Council Okays Vehicle Purchases, Organizational Assessment Plan

by Kathleen Gallagher

At the March 27 meeting the Greenbelt City Council authorized a number of end-of-year purchases under the Fiscal Year 2013 budget, including vehicles for the Public Works and Police Departments and preliminary approval of a proposal to undertake an organizational assessment of city operations.

In other business councilmembers, all of whom were present, approved sending letters of support requested by the National League of Cities (NLC) and by the Anacostia Trails Heritage Area (ATHA).

New Vehicles

Two vehicles on the state bid list were approved for purchase for use by the Public Works Department: a Chevrolet 2500 cargo van at $17,118 and a GEM e1XD electric vehicle at $20,737. The cargo van will replace a 1998 van that had a prior life as a 15-passenger transport van in the Recreation Department until being deemed unsafe for that use. Kenneth Hall, director of public works, said he would have preferred a compressed natural gas (CNG) vehicle but, with none being available on state bid, the cost would be nearly $20,000 more. The cargo van is used for routine and emergency maintenance work by the building maintenance staff.

Councilmember Konrad Herling encouraged Hall to continue working with the public works directors in other municipalities to put pressure on the state to include more “green” vehicles in its bidding process. Hall said he would do so but reminded council that the cost of having a fast-speed pumping station is also high. Councilmember Rodney Roberts suggested that instead of purchasing expensive alternative fuel vehicles, the better tactic might be for the city to send public works mechanics for training to learn how to convert vehicles to alternative fuel capability.

The GEM e1XD will be the City of Greenbelt’s first electric vehicle. It operates only at speeds of up to 25 mph and will be used primarily for litter pickup in city medians and park areas. It replaces a 1998 Ford Ranger compact pickup truck with 98,000 miles and mechanical problems severe enough that it has been removed from service. The purchase price includes the addition of doors, a heater and a pickup body. Roberts voted against purchase of this vehicle because he believed it would be possible to find an electric vehicle to serve this purpose at a substantially lower price than the one on the state bid list.

Seven vehicles were approved for use by the Police Department with funding approved last year for the current

The new exhibit of vibrant abstract paintings in a complicated interplay of color and movement by Kathy Karlson is featured in the Community Center Art Gallery. The exhibit will be displayed until June, with an artists’ reception in the Gallery on Sunday from 1:30 to 3 p.m.

Also displayed is the Greenbelt Museum exhibit at the Community Center, “Greenbelt: The First 75 Years,” which celebrates the 75th anniversary by showing the city’s history through an interactive timeline. Meanwhile, across the street at the museum’s historic house at 10-B Crescent, tours are available for a nominal fee between 1 and 5 p.m.

Artful Afternoons also feature a studio open house and sale with the Community Center’s nine artists-in-residence from 1 to 4 p.m. All are invited to be inspired by their work in many styles and media, as well as to shop for unique gifts.

Kale to Eat, Kale to Wear Kale Music in the Center

by Melanie Lynn Griffin

Greenbelt residents love to celebrate and will find any excuse – pumpkins, old trees, community gardens, elections, Green Man, every conceivable holiday, all good reasons – for a festival, a parade or a party. In keeping with this tradition, hundreds of people turned out on a quintessential spring morning at Roosevelt Center April 20 to celebrate . . . kale.

“It’s a fine day for kale!” announced a member of the Kale-Tastics band to loud applause and hoots. The musicians were assembled in front of the historic Mother and Child statue, beneath a billowing banner that read: Kale-A-Rama Vegan Festival. Fresh spring-green leaves cast dappled shade over the dancing crowd of tattooed teens, dread locked young men and the occasional graybeard, while over-excited kids ran in circles around baby strollers and got tangled up in dog leashes.

Kale and collard green dresses, necklaces and headdresses dotted the gathering and garlands of

2014 Budget – Public Works

If It Happened Here, They Were Likely to Be Involved

by Thomas X. White

The budget worksession for the city’s Public Works Department was held on Wednesday, April 17 at the Community Center. All councilmembers were present, along with City Manager Michael McLaughlin, Assistant City Manager David Moran, City Treasurer Jeff Williams, Public Works Director Kenny Hall, Assistant Director James Sterling and Recycling Coordinator Luisa Robles.

Hall advised council he had no specific presentation and that he and his staff were prepared to respond to council questions related to the department’s Fiscal Year 2014 proposed budget.

Public Works has evolved into a multi-disciplined organization, encompassing Administration, Facilities Maintenance, Custodial Operations, Fleet Maintenance, Street Maintenance, Refuse Collection/Recycling, Parks/Playgrounds/Ball Fields/Fixtures/Horticulture and Intra-City Transit. Staffing for the department is proposed to remain at 50.5 employees (49 classified employees and 1.5 part-time non-classified).

Holding the Line

For FY14, several budgets accounting for Public Works expenditures are proposed to hold the line, with some accounts having slight increases from the Fiscal Year 2013 budget and other decreases. Administration is proposed for a decrease of $2,500 in expenditure from last year; the Maintenance of Multi-Purpose Equipment budget is slightly more. Street Maintenance is budgeted at $17,700 less than last year and Waste Collection is budgeted at $46,700 less than last year. The FY13 budget for the account was $672,100.

The city manager’s budget does not propose an increased

Letters to the Editor

THANKS!

Thank you for the excellent front page article in last week's issue on the participation of the Old Greenbelt Movie Theatre in the Partners in Preservation program. This is a wonderful chance to help the city win funds to restore the theater!

When this was written, the theater had already moved from #6 to #4 in voting. We hope everyone will vote every day before May 10 by visiting www.preservedmv.com/competitors.

The Greenbelt Community Development Corporation has started a committee, Friends of the Old Greenbelt Movie Theatre. Anyone interested in continuing to work on the restoration of the theater may contact us at simon-gava@yahoo.com.

There Is No Law To Violate . . .

The News Review article on the April 22 Council meeting contains the following material appearing to accuse Mr. Roberts of "violating confidential information":

"Roberts violated no law because there was no law to violate. To date Greenbelt has no law or penalty for the violation of confidential information by employees or elected officials."

The communication in question was from a public official to another public official. As many citizens tried to point out at the meeting, the Sunshine Laws demand that such communications be considered part of the public record unless they meet certain clearly specified, narrow criteria for confidentiality. If none of the above criteria applied to the information exposed by Roberts, then it was a matter of public record despite the demand by the sender to keep it secret. My impression from the meeting was that Mr. Roberts not only did not "violate any law" but that he did not do anything wrong – meaning that the information he shared did not meet those confidentiality criteria. If this is not correct, could the News Review please identify which legitimate confidentiality criteria applied to the information Mr. Roberts made public?

And if none did, could they please correct the record to indicate that Mr. Roberts did not do anything wrong, regardless of whether or not there is a "confidentiality" law?

Really Elated About Kale-a-Rama Success

Kale-A-Rama Vegan Festival 2013 turned out to be a celebration of community, cultural diversity, veganism and all things kale-tastic. We needed the Greenbelt Village to pull off the festival and the community rallied in kalerity of mission and purpose. So, it's only fitting to thank everyone who brought Greenbelt's first-ever, all-vegan festival to life.

Thanks especially to the hundreds of festival-goers who came from near and far to participate in Kale-A-Rama Vegan Festival 2013!

Kale-A-Rama Vegan Festival 2013 was only one event of many happening on Earth Day Saturday in Greenbelt. Kalegratulations to the entire city for the amazing Earth Day events organized all over town on that gorgeous, kale-a-riffic day!

Cub Scout's Lake Cleanup Project

The Greenbelt Cub Scout Pack 202 stream cleanup was held Saturday, April 6 at Buddy At-tick Lake Park as a spring service project for the Alice Ferguson Foundation 25th Potomac Watershed Cleanup.

They were joined by neighboring College Park Cub Scout Troop 740 in what was the Greenbelt cubs' third year working on the lake cleanup. In prior years, Pack 202 cleaned the storm water drainage area on Hanover Parkway as well as the stream located along Braden Field.

The purpose of the cleanup was removal of debris from parks, fields, forest, even parking lots before it reaches the Potomac River. The weather cooperated as the scouts sorted garbage and recyclables into blue and yellow bags. The packs walked the entire lake trail and waterline picking up bottles, cans, cigarette butts and other debris, some plucked from the edge of the lake. They were amazed to find a huge number of tennis balls in and alongside the lake. Some interesting items included a car bumper, a folding chair, a metal rod and a fishing pole. Approximately 300 pounds of trash and recyclable items were removed.

At the noon conclusion of this year's cleanup Webelos den leader Irfan Kahn summed up the cubs' lessons from the event by saying, "The cleanup doesn't end today."

ASG Loses Founding Member, Earth Friend

There is so much good that Doug Love did for the Astronomical Society of Greenbelt (ASG), the City of Greenbelt and society in general it is hard to mention it all. He was the founder or co-founder of several civic organizations in Greenbelt and was an officer and leader in them all. In many ways he was always involved with helping to increase peoples' appreciation of nature and the quest for world peace. He was a devout Christian but he always saw the search for the divine in other religions by others as being good because they were just seekers of the truth.

Whenever he got a chance he would show a child or adult the value and beauty of the natural world, be it a tree, flower, geologic formation or starry sky. The world is a better place because he lived and we were all lucky he was part of our community.

I knew Doug for over 30 years. When I moved to Maryland from Ohio in 1979, I became his friend early on in the early 80s. I didn't drive but he was always glad to take me camping to several places in Maryland, including Rattlesnake Hill, near Cunningham Falls State Park. Originally, we wanted to go camping at the park but it was closed for the season, as it was November 17. Instead of aborting our camping trip, he asked a local farmer near the park if we could camp on his land to watch the stars by just going right up to his house. The farmer was nice and directed us to Rattlesnake Hill, where we spent the next two days and nights. While there Doug encouraged me to watch for the Leonid Meteor Shower because I told him I was a meteor observer years ago when I was younger. He said that he too observed meteors when younger but said we should do it still because it is important for amateurs to contribute their observations. Although we only saw a few Leonid meteors, I credit Doug with helping to get me back into visual meteor watching.

Doug took me camping to observe the stars at other places, like the Mason-Dixon Star Party in York, Pa., and the Stellafane Convention in Springfield, Vt. He was always generous with helping by loaning his camping equipment or sharing a camp meal he prepared. He was always willing to share. He did a lot of camping and volunteer work for the Boy Scouts of America, being a scout leader for 30 years. He often camped at the national Jamboree, where he would teach constellation recognition. He loved the natural world and was always a leader and teacher.

He was an active spelunker in his younger days and was able to explore many caves and new rooms never before seen. He got his masters' degree in geology at Indiana State University, doing his thesis on the Geology of Caves and Caverns.

He was also able to publish scientific articles about his explorations.

In 1992, after a meeting of the Goddard Astronomy Club, where he was a member when he worked at Goddard, we decided that it was time to start an astronomy club in Greenbelt. We knew there was a need for another club so other than Goddard people could join. So, in December 1992 Doug arranged and planned the first meeting of the Greenbelt Astronomy Club, which later became the Astronomical Society of Greenbelt, at the Greenbelt Library. Although I was fairly active being an officer for several years, I eventually became less involved but Doug stayed active until recently when he no longer could. He not only was an active member the whole time but an officer and the first director of the City of Greenbelt Observatory. Before the observatory was dedicated in 2009 for the International Year of Astronomy, he came to most ASG public star parties with his 6-inch F/8 Newtonian reflector, which had a mirror that he had ground by hand at the Adler Planetarium when he was a younger man living near Chicago.

Douglas L. Love

Douglas L. Love, 66, of 3 Court Plateau Place, died at the Tate Foundation Chesapeake Hospice in Linthicum on Sunday, April 28, 2013, after a brief illness.

Doug was always interested in geology, astronomy, theology, politics and nature. He maintained his sense of wonder for nature that most people naturally have as children but lose when they become adults. He was always enthusiastic about astronomy. Just last month, after receiving a poor diagnosis about his medical condition, I asked him if he wanted to see Comet PanSTARRS and he became excited at the prospect. I told him it may be difficult to get to the location with his walker but that didn't stop him. He came anyway with the help of his good friend and fellow amateur naturalist Ray Stevens. When we got there, I pointed out where to look and handed him the binoculars. I watched him as he searched and he had a look of disappointment on his face because he initially didn't see it. A short time later he spotted it. He had a big smile on his face, which said it all. For that moment the sense of wonder had taken over his consciousness again and he was one with nature.

We will always miss him dearly and are better Earthlings because we were lucky to know him.

In Memoriam

A Trip to Remember

In 2004 Doug Love sent out an email to ask if anyone from Greenbelt happened to be traveling to Indiana. He had driven to Indiana, his vehicle broke down there and he needed a ride back so he could retrieve his repaired vehicle. I did not know Doug Love except that I often heard of him and read about some of his activities in the Greenbelt News Review. I was feeling a bit adventurous when I offered to drive him to Indiana over the 4th of July weekend. Not only was it an opportunity to help someone but it was also an opportunity to visit my mother's relatives in Indiana.

I picked Mr. Love up at his house at 6 a.m. on the Saturday before the 4th of July and proceeded to drive north into the Maryland mountains. Our route took us briefly into Pennsylvania and West Virginia and then on to Ohio and Indiana. Along the way, he shared his enormous knowledge of the mountains. He pointed out how differences in stone colorations in the various regions affected the color of the road surfaces in which the stone was used. He talked about his love, caves.

We took turns driving my little Corolla. Mr. Love drove most of the way through Ohio and into Indiana. Although I thought his driving was fine, apparently an Indiana State policeman did not. While Mr. Love was driving we were pulled over by a state policeman who kindly reminded the driver to mind his speed and then we were on our way again. We were reminded again of the dangers of speed when we witnessed a horrific accident on a winding Indiana road not long afterward.

We arrived at Mr. Love's destination, late Saturday afternoon. After introducing me to the couple who ran the camp, he took me on a brief tour of one of the caves on the property. Then, after promising to call Mr. Love early on Monday to be sure his vehicle was working, I departed the camp and headed to my destination 20 miles away. On Monday, I headed back alone to Greenbelt. Our paths never crossed again but I will never forget Doug Love and our 4th of July weekend adventure.

leafy greens adorned lines of display tables featuring information and healthy food, mostly of the green variety.

Business was booming in dehydrated kale chips – coconut pineapple, nacho and jalapeño pepper – and kale salads. Kale smoothies and kale ice cream cones were a big hit with kids, adults and even several canines in attendance. Why kale? According to Bob Pyle of Ellicott City, one of the event organizers, “Kale is the single most nutrient rich food. It is a symbol of good health.”

Despite the light-hearted spirit of the day, serious conversations could be overheard. More than 30 vendors and nonprofit vegetarian, animal rights and environmental groups, as well as “the largest group of vegan athletes in the area” dispensed information and coached people who were considering the switch to a vegan lifestyle.

“Changing yourself is the hardest part It’s so much easier to find good vegan food nowadays It’s not too hard to get used to You just have to break your cheese addiction. . . .”

Shankar Balasubramanian recently moved to Greenbelt and volunteers for the Vegetarian Society of D.C. “I didn’t know much about the environment when I became a vegan,” he said, “but I’ve learned this is good for me, for animals and for the earth. I eat on the path of least destruction.”

At the next table over, a woman leafed through a flyer on International Respect for Chickens Day (May 4). “I’m just appalled by the chicken industry,” she said. “I’m definitely giving up eggs.”

Tracey and Tommy Gill came from Baltimore to attend the event. “I became a vegan in January,” said Tracey, carefully rearranging her necklace of collar greens. She had been having issues with digesting dairy products and then she read some studies on how “a vegan diet can really lower a woman’s cancer risks,” so she made the switch. “I’m surprised how good celery juice is!”

It didn’t surprise organizer Bob Pyle that the Gills came down from Baltimore. “A lot of people from Baltimore came. We had some good speakers and the vegan community is pretty close,” he said. Fellow organizer Cam MacQueen said that she had received calls from vegan groups as far away as Seattle wanting to know how they could organize a festival.

MacQueen gave an enthusiastic two thumbs up to the gathering. “I am delighted at the diversity here. At its heart, Greenbelt is a very diverse community. Today we’ve come together over the issue of healthful, compassionate food.”

Information on how and why people consider a vegan lifestyle is available on the website of festival sponsor A Well-Fed World at <http://awellfedworld.org/>.

year's budget. Included are two Chevrolet Tahoes, four Ford Interceptor utility vehicles and one Chevrolet Impala police car. The two Tahoes, which provide necessary equipment space, will be assigned to officers in the commercial vehicle inspection unit. The Interceptors will be used for general patrol and for the crime prevention/public information officer. The one Impala will be used by detectives in special operations.

The Police Department looked at shifting from use of the Chevrolet Caprice police car to the Ford Interceptor because of long delays in delivery of the Caprices last year. Other advantages were that the Interceptors not only have higher ergonomic ratings but also would be $3,800 cheaper per unit. Chief James Craze explained that the Interceptor is a crossover vehicle that is specifically designed and built for police work. At this time, there are still no alternative fuel vehicles certified for police emergency use. Craze confirmed that all the department's fleet must be certified for emergency use.

Operations Assessment

In discussions last year for the FY13 budget, council directed that a request for proposals (RFP) be issued for a consulting firm to conduct an organizational assessment of the city's operations. The budget included $50,000 for the study. Sparked by a vacancy in an assistant director position in the Recreation Department, this discussion arose regarding whether it was necessary to maintain the city's practice of having two assistant directors of departments. The council decided there was a need for an external operational alignment study to determine if the city had the right positions in the right departments to provide city services effectively.

Issued in December, the RFP generated responses from 15 firms. This number was reduced by the city manager and staff to four firms judged to have extensive experience in this type of work. Two were then identified as the top competitors: the Mercer Group and the Matrix Consulting Group, both of which submitted budgets just below $50,000. Of the two, city staff recommended Matrix. Not only is the firm's focus exclusively on analysis of local government management, finance, staffing and operations but it has both extensive and recent experience in assessment in these areas. Councilmembers indicated general approval of the recommendation, which will return as a resolution for negotiated purchase on the agenda of the next meeting.

Support Letters

On March 18 the NLC sent out a "call to action" to its members regarding pending federal legislation that could either cap (at 28 percent as proposed by the Obama administration) or completely eliminate (as proposed by the Simpson-Bowles Commission) the tax-exempt status of local government financing, including municipal bonds. The NLC estimates that had such a cap been in place over the last decade, the cost to state and local governments for interest expenses would have been $173 billion and it would have been $495 billion if the exemption had been eliminated over that period. The city council agreed to respond as requested by the NLC and ask the city's federal delegation to support the continuance of tax-exempt financing.

Aaron Marcavitch, executive director of ATHA, gave a brief update on ATHA activities, including this year's War of 1812 Bicentennial events, the growth of bicycle tourism and progress on the Anacostia bike trail. Later on the agenda, council approved a letter to be sent to the Office of Heritage Planning and Outreach at the Maryland Historical Trust in support of ATHA's Fiscal Year 2014 management funding.

Greenbelt's Eleanor and Franklin Democratic Club will be represented with at least a dozen members participating with over 300 other walkers from 24 churches planning to participate.

Beneficiaries of the CROP Walk are Church World Service, with Help by Phone of Prince George's County receiving 25 percent. Walkers get pledges from sponsors, then turn the money over for distribution. Help by Phone of Prince George's County provides direct help locally without red tape through their eight food pantries.

The local CROP Walk began in 1981 and last year raised $55,000. All are welcome.

Christmas in April

The Roosevelt Club participated in the recent Christmas in April, where 85 county homes were rehabbed in a one-day blitz of activity by hundreds of county volunteers. Participating club members included Keith Bare, Emmett Jordan, Lyn and Bob Doyle.

The next meeting is May 17 and will include a report from Greenbelt's state Senator Paul Pinsky and Delegates Tawanna Gaines, Ann Healey, joined by new Delegate Alonzo Washington. That meeting will be in the Terrace Room at Greenbriar's Community Center and will include refreshments. All are welcome.

Greenbelters were saddened to hear of the death of city activist Doug Love, 66, on Sunday, April 28, 2013.

Condolences to the family and friends of Dorothy Peters of Green Ridge House, who died on April 20, 2013.

Congratulations to:

– Christina Doepel, a teacher at Greenbelt Middle School, who was named "History Day Teacher of the Year for Prince George's County" at the Maryland State History Day competition in Baltimore. She was at the competition with students Erin Delaney, Elizabeth Gardner, Tooba Malik, Theresa Ozga and Jamie Rogers-Sites, who presented a project on the Irish Potato Famine.

– longtime senior-exercise instructor Nancy Shaffer on the publication of her first book, "Accidentally on Purpose." The line of friends and students at her book-signing at the New Deal Café on April 26 was long and enthusiastic.

Several Greenbelters were among attendees at the weekend celebration to mark the 20th anniversary of the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum on Sunday, April 28. Leonie Penney and her daughter Olga Garber, Jordan and Eva Choper and Jerry Dancis attended that evening's events, along with over 1,000 other invited survivors and World War II veterans. The Elie Wiesel award, presented to the veterans, was accepted on their behalf by Susan Eisenhower, granddaughter of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. The Chopers returned on Monday for the final day of the anniversary celebration, which included speeches by former president Bill Clinton and Elie Wiesel himself, both of whom spoke 20 years ago at the museum's opening ceremony.

Bike to Work – What’s Not to Like?

by Jim Link

On Friday, May 17 thousands of bicycling enthusiasts from all over the Washington area will bike to work as an alternative to driving alone. It’s a fun, healthful, wallet-friendly activity that is physically stimulating, spiritually uplifting, politically correct and avoids fuelishness and maybe even enhances your love life.

Last year, over 12,000 cyclists participated and coordinators expect even more this year. Bike to Work Day is sponsored by Commuter Connections and the Washington Area Bicycle Association, which have organized 72 pit stops around the area and from which convoys of bikers will pedal to Freedom Plaza in Washington, D.C. There they will be regaled with music, refreshments and speakers.

Greenbelt’s own pit stop is at the Aquatic and Fitness Center at 101 Centerway, from 6:30 to 8:30 a.m. with the first convoy to leave at 7 a.m. for the College Park pit stop en route to Freedom Plaza. Coordinators are William Smith of Greenbelt Public Works, Greenbelt Human Resources Director Mary Johnson, Community Center Supervisor Di Quynn-Reno and Stephen Park and Julie Magness of the Aquatic and Fitness Center.

“You’ll get bagels from the Greenbelt Co-op; if you register to ride before May 10, you’ll get a swag bag sponsored by the Anacostia Trail Heritage Area,” Quynn-Reno said. “The Greenbelt convoy has 36 registrants (April 29).”

Moi: “What’s in the swag bag?”

Di: “‘Stuff We All Get,’ ‘get it? Pens, pads of paper, maybe an umbrella hat. Plus Arrow Bicycles in Hyattsville is providing a mechanic to get riders launched safely.”

To register visit www.biketoworkmetrodc.org.

For questions or further information call Quynn-Reno at 240-542-2053 or email her at dquynnreno@greenbeltmd.gov.

Moi: “It’s sort of a ‘be there or be square’ offer for bicyclists, right?”

Di: “Yup. Be round and bike to work, I guess.”

Moi: “Or spherical or rhomboid or trapezoidal . . .”

Peterson Youth Concert in Center this Saturday

Computer Club Meeting to Be Held May 9

The Greenbelt Computer Club will hold its next monthly meeting on Thursday, May 9 from 7 to 8:30 p.m. in Room 103 at the Greenbelt Community Center, 15 Crescent Road.

trash collection fee for Greenbelt residents.

For some Greenbelt business accounts, however, proposed increases in refuse/recycling fees range from 10 to 100 percent depending on disposal costs for the city.

The Roosevelt Center budget is proposed to increase by $6,900 over that of last year. This increase reflects overruns in the funds expended last year to deal with water and sewer and issues of building maintenance.

The proposed budget for Parks in FY14 is $21,000 more than last year.

The budget for Traffic Control devices is proposed for a $5,000 decrease.

Last year's combination fireworks and light display with accompanied music received mixed reviews, mainly because viewers felt the music was distracting. Many, however, could not readily hear the music, depending upon where they were located in the park.

The Public Works staff provided council with several alternatives, including a fireworks plus laser show. Councilmembers' feelings were mixed and although no final decision was made, staff will include a traditional firework display as an alternative proposal for submission at an upcoming council meeting.

Electricity

Staff handouts provided comparisons for the city's contracted purchases of electricity. Currently (excuse the pun) the city contracts with Clean Currents for electricity by wind energy. City staff had contacted Washington Gas Energy Services (WGES) as an alternate supplier for the contract that expires in June 2013.

Clean Currents' latest quote is 7.98 cents per kilowatt hour, with WGES coming in 4 percent lower at 7.684 cents per kWh. Both quotes are for a two-year term with "100% wind renewable energy credits."

City staff estimated nearly $15,000 savings for contracting with WGES. Again, no decision was made but the topic will be discussed at an upcoming council meeting.

Council Review

Mayor Judith Davis led council through a page-by-page review of the Public Works budget. Individual councilmembers noted commentary on particular accomplishments during the past year and objectives for FY14.

Public Events

When council reached a list of assistance items relating to public events scheduled for Roosevelt Center, Davis opined that, considering the effort that Public Works crews had put forth for sponsors of events in the Center, maybe the city should set some fee levels for services provided. McLaughlin gave a quick response, however, that those public events bring residents, customers and visitors to Roosevelt Center, which benefits the city and merchants in the Center.

It was also announced at the meeting that the Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Agency (WMATA) will rearrange bus stops at Crescent and Gardenway to improve the accommodation there of bus transfers. It is likely that up to five currently-available parking spaces will be lost in this transition, some on Crescent and some on Gardenway.

Sustainability Goals

Several topics relating to Greenbelt's sustainability goals were discussed at the Public Works Department budget work-session on Wednesday, April 17. City Manager Michael McLaughlin pointed out that utilizing the greenhouse gas calculation methodology of the International Council for Local Environmental Initiatives (ICLEI), the city has reduced Greenbelt's generation of greenhouse gases (carbon footprint) by 55 percent from 2005 levels.

McLaughlin said this calculation is well ahead of goals set by the State of Maryland and the Metropolitan-Washington Council of Governments. In addition, the city's total energy consumption has been reduced 13 percent from another 2005 baseline.

Still another accomplishment was a recycling rate of 56 percent of refuse collection in 2012, with an estimate that 58 percent will be achieved in 2013. Several councilmembers inquired about distribution of the larger recycling bins in other city neighborhoods beyond Boxwood and Greenspring. McLaughlin has not proposed buying additional totes for FY14.

Councilmember Leta Mach mentioned a pilot composting program. Apparently a push exists for such a program in Greenbelt, despite concerns about its applicability to neighborhoods where homeowner associations may have rules impeding its implementation.

Objectives for the coming year relating to sustainability include: reduce total city energy consumption by 15 percent by 2015; raise City recycling percentage to 63 percent by 2015; work with the City Advisory Committee for Environmental Sustainability (Green ACES) in implementation of its Sustainability Master Plan to achieve Sustainable Maryland status; continue discussion with businesses and apartment complexes to promote recycling; and expand the recycling rolling cart program.

Heather Mizeur Meet And Greet Saturday

On Saturday, May 4 from 2 to 4 p.m. Greenbelters Frank and Susan Gervasi, Michael Hartman and Lore Rosenthal are hosting a Meet and Greet with Delegate Heather Mizeur at the Gervasi home, 163 Research Road.

Not a fundraiser, Mizeur is eyeing a run for governor in 2014. Even though the election is not until next year, her views exemplify values that thrive in Greenbelt; she will share her vision for the state and talk with attendees, discussing their ideas.

Mizeur's legislative record includes efforts to expand health coverage, create high-tech and green jobs, promote marriage equality and protect the environment. The Baltimore Sun praised her as "one of the leading environmental advocates in the General Assembly." The Washington Post featured her plans on how to support K-12 education, create Maryland job opportunities and rebuild the transportation infrastructure.

It Takes A Child to Build A Fairy Village at Green Man

by Richard McMullin

Much of the time we are distracted by all the Big Things going on around us. The symphony of urban life can overwhelm the senses. That is why finding a quiet place or a secret place where we can concentrate on just one thing can be so healthful and reviving.

Children know how to block out the world and play inside the bubble of their imaginations, which is something that they also know how to share with one another. With that in mind, several of the folks working on family activities for the Green Man Festival are planning to have a special workshop to help kids think up and build tiny houses and other buildings for a fairy village that will be a part of the festival this year.

Tom Goodridge, the Green Man actor, along with Joan Clement and Linda Jackson, have been collecting natural items such as bark, twigs, moss and stones from around Greenbelt for several weeks to use as building materials. The village will be located in a green space in Roosevelt Center for all to see. It will be later relocated to a secret spot that only children can visit. Little builders may apply for fairy permits at the table right across from the New Deal Café.

Think small and act with imagination.

The Green Man Festival will be held May 11 and 12 at Roosevelt Center.

Richard McMullin is the Green Man Festival coordinator.
