City's Planning Board to Favor Craftstar Southcore Site Plan

by Thomas X. White

At the conclusion of its third meeting addressing a proposed revision for the approved detailed site plan for the South Core development in Greenbelt West, the Greenbelt Advisory Planning Board (APB) on August 19 took a straw vote on a modified proposal by the builder. By a vote of five to two, the Board gave APB Chairman George Branyan the go-ahead to prepare a report recommending to the Greenbelt City Council that covenants entered into between the project developers and the city in 2006 be changed to reflect modifications offered by the builder, Craftstar Homes.

The APB action relates only to 151 rear-loading townhomes proposed for the project. It does not cover additional front-loading townhomes, condominiums, rental apartments and retail that comprised the South Core development approved in 2006.

Throughout the APB review, the sticking points have been Greenbelt Planning and Community Development staff concerns that the Craftstar proposal represented a departure from the architectural design and elevations of the original Pulte proposal and the different treatments of the uniform alleyway between the townhome rows that had been designed to prevent homeowners from parking cars on the rear driveway.

A third issue was the status of several covenant, development and annexation agreements between the Metroland, LLC developers and the city that were linked to the South Core development's going forward. The culmination of those agreements has been delayed by the downturn in overall development activity caused by the present economic recession and the decision by Pulte Homes to drop their plans for the South Core.

Other Hurdles

APB members recognized several additional hurdles that the developers and Craftstar would have to overcome to secure the city's approval of the project, including the potential operation of Greenbelt's obligations under the Tax Incremental Financing (TIF) agreement entered into with the developers that would provide city financing of the proposed north-south connector road from Greenbelt Road to the South Core project.

Since the projected Craftstar sales prices for their 151 town homes are estimated in the $300,000 to $350,000 range, as opposed to the Pulte-proposed project estimated in the $600,000 range, the city will have to assess the projected revenue from the sale of homes at their new price levels to assure that the projected tax revenue can support the projected infrastructure costs for the project.

The TIF process allows for municipal/county financing for infrastructure in which the projected added property tax revenues from the project pay for the financing, presumably with no net cost to existing city taxpayers. This TIF and infrastructure issue is further complicated by the failure (up to now) of Prince George's County to fulfill their TIF commitments.

Fulfillment of these commitments would be needed for completion of the north-south connector road to the Metro, the proposed Metro parking structure to replace the existing Metro surface parking and the proposed new Beltway access ramp to the Metroland project from the east.

In addition, several developer commitments are included in a 2006 agreement between the city and the developers that are tied to the South Core. These include $25,000 for design of a recreational facility serving the South Core residents; a deed/transfer to the city of land from the developers for the proposed "town green" that would extend eastward from the townhome project toward the state-owned conservation area adjacent to Cherrywood Lane and a developer commitment to assist in

by Thomas X. White

Terri Hruby, the city's assistant planner, updated council on August 10 on the longstanding project to improve the stream course that handles storm water surface flow to the stream valley park between the Lakewood and Woodland Hills communities and eventually empties into Greenbelt Lake. This proposed project is one of several incremental improvements the city has been making to improve overall water quality for the Lake. This item has been on council's agenda for the past three years.

In September 2007 council unanimously voted to support concept plans prepared by Environmental Systems Analysis, Inc. (ESA) for the stream restoration project and directed staff to proceed with final design and printing. Hruby's presentation updated council on the progress of the project and described changes in the design elements.

She noted the addition of a proposed Coastal Plain Outfall, a relatively new technique providing infiltration capabilities to the overall strategy, lessening flows to the lake. She also noted a slight redesign of the stream bank slopes in certain areas to reduce the impact on trees in the project area.

The tree impacts had been noted during a February 2009 council tour of the project area. City staff recognized these tree impacts but feel that when the overall environmental value of the project is weighed against the loss of the trees, the project as proposed is worthy of implementation.

Nearby residents had been invited to a walk of the project area in April and though some residents expressed concern about the tree loss, the overall tone of the walk was positive. According to the project documents, up to 51 trees may be lost. Of these 51, three trees may be able to be saved.

Project Elements

Hruby described the elements of the project as a series of engineering techniques along the stream course that include stabilization of the banks and construction of an improved outfall and a plunge pool, part of the coastal plain outfall. Concrete rubble would be removed and so-called step pools would moderate the energy of the stream flow.

Hruby also noted that the city

Fifteen City Council Hopefuls Now Have Nomination Papers

by Elaine Skolnik

Fifteen registered Greenbelt voters have already obtained nomination petitions showing interest in becoming candidates in the upcoming city council election on Tuesday, November 3. For the first time the city electorate will choose a seven-member council instead of the traditional five-member council, the policy-making body of Greenbelt. The deadline for filing nomination petitions is Monday, September 21 at 5 p.m.

The increase from five to seven councilmembers was the result of an election change generated by an October 2008 letter to the city from the American Civil Liberties Union and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. The organizations threatened legal action unless the city addressed the lack of minority representation on existing councils.

In response the city scheduled some 10 public forums in various sections of the Greenbelt community. As a result the current council enacted a charter amendment enlarging the size of the city council to seven members.

Potential candidates must return their petitions by September 21 to City Clerk Cindy Murray, Greenbelt Municipal Building, 25 Crescent Road. She will verify whether names on the individual petitions (50 names on each) are registered to vote and are Greenbelt residents.

Potpourri

The city has mailed out an election newsletter to residents which can also be found on the city's website, www.greenbeltmd.gov. The site also contains a chart of important election deadlines and dates as well as the candidate's packet and other information.

Beginning with the 2009 election, the City of Greenbelt will elect a seven-member council every other year. The mayor and mayor pro tem are chosen by the city council at the organizational meeting following the election. Members of council are elected at large, "with the highest vote-getter traditionally being selected as mayor and the second highest as mayor pro tem."

Middle School Construction Set to Begin January 2010

by Amy S. Hansen

Construction on the new Greenbelt Middle School (GMS) is expected to start January 2010, Prince Georges County Public Schools (PGCPS) officials announced at a public hearing Monday, August 10 in the GMS gymnasium.

The plans and schematics for the new school were displayed and distributed to the 50 people in attendance. Gene Delmar of Delmar Architects of Olney, the architect for the new school, went over the plans in detail. Then he and school officials fielded questions about capacity, appropriate environmental considerations, access and the schedule of the building construction.

The new building is expected to be a replacement building, with the capacity to house 990 students. Current GMS enrollment is 820.

According to Derek Mitchell, executive director of the New and Charter Schools Office, the new middle school will not be expected to have the capacity to accept sixth grade students from any of its feeder schools that are not already sending sixth graders.

Currently the elementary feeder schools for GMS are Greenbelt, Berwyn Heights, Springhill

Lake, Paint Branch, Magnolia and Hollywood. Only Springhill Lake Elementary sends sixth graders to GMS.

When asked about future capacity to deal with planned housing growth in Greenbelt West, Mitchell pointed out that the new school will already be a big school. "Schools of over 1,000 are not good schools," he said, so GMS should not be expanded to meet future enrollment. Rather PGCPS would need to come up with other solutions, such as building more schools.

The New Building

The new building will be on the land already owned by the school system. The current building is located at the corner of Greenbelt and Edmonston Roads. The new one will front on Breezewood Drive in what is now a wooded part of the property.

The plan is to build the new school while the old school is still in place. Once the new building is completed, the non-historic part of the old building will be torn down, leaving the gym, music rooms and a few classrooms of the original building.

Archives Touch

For the first time today (and I have accessed the website on previous occasions) I was able to connect with your website and access the archives. For someone who has been absent and somewhat estranged from Greenbelt for a very long time, the experience was touching. Not only was I able to read the local news, important to me because of the recent loss of my mother but your historical notice at the very bottom of the website pertained to some incidents that were of key interest and activity in my family. My parents were involved in the Bresler development issues and an article written by my father, Gordon, was in one of the links. Even better, it was on the same page as a photo of one of our dear friends, Al Herling. As a child Al treated me with particular doting and I have very fond memories.

So thank you for the site and the archives and the history; thank you for a poignant memory.

Where Are My Rights?

Twenty-six years ago I really looked forward to making my home in Greenbelt. At the time I was quite blissfully unaware of the "power spell" that seems to take over the machinations of the mind when it comes to decisions of community, health, fairness and reality when addressing problems regarding trees.

Imagine my delight at having the choice of five units in Charlestowne Village Condominiums. As I suffer from periods of severe depression and failing eyesight I chose the lightest and brightest home to purchase. The American dream of the pursuit of happiness seemed a possibility. My constitutional rights ensured!

Then the Charlestowne Village Board proceeded to plant 10 trees in the front and back of my once-sunny home. Mannerly requests to discuss the changes in my living conditions due to the board's decision to plant so many trees around personally-purchased homes without concern for the effects on the living conditions of the residents' internal conditions, ach!

What to do? I am saddened, angry that my wishes have been so negated. Where are my rights? My life's savings have been invested in my home.

The opinion of one and all is welcome, particularly those of anyone that can explain why someone can change landscaping to affect living conditions in a home.

All suggestions gratefully received.

Leafletting Cars

Would you vote for them?

Twice in less than two weeks, the vehicles in the parking lots at Greenbriar have had fliers placed on them by a candidate for Greenbelt City Council.

Greenbriar signs posted at every entrance to parking areas state that no solicitation is allowed.

Now, would you vote for a candidate that so obviously ignores the law?

I am sure that person is not out there personally putting the fliers on the cars but they are responsible for knowing what the people working for their election are doing.

This person is very close to me not caring what they will work for or what their history is.

"School Max" Fails

As school doors opened on Monday across the county, many high school students were without their individual class schedules, according to Prince George's County Public Schools. At Eleanor Roosevelt on Monday about 600 students were sitting in the auditorium, waiting. By Wednesday afternoon the number was reduced to 350.

The problems are the result of a new computer system known as School Max. Schools Superintendent Dr. William R. Hite, Jr., said "We are working with the vendor to find a solution and have deployed central office staff to affected high schools to assist with registration and scheduling."

According to a Washington Post story yesterday, "A Facebook group with more than 3,700 members formed to exchange complaints."

Genealogical Society Meets September 2

Beginning with the meeting September 2, Prince George's County Genealogical Society monthly meetings will be held at the New Carrollton Municipal Center, 6016 Princess Garden Parkway, New Carrollton. The group will no longer meet at the Greenbelt Library.

Monthly meetings are held on the first Wednesday of the month, beginning at 7 p.m. with a short business meeting and a refreshment break followed by a relevant presentation. The upcoming presentations are: "What Do They Mean By That?" by Charles S. "Chuck" Mason on Wednesday, September 2 and "Researching in New Jersey and New York City" by Sharon Hodges on Wednesday, October 7. All meetings are open to the public and there is no charge.

Women's BB Team Champs in Montreal

After winning gold medals in Montreal on July 4, Herbert Allen has reignited women's basketball in Greenbelt.

Thursday nights from 8 to 10 p.m. have now been designated "Ladies Night" at Springhill Lake Recreation Center. Allen has been coaching basketball teams for over 30 years. However he usually dealt with AAU or men's basketball teams.

Three years ago he began the Herbert Allen 3-on-3 Outreach Program at Springhill Lake Recreation Center and found the girls were just as competitive as the guys. Last year three middle-school girls won the entire tournament and from that moment he was both convinced and hooked. After hearing about Allen's coaching experience, Rev. Greg Carter and Rev. Joseph Taylor approached Allen about having one of his men's teams represent the United States in the Montreal Tournament. Allen replied, "Sure, but I would love to bring the women's team as well." The rest is history.

In the end the men's team from Greenbelt wasn't able to attend. The women, including five Springhill Lake residents, did. The women lost to the returning Canadian champs by 2 points during the first round, only to come back and beat them in the championship by the same 2-point margin. The "Greenbelt Lady Raiders" became the first women's team from the U.S. to win the gold in this Canadian Summer Tournament. Allen was thrilled to share this moment with the team; he said that they really deserved it. He's also looking forward to returning to Canada for a repeat.

Springhill Lake Recreation Center is at 6101 Cherrywood Lane. Ladies Night participants will need to purchase a recreation facility ID. For more information call Allen at 301-397-2212.

B-W Parkway Plans Include Repaving

In an August 21 letter to Greenbelt City Councilmember Leta Mach, Greenbelt Park Manager Fred Cunningham described future plans for the Baltimore-Washington Parkway. That portion of the Parkway between the Route 50 exchange near the District of Columbia line and Maryland Route 175, south of Baltimore, is under National Park Service jurisdiction.

Cunningham refers to two rumors concerning future development of the Parkway – the desire of the State of Maryland to increase the number of lanes and a suggestion to make the Parkway a toll road. Neither is “something that we could support,” Cunningham said.

“We work with the Federal Highway Administration when planning any major rehabilitation or repair projects on the Parkway,” Cunningham’s letter says. He refers to plans to repave the entire federal portion of the roadway as well as to remove and replace chain link fencing both northbound and southbound near Greenbelt.

Currently guardrails are being installed in the median in certain areas of the Parkway following a safety study that showed a number of crossover traffic injuries and fatalities with vehicles leaving one side of the Parkway and striking others in the opposite lanes.

the funding of a proposed round-about traffic circle at Cherrywood Lane and Metro Access Drive.

This last commitment is currently in default as of May 2009. Garth Buehl, representing the Metroland developers, assured the APB that he had sent a letter to the city on August 19 covering those commitments. Buehl promised at earlier meetings with APB to update the city by letter.

Storm Water Plan

Another complicating factor was added at the August 19 meeting with the announcement by the developer's representative and Craftstar that the storm water management plan (SWMP) for the project approved at the time of the Detailed Site Plan (DSP) approval in 2006 may be superseded by new county legislation that goes into effect in May 2010.

Some APB members felt this might have been a wedge issue on the part of the developers to urge quicker action on the proposed revision to the DSP. Other members saw this SWMP as a possible improvement from a storm water management and environmental standpoint.

It was clear the developers saw the SWMP changes as adding development costs to the overall project and that they would like to acquire permits for the proposed project before the May 2010 deadline. Both APB staff and members were surprised by the SWMP news.

Design Features

In discussing design plans for the 151 town homes, the APB considered the good faith efforts by Craftstar to address architectural elevations, uniform alley widths and other design features of the townhomes trying to meet the design elements of the original Pulte project. There was recognition all along that Craftstar was making offers to meet the staff and APB design issues.

Craftstar representative Ken Mergenser tried to convince APB members that their redesigned project was actually superior to the Pulte design. He said their product should not be viewed as "low-end" as far as the current market is concerned.

He also noted that in their experience about 60 percent or more of Craftstar purchasers opt for upgrades that could raise the selling price of units to the $375,000 to $425,000 range.

At meeting's end, five of the seven APB members (Keith Chernikoff, Sheldon Goldberg, Jim Cohen, Emmett Jordan and Chairman George Branyan) were sufficiently persuaded that the design features were getting close enough to the original DSP requirements that they would recommend to council that the city consider modifying the covenants to allow the Craftstar project to go forward.

APB members Sandra Lange and Brian Gibbons disagreed. They were not sufficiently convinced that granting approval for only the 151 Craftstar homes was the appropriate policy to pursue. They noted the infrastructure problems and that the potential for departure from the higher-priced Pulte design could set the tone for any future development in the area. They opposed going forward in view of all of the uncertainties concerning ultimate developments in Greenbelt West.

The APB agreed that the chairman would draft a proposed report encompassing the recommendation for approval of the design modifications. That report would be considered for final approval and transmission to council at APB's next meeting scheduled for September 2.

was looking further upstream in GHI neighborhoods for mitigation of the outfall, such as with rain gardens and rain barrels.

The city has been awarded $137,425 in grant funding for the project and staff also noted that Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI) has provided $35,000 in additional funding because a portion of the project area is located on their property. The planning staff recommend that council approve the so-called final plans for the project dated October 13, 2008, so the project can proceed with actual final design, acquisition of permissions this winter and possible construction beginning in spring 2010.

Councilmember Rodney Roberts has objected to the expected tree loss from the project. At the August 10 meeting he repeated concerns he had made earlier that there needed to be more attention devoted to the catchment area in the vicinity of Laurel Hill, Hillside and Greenhill Roads to divert much of the stream flow that has been causing deterioration of the stream banks downstream. Hruby discussed an ESA report evaluating the possible location of a bio-retention facility in that area addressing Roberts' concerns.

Their report concluded that while installation there of a bio-retention device would help to improve water quality and attenuate runoff, ESA does not believe that the device alone would result in a stable stream channel downstream, because that part of the drainage area represents only about 6 percent of the overall drainage area.

Roberts also lamented the number of trees to be sacrificed for the project, which he said he could not support. In the final vote the project design was approved four to one.

The bus depot, which is next to the middle school, temporarily will lose some land during construction. Delmar pointed out how the school meets many environmental criteria to make it a LEED (Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design) building. The classrooms will face southeast to make effective use of the sunlight. The soccer field will cover a geothermal pump that will help heat the building. And the courtyard allows for natural light in all rooms.

School officials invited members of the public to see the effectiveness of the LEED architecture by visiting public events at other new schools in the area, including Vansville Elementary in Beltsville.

Access to the School

Access to the school was called into question by several people, including Ann Davis, a representative of Berwyn Heights Advisory Committee on Education. She asked about a safer system to get to school for students who need to cross Greenbelt Road.

Lawrence Fryer, chief operating officer of Support Services, answered that it was only recently that the school system, not the Department of Transportation, had the responsibility for such crossings. However, the new building does not have a budget for an overpass. Such an overpass would cost on the order of $1 million, according to Mayor Judith Davis. Davis agreed that Greenbelt should also be working for safer crossing, potentially looking at an overpass.

The new building has been approved for design by the state and is still on schedule for a 2010 opening. The next large hurdle will come in December, when the state is to allocate the money currently earmarked for this project.

"Unity through community involvement"

Dear Festival Visitor:

Welcome to the 55th Annual Greenbelt Labor Day Festival! The City of Greenbelt is honored to host this unique community celebration, which is the largest event of its kind in the State of Maryland and provides so much enjoyment to all its citizens. Many family and friends reunions occur during this special weekend. The Festival also provides a wonderful opportunity for many of our city's non-profit, service and religious organizations to participate and make themselves known to our residents and visitors.

This Festival is organized and conducted by an independent volunteer group, the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival Committee. These dedicated citizens have worked long hours this past year to ensure that we all have a wonderful time. We are grateful for their efforts and those of all the other community volunteers and City employees who make this event possible.

We hope you enjoy this weekend's festivities. Plan to come to all four days and take full advantage of the wide range of activities being offered, from the opening ceremony and concert Friday evening to the Labor Day Parade on Monday. If you have any questions about the City of Greenbelt, please call us at 301-474-8000.

Best wishes for a great weekend!

AirFair to Celebrate 100 Years of Flight

In celebration of 100 years of flight at the College Park Airport, AirFair 100 will be presented on Saturday, August 29 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. This air show for all ages will feature aerobic performances, helicopter and airplane rides, aircraft displays, children's activities, vendors, entertainment and refreshments.

This celebration of 100 years of service makes the College Park Airport the oldest continually operating airport in the world. The airport has a field of firsts including the first military aviation school, first U.S. Postal Air Mail Service and first radio-navigated aids developed and tested by the Bureau of Standards.

A reproduction 1909 Wright Military Flyer will be unveiled at the AirFair. The Wright Experience of Warrenton, Va., with support from the Discovery of Flight Foundation, re-created the machine used to train the first military officers to fly. The flyer will roar to life, returning sights and sounds to College Park that have not been seen or heard in 100 years. The reproduction Military Flyer will make its permanent home at the College Park Aviation Museum and will become a permanent, interactive teaching tool. Visitors may bring an envelope or postcard and get a special airmail cancellation commemorating 100 years of aviation history.

The afternoon air show includes the Misty Blues Skydiving Team; Greg Koontz, the Flying Farmer and Decathlon Aerobatics; Kevin Russo, T-6 Texan; Otto the Helicopter; Bob Essell, the Ultralight Wingwalker; and Dan Buchanan, Hanglider Routine.

The airport is located at 1909 Corporal Frank Scott Drive in College Park. Parking is free. There is a fee, which is reduced for children age 2 to 17. A government-issued state photo ID is required for helicopter and airplane rides. All children must be accompanied by an adult. Call 301-209-1390 for details.

Two Arrests Made In Burglary Spree

On August 18 Greenbelt Police made two arrests in connection with the recent burglary cases that occurred in the 100 block of Westway. Arrested were Alec Gary Wilbur, 18, of 6522 Lake Park Drive and Dijan Alphonso Gaye, 18, of 7700 Cloister Place. Both were charged with first degree burglary and theft over $500. In addition Gaye was also charged with possession of a handgun. Both were turned over to the Department of Corrections. No further information is currently available and the investigation is continuing.

Attempted Robbery At Bank of America

Greenbelt Police reported an attempted robbery at the Bank of America in Beltway Plaza at 3:04 p.m. on Tuesday, August 25. The bank was then closed and reopened shortly after 5 p.m.

Police said nobody was injured or arrested. They had no further details to report at this time. An investigation continues.

Fresh Garden Trends

Recent trends in ornamental gardening can be seen in a free exhibit that starts in the photo gallery in the Administration Building Lobby of the U.S. National Arboretum and continues outside to plants growing in designed beds. New flower colors and new forms are featured. No registration is required. The exhibit runs 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. daily through October 4.

The Arboretum is at 3501 New York Avenue, N.E., in Washington, D.C. Call 202-245-2726 or visit www.usna.usda.gov.

Library Hours to Be Cut, Renovation Set for Winter

by Eli Flam

The Greenbelt Public Library will lose nine hours weekly beginning Monday, October 4 as cutbacks throughout the Prince George's County Library system seek to reduce a $2.4 million budget gap. At the same time, a six-month-long, $640,000 renovation of the Greenbelt branch is set to begin by early winter. New hours from October 4 are 1 to 9 p.m. Monday and Tuesday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Wednesday through Friday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday.

Sunday Hours

From Sunday, September 13 the Bowie, Hyattsville and Oxon Hill branches will be open year-round on Sundays from 1 to 5 p.m. All branches will be closed Monday, October 12; Thursday, December 24 through Sunday, January 3, 2010; and Monday, June 7, 2010.

A hiring freeze started last year within the library system will continue. In addition, purchases of books and materials and regular equipment maintenance budgets will be reduced.

Bridget Warren, chief of library public relations, sees two "upsides" for Greenbelt, however: 1) a switch from double staff shifts to a single shift that will provide better service and 2) the forthcoming renovation.

Renovation

Among changes taking place with the renovation, new wifi and computer stations for public use will be added and energy-efficient lighting, painting and "a completely spruced-up" meeting room will brighten the public space. Funding includes a matching grant from the state.

"Unfortunately," said a library statement, "the decreased funding comes during an unprecedented increase in the demand for services such as job search info and public computer use." Many library services, it was noted, can be found at www.pgmls. These include online tutoring, downloadable audio books, e-books, language learning service, SAT prep and almost 60 reference databases.

Bones of Colonists Tell Interesting Tales

Human anatomy and forensic investigation provide intriguing information on people and events of America's past. The exhibition, "Written in Bone: Forensic Files of the 17th-Century Chesapeake," at the National Museum of Natural History, Washington, D.C., examines history through 17th century bone biographies, including those of colonists teetering on the edge of survival at Jamestown, Va., and those of wealthy and well-established individuals of St. Mary's City, Md. At no other time in history has there been the technological capability or the opportunities now available to help tell these tales.

This free exhibit runs through February 6, 2011.

GES Teachers Immerse Themselves in the Arts

by Matt Wasniewski

While students enjoyed their summer holiday, Greenbelt Elementary teachers have helped poise the school to take a giant step towards an arts-integrated curriculum. In July, five teachers and the principal attended the intensive Maryland Artist-Teacher Institute (MATI) program. Teachers volunteered an unpaid week of their summer vacation, spending 15-hour days to develop lesson plans, make contacts and attend workshops that focus on bringing a range of arts – puppetry, poetry, drama, dance, visual arts and music – into the classroom. Principal Kimberly Seidel and teachers Dara Case, Beth Novick, Robin Godfrey, Juanita Malone and Lynne Maydag represented the school.

“At MATI,” noted Seidel, “the teachers immersed themselves in five days and evenings of arts workshops based on our Maryland Voluntary State Curriculum. Many inspiring ideas were presented to challenge and engage all students – to transform learning into ‘hard fun.’”

“The PTA is grateful our faculty members sacrificed a portion of their summer vacation to be part of this,” said Mimi Noorani, PTA president. “I am impressed at how energized the teachers sound.”

Arts Education

MATI is part of a burgeoning statewide and national movement to increase arts in education. Research increasingly points to the importance of this initiative. According to the Kennedy Center Changing Education through the Arts partnership, the proven benefits of an arts-integrated curriculum are higher test scores, improved student behavior with less disciplinary referrals and higher attendance.

“Integrating arts into the curriculum goes beyond developing children’s artistic abilities,” said music teacher Dara Case. “All children learn differently. Arts provide a well-rounded way to appeal to children’s different learning styles – to ‘show what they know’ in a way that crosses language borders, cognitive abilities and even physical challenges.”

MATI attendee Lynne Maydag spoke of her previous teaching experience at an arts integration school in Bowie. “Integrating arts into the lesson was an opening to fully engage lower performing students while providing a deeper experience for the higher performing students,” Maydag said. “I was impressed by the level of thinking it stimulated, what the students were able to produce and how much they enjoyed doing it.”

“The transformation this initiative has had on other schools is incredible,” said kindergarten teacher Robin Godfrey. “Not only in terms of the school becoming a more beautiful, art-filled space but also in the joy and engagement it brought the students – and teachers.”

Artists-in-Residence

Two artists-in-residence are planned at the school next year: Dishebaum, an African drumming troupe and InterAct Story Theatre, a drama group discovered at the MATI conference.

“InterAct Story Theatre’s use of drama to richly enhance literacy was very appealing,” said teacher Juanita Malone. “They had a magical way of getting children to express themselves and identify with characters in a story. In addition the program recognizes a child’s need to move which should resonate well, particularly with our more kinesthetic learners.”

Contributions Needed

The PTA is hoping to support these efforts by establishing and raising money for an arts fund. In addition, it is seeking contributions of clean fabric, buttons, felt, construction paper, scrapbooking paper and other quality art papers. Donations are also being sought for rhythm instruments such as shakers, triangles, bells, xylophones, washboards and other instruments. Donated art materials and instruments will enhance classroom lessons. All items can be dropped off at the school front office during regular hours.

“This is going to be an exciting year for learning at GES,” said Noorani. “Parental and community support will be critical in reaching our goals but I strongly believe the results will be worth it. When our school thrives, everyone benefits.”

“As teachers we are always looking for students to enjoy coming to school and to enjoy learning, to fully engage them,” said sixth grade teacher Beth Novick. “I think this program – like each of our students – has great potential.”

Matt Wasniewski is a parent at GES.

Safeway Launches “School Dollars”

Safeway’s fifth annual 10 percent Back to Schools in-store initiative is now open and will run through September 15. Safeway and 100 food manufacturers are joining in the effort to support students and education nationally by donating 10 percent of the sale price on over 2,000 selected products.

Customers are asked to purchase eligible products using their Safeway Club card to automatically accumulate donations that will go to the school of their choice. The products are marked with a special yellow school bus icon on store shelves. At the end of the program customers will receive a final donation receipt totaling their “school dollars” to take to the chosen school for online redemption. The 200 highest-earning schools will receive a $1,000 bonus added to their overall donation. Those who participate in Safeway’s eScrip rebate program will also benefit from 10 percent Back to Schools, with final accumulated totals automatically donated to their registered eScrip school or organization.

Last year’s program, which began with 40 manufacturers and a few hundred items evolving into a storewide initiative with thousands of participating name brands, generated nearly $215,000 for Mid-Atlantic region schools during the four-week campaign. The initiative is especially important as many public school systems face unprecedented budget cuts, eliminating courses, increasing class size and asking parents to shoulder fees and assessments for previously free extracurricular programs.
