Council Worksession Is Reset on Empirian Village

The Greenbelt City Council has rescheduled its Empirian Village worksession to Wednesday, March 17 at 8 p.m. in the Greenbelt Community Center at 15 Crescent Road. The worksession is open to the public.

Originally scheduled for February 24, the meeting was rescheduled because of the illness of Frederic Brinn, a senior vice president of the Empirian Village management company. The agenda prepared for the original meeting date includes an opportunity for tenants to discuss their issues. James Sterling, Greenbelt assistant director for Community Development, will review the power outages and other recent events. Other agenda items include crime/security matters and future plans for Empirian Village.

Broadcasting to America Museum Lecture Tuesday

On Tuesday, March 16 at 7:30 p.m. the Greenbelt Museum will sponsor a free lecture, "Broadcasting to America: A Trip through the Radio and Television Museum," by Radio and Television Museum Executive Director Brian Belanger.

Today people take for granted the Internet, cell phones, satellite communication and cable TV with dozens of channels. Life in the early decades of the 20th century was markedly different. Just imagine what a thrill it must have been for people in the 1920s when they heard their first radio program! In the 1920s a top-of-the-line radio cost nearly as much as an automobile. When the first television sets appeared in stores, wide-eyed people clustered several deep in front of the show windows. Belanger will use images from the Radio & Television Museum, located in nearby Bowie, to remind participants how radio and TV broadcasting have changed everyone's lives.

For more information call 301-507-6582, email museum@greenbeltmd.gov or check the Greenbelt Museum website at www.greenbeltmuseum.org.

Marge Owens: A Social Worker With Early Commitment to Justice

by Marat Moore

Listen to the stories of Marge Owens of Northway and you'll travel a path of history more vivid and complex than mainstream textbook tales – about her grandmother's memory of little-known race riots in Owens' hometown of East St. Louis, Ill., and the Orangeburg Massacre in South Carolina in 1968.

Owens can tell you about the days, not so long ago, when Landover Road was a country byway where a decaying plantation house was overrun with hungry hogs. And about the time when only white people lived in Greenbelt and how some of them joined the push for fair housing and public accommodations for those whose rights had been denied.

"It seems so long ago now," said Owens, now retired from a career in social work, recalling her 1960 move with her husband, Lowell, to Greenbelt. The city, she said, "was built to be exclusive. This was before the city had expanded with developments like Springhill Lake [Empirian Village]."

"I can remember marching up and down Sheriff Road, where a developer was putting up houses that were being marketed only to white families. We were a good-natured crowd and somebody came out and sprayed us with a garden hose. Luckily for us it was a hot day," she said.

Roots of Commitment

Marge Owens' commitment to justice is rooted in her family history in East St. Louis. "When I was growing up there, it was about half white and half black and totally segregated," she said. In 1919, her grandmother had hidden an African American cook and her daughters during a vicious race riot in East St. Louis.

"The riot ended with 300 young men being rounded up and taken to the 'car barn,' where streetcars were turned around," she said. "They put these young men in the barn and set the building on fire. All of them died. It was a story I could never forget."

Owens attended high school in the early 1950s, before the U.S. Supreme Court ruling on desegregation of public schools. Even so, the school board in East St. Louis had brought in a small number of black students. "They wanted to try it, which was unusual. But they only admitted kids who were outstanding athletes or students."

As an undergraduate at the University of Illinois, she got to know Lowell Owens through their membership in the university branch of the NAACP. They fell in love and married during those intense times. "Going to these meetings was a big part of our courtship!" she says, laughing. "There were lots of marches in 1955 and 1956 and we listened to the tapes of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr."

One target of NAACP protest were barbers who refused to cut the hair of black students.

"Another thing that really bothered me happened with my dentist. When a friend talked to me about his bad toothache, I recommended my dentist, who then told this young man that he 'didn't do treatments for Negroes.'

"I went to see the dentist the next day and the waiting room was full. I told the receptionist I wanted my x-rays. The dentist came out and said, 'Are you moving?' I told him why I was going to find a different dentist – but my hands were sweating, because he was an authority figure for me."

She began a master's program in social work. The arrival of their first child, however, interrupted her studies but gave her more time to run off and distribute leaflets, baby Bronwyn in tow.

Greenbelt, Part One

"Sometimes you get lucky breaks," she says about moving to Greenbelt with Lowell and joining the nearby Unitarian Church. They chose Greenbelt because he worked at the Department of Agriculture in Beltsville and "the price was right," she said. Their church supported the fight for public accommodations for people of all races.

With two young daughters by then, Marge and Lowell attended public meetings; in the early 1960s, a political effort in Prince George's County and Montgomery County led to the ouster of segregationist leaders. It was the first political success for an up-and-coming newcomer in Prince George's County, young Steny Hoyer.

Marge did encounter scenes that made her wonder where on earth they had moved. After enrolling at Howard University to complete her master's degree in social work, she drove to the old Sugar Hill community near Upper Marlboro on a field assignment. She became lost from confusing directions and spotted a beautiful old white house with a wrap-around veranda.

"It was an old plantation house and I decided to stop and ask directions," she said. "When I got out and shut the car door, the entire house erupted in pigs! They were squealing and grunting and running out of the house and up to the fence where I stood!" Apparently the sound

More Co-op Kudos

It was during the snowmageddon that my prescription drugs got hung up at the Jessup Post Office. Fortunately, all turned out well, thanks in no small part to the Co-op pharmacy.

They received a stop-gap prescription from my doctor and contacted my home delivery service with a request to override procedures and allowed an emergency 5-day supply to be filled. I am so grateful the pharmacist and staff trudged through the snow (how else?) to come to work those days. My 5-day prescription was filled in a few hours, exceeding my expectations.

Thanks so much to you all for doing your job so wonderfully!

AAUW Program Is Rescheduled

Rescheduled following February's massive snowfall, a program highlighting the Gordon W. Prange collection of printed material from post-World War II Japan will take place at 10 a.m. on Saturday, March 13 at the Old Parish House, 4711 Knox Road in College Park. The program, which is open to the public, is sponsored by the College Park Branch of the American Association of University Women (AAUW).

Prange, who was a professor of history at the University of Maryland, served in Japan under General Douglas MacArthur as a member of a censorship board who screened all Japanese publications during the Occupation. At the end of his period of service in 1949, Prange requested, and was given permission, to bring back to the university copies of all these works – from ephemeral items such as club documents and organizational papers to children's and adult books, newspapers, maps and posters.

The collection now constitutes the most complete record of printed material from post-war Japan that exists in the world. Curator of the collection, Eiko Sakaguchi, and its manager, Amy Wasserstrom, will show a short film and discuss the collection and its history.

Greenbelter Virginia Beauchamp, who served with the American Red Cross in northern Japan in 1946-47 will share photographs of her time there as well.

RSVP Terry Saylor at 410-757-2446 or terrysaylor@yahoo.com or Beauchamp at 301-474-7183. Refreshments will be served.

Art Show at New Deal Café Features Smith, Van Allen

by Barbara Simon

On Sunday, March 21 there will be a reception at the New Deal Café from 7 to 9 p.m. for the artists represented in the current art shows: "Chairs and Fruit" by Allison Smith and "Abstract Paintings 2010" by Karen Van Allen. During the reception music will be provided by Mateo Monk, who performs reggae and bluegrass on flute and guitar.

Allison Smith is a folk painter. Her works in her current exhibit are all acrylic paintings, 8 inches by 10 inches, of either fruit or chairs. Smith's art will remain in the Café until May 3.

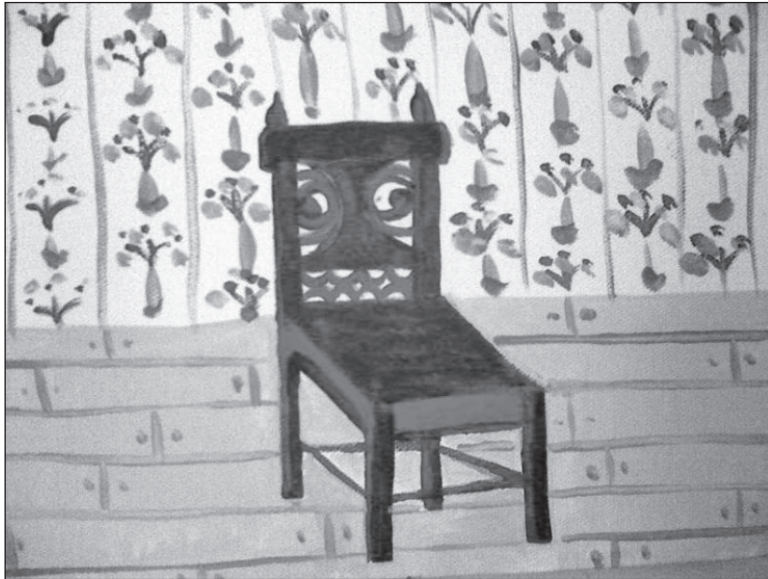

Karen Van Allen has been a resident of College Park for nearly 25 years and of the Washington area for 40 years. Her paintings on display at the Café reflect her interest in abstraction, which evolved out of a month of classical drawing in Florence, Italy. The specificity of that training led to a desire to open up to color, shape and fluidity. Recently, she began to notice the ubiquity of intersections in nature and the physical environment, as well as daily intersections with others. Five of the works in the show are the beginnings of her interest in capturing those intersections in paintings. The remainder are experiments in color and shape.

She has had two shows of paintings at the Yellow Barn in Glen Echo, most recently with a group of abstract artists. In addition, she has participated in the annual Labor Day Art Show at Glen Echo, as well as in the Labor Day Festival Art Show in Greenbelt. In the past few months, she participated in several art shows sponsored by the Design Studio in Hyattsville. Professionally, Van Allen is a licensed clinical social worker with a private practice in psychotherapy in Washington, D.C., and facilitates groups for women over 50 on retirement or "What Next" in Washington and in Santa Fe, New Mexico.

"Abstract Paintings 2010" and "Chairs and Fruit" will remain on display at the New Deal Café through April. The art exhibit program at the Café is sponsored by Friends of New Deal Café Arts.

Kristin Stenson also contributed to this article.

Karen Van Allen's abstract paintings will also be on display.

Six Oscar Winner Hurt Locker

Voted "Best Picture" at Sunday's Oscars, with a Best Director award for Kathryn Bigelow – the first awarded to a woman – and receiving a total of six Oscars, "Hurt Locker" will open Friday at the Old Greenbelt Theatre. The movie is about an elite Army bomb squad in the war in Iraq, their reckless new team leader, the camaraderie the group develops while awaiting orders to go home and the sacrifices they make. A thrilling and heart thumping look at combat.

Rated R for violence, the movie runs two hours, 10 minutes.

Obituaries

Donald Lee Graff

Donald Lee Graff, 65, of 7 Research Road, was struck and killed by a car on Greenbelt Road in the early morning hours of Saturday, March 6, 2010. He was a longtime resident of Greenbelt.

Mr. Graff was born October 23, 1944, in Chicago. He came to the D.C. area in the early 1960s. He attended Montgomery Community College and the University of Maryland, where he earned bachelor's degrees in both economics and electrical engineering.

He worked 15 years for the federal government, 10 at Bethesda Naval Hospital, retiring in 1998. He was well known at the Co-op Supermarket where he shopped and by those who frequented Roosevelt Center and the library.

He will be buried in Chicago. A memorial service will be held later for all of Mr. Graff's Greenbelt friends.

— Lenore Algaze

In Memoriam

Donald Lee Graff

I didn't realize when I read in the Post that a pedestrian had been killed in Greenbelt that it could be my namesake, Don, whose last name I never knew. But I joked with him over the years when I'd see him in the coldest weather by the Co-op, puffing on his cigar. Those cigars had such a nice scent.

And he had a great sense of humor. Over the years I learned we shared the same first name and that he had been a civil engineer, I believe at NIH. And that he had lived in Chicago or some other place equally cold. Since I was from Buffalo, we scoffed at the cold weather here.

I know a lot of people in Greenbelt knew him and some depended on him. He would look out for the weakest among us and give money to others in need, even though his car had so much duct tape and body putty that he was known for that, too.

I last saw him at the Greenway Center, getting back into his car. I'm sorry now I didn't rush to speak to him one last time.

But I'm glad I got to joke with him recently about Buffalo. Don had a good cigar, a good heart and a good sense of humor. He would express outrage when he felt people were harming others. And I'm glad he and I had a good walk together one evening and good conversation.

He left me with some tips on applying body putty to my car — and an appreciation for people. We miss you Don — you are a good man! And I can just hear the outrage you would have about someone hitting a pedestrian with a car.

— Don Comis

Paint Branch UU Installs Pastor

On Sunday, March 14 at 4 p.m., Rev. Diane Teichert, the new minister of Paint Branch Unitarian Universalist Church, will be officially welcomed in a special installation service. After moving from Bedford, Mass., to lead the congregation, Teichert has become involved with her new congregation and with her new home state of Maryland, recently refusing to sign marriage licenses for heterosexual couples until same-sex couples are legally allowed to marry in Maryland.

The guest preacher will be Rev. Kathy Huff, senior minister of First Unitarian Church of Oakland (Calif.). Also included in the ceremony are Rev. John Gibbons of First Parish Unitarian Universalist Church (Bedford, Mass.) and Mike Harris, a lay leader from Cedar Lane Unitarian Universalist Church in Bethesda, who is president of the board of the Joseph Priestley District.

Reel & Meal Food Films on Monday

The next Reel & Meal at the New Deal Café will be at 7 p.m. on Monday, March 15 with four short permaculture and food security films from around the world. Sponsored by a group of Greenbelt organizations, the monthly film series shows films at the New Deal Café about environmental and social justice issues, followed by discussions of the topic of the films shown. The free film showing is preceded by an optional vegan buffet available for purchase at 6:30 p.m.

March Films

The video "Grave Danger from Falling Food" features Australian Bill Mollison, the father of the Permaculture Movement, explaining why he first developed permaculture, a system of sustainable agriculture, after spending years living in the forest. Learning from the forest, he believes that a permaculture system can help avoid "the laying waste to the planet" of modern agricultural practices and supply peoples' needs while embracing and enriching nature.

The video "Forest Gardens" features Robert Hart in his pioneering forest garden and includes a tour of a tiny garden in a GHI-size yard behind a maisonette in Hertfordshire, England. For as little as two hours work a week, the family finds they can supply much of their produce for six months of the year.

"Suburban Permaculture" provides a tour of Janet Barocco and Richard Heinberg's California home for an example of what is possible in suburbia and "Creating a Suburban Food Shed" looks at Owen Dell's concept of neighbors working together to grow food in their yards as a way of both producing food and creating community.

Discussion after these films will feature Lesley Riddle, Greenbelt assistant director for Parks and Grounds, sharing some of her ongoing efforts to promote eco-friendly landscaping here. Maggie Cahalan will discuss a volunteer opportunity to help with planning and implementing the Three Sisters Garden Project to establish diverse co-learning demonstration gardens on public lands in each of the three areas of Greenbelt (center, west and east). Volunteer "expert gardeners" and "want-to-be-gardeners" are much needed for the project. For more information email Cahalan at maggie@cheers.org.

March Is Children's Dental Health Month

Greenbelt dentist Dr. Dennis Hatfield visited third grade classes at Greenbelt Elementary School in observance of Children's Dental Health Month. He talked with students about good oral health, proper brushing and flossing, what causes cavities and ways to prevent them and about good nutrition. As he donned his white coat, gloves and mask, Dr. Hatfield explained why those precautions are taken in dental offices.

Dr. Hatfield's dental hygienist Linda Collie also made her annual visit to the kindergarten class at NASA Goddard Space Flight Center, providing much the same message to the youngsters there.

Gates Foundation Aids Local Schools

The Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation has awarded the Prince George's County Public Schools a $2.5 million grant to continue its work on how it develops and evaluates effective teachers.

In partnership with the Prince George's County Educators' Association (PGCEA), the school district has begun making progress in improving its teacher evaluation system. The "Framework for Teaching" is a tool used to identify, name and describe complex activities that teachers engage in each day in the classroom. The "Framework" became the basis of the new standards-based evaluation system for teachers participating in the Financial Incentive Rewards for Supervisors and Teachers (FIRST) program, which provides financial rewards to teachers and administrators who work in hard-to-staff schools and subject areas.

Social Justice

The community organizing for social justice continued in Greenbelt in the early and mid-1960s and Lowell was heavily involved with the public accommodations and other campaigns.

"Greenbelt was very ripe for anyone who was interested in those issues and a lot of people got involved in voter registration and other campaigns," she said. By the early 1970s she was working for the federal Office of Economic Opportunity as a social worker, getting grants and launching programs. "I loved it," she said. She and Lowell had three daughters by then – Bronwyn, Lucia and Caitlin.

The early 1970s, though, took them south when Lowell got a two-year assignment to Orangeburg, S.C., to help faculty at a historically black state university activate federal research funds they had finally received after years of neglect and to assist in launching Ph.D. programs.

"That's where I learned about the Orangeburg Massacre, which pre-dated the Kent State and Jackson State shootings. It had occurred just a few years before we moved there," she said.

On February 8, 1968, students at the college had protested segregation at the local bowling alley. The governor ordered more than 60 state police into Orangeburg, tanks rolled through the street and police shot into the crowd. Four died and more than 30 were injured in the violence.

Greenbelt, Part Two

When they returned to Greenbelt in the mid-1970s, another social movement was brewing – the women's movement. Former local resident Dorothy Sucher had begun holding "consciousness-raising groups," where Marge met local activist Esther Webb.

"What a firebrand! She was considerably older than us and I'd finished graduate school and was working," Marge recalled. "I was fortunate to have a boss – male, of course – who believed that women absolutely should speak up and get the job done, just like a man. I even survived doing budgets."

Her own consciousness was raised in a group of Greenbelters planning a public meeting for Bruce Bowman, a liberal Greenbelter running for county council. "They said, 'Who can chair the meeting?'" I suggested a woman. And everybody – I was the only woman in the room – said, 'No, we need a man or we won't be taken seriously.'

"I said, 'Well, I see that's how things are going to go here but the next revolution is going to be for women's rights.'"

The room exploded with laughter – "white men, black men, they were all laughing, but I think it was nervous laughter," she said. Then she added, "But it took all the air out of me. I just went home and talked to Lowell."

She also faced her first job-related crisis after they returned. "Nixon had eliminated all the jobs I was hoping for," she said.

"I was unemployed and underemployed. Now I am very sympathetic about the effects of long-term unemployment."

Eventually she was hired by the State of Maryland to travel to every county to train caregivers of people with mental illness to help the caregivers learn new skills and empower them in their role.

Looking Ahead

What does she think of the world today in terms of civil rights and women's rights?

"We've made progress in both areas – but not enough," she says. "Current research is showing that our unemployment problems are going to hurt the younger generation for years to come. I get downhearted sometimes because I see too many people who don't find meaning in their work. Sometimes you hit a rough patch but it's worth trying to find projects within your job that you really enjoy."

What brings her the most joy now are her three grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. Two of their three daughters – Bronwyn Zurla, a travel agent; and Caitlin Phillips, a school nurse – live in Greenbelt. "We were so surprised – when Lowell and I were young adults, we didn't live anywhere near relatives."

For Marge, it's just another benefit of living in Greenbelt.

Man of LaMancha Opens on March 19

"To Dream the Impossible Dream" is one of the hallmark ballads in all of musical theatre. The show from which it hails, Man of La Mancha, is one of the most poignant stories on the musical stage. Miguel de Cervantes, the legendary author of Don Quixote, in real life was confronted with possible execution by the Spanish Inquisition.

While he awaits his trial, he is tested by his fellow prisoners and tried by a court of his peers. He chooses as his defense to reenact the tale of his mad knight and in the telling of this tale, breathes hope back into the lives of those who are desperate for deliverance and salvation.

The musical opens Friday, March 19 at the Greenbelt Arts Center. Curt Somers will direct and Dan Sitomer is the music director.

Concert of Old German Music

On Wednesday, March 17 at 12:10 p.m. the National Gallery of Art continues its concerts with a midday concert of Amarcord 16th- and 17th-century German music in the West Building, West Garden Court.

Chinese New Year Is Celebrated

Greenbelt Elementary School students participated in a Chinese New Year lantern parade around the school on Friday, February 26, led by recess monitor LaShel Baravechia.

Make Plans Now for a Safer St. Patrick's Day Celebration

Police are urging St. Patrick's Day revelers to plan ahead for a safe celebration and to designate a sober driver before the party begins. And, if urging doesn't help, they remind everyone they will have extra officers on the road looking for impaired drivers.

National Highway Traffic Safety Administration statistics show that 37 percent of drivers and motorcyclists involved in fatal St. Patrick's Day crashes in 2008 had a blood alcohol content (BAC) of .08 or above. There were 134 crash fatalities that day and of those, 50 people were killed in crashes involving at least one driver or motorcyclist with a BAC of .08 or higher.

In addition to designating a sober driver and leaving the keys at home, police suggest that parties plan a safe way home before the festivities begin; take a taxi, public transportation or call a sober friend or family member. They also encourage use of the Sober Ride program – a local taxi service sponsored by the Washington Regional Alcohol Program that allows impaired drivers a free taxi ride ($50 value) if they are 21 or older. Police urge anyone who sees a drunk driver on the road to make a possibly life-saving call to law enforcement.

Remember, police say, that friends don't let friends drive drunk – so those who know someone about to drive or ride with an impaired driver should take the keys and help them make other arrangements to get where they are going safely. More information is available at www.stopimpaireddriving.org.

Our sympathy to the family and friends of longtime resident Donald J. Nagle, 71, who died March 2. The Nagles moved to Greenbelt in 1963 and have been residents of the Lakewood community since 1972.

Condolences to the family of Greta Corbin-Horton of Southway, who died March 1.

Congratulations:

— and good luck to Eleanor Roosevelt High School's Team 53, which will compete this weekend at the Baltimore Convention Center in the FIRST Robotics Chesapeake Regional Competition, competing against over 1,000 high school students on 49 robotics teams from around the country. Competing teams come from 10 states and include 24 teams from Maryland; top teams will advance to the FIRST World Championships in Atlanta in April.

— to lifelong Greenbelt resident James A. Brettell, who has graduated as a Seaman Apprentice from U.S. Navy basic training at the Naval Training Center at Great Lakes, Ill., and is currently attending specialty school near Norfolk.

GAIL Announces Accessibility Grants

The Greenbelt Assistance in Living (GAIL) Program has announced the Accessible Greenbelt grants program for 2010. To further fair housing, Greenbelt has been awarded funds to offer qualified city residents a number of home accessibility modifications to enable seniors and disabled adults in need to remain in their homes as long as possible. Examples include railings, grab bars, portable metal ramps, shower chairs and more.

Eligibility

This program is open to Greenbelt residents age 62 years and older or disabled (as determined by a Social Security Disability Award or Disability Pension Award) with an annual income below $44,800 for a single person household or $51,200 for a two person household. Proof of assets and monthly income will be required.

Applications

Applications will be evaluated based on financial and demonstrated needs. The equipment awarded to each household will be determined based on the number of applicants, funds available, priority and individual need. Applications will be considered on a first come, first served basis.

Call Julia Frank or Christal Parker Batey at 301-345-6660 for more information or for an application and informational brochure. Applications are due by Wednesday, March 31 at 4 p.m.

Funds for Recreation Available from City

The City of Greenbelt offers a wide variety of recreational classes which it would like to make available to as many residents as possible. Although the cost for these classes is very reasonable, the city recognizes that the cost might keep some from participating. As a result, the city has developed a financial assistance program which is designed to assist eligible individuals and families experiencing financial difficulties to participate in recreation programs and classes at a reduced rate.

The Greenbelt Recreation Financial Assistance Program is funded through a set-aside in the city budget and the Mary Geiger Scholarship Fund. Its goal is to provide the opportunity for all to participate. City residents who wish to apply for assistance may get an application from the Greenbelt Recreation Business Office, 99 Centerway or by downloading it at www.greenbeltmd.gov.

Those who want more information may call 301-397-2200.

Prayer of the Blessed Virgin (Never known to fail)
 Oh, most Beautiful Flower of Mt. Carmel, Fruitful Divine Splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in my necessity. Oh Star of the Sea, help me and show me here you are my Mother. Oh Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth, I humbly beseech You from the bottom of my heart to succor me in my necessity (Make Request). There are none that can withstand your power. Oh, Mary, conceived without sin, pray with us who have recourse to thee (Three times). Say this prayer for three consecutive days. Publish it and it will be granted to you. Grateful thanks.

Free Sustainable Landscaping Class

In 2006 the Greenbelt Advisory Committee on Environmental Sustainability (formerly the Recycling and Environment Advisory Committee) presented the Greenbelt City Council with a request that the City of Greenbelt work toward reducing its impact on the Chesapeake Bay. The request was to reduce the use of pesticides and fertilizers that eventually make their way into local waterways.

As part of working toward that goal, the city has held several public forums and workshops to help educate city residents on how everyone can help the city become more sustainable by making simple changes on how they manage their lawns. The latest event in this educational effort is a four-hour free workshop on sustainable landscaping.

On Saturday, March 13 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Greenbelt Community Center, the city will continue its educational efforts by providing a comprehensive program to give residents the tools they will need to become more environmentally aware when planning their spring gardens.

Participating in the program will be experts from the City of Greenbelt staff, the University of Maryland Extension Master Gardeners and the Anne Arundel county Watershed Stewards Academy. Topics will include "Reducing the Amount of Lawn and Turf," "Encouraging Wildlife into your Garden," "Stormwater Management for your Lawn," "Using Native Plants," "Composting" and more. Lesley Riddle, assistant director of Public Works, said, "This workshop will give residents the tools they need to impact our ecological health in time for the spring planting season."

The city is committed to helping improve the health of local waterways and believes that with the participation of residents, a big difference can be made.

Anyone may register and participate in this free workshop by registering using ReLink found at www.greenbeltmd.gov or by calling 301-397-2208.
