for a new Greenbelt Middle school, re-establishment of a county Landlord-Tenant Commission, increased Maryland-National Capital Park & Planning funding for Greenbelt recreation and parks programs and continued funding for land acquisition and construction of a new Greenbelt Fire Station.

The legislative program will also include information on a host of other issues or programs where the city has an interest and long-standing position, such as support for the Purple Line project and continued opposition to the Intercounty Connector (ICC) and the proposed extension of Kenilworth Avenue to Laurel and the ICC.

Recycle Awards

Council made the annual "Recycle Right" awards to Greenbelt homeowners selected from among the several neighborhoods based on their excellent adherence to the city's recycling criteria and the appearance of their recycle bins and recycled items. Residents from each of the city's four waste collection routes and the contracted route in Greenbelt East were selected by Public Works staff for the coveted awards.

Luisa Robles and Will Smith of Public Works presented the awards to Colin and Suzette Israel of Landon Court; Vivian, William and Natalie Olsen of Boxwood Village; Thomas and Jeanne McArdle of Crescent Road; Maria Teresa and Derrick Jones of Emily's Way and Linda Lacey of Ridge Road. In addition to a new decorated recycle bin, awardees received a Frisbee, T-shirt and the opportunity for a photo op with the mayor, council and Robles and Smith of Public Works.

The mayor presented Councilmember Rodney Roberts with a Prince George's County Municipal Association Longevity Award, recognizing his 17 years of service on the Greenbelt City Council.

Beverly Palau, the city's public information officer, received a proclamation from the mayor in recognition of her initiative in developing programs honoring Municipal Government month in Greenbelt. This year Palau has created a new educational quiz show program, "Greenbelt Works," on the city's website that is designed to promote awareness of the role and function of Greenbelt government. Gift cards and prizes are awarded to elementary school age children who live in Greenbelt or attend school in Greenbelt.

CrimeReports.com

The last presentation was a video demonstration by Greenbelt Police Corporal Maria Parker of a new partnership the city has entered into with CrimeReports.com that will provide easy-to-read crime maps and automated alerts to Greenbelt residents on the Internet. The service, which is free to members of the public, allows people to view reported crime activity on an easy-to-use map for any location within Greenbelt and adjacent communities.

Parker noted that the report is updated nightly and that the system provides the date, time, location, incident type and number of reported crimes. The incident location is displayed at the block or intersection level.

She noted that the city's participation in the program for the first year has been funded by a Governor's Office of Crime Control and Prevention grant. After that grant expires, the city would have to pay approximately $100 per month to maintain the service.

Using the web address www.CrimeReports.com this reporter was able to access the crime map for Greenbelt neighborhoods, finding it easy to use and navigate to view reports associated with Greenbelt neighborhoods and the surrounding communities. The site also contains links to view the crime reports and for people to register to receive email alerts for reported crimes in their neighdifferent times for the market were considered, the 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. period seemed to work well and the Farmers Market board would be interested in only slight changes.

Council and staff reaction to the Farmers Market report was upbeat and staff saw no problems in renewing the market permit for 2009 and working with the organizers on signage issues. The staff report to council cautioned that while there may be opportunity for expansion, careful consideration needs to be given to maintaining the handicap parking along the north end of the lot, pedestrian safety, overall parking capacity and vehicular circulation around the market area.

Planetarium Event

On December 12 the Howard B. Owens Science Center will offer this month's program, "Susie's Snowflake." This is an introduction to the easily-recognized constellations in the winter sky. Driving Initiative Puts Youth in Go-Karts

by Vicki Kriz

School Resource Officer John Rogers of the Greenbelt Police Department sees the same thing every day at his post at Eleanor Roosevelt High School: young drivers driving too fast and recklessly on the road.

"When you first get your license, you cannot drive. Just because you pass a driving test does not mean you are a driver. It means that you have done the few skills the state requires of you and passed a written test," Rogers said. "You lack practical experience."

After a Greenbelt resident approached Rogers with the idea to teach pre-driving age youth (ages 14 to 16) the basics of driving using go-karts, he thought such a course could be an effective means to give youth practical driving experience. The resident observed that his three older children who had driven a go-kart as children have not been in any car accidents, while his youngest child, who had not used the go-kart, has been in several.

Rogers designed a curriculum for a course where pre-driving age students would not only learn the basics of driving and safe driving practices but would have the opportunity to practice such skills while driving a go-kart on a designated track. According to Rogers, no other such program exists in the country.

Go-karts are the ideal vehicle for this course because no license is required and vehicles can be adjusted for speed and size of the driver, Rogers said.

Funding Program

To fund the program, Rogers applied for a grant through State Farm Insurance and received $15,700 for the program. The program is also being sponsored by the Greenbelt Fraternal Order of Police, of which Rogers is president, and is supported by Eleanor Roosevelt High School's Students Against Destructive Decisions student group as well as local Boy Scout troop 746, whose members will serve as the first test class of Rogers' driving program.

"For the scouts, it's an opportunity to participate in the community, which is one of our fundamental themes," Scoutmaster Lenny Wertz said. Wertz said participating scouts would work to receive a traffic safety merit badge.

Scouts who complete the course will be asked to help facilitate future classes to encourage peer interaction. Ten to 15 scouts will participate in the first test class, anticipated to be held in May. After learning about the mechanics and maintenance of the go-karts, scouts will also take care of the upkeep of the karts.

Rogers' three-day curriculum includes traffic law, safe driving tactics, road rage and drag racing as well as proper procedures for interacting with police on the road. Rogers hopes that his program will encourage a positive interaction between the police and the city's youth.

One-day Courses

A one-day course will also be designed for middle-school-aged children with the first class expected to be held in the summer. According to Rogers, he will first give preference to children participating in the city Department of Recreation's summer program, Camp Pine Tree, to fill these spots.

Currently, Rogers is waiting on the arrival of the five go-karts he will use in his course. The go-karts seat two, one for the driver and the other for a peer facilitator. All riders will wear helmets. The go-karts will be kept in a locked storage container in a parking lot at Eleanor Roosevelt High School, where the course will be located. One go-kart, designated for Rogers, will be sent to the city's Department of Public Works to be painted and equipped like a police vehicle. He will drive this vehicle during the driving portion of the course, "pulling over" students to give encouragement and advice.

At the end of the third day, students will receive a certificate of completion. Students who complete the course will also be able to receive a discount on their insurance from State Farm, after viewing a State Farm-sponsored video shown during the course.

Rogers plans to have the program ready for the test class of scouts in May and hopes to have several classes open to the community over the summer.

CHEARS to Present Music for the Spirit

by Richard McMullin

The Chesapeake Education Arts Research Society (CHEARS) will offer KIVA, Music for the Spirit, on Friday, December 19 at 8 p.m. at the Greenbelt Arts Center.

The Stone Soup Project is a part of the CHEARS family of nonprofit projects dedicated to raising awareness and interest in a fragile environment and man's connection to nature through education, arts and research projects. Stone Soup takes its name from the classic folk tale of three travelers who convince a town of people to give a little to help make their meager stone soup just a little better by adding just what they can to the pot. CHEARS is like the travelers with music as the "soup," asking those who can give a bit of talent, expertise, resources, spirit and energy to the mix so in the end everyone can enjoy a feast of music. The emphasis is on music that lifts the spirit and engages the listener to think and see more of the natural world.

Stone Soup produces the music at the Green Man festivals and the Fall Harvest Festival and plans more such events with collaborators from many different groups.

Worldbeat Ensemble

KIVA is a percussive, acoustic, worldbeat ensemble that celebrates the magic and essence of nature and ancient bardic traditions with music to open the heart and heal the spirit. The band blends strong vocal harmo-nies with rich and diverse acoustic and electric instrumentation, performing originals, traditionals and covers. These modern day bards expertly weave mandolin, guitar, bass, cello, flutes, didgeridoo, percussion, violin and voices into a celebration of the natural world.

The musicians are inspired by many cultures, spiritual disciplines and musical styles, including Celtic-folk, folk-rock, blues, big band, traditional chants and jazz. KIVA is based in the Washington, D.C., metro area and has been nominated 14 times (so far) for the Washington Area Music (Wammie) Award. The group has been a part of the Washington area music scene since 1989. At a KIVA concert listeners will find mythology and traces of ancient cultures blending with natural imagery to create a tapestry of the world's history and preserving it for future generations.

Ariana Lightningstorm is a lead singer, songwriter and manager of KIVA. She grew up in a musical family which includes a band-directing mother (Frances Fox) and a famous operatic aunt in Italy (Barbara Demaio). Lightningstorm has taken her classical training in music into the creative realm of mythology and spiritual traditions from around the world. She was nominated for the DC Wammie Award in 1996 and 1998 as "Best New Age Female Vocalist."

Diana McFadden, a Greenbelt resident, has been playing with KIVA since the very beginning. A classically-trained cellist, Mc-Fadden is also self-taught in guitar, mandolin, cittern and various other string instruments. Her playing has been shaped by an interest in progressive rock, blues, jazz, eastern and Indian music, as well as medieval and various traditional musics. McFadden has performed with the Celtic folk band Iona, the Celtic-psychedelic band Green Crown and other bands such as Pomegranate and Longhouse. She has recorded with many of the local DC-area traditional folk bands. Diana also performs with the folk band Folk Nouveau and with Owain Phyfe of the New World Renaissance Band.

There is a fee for the performance (see ad on page 3).

Co-op Sales Reach $12 Million, Remodeling May Be in Stages

by Mary Moien

The annual meeting of the Greenbelt Consumer Cooperative (GCC) was held on November 1. The cooperative is better known as Greenbelt's Co-op Grocery Store. For the first time ever, the store reported annual sales in excess of $12 million. The board also announced that after months of discussion, the co-op would not be expanding into the empty space under the current store. The Greenbelt branch of the U.S. Post Office had occupied the lower level for many years.

Dorrie Bates, president of the GCC board, commented on some of the new activities at the store including in-store food demonstrations. She encouraged members to participate in board meetings which are held the last Wednesday of the month. Joe Timer, treasurer, presented much of the financial data, followed by Bob Davis, store manager.

The board devoted many hours to the issue of the Post Office space and what role the Co-op should play in occupying the building. The Co-op has the general lease on the entire property now and is the landlord for the Greenbelt Arts Center and for any future tenant of the empty space. However, the Co-op is not responsible for the rent on that space until a tenant is found. After discussing possible use of the building by the Co-op, the board decided not to expand into the space. They will continue to work on plans for remodeling the current store but within its current square footage. With the economic downturn, it might take longer than anticipated to complete the remodel. One of the most important areas is new freezer and refrigerated case space. The current equipment is old and uses more electricity than newer models.

Timer indicated that the store is "still a healthy business" and in a "very strong financial state." Total sales topped $12 million for the first time. About 43 percent of the income comes from the grocery part of the business and about 33 percent is from the pharmacy. Fees for the placement of the ATM machine and patronage refunds from the cooperative in Pennsylvania where much food is purchased, added to the bottom line.

On the expense side, rents and utilities continue to rise. The rent, under the new lease, is about 15 percent higher than before. Members of the cooperative receive a patronage refund each year. It was pointed out that the Co-op has paid back to members $1.5 million since the current Co-op was founded.

Co-op manager Davis echoed the board members by stating that the fiscal year ending in the summer was a "good year, not a great year, but a good one." He described the food business as buffered from the economy by the fact that it is a staple. There have been profits from the store in almost every year of the Co-op's 25 years of existence; those profits are returned to members and to staff (primarily as additions to their retirement plan).

Remodeling

Davis provided more information on the planned remodeling although he commented that he is not sure how many years he has been discussing this remodeling. They will concentrate on the existing floor plan. They have received and are reviewing bids. The cost should be about $1 million; however, the business is a cooperative so there are no funds set aside for the project. Once all the plans are evaluated they will seek funds, possibly through the National Cooperative Bank, of which they are shareholders. This is the same bank that loaned the members money to purchase the store 25 years ago. The board hopes to borrow all the money at once; if that is not an option, then remodeling will be done in segments.

Specifics of the remodeling include replacing all freezers and refrigerator cases, upgrading lighting, laying a new floor and painting the outside of the building. Davis emphasized the problems with the cases, describing ice cream with frost and a limited ability to display a larger number of items.

Member Questions

There was a complaint that the new gray plastic bags are weaker than the old bags. Davis agreed. He indicated that these were more biodegradable and so a supply was purchased. But, he indicated, that people were unhappy and he has stopped buying them; they are just using up the supply they have. Someone asked about charging for bags as a way to encourage people to bring their own bags. Davis indicated that he feels that a customer has a right to expect a bag, but they are looking into the idea of a 3 to 5 cent rebate for not using a new bag.

What about hand scanners for heavy items? Davis indicated that they had purchased hand scanners but that they did not work with the current computers. New hand scanners may be on the way, he said.

What about restrooms on the main shopping floor? Yes, Davis said they are trying to find a location for them.

Elections

Two current board members, Jill Stevenson and Tom Moran, had indicated that they would not be running for reelection this year. The slate of officers was presented, including current members Dorrie Bates, Joe Timer and Robert Gordon. Barbara Dickey Davis, appointed to fill Jill St. John's seat when she moved to Brussels, Belgium, was now running for an elected position on the board. Donna Hoffmeister also sought a seat on the board. Since the number of nominees equaled the number of board seats available, the board was elected by acclamation. The officers will be elected by the new board in early December. Timer announced that Co-op membership is now at 7,628 members, 1,381 of them voting members (members with a specific amount of funds in their accounts).

Cassels Service Award

Steve Kane, representing Greenbelt Climate Action Network, last year's recipient of the Jim Cassels Award, reported on how their grant had been spent and announced this year's winner. The Greenbelt Tennis Association (GTA) was selected in a difficult decision among seven worthwhile applications. The award is for $1,000. Bill Wilkerson accepted for the group and spoke briefly about GTA's kids program to provide tennis equipment and instruction for kids 8 to 13 years. The fall program, now completed, included 20 children representing all Greenbelt public elementary schools and the middle school. The award will be used to fund a professional instructor to supervise the volunteer instructors (who include two high school students as well as adult players) and purchase kid's tennis rackets, T-shirts and athletic shoes.

Door Prizes

At the close of business, attention turned to awarding of the door prizes. A toaster, a juicer, fleece shirt, sweatshirt and three $25 Co-op gift certificates were awarded. The top prize, a $50 Co-op gift certificate, was won by Konrad Herling. Each member present received a canvas Co-op bag, calendar and other small gifts.

Greenbelters Were Featured in Virtual Exhibit

by Barbara Simon

Two Greenbelt photographers, Bob Greene and Nora Simon, had their photographs included in Virtual Prince George's, the county exhibit in FotoWeek DC, a week-long celebration of photography that took place November 15 through 22. FotoWeek DC was the first annual gathering of a diverse and wide-ranging photography community in the nation's capital and included photographers, museums, galleries and universities in the area with exhibits, lectures and other events. Virtual Prince George's was on display through November 28 in the Lobby Atrium at 6525 Belcrest Road, in Hyattsville.

Greene had three photographs chosen for Virtual Prince George's, his first juried show. He states that he is relatively new to photography and appreciates that "photography offers the opportunity to look at length at a moment in time, to see what normally flashes by or, alternatively, to look more fully at what stands still, where we typically breeze past without noticing. I strive to look deeply at the world, admiring beauty in, at times, unexpected places."

Greene says he found tables and chairs humorously stacked as "Unintended Sculpture" at the Hirschorn Museum.

Nora Simon's photograph in the exhibit, "Camp Fire" is a study in abstraction. Nora is a student at the Pennsylvania College of Art and Design, majoring in graphic design. Her interest in photography is the result of a beginning photography class in art school and she is interested in every aspect of the medium. Greenbelt photographer Barbara Tyroler, who served on the Advisory Board to FotoWeek DC and was one of the two jurors for Virtual Prince George's, said about Nora's photograph: "I loved this photo when I first saw it, the intense red vibrating form in the foreground with the vague shadowing blur of a figure behind it.

Nora Simon's photograph "Camp Fire" was included in the exhibit.

I was thrilled to find out that it was created by our own Nora from Greenbelt!"

Virtual Prince George's was organized in conjunction with FotoWeek DC (www.fotoweekdc.org) and juried by photographers Mark Power and Barbara Tyroler. Tyroler is on the faculty of the Art Department of the University of Maryland where she teaches all of the photography classes offered. The Executive Board for Virtual Prince George's was a collaborative effort made possible by the teamwork of Valerie Watson, Visual Arts Specialist for the Arts and Cultural Heritage Division of M-NCPPC; Ethel Lewis from the Prince George's Arts Council; Ruth Harwood, assistant director, Montpelier Arts Center; and Nicole DeWald, the arts supervisor for the Greenbelt Recreation Department; as well as Tyroler.

Both Greene and Simon are members of the Greenbelt Photo Club, which meets the second Tuesday of every month, from 7:30 to 9 p.m., at the Greenbelt Community Center.

Barbara Tyroler and Bob Greene also contributed to this article.

Bob Greene's photograph "Unintended Sculpture" was one of three that were chosen for the virtual exhibit.
