Md's Presidential Primary To be Held Tuesday, April 26

by James Giese

The Maryland Presidential primary is Tuesday and for a change Maryland voters might help decide who the Republican and Democratic candidates for president of the United States will be. Often, by the time Maryland votes, the races are decided. This time, while Donald Trump is in the lead on the Republican side and Hillary Clinton on the Democratic side, neither has sewn up their party's nomination. There is the potential on the Republican side that no candidate will secure enough votes to be nominated on the first ballot, in which case there could be an open convention where nobody knows what might happen. With only two candidates still in the race on the Democratic side, the likelihood is that the nominee will be decided ahead of its convention. While Clinton is still expected to gain the nomination, challenger Bernie Sanders has a chance.

Since this is a party primary, only registered Republicans and Democrats will be permitted to vote and only for candidates in their party's primary contests. Besides the candidates for president, there are primaries for U.S. senator, representative and the election of four Maryland Circuit Court judges. Voters will also choose three party delegates and three alternates to the party national convention with the

Where Do I Vote?

Election Day for the 2016 Democratic and Republican Presidential Primary Elections is Tuesday, April 26. Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. Voters may be able to avoid delays by voting between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m.

Five county polling places serve Greenbelt:

Precinct 3: Greenbelt Community Center, 15 Crescent Road

Precinct 6: Greenbelt Elementary School, 66 Ridge Road

Precinct 8: Springhill Lake Elementary School, 6060 Springhill Drive

Precinct 13: Eleanor Roosevelt High School, 7601 Hanover Parkway

Precinct 18: Turning Point Academy, 7800 Good Luck Road

Only registered Democrats and Republicans may vote in the primaries next Tuesday. Greenbelters who have declined affiliation with the two major parties will vote only in the November General Election.

All voters eligible to vote in the primary should have received notification of the election and a reminder of their polling place after early voting closed. To verify registration or locate polling place, call the County Board of Elections at 301-341-7300 or go to elections.state.md.us and click on "voter registration" or "Where do I vote?"

Who Will Replace Mikulski?

by James Giese

Greenbelt voters can help decide who will be the next U.S. Senator replacing retiring incumbent Barbara Mikulski. Polls indicate a close contest between two contenders for the Democratic nomination, both currently members of the U.S. Congress: Donna Edwards from Prince George's County and Chris Van Hollen from Montgomery County. And if neither of those candidates suits your fancy, eight other Democrats are running. Republican voters will have a list of 14 names from which to choose.

Edwards

Born in Yanceyville, North Carolina, Edwards first worked for Lockheed Corporation at Goddard Space Flight Center following college. She obtained a law degree from the University of New Hampshire and then worked for advocacy groups and foundations, serving last as executive director of the Arca Foundation. After defeating 4th Congressional District Representative Albert Wynn in a 2008 primary, she was elected to that office in a special election following Wynn's resignation, becoming the first African-American woman to be elected to Congress from Maryland.

Now in her fourth term, Edwards has been reelected even though her gerrymandered district was radically altered following the 2010 census. Originally the district encompassed Southern Prince Georges County, extending northward along the District of Columbia boundary to Montgomery County, where it further extended northward and included much of the upper part of that county. Following redistricting, her district lost Montgomery County, instead swinging around Greenbelt and across northern Prince George's County to incorporate large segments of Anne Arundel County. Edwards serves on two committees – Science, Space and Technology and Transportation and Infrastructure. (donnaedwardsforsenate.com)

Van Hollen

Van Hollen was born in Karachi, Pakistan, of parents working for the State Department. After obtaining degrees from Swarthmore and Harvard, he earned his law degree from Georgetown University. He worked as a staff aide to Senator Charles Mathias, the U.S. Senate Committee on Foreign Relations and Maryland Governor William Donald Schaefer. Van Hollen served from 1991 through 2002 in the Maryland General Assembly, first in the House of Delegates and then in the Senate. He was then elected to the U. S. House of Representatives from Maryland's Eighth Congressional District, where he has served since 2003.

Like the Fourth District, the Eighth was significantly changed in the 2010 Census redistricting and now encompasses Montgomery County and parts of Carroll and Frederick. Van Hollen serves on the House Budget Committee and the Joint Select Committee on Deficit Reduction (vanhollen.org).

Theater Operates at a Profit But also with Challenges

by Diane Oberg

After 11 months of operation, the Old Greenbelt Theatre is operating at a small profit and is not dependent upon city funding for operating expenses, although the city provides some transition funds for other expenses. Executive Director Caitlin McGrath sat down with the Greenbelt City Council and City Manager Michael McLaughlin on April 13 for the first of what should be an annual review.

The Friends of the Greenbelt Theatre (FOGT) has a 3-year contract with the city to operate the theater. McGrath, council and the city manager all expressed pleasure with how things are going with a general sense that the theater operations are exceeding initial expectations, although challenges still remain.

Since the theater reopened it is averaging more than $3,700 per week in gross revenue. It has shown roughly 50 first-run films, not holding any for more than three weeks. To make better use of its single screen, it generally shows two films each week, plus any specialty showings such as family, cult classics, film noir and 35-mm archival films. In addition, roughly 4,000 patrons have attended free community events at the theater.

While most aspects of the operation are meeting expectations, McGrath said that they have been less successful with theater rentals. One issue is that the theater is not set up well for business conferences in terms of the technology in place. There is no podium available where speakers can plug in their laptops or other devices. Instead, power point and other presentations must be run from the projection booth. McGrath said they do have a request in for a quote for the type of podium they envision.

There are also still physical problems with the theater. McGrath noted that having water from a roof leak drip onto patrons and being unable to adequately heat the theater in winter takes away from the first class experience they are trying to offer their patrons.

Working with the city, which as owner of the theater must approve all changes, FOGT is planning a Phase II of renovations. The renovations will be done in phases to avoid having to close for an extended time. Likely renovations include acoustic improvements, new seats (McGrath passed around fabric swatches and a brochure showing what is under consideration) and lowering and strengthening the stage.

There was also extended discussion of FOGT's marketing. They use a variety of approaches, such as offering free tickets at street festivals in exchange for attendees' email addresses, and are considering offering things such as sponsored free film series, lunch-and-a-movie programs and outreach to nearby retirement communities as well as special events such as a pajama night with a family-oriented movie and pizza, and catered dinner and movie events, possibly with beer and wine.

In developing their programs, FOGT must deal with certain

Letters to the Editor

A Picture Is Worth

Thanks for the article about the coming signs along Southway.

I was wishing that one of Danny Kennedy's vibrantly colored renditions of a Greenbelt home could be put up in place where the directional sign now stands.

We have three restaurants, one with performances, two gas stations, a library, a community center, two swimming pools, tennis courts, a volleyball court, baseball and football events, several churches, [and so much more]. We have a synagogue, a police station, an animal shelter, a public works building with [geo-thermal] heating ... and more. The nursery school, the elementary school... the senior independent living Green Ridge House and the skateboard park and all the wonderful walkways throughout the community.

Of course, we can't put all this in a sign. But people coming down Southway for the first time should have some idea about our town's truly fine diversity.

Folks are usually driving too fast to look at this sign while driving into our town. But they would catch one of Danny's houses as they sailed by. And it would say, "Welcome to Greenbelt...a place that reveres artists, musicians, folks of every walk of life ... plus, we love our houses."

It would state all this with no words – just a great painting.

And the painting would be protected by the glass or some kind of protective covering now existing on the directional sign.

Stop the Development

On April 4, council held a worksession to meet with David Hillman, president of Southern Management Corporation (SMC) and owner of Lakeside North Apartments, to discuss SMC's proposal to build a 25-story, 400-unit luxury high rise apartment complex adjacent to the existing apartments. Hillman conceded that SMC would not fight opposition to the proposed development. We contend that the purpose of the worksession was concealed to prevent the public from expressing opposition.

The meeting was advertised in the March 31 edition of the Greenbelt News Review as a council worksession with Lakeside North Apartments. A purpose for the meeting was not provided, leaving the impression the work session would relate to the existing apartments, not a proposal for new, high density development.

We learned of the purpose of the worksession when viewing a recording of it. We learned that Mayor Emmett Jordan brought the proposal before council. According to Councilmember Judith Davis, Jordan, without the other members of council present, met with Southern Management prior to the April 4 worksession.

According to Celia Craze, director of Planning and Community Development, there are compatibility issues with the proposed development. Craze pointed out that the proposed development is typical of dense urban properties. The proposed development would be on five acres of beautiful, currently wooded land. According to Councilmember Rodney Roberts, the development would destroy the ecosystem there and is inappropriate for Greenbelt. The other councilmembers expressed support for the proposed development and even encouraged Hillman to consider similar proposals for other areas of Greenbelt; these other members did this without first consulting with the Greenbelt public.

We believe council showed poor judgment by not being more transparent about the true purpose of the worksession. We demand to know why Mayor Jordan met secretly with SMC, when the meeting took place, who attended and what was said. Council should hold a public meeting to discuss the development.

Brian Almquist

Editor's Note: City Manager Michael McLaughlin responded to questions from the News Review as follows:

Mayor Jordan and I met with Mr. Hillman and Arthur Horne, Mr. Hillman's attorney on February 23, 2016 at Mr. Horne's request. A summary of the meeting was provided to the City Council on February 26 as part of their weekly report. The summary noted that a worksession would be set for all of Council to be briefed. At the February 23 meeting, they presented the same proposal they presented at the worksession on April 4.

Correction

The Alvin Hargrave headline in the April 14 issue (Page 9) states that the defendant received a 16-year sentence for murder. As the story demonstrates, however, the headline should have read manslaughter. The News Review regrets the error.

Boxwood Village Scholarship Open

The Boxwood Village Civic Association offers an annual $500 scholarship to a resident of Boxwood Village. It is available to graduating high school seniors and to full-time (at least 12 credit hours per semester) undergraduate students. The scholarship is partially funded through the proceeds from the Boxwood Booth at the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival.

The application form should be completed and returned by June 30. A scholarship committee composed of five Boxwood Village residents will choose this year's recipient. For further information and/or to pick up an application form, call Jean Cook at 301-345-2597 or Judy Ott at 301-474-0222.

Studio Space Available At Community Center

Local artists, artisans and designers who are interested in a studio space based in the Community Center may apply now. Applications are invited through May 1 for the department's Artist-in-residence Program, which provides affordable 24-hour studio space in an atmosphere of mutual support. At least one space will be available for a ceramic artist and one space for a practitioner of another medium.

Participants are selected for the program based on their artwork, professional qualifications and interest in community involvement. Eight artists are currently participating, sharing three sub-divided, light-filled former classrooms. Current artists represent a diverse array of media including ceramic art tile, functional pottery, art quilts, costume design, assemblage, painting and cut paper illustration.

The Community Center houses a contemporary art gallery, dance studio, television production studio, arts education classrooms and many other amenities.

Greenbelt Theatre Will Be Film Repository

On Tuesday, April 19, the Old Greenbelt Theatre received delivery of thousands of reel-to-reel films from the Prince George's County Memorial Library System. This partnership sprung from the temporary closure of the New Carrollton branch, which served as the system storage facility. The library system had kept all of the reel-to-reel films that had been the audiovisual collection at the Hyattsville branch in storage since the collection morphed into a DVD-only collection years ago.

The theatre will become the new guardian of these films, some of which are quite rare. This will also be the beginning of a long-term partnership that will see the theatre presenting film-related programming in the New Carrollton branch when it reopens and possibly at other branches prior to that time.

Astronomy Society Invites the City, Neighbor Communities to Star Parties

by Jack Chavez

This article is part of a periodic series profiling the city's recognition groups and how they serve the city.

One does not have to travel far to experience a night of stargazing with knowledgeable, friendly people. The Astronomical Society of Greenbelt (ASG) regularly welcomes the public to what they call "star parties" year-round.

The group, founded in 1992, sets up these meetings at the Greenbelt Observatory, located off the end of Northway, only a couple hundred yards from the Baltimore-Washington Parkway. The observatory is equipped with a 1981 Model C14 telescope that was donated by Montgomery College in 2001. The observatory itself is owned by the City of Greenbelt.

"[With the telescope] we can see planetary nebulas, supernovas, and galaxies," said Observatory Committee Chairman Conrad Terrill. To get the most out of the observatory, the group often uses a MallinCam, a camera built for astronomical observation that is capable of seeing objects tens of millions of lightyears away.

It wouldn't be a stretch to assume that Greenbelt—less than 10 miles northeast of Washington and less than 30 miles south of Baltimore—would not be an ideal spot for astronomical observation, but it's still possible to see quite a lot from here. The observatory is located in what Terrill described as the darkest part of Greenbelt.

"The trees help cut down on lights from the city and traffic," said Michael Chesnes, who works at the NASA Goddard Space Flight Center.

Accessibility

The ASG also prides itself on its accessibility to the public. The star parties are free of charge, and everyone from the seasoned and experienced to the total novice is encouraged to attend.

"There is a strong community element [to the Astronomical Society of Greenbelt]," Chesnes said. "This is an outreach program, to be shared and enjoyed by everyone." True to their intention, the star parties are a more intimate and casual experience than what large, paid programs can offer.

"I was very curious to come out," Casey Kohnhorst of Brentwood said. "Everyone is extremely friendly and open to answering questions."

"I like the relaxed atmosphere," first-timer Lauren Stevens of Mount Rainier said. "I don't feel judged asking simple questions."

The next star party will take place at the Greenbelt Observatory on April 30 at 9 p.m.

delegate candidates pledged to vote for one or another of the various presidential candidates.

Democrats

There are no polls to indicate how Greenbelters might vote in the Democratic primary. Since most registered voters in the city are Democrats, that presidential race will be of greatest interest to most city voters. Greenbelt voters in the past have been more liberal in their votes cast than voters statewide. That could bode well for Sanders who calls himself a Democratic Socialist. However, in polls done elsewhere, African Americans have shown strong loyalty to Clinton and Greenbelt has more African American residents than white according to U.S. census data. We'll find out Tuesday evening.

Originally from Park Ridge, Ill., Clinton obtained a law degree from Yale University, where she met her husband, Bill Clinton. Before moving to Arkansas, she worked as an attorney and for a time worked for a committee of Congress. As Bill's wife, she became the first lady of Arkansas and then of the United States, where she made a name for herself by taking an active role in an attempt to enact a universal health care system.

In 2000, Clinton was elected a U.S. senator from New York State, where she served for eight years. In 2008, she ran for president, but was defeated by Barack Obama in the Democratic primaries. Upon his election, President Obama appointed Clinton to be secretary of state and she served in that office for four years. Since then she has been focused on her campaign to be elected president. (hillaryclinton.com)

Sanders has been representing Vermont in Congress since 1990, first as the state's sole member of the House of Representatives for 16 years and then in the U.S. Senate for the past 10 years. Born in Brooklyn, N.Y., and a graduate of the University of Chicago, Sanders served as mayor of Burlington, Vt., for nine years before entering Congress. Defining himself as a Democratic Socialist, Sanders served much of his political career as an independent, becoming a Democrat only in recent years (berniesanders.com).

Also on the Democratic ballot is Roque "Rocky" de la Fuente of San Diego, Calif., where he was born. Obtaining advanced education at a number of universities in the U.S. and Mexico, he became a successful automobile dealer and businessman. While he has been involved in California politics, he has not held elective office (rocky2016.com).

Democrats have the choice of voting as uncommitted to any candidate. Republicans do not.

Democrats are asked to elect four female and five male delegates to the national party convention. Of the nine female candidates, one is uncommitted and the others divided evenly between Clinton and Sanders. There are 13 male candidates with three uncommitted and the remainder divided between Sanders and Clinton.

Republicans

Nationally, Donald Trump has been in the lead in securing delegates, but it still is possible that he will fail to get a majority of delegates. Ted Cruz is making a strong effort to stop Trump and become the nominee. Together with some primary victories, Cruz has been working behind the scenes to obtain pledges from uncommitted delegates and from delegates selected at caucuses in some states.

John Kasich is the third candidate still actively running. While he has lagged far behind the other two, it is possible that he could garner enough delegates to prevent either Cruz or Trump being nominated on the first ballot, in which case he would be placed in a key bargaining position or could become the convention choice after committed delegates abandon one or the other leader.

The primary career of Trump, a native of Queens, N.Y., has been that of builder-developer; he has built a number of prominent structures and establishments bearing his name. He also became well known as a reality show host on major network television. He is also an author with a number of best selling books. This is his first venture into politics as a candidate, although he has financially supported numerous candidates in the past (donaldjtrump.com).

Cruz is a senator from Texas, still in his first term. He was born in Canada but raised in Texas, his mother being a U.S. citizen while his father was a Cuban refugee. He is a graduate of Yale Law School and served as Solicitor General of Texas from 2003 to 2008. In 2012, he was elected to the Senate, where he has been able to successfully coalesce enough ultra-conservative support from senators and representatives to block a number of efforts at compromise on legislation, even forcing a government shutdown over appropriations legislation.

Kasich is the current governor of Ohio. Born and raised near Pittsburgh, Pa., he earned a BA degree from Ohio State University. In 1978 he became the youngest person to be elected to the Ohio State Senate. In 1982 he was elected to Congress from Ohio's 12th District. During his 18 years in Congress, Kasich served first on the Armed Services Committee and then the House Budget Committee, eventually becoming chair. In 2000 he left Congress to run for president and when that didn't work out he became a television commentator and businessman.

Former neurosurgeon Ben Carson remains a candidate but has stopped campaigning. Other candidates who have withdrawn from the campaign are Jeb Bush, Chris Christie, Carly Fiorina, Mike Huckabee, Rand Paul, Marco Rubio and Rick Santorum. All these names, however, remain on the Republican ballot.

There are 42 candidates for delegates of whom many are uncommitted. Three are pledged to Trump, three to Cruz and two to Kasich. There are 16 alternate delegates of whom three each are pledged to Cruz and Trump. Voters can choose three delegates and three alternates.

Maryland Same-Day Voter Registration

Anyone who wants to vote in the Maryland Presidential Primary Election but missed the April 5 registration deadline can, with proof of address, still register and vote the same day during the early voting period of April 14 to April 21, daily from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Address changes can also be made at early voting locations. Party affiliation changes may not be made during early voting. No same-day registration will be held on the day of the April 26 primary.

For same-day registration or address change in Prince George's County, go to any of the eight county early voting sites. Preferably bring a driver's license or substitute identification issued by the Maryland Motor Vehicle Administration. Other documentation that can be offered as proof of address might include a paycheck, bank statement, utility bill, or other government-issued document showing name and new address. Depending on circumstances, a regular ballot or provisional ballot will be issued for voting.

The closest early voting site to Greenbelt is the College Park Community Center at 5051 Pierce Avenue in College Park. For a complete list of county early voting locations, go to elections.mypgc.us. For additional information call the County Board of Elections at (301) 341-7300.

challenges. The distributors determine how long a film must stay in the theater. Some distributors will not allow other events while their films are running and do not allow rentals and other special events on Friday and Saturday evenings, which is when groups are most interested. And FOGT cannot predict when advertising an upcoming film when, and even whether, they will actually be able to show it.

In addition to films, FOGT is starting to dabble into event cinema, McGrath said, such as the Beethoven Concerto shown on April 17 and 18. However, even in this area, the most popular events tend to get "gobbled up" by the chain theaters.

FOGT is also working to find the right balance in hosting community groups. McGrath's approach is that holding events such as the snow day movies is worth it, even at a loss, to be part of the community but they must try to avoid any big losses relative to what else could be happening at that time. As Councilmember Judith Davis pointed out, FOGT would have to eat such losses; they are not repaid by the city.

Primary Ballot For Congress Reveals Old and New Faces

by James Giese

Tuesday's primary ballot for Democrats and Republicans will seek voter's choices for the office of member of congress from the Fifth Maryland Congressional District. On the Democratic side long-time incumbent Steny Hoyer will be seeking the nomination for re-election and is opposed by two others. Hoyer is expected to win handily.

On the Republican side, two unknowns vie for the party nomination.

Hoyer was born in New York City but grew up in Mitchellville. He obtained a law degree from Georgetown University and served as Maryland senator for 12 years, becoming the youngest person to ever be elected president of the Senate. He was first elected to Congress in 1981 at a special election and is now completing his 35th year in office. In 2003 he became the minority whip of the House of Representatives, the second ranking Democrat position there, and when the Democrats became the majority party in the House in 2007, he was majority leader. When Republicans gained control in 2011, he again became minority whip, a position he currently holds. (hoyerforcongress.com)

Hoyer's Democratic opposition consists of Kristin Beck, a retired Navy seal (beck4congress.us) and Debbie Wilson.

Republicans will choose between Mark Arness, a decorated Air Force pilot with 25 combat missions and a career in aviation medicine (arnessforcongress.com), and Charles Sam Faddis, a twenty-year army and CIA veteran who now teaches at the college and graduate level and is the author of six books on national security. (samfaddis.com)

Judicial Elections Offer Choice of Candidates

by James Giese

Normally, judicial elections are cut and dried, with only incumbent judges being the candidates in a non-partisan election that puts their names on both parties' ballots. Initially Maryland judges are appointed by the governor. After being in office for a year, they must then seek election at the next scheduled election. The term of office is 15 years, at which time a sitting judge can seek reelection. This year, three judges in the 7th Circuit of the Maryland Circuit Court, the circuit that encompasses Greenbelt, are seeking voter confirmation to continue holding their offices and another is seeking reelection.

However, this year the four sitting judges up for election are being opposed by two other candidates qualified by law to hold that office, but who have never received a gubernatorial appointment or served as a Maryland judge. One challenger, Ingrid Turner, was Greenbelt's representative on the county council until term limitations prevented her from seeking reelection.

Judge Herman Dawson was born in Selma, Ala., and participated in Civil Rights marches. He obtained his law degree from Howard University. He was once senior associate county attorney and then had his own law practice until he was appointed to the Circuit Court 17 years ago. He is a past president of the J. Franklin Bourne Bar Association. He is juvenile coordinating judge and the Juvenile Drug Court judge and is now seeking reelection.

Judge Dorothy Engel grew up in Riverdale and obtained her law degree from Catholic University. She served as an assistant state's attorney for over 15 years prior to her judicial appointment, becoming a specialist on DNA and digital forensic evidence. She resides in Hyattsville. (pgcjudges.com)

Judge Karen Mason, a resident of Upper Marlboro, is another graduate of Catholic University Law School. She was an assistant state's attorney for eight years and a family court master for five years. She is now the presiding judge of the mental health court. (pgcjudges.com)

Judge Erik Nyce is a fifth-generation attorney in Prince George's County, growing up in Washington and Maryland and graduating from Wake Forest Law School. He practiced law here for 25 years during which time he served as chief counsel to the county election board. Nyce is a frequent lecturer to new and experienced lawyers and is a trainer of other judges on how to handle domestic violence cases and difficult evidentiary issues. (pgcjudges.com)

Ingrid Turner is the past chair of the Prince George's County Council and was a councilmember for eight years. Her council district included Greenbelt. A graduate of the U.S. Naval Academy with a law degree from Catholic University, she is a retired judge adjutant general office commander who served as a prosecutor and did defense work, healthcare and administrative law.

April Ademiluyi grew up in Prince George's County and is a 2007 graduate of the George Mason School of Law. She has been in private practice in the county since then. As a University of Maryland graduate with a degree in chemical engineering she has provided patent counseling to independent inventors. (electaprilademiluyi.com)

Talk by Author Joan Maloof Among Arbor Day Events

Joan Maloof, author and founder of the Old-Growth Forest Network (OGFN), will visit Greenbelt on April 29 and 30 for events organized to celebrate Arbor Day.

On Friday, April 29 at 7 p.m. a reception for the author will be held at the Community Center. At 7:30 p.m., she will present The Healthiest Forest – Biodiversity and Old Growth. The lecture is free and open to the public but an RSVP is requested as space is limited.

Maloof has considered these question of how to stop the downward spiral of the Earth's forests from the viewpoint of a scientist, a teacher, an author, an activist and most recently a nonprofit director. In this Greenbelt gathering for tree lovers she will share stories from her journey. She will also describe results from studies that show why unmanaged forests have more biodiversity than managed forests. Finally she will discuss the OGFN, a young organization that is making a positive difference.

The mission of the OGFN is to connect people with nature by creating a national network of protected, mature, publically-accessible, native forests. The goal is to preserve at least one forest in every county in the U.S. that can sustain a forest. OGFN's program works to identify forests for the Network, ensure their protection from logging and inform people of the forest locations.

"These future old-growth forests will be our generation's gift to the generations coming after us," Maloof says. "If we are able to reverse the decline in mature native forests, we will be the first generation to have done so. It is our hope that those who experience the beauty and the spirit found in ancient forests will be inspired to protect them. When we protect forests, we also protect biodiversity, clean water and clean air."

Maloof is professor emeritus at Salisbury University on Maryland's Eastern Shore.

Paul Downs, president of the Committee to Save the Green Belt, will speak briefly about the history of the Greenbelt Forest Preserve and its challenges through the decades and his hopes for its future. This will precede the talk by Maloof.

On Saturday, April 30 there will be a walk in the Greenbelt Forest Preserve starting at 10:30 a.m. Maloof will be along to help identify signs of a healthy future old-growth forest. Interested participants should RSVP Susan Barnett at greenbeltforestpreserve@gmail.com or 301 474 7465.

This Arbor Day Celebration is co-sponsored by the following Greenbelt organizations: Celebrate the Greenbelt Forest Preserve, CHEARS (Chesapeake Education, Arts and Research Society), Pathways of Sustainability of Greenbelt's Green Team and the city's Forest Preserve Advisory Board. Green Man Festival Will Salute Flowers

The flower is the poetry of reproduction. It is an example of the eternal seductiveness of life. ~Jean Giraudoux

Each year the Chesapeake Education, Arts and Research Society (CHEARS) Stone Soup Project holds gatherings in the community to discuss the next Green Man Festival. One important topic is finding a theme for the event that is in keeping with the cultural purpose behind this yearly celebration of nature and the creative spirit. Past honorees have included the Earth, the preservation of the woodlands, sustainable farming and community gardens, the streams and waterways, and pollinators.

The theme that emerged this year was a wish to honor and celebrate one of the most loved symbols of spring, the flowers. Citizens of the community can join in recognizing these delicate, vibrant, subtle and gregarious expressions of the rooted ecosystem. Flowers call out to the eye, surprise the nose, announce the spring and the hint of things to come. They are fleeting but not soon forgotten and always promise to return. Though they may seem frivolous, flowers are essential to the thin carpet of life on this planet. And so we celebrate them, one and all.

The Green Man Festival is a project of CHEARS, a nonprofit organization dedicated to the health of all who share the Chesapeake watershed environment (chears.org), with the support of the City of Greenbelt, the Greenbelt Foundation and the Adelphi Friends Meeting. Youth Baseball Kicks Off New Season in Sunshine

by Matt Elliott

Fortune smiled upon Greenbelt Youth Baseball and its players on Sunday, April 17, providing bright sunny weather and pleasantly warm temperatures for the opening day doubleheader. Following tradition, the defending major league (player pitch) champions, the Indians, rode a fire truck in the parade from the Municipal Building to McDonald Field, followed by the other major league teams, then the minor league (machine pitch) teams, and then the T-ball teams.

At the field a moment of silence was observed in honor of former coach Mike Mulaney, who died last fall. Each of the five city councilmembers who attended threw out ceremonial first pitches, with Mayor Emmett Jordan leading off.

The first game was a back and forth affair, with manager Greg Fisanich's Indians hosting last year's runners up, the Tigers, managed by Sergio McKenzie. The Tigers took a 1-0 lead in the top of the first but the Indians responded with two runs of their own in the bottom of the inning. The teams then traded the lead until the fourth and fifth frames, when the Tigers scored five runs in each inning to take a 16-7 lead. However, the Indians were able to score seven runs in the bottom half of the fifth inning to make the score 16-14. Due to time limits, the game was ended at that point.

In the second game of the doubleheader, Chuck Randall's Cardinals were the home team with Bret Howard's Orioles being the visitors. Early on, it looked like the Cardinals' day, as they built a 6-1 lead after the first inning. However, the Orioles were able to outpace the Cardinals the rest of the way, winging their way to a 13-6 victory.

On Monday, April 18, the Cubs prevailed against the Giants in the first game of the year for both teams. The Cubs are managed by Larry King and the Giants are managed by Brian Bailey.

Greenbelt Baseball enthusiasts line up for the opening on April 17.

Story Behind the Team: Lady Angels Basketball

by Jimmika Robinson

Serving as a pillar in the community, the Lady Angels basketball team has given young women in Greenbelt an opportunity to stay productive, engage in a rewarding extracurricular activity and give back to the community. The Lady Angels basketball team was founded in 2010 by Herbert Allen when he was a young woman looking for a place to play basketball. At the time, there was no women's basketball team in Greenbelt, but Allen recognized the opportunity and the advantages that a local team could have for young women.

The Lady Angels is now a semi-professional team that has won four championships playing in the M3 Canadian Basketball League in Montreal. They hold open women's basketball nights on Thursdays from 8 to 9:45 p.m. at Springhill Lake Recreation Center. In 2012, the Greenbelt Community Foundation (GCF) funded a mentoring program for the team to hold workshops to teach leadership skills and to provide role models to young women in Greenbelt.

The Lady's Angel basketball team will play in tournaments this summer in Washington D.C., Maryland and Virginia. One of Allen's major goals is to recruit more young women for the team, continuing the Lady's Angels legacy with the support of the Greenbelt community.

The community is invited to a benefit basketball game on Saturday, April 30 from 3 to 6 p.m. at the Springhill Lake Recreation Center. This event will help raise funds to enable the Lady Angels to play in major tournaments and compete for the championship again this year. The team has challenged Greenbelt city employees and perhaps a few city councilmembers to try to beat them.

This event is part of the Explore Your Greenbelt Program sponsored by the Greenbelt News Review, Beltway Plaza and Paradyme Management with the GCF to celebrate its 10th anniversary. This is a series of 14 monthly events and activities that will feature organizations who have received GCF funding.

All are invited to attend to learn about these organizations and how GCF lives out its mission of "nourishing all of Greenbelt's neighborhoods."

Homeschoolers Enjoy Various Local Field Trips

by Li'l Dan Celdran

Greenbelt Homeschoolers toured the world headquarters of the Seventh Day Adventist World Church Tuesday, March 29 in Silver Spring. Guests visited the estate of Ellen White, a founder of Seventh Day Adventism. The children learned about White's visions instructing her on health and wellness. There was a hands-on exhibit especially for children. The group then enjoyed a delicious vegetarian lunch.

Greenbelt Homeschoolers toured Greenbelt Co-op grocery store Friday, April 8 and learned about the importance of "eating a rainbow" (a variety of produce). And participants found various food group items during a scavenger hunt. We even learned of new products to try. Thanks to Greenbelt Co-op and Joe Gareri, Education and Outreach Coordinator, for hosting this fun and informative event.

Master Gardener Trainee Peggy Barott led a "pea planting party" Tuesday, April 12 in a neighbor's yard in which children learned about the life cycle of a pea and planted 2 peas in their containers to take home. Peggy also discussed how peas are pollinated (they are self-pollinating!) and care of this legume. She suggested the children create a gardening diary so that dates when peas sprout, grow leaves and peas could be noted and compared. Thank you, Peggy, for your green thumbs wisdom.

Green Man Festival Offers TerraCycle

The TerraCycle symbol looks like an incomplete infinity sign. It is the sign for an item that is not accepted in regular recycling but nonetheless can have a second life. TerraCycle partners with over 30 companies to provide free shipping for a variety of waste products which are then broken down and "upcycled" into an even greater variety of useful items.

The Zero Waste Team table at the Green Man Festival, May 7 and 8, will have more information and bins. The team will have places to recycle such things as Brita filters, packaging and pitchers; any brand toothpaste tubes, caps, toothbrushes, packaging and floss containers; GoGo SqueeZ, Ella's and other snack or baby food pouches and caps; and Clif Bar, LaraBar, Cascadian Farm and all foil lined energy bar wrappers.

Four Shillings Short Performs At New Deal and Green Man

Four Shillings Short will be playing on Sunday, April 24 from 5 to 8 p.m. at the New Deal Café. Four Shillings Short, the husband/wife duo of Aodh Og O'Tuama from Cork, Ireland and Christy Martin from California, perform traditional and original music from the Celtic lands, Medieval and Renaissance Europe, India and the Americas. They play a fantastic array of instruments (over 30) including hammered and mountain dulcimer, mandolin, mandola, bouzouki, tin whistles, recorders, Medieval and Renaissance woodwinds, North Indian sitar, charango, bowed psaltery, banjo, ukelele, bodhran, guitar, percussion, vocals and even a krumhorn.

They will also play in Roosevelt Center at the Green Man Festival on Saturday, May 7 from 4:30 to 6 p.m. and on Sunday, May 8 from noon to 12:30 p.m.

Touring in the U.S. and Ireland since 1997, Four Shillings Short are independent folk artists who perform 150-200 concerts a year, have released 12 recordings and live as full time troubadours traveling from town to town performing at music festivals, theatres and performing arts centers, folk societies, libraries, house concerts and schools.

Tax Season: Watch for Scams

There have been some recent incidents in Greenbelt where individuals have had messages left for them purporting to be from an organization that sounds very much like IRS but isn't. The following material is from the IRS website and may be read in full using your browser at irs.gov/uac/Newsroom.

The IRS has seen a surge of these phone scams as scam artists threaten police arrest, deportation, license revocation and other things.

"Taxpayers across the nation face a deluge of these aggressive phone scams. Don't be fooled by callers pretending to be from the IRS in an attempt to steal your money," said IRS Commissioner John Koskinen. "We continue to say if you are surprised to be hearing from us, then you're not hearing from us."

"There are many variations. The caller may threaten you with arrest or court action to trick you into making a payment," Koskinen added. "Some schemes may say you're entitled to a huge refund. These all add up to trouble."

This January, the Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration (TIGTA) announced they have received reports of roughly 896,000 contacts since October 2013 and have become aware of over 5,000 victims who have collectively paid over $26.5 million as a result of the scam.

Protect Yourself

Scammers make unsolicited calls claiming to be IRS officials. They demand that the victim pay a bogus tax bill. They con the victim into sending cash, usually through a prepaid debit card or wire transfer. They may also leave "urgent" callback requests through phone "robo-calls," or via a phishing email.

Many phone scams use threats to intimidate and bully a victim into paying. They may even threaten to arrest, deport or revoke the license of their victim if they don't get the money.

Scammers often alter caller ID numbers to make it look like the IRS or another agency is calling. The callers use IRS titles and fake badge numbers to appear legitimate. They may use the victim's name, address and other personal information to make the call sound official.

Here are five things the scammers often do but the IRS will not do. Any one of these five things is a tell-tale sign of a scam.

The IRS will never:

Call to demand immediate payment, nor will the agency call about taxes owed without first having mailed you a bill.

Demand that you pay taxes without giving you the opportunity to question or appeal the amount they say you owe.

Require you to use a specific payment method for your taxes, such as a prepaid debit card.

Ask for credit or debit card numbers over the phone.

Threaten to bring in local police or other law-enforcement groups to have you arrested for not paying.

What To Do

If you get a phone call from someone claiming to be from the IRS and asking for money and you have no reason to think you owe any taxes, do not give out any information. Hang up immediately.

Contact TIGTA to report the call. Use their "IRS Impersonation Scam Reporting" web page. You can also call 800-366-4484.

The Department is offering a reward of up to $1,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of a suspect in any of the unsolved crimes reported in the blotter.

Call 1-866-411-TIPS.

People may anonymously report suspected drug activity by calling the Drug Tip Line at 240-542-2145.

The Third Annual Cleanup Of Still Creek is a Success

Twenty-three enthusiastic volunteers of all ages collected 24 bags of trash, 14 bags of recyclables, nine tires and about 50 pounds of bulk trash from Still Creek behind the Greenbelt Dog Park as part of Mishkan Torah's third annual Reverse Tashlich on Sunday, April 10. Tashlich refers to the Jewish New Year custom of throwing crumbs into a stream to symbolically rid oneself of bad habits. In a Reverse Tashlich, volunteers pull trash out of a stream to help clean up the watershed.

The event was part of the Jewish Federation of Greater Washington's Sara and Samuel J. Lessans Good Deeds Day. It was also supported by Beaver Dam Creek Watershed Watch Group and the Alice Ferguson Foundation.

The most interesting find of the day was not trash but the skull of a small mammal with two large canines. Volunteers at the site pondered what it might have been. Small dog? Fox? No matter the species, if it were alive today, that critter would be surprised to discover how clean its habitat became after the Reverse Tashlich was completed.

Serious Crime Rates Down

by James Giese

The number of serious crimes committed in Greenbelt in 2015 was the smallest the city has seen in the past 20 or more years. It is also less than half of the number of crimes committed in 2002 according to information released by the Greenbelt Police Department and contained in the City Manager's proposed budget for the new fiscal year beginning July 1.

In 2015, the crime rate in Greenbelt dropped by two percent for Part I crimes (those of a most serious nature). While not as great as the 4.9 percent decline in the metropolitan area overall, it reflects the continuing downward trend that has been seen within the city since 2008 and which also has been occurring within the Washington metropolitan area and the country. The one category that bucked the downward trend was that of aggravated assault, with 2015's number double that of 2014 (53 vs. 26).

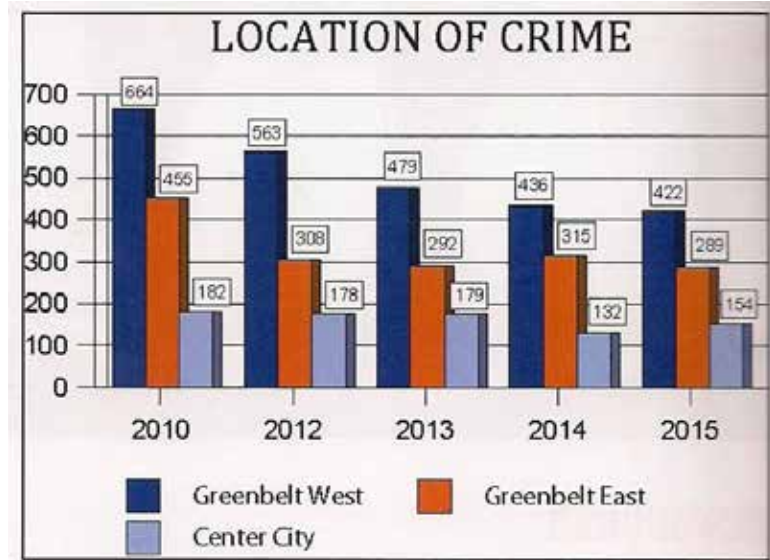

Serious crimes are classified as Part I crimes under uniform crime reporting procedures. They consist of murder, rape, robbery, aggravated assault, all crimes against persons, breaking and entering, larceny, motor vehicle thefts and property crimes. The number of crimes against persons constituted 13 percent of the total Part I crimes in Greenbelt as compared to 15 percent for the state of Maryland.

Motor vehicle thefts are down in part, it is believed, by virtue of the installation of better anti-theft devices in newer vehicles.

In the past five years, the number of serious crimes committed in both Greenbelt East and Greenbelt West has dropped by 36 percent. For Greenbelt Center the drop was only half as much, but, then again, only 18 percent of city crime is committed in that sector. Nearly half the city's crime is committed in Greenbelt West which has, besides the massive Franklin Park apartment complex, a regional shopping center and the Greenbelt Metro station. A third of city crime was committed in Greenbelt East in the past year.

The breakdown of serious crimes by category in 2015 as compared to the peak year of 2001 is as follows: Murder, 1 vs. 0; Rape, 6 vs. 9; Robbery 50 vs. 76; Aggravated Assault, 53 vs. 61; Breaking and Entering, 139 vs. 179; Larceny, 550 vs. 950; Motor Vehicle Theft, 66 vs. 435. Total 2015 crime number was 865 vs. 1,710 in 2001.

Statistics Show That Traffic Cameras Do Not Reduce Speed

by James Giese

If you have a tendency to speed, stay off Cherrywood Lane or the two speed cameras posted there will catch you. And watch out coming down the hill from Eleanor Roosevelt High School on Greenbelt Road. Those three locations result in the most traffic citations issued by far as a result of speed camera surveillance.

If you like to race through yellow traffic signals, but don't always quite make it, stay off Greenbelt Road and Kenilworth Avenue. That's where the city's six functioning red light cameras are located.

The revenue generated for the city by these peeping toms or eyes in the sky is expected to amount to $780,000. Although that revenue forecast is slightly down from the current year, it still will be enough to equal a four percent offset to city property taxes, the equal of a 6.5 cent tax rate per $100 of assessed property value.

The Greenbelt City Manager's budget estimates may be conservative. In 2015, citations for both red light and speed violations caught by camera significantly increased over the previous year (see charts). For red light citations, the 17 percent increase reversed what had been a downward trend. Speed camera citations have consistently increased for the past three years with a 39 percent increase. While city officials contend that these devices reduce speed and violations at traffic signals, the budget statistics do not appear to support that contention.

Red Light Cameras

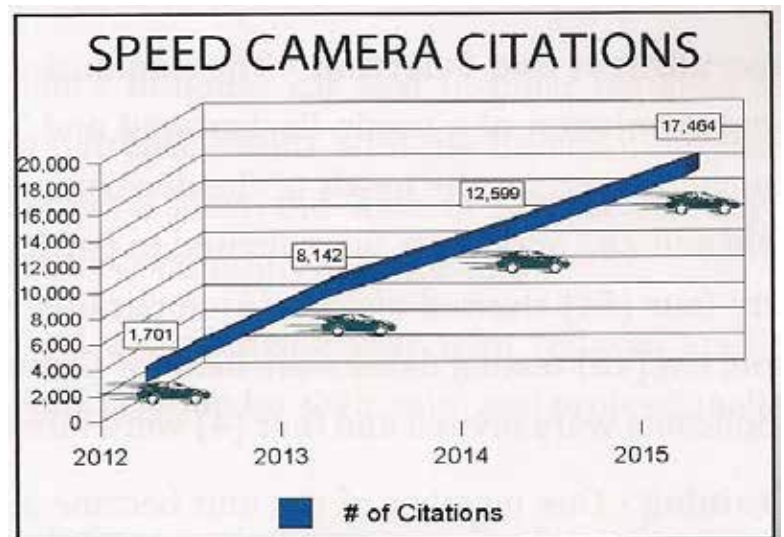

Red light cameras are at eight locations but were operational at just six. These are at Greenbelt Road (Md Route 193) and Mandan Road (both ways), bound Greenbelt Road at Cherrywood Lane and northbound Kenilworth Avenue (Md Route 201) at both Beltway off ramps and at Cherrywood Lane. The light at northbound Kenilworth at Cherrywood Lane yielded the most citations (1,454) but the Kenilworth Avenue camera at the southbound Beltway ramp and the one on Greenbelt Road at Cherrywood Lane were not far behind. The most citations were issued in June and the least in February in 2015.

There are speed cameras in both directions on Greenbelt Road at Eleanor Roosevelt High School with the one for traffic going down the hill yielding 4,953 citations last year, while the one going uphill yielded only 454. The block of Cherrywood Lane between Breezewood Drive and Springhill Drive also has cameras in both directions, and the two rank first (northbound) and third for citations issued. The site yielding the fewest citations is northbound Hanover Parkway near the high school. Surprisingly, although both streets are of the same design, the camera for northbound Mandan Road in the same block as the one for Hanover Parkway reported over four times as many violations. The seventh camera, located on eastbound Crescent Road approaching Northway had 673 violations.

The city received $616,274 in fines last year for speed camera

For red light citations within the City of Greenbelt, the 17 percent increase in 2015 reversed what had been a downward trend.

Speed camera citations within Greenbelt have consistently increased during the past three years.

Graphs by City of Greenbelt violations. However, 40 percent of the fines was paid out to Brekford Corporation, the contractor that provides the camera hardware and software. Slightly more than 10 percent was paid for credit card processing fees. This left the city with $303,348 in net receipts.

There was no similar data for the red light cameras.

Greenbelt Time Bank Provides An Opportunity to Give Back

by Kyla Hanington

This article is part of a periodic series profiling the city's recognition groups and how they serve the city.

Everyone is no doubt familiar with the old adage "It is better to give than to receive." What many have also experienced is that it is easier to give than to receive. How often in dark times has a well-meaning friend said, "Let me know if you need anything," and even though someone is needed to clean the bathroom or to bring dinner, it's a struggle to ask for the help that has been offered? Generally, one does best when being of use. A well-known antidote to periods of low mood is volunteering. How then to receive help gracefully when one is in need?

The Greenbelt Time Bank offers one such solution. "It's not volunteering," said Tim Cohen-Mitchell, member of the Greenbelt Time Bank policy circle, at an orientation meeting for the Time Bank held on March 21, explaining that participants "get what they give." According to Cohen-Mitchell, while the concept of time-banking has been around for hundreds of years, the model Greenbelt Time Bank follows was developed by Dr. Edgar Cahn who started Timebanking USA in Washington, D.C. Cahn, who was instrumental in the creation of the federal legal services program, had a heart attack in 1980 and during his recovery period "hated being dependent," according to Cohen-Mitchell. Cahn saw that time-banking was a way to earn – as well as to give – assistance.

With the Time Bank, "An hour is the currency of exchange rather than money," said Cohen-Mitchell, emphasizing that "all hours are equal. You get an hour for an hour of work," regardless of the type of work performed. An hour of gardening is equal to an hour of childcare is equal to an hour of oral surgery and so on. Everyone has something to offer and the Time Bank stresses the "importance of developing local capacity to help each other." Cohen-Mitchell explained that a big part of the Time Bank movement is about building community, saying it's "not just about services but about getting to know people in the community you might otherwise not cross paths with."

The Greenbelt Time Bank has been in existence for approximately two years. As of April 4 it had 126 members who have exchanged 875 hours of work.

Using the website or phone app, members of the Greenbelt Time Bank are able to offer services, keep track of hours worked and note hours used. Participants negotiate beforehand issues such as who will pay for materials (e.g., for baking), and clear communication about offers and expectations can help prevent any misunderstandings. The Greenbelt Time Bank holds orientation sessions at a variety of dates and times so that sessions are accessible to as many people as possible. Sessions are held at the Makerspace in Roosevelt Center, at Greenbriar and at the Springhill Lake Recreation Center.

For more information, email greenbelt.timebank@gmail.com or see their website at: <https://www.hourworld.org/bank/?hw=1099>

Greenbelters gather at the New Deal Cafe for the "Be a Believer" video shoot.

A group of enthusiastic residents recently gathered to record a video encouraging viewers to "remember Bernie Sanders" while voting. Uploaded to Facebook on March 28, the footage of singing, dancing and swimming Greenbelters has been viewed nearly 40,000 times and has been picked up by Mashable and Fox News.

The video, which features the New Deal Café, the Greenbelt Aquatic & Fitness Center and Roosevelt Center was created by Joe Harris, who said he thought of recording a song in support of the Bernie Sanders campaign approximately six months ago. Likewise, Cameron Joseph gave a nod to the swim element in the opening line of his March 30 piece on Bernie supporters for the website Mashable when he wrote that "The latest gem comes from a group of Maryland activists who are feeling the Bern enough to jump in the pool for a synchronized swim session."

Harris was delighted when Joseph contacted him about the video. "I thought it was incredible," he said. "Mashable is a well-known website dealing with
