

U.S. Navy Band Sea Chanters Concert Features Bill Edwards

by Kyla Hanington

Over three million viewers have watched the U.S. Navy Band's official chorus, the Sea Chanters, featuring Greenbelter Bill Edwards, perform selections from Jersey Boys on YouTube. Greenbelters have the opportunity to see these lively artists at Eleanor Roosevelt High School (ERHS) on Thursday, September 1 from 7 to 8:30 p.m., an early lead-in to the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival.

The 39-year-old Edwards last took the stage at ERHS 22 years ago when he was a student there. He is excited to return. "Drama and musical theater at Roosevelt was a tremendous opportunity for me. I loved it." Performing with the Sea Chanters at ERHS, he said, "is a fantastic way to bring the community together, celebrate America, give back to the community and represent the military, and it's going to be a great honor to be able to do that in my hometown."

While he grew up in Bowie, Edwards spent a large part of his childhood in Greenbelt. His grandparents lived here, he attended Camp Pine Tree and his father had a law practice in Roosevelt Center. Edwards' aunt and uncle live in Greenbelt, and Edwards went to high school at ERHS. A resident of Greenbelt now for the last 10 years himself, Edwards continues to be a presence in the community. He has sung the national anthem at the opening ceremonies of the Labor Day Festival previously and will again this year and he performed with the Peacherine Ragtime Society Orchestra at the Old Greenbelt Theatre's Anniversary Gala earlier this year.

According to Edwards, when he was in fourth grade his mom signed him up for the Maryland Boychoir because "I was always singing around the house as a kid and my mom had seen an article in the paper" about the Boychoir. The choir gave him the opportunity to "sing not only in a choir, but also to do solos, to just learn how to sing. And my first professional gig sort of came from all the experience I got through them." When he was in sixth grade, the Prince George's Civic Opera was mounting a performance of Amahl and the Night Visitors and needed two boy sopranos for the title role and Edwards was one of the chosen.

Maria's Beauty Salon Celebrates 40 Years

by Sue Krofchik

The storyline in the movie Field of Dreams was "build it (a baseball diamond) and he will come." Well, Maria Wyman built her dream of a beauty shop and many came. They came and came, 10 years, 25, 30, and they still come. July 2016 marked the 40th anniversary of continuous operation of Maria's Beauty Salon, still anchoring the same corner at 141 Centerway in Roosevelt Center. She built her business one customer at a time. Some coming since day one. Others newer. All are welcome, even men. They come from far and near. As far north as Hagerstown, as far south as La Plata and Solomon's Island and as far east as Cecil County. Lanham, Bowie, College Park and Silver Spring also make the list. Two come from North Carolina every two or three months. What keeps them coming? Probably Maria's warmth and the atmosphere she created, bolstered by her staff of four: Debbie, Donna, Mimi and Jenny.

Jenny assists her mother Maria preparing Eleanor Hipsley for a permanent.

Drive Safely Near Schools

As children return to school, I thought it would be appropriate to remind drivers to proceed with extra caution around schools and in neighborhoods, particularly before and after school. According to a 2013 report by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, more school-age pedestrians were killed from 7 to 8 a.m. and from 3 to 4 p.m. than any other hours of the day.

What is the law regarding school buses in Maryland? Maryland law requires motorists to stop 20 feet from the rear or front of a bus when the stop arm is out and lights are flashing. In addition, if a bus has stopped for passengers on a two-lane road, a two-lane road with a turning lane or four-lane roads without a median, all traffic has to stop in both directions. The only exception to this rule is if there is a divided highway of four lanes or more with a median separation. Then only traffic behind the bus must stop.

Possible consequences for speeding near schools, failing to stop for buses or passing buses can result in tickets and fines due to hidden cameras. Let's all make a conscious effort to drive safely and look out for students.

Children and Animals Safety Workshop

Well-Wishers for the Animals of the Greenbelt Shelter (WAGS) will hold a free Children and Animals Safety Workshop on Sunday, August 28 from 2 to 3 p.m. in Room 114 of the Community Center. The workshop is made possible by the Jim Cassels Community Service Award and in partnership with Your Dog's Friend (a non-profit organization with the mission of keeping dogs out of shelters by offering workshops and training) and the City of Greenbelt Animal Shelter. Register your children by sending an email to wagsbas@gmail.com or calling 301-312-9603. Specify the number of children and adults attending and the ages of the children. The next workshop will be on Sunday, October 23 from 2 to 3 p.m. at the Community Center.

Unpalatable Truth, or Cozy Illusion?

Florence Foster Jenkins comes to the Old Greenbelt Theatre this Friday, August 26 and stars the preternaturally talented Meryl Streep, who nails it again. Having channeled so brilliantly Julia Child, Margaret Thatcher and Isak Dinesen, she now inhabits the persona of Florence Foster Jenkins, an abysmally untalented, sinfully wealthy New York socialite who aspires to operatic greatness in the 1940s. Streep's own early opera training helps her to portray a woman who never hits a proper note, no easy task.

Her uxorious husband St. Clair Bayfield (the excellent Hugh Grant) enables her delusions of grandeur, shields her from scathing but accurate reviews and packs her audiences with sycophantic friends and bribed, would-be critics.

Her pianist Cosme McMoon (the superb Simon Helberg, Howard in The Big Bang Theory), is initially aghast at the Sisyphean task of propping up Jenkins but eventually opts for loyalty and illusion over truth.

So when should we choose a sedative fairy tale over unpalatable facts? And is doting hubby Bayfield a parasitic gigolo or a true gallant swain?

Directed by Stephan Frears (The Queen, Philomela), Florence Foster Jenkins is rated PG13 and runs 1 hour, 50 minutes

- Jim Link

Correction

The Our Neighbors column of last week incorrectly identified Ann Potter's father who recently died. It should have read Orlando B. Potter.

In our August 18 issue, we incorrectly spelled the name of city retirees Theresa and Karl Skaggs. The newspaper feels it is important the Skaggs family have a properly-constituted record of the retirement celebration so the article has been reprinted in its entirety in this issue.

The American Basketball Association (ABA) expansion team PG Valor will be playing its home games this season on Saturday nights at 8 p.m. at Eleanor Roosevelt High School (ERHS).

Team owner LaDonna M. Smith used to live in the Springhill Lake and Greenbriar condominiums and attended ERHS. One of her first jobs was at Beltway Plaza (which she still frequents and continues to interact with business owners), so having the team in Greenbelt was a priority.

Charles Truitt Howey

Charles Howey

Greenbelt pioneer Charles (Charlie) Truitt Howey died after a long illness on Tuesday, August 16, 2016, at the age of 78. He is survived by his wife of 59 years, Gladys; children Robert Howey, Peggy (Chris) Carley, Debra (John Gordon) Keats, Kim (George) Cox and John Howey; sister Linda (Joe) Houser; grandchildren Michael (Stacey) Howey, Katrina (Scott) Kuster, Christopher (Samantha) Carley, Sarah (Sam Lobos) Amaya, Tiffany (Nick) Zook, Ashley Ruehl, Sadie Howey, Gerald Ruehl, and Jasmine Howey; and 11 great-grandchildren. He was preceded in death by his parents, Robert and Eva Howey, and his daughter, Tina Marie.

Mr. Howey's parents were one of the first families in Greenbelt; his father helped build the city. As referenced in the December 29, 1937, News Review, he played the Baby Jesus in Greenbelt's first Christmas Pageant.

Mr. Howey served in the Marine Corps early in his life. He joined the Metropolitan Police Department and later retired from the Uniformed Division Secret Service as a lieutenant. He was awarded the Golden Gloves at age 12, was an avid Washington Redskins fan and bowler, and enjoyed cookouts with family and friends. Most of all, he loved his family.

A celebration of Mr. Howey's life was held earlier this week in Delaware. Contributions in his name may be sent to Compassionate Care Hospice, Georgetown, Del., or to the Parkinson Foundation chapter of choice.

CHRISTMAS PAGEANT

A very lovely Christmas Pageant was presented by the Greenbelt Elementary School on Thursday morning December 23.

A beautiful tableau of "Christ in the Manger" was presented by Mr. and Mrs. Howe and their three months old baby.

From the Greenbelt Cooperator of December 29, 1937.

In Memoriam

Robert T. Sommers

by Kathleen Scott McFarland

Robert T. (Bob) Sommers, the last member of Greenbelt's pioneer Sommers family, died June 16, 2016 in Annapolis, at the age of 91. At a memorial service at Kalas Funeral Home in Edgewater on August 13, representatives from the military, Greenbelt American Legion Post 136, the Greenbelt Museum and the College Park Moose Lodge gave tribute to his service in those organizations. His three children told stories of his life in the categories of sports, patriotism and family.

Robert T. Sommers

Mr. and Mrs. James J. Sommers and their four sons, James, William, Robert and Richard, moved to Greenbelt from Reading, Pa. in early 1938 as original residents of 9-M Ridge Road. Mr. Sommers Senior, a World War I veteran, was a charter member of Greenbelt Post 136 of the American Legion. Mrs. Sommers became a Gold Star Mother in 1943 when their son William died while serving in the Navy in the South Pacific.

All four boys graduated from Greenbelt High School (GHS): James in 1941, William and Bob in 1942 and Dick in 1945. James later became a Trappist monk, known as Brother James. Youngest brother Dick was a close friend of my late husband Henry McFarland; he was best man at our wedding in 1949 and godfather for our first child. Dick died of heart disease while still in his sixties.

From an early age, Bob Sommers' interests were baseball and basketball. His mentors were Ben Goldfaden and Vincent Holochwost of the town's Recreation Department, and he was an original member of the Grizzlies, a group of alumni of the GHS sports teams which is still in existence today. At GHS, he was manager of the basketball team. In the official history book about Greenbelt, which is sold in the Greenbelt Museum, Bob's photo is there twice on page 90, with both baseball and basketball teams. In later years, he served as a timekeeper for the University of Maryland basketball games. I always watched for him when the games were televised.

But perhaps the most famous role for Bob was his appearance in the film The City, which was shown at the 1939 World's Fair and is now studied as a resource for planned communities everywhere. In the several scenes of boys riding bikes through an underpass and all around town, Bob

City Council approved a smoking prohibition in the “plaza” area at Roosevelt Center. Council defined the no smoking area as the rectangle between the Mother and Child statue and the underpass. It should be noted that merchants have “control” over a 3 foot area from their storefront so whether or not to allow smoking in this area would be their call.

Dear Festival Visitor:

Welcome to the 62nd Annual Greenbelt Labor Day Festival! The City of Greenbelt is honored to host this unique community celebration, which is the largest event of its kind in the State of Maryland and provides so much enjoyment to all its citizens. Many family and friend reunions occur during this special weekend. The Festival also provides a great opportunity for many of our City's nonprofit, service and religious organizations to participate and make themselves known to our residents and visitors.

This Festival is organized and conducted by an independent volunteer group, the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival Committee. These generous and dedicated citizens have worked long hours over the past year to ensure that we all have a wonderful time. We are grateful for their efforts and those of all the other community volunteers and City employees who make this event possible.

We hope you enjoy this weekend's festivities. Plan to come all four days and take full advantage of the wide range of activities being offered, from the Opening Ceremony and Concert on Friday evening to the Labor Day Parade on Monday. If you have any questions about the City of Greenbelt, please call us at 301-474-8000.

Best wishes for a great weekend!

City Summer Help Program Helps Participants, City

by Erin Josephitis

The Greenbelt Department of Public Works Summer Help Program was revitalized last year, having offered temporary employment to individuals in the 1970s through the early 1980s. In its second year, the program saw increased productivity in 2016. Joe Doss, who started his career as summer help and is now supervisor of playgrounds, stated that the department “is able to handle a much bigger workload thanks to the additional summer help staffing.” The importance of summer help cannot be overstated, as it plays a key role in meeting the city’s needs and the department’s goals, he said.

Summer help assists public works achieve its mission of maintaining and beautifying Greenbelt’s green spaces, parks and outdoor recreational areas. Despite record-breaking heat, the additional staffing improved the department’s response time to cutting grass, maintaining roadways, chipping and re-painting curbs, using thermoplastic for road markings, among many other essential public services.

Public Works is dedicated to preserving Greenbelt’s legacy as a planned community through caring for the community infrastructure. Summer help in the horticulture crew and the parks crew keeps landscaped areas attractive and playgrounds safe. Summer help in the streets crew maintains sidewalks, bike lanes and roadways for use by pedestrians, bicyclists and vehicles alike.

Quinn McCracken, a master of fine arts student, described his summer help experience on the streets crew as a “New Deal type job in a New Deal place.” McCracken was particularly proud of his role in bike path maintenance with the installation of new sharrows (shared-lane marking). McCracken recognized the significance that “kids will be grateful for having a better way to get to school” thanks to the bright new sharrows indicating where riders should cycle. Summer help is a truly unique employment opportunity to restore and conserve Greenbelt’s historic heritage as a walkable, Sharrows are road markings that promote bicycle safety.

Joshua Eggleston, an undergraduate film student living at home in Greenbelt for the summer, enjoyed “being a part of making the city look nice and giving back to the community.” Eggleston said that he learned first-hand that the streets crew is “very hard work and takes a lot of sweat and time.” Thanks to his film background, Eggleston captured footage of staff in action that will be released at a later date.

The summer help program provides valuable career training and opens all kinds of doors for talented, young professionals. Leo Donovan had never used a chainsaw before serving on the parks crew. Donovan gained the practical experience and confidence using a chainsaw that are necessary for his career path as he works towards becoming a firefighter. Not only do the city and its residents benefit, but also the summer help learns valuable skills and gains real-world experience.

McCracken, Eggleston and Donovan unanimously agreed that their favorite parts of public works are the camaraderie and the approachability of staff within the department. Summer help reinforces the department’s commitment to offer valuable community services and educational opportunities. Public works is proud to provide career training for qualified participants interested in learning about horticulture, parklands, street maintenance, mechanics, geographic information systems and more.

Pat Mische’s Garden

by Elizabeth Barber

Photos by Patricia Miche

One of the finest art exhibits in Old Greenbelt is Pat Mische’s garden. A recent resident of GHI, Pat moved in close to my home on Ridge Road. I walked by her house while the garden went through its beginning makeover, and watched with great interest as the place became transformed.

Now it is a true masterpiece of beauty. So when I asked Pat if she would like me to write a review of her artwork, she invited me over to her outdoor table, where we drank cold tea made from the mint leaves from her garden and munched on sweet cookies. My dog Epi was also included and she sat with us, very happy with her share of the sweet meats.

The circular table set with eight chairs is surrounded by planter trellises providing a very nice private area. In the planters, coleus and canna are blooming. Pat explained how she created the beautiful beds of flowers which stored in some cool place so they won’t freeze.”

Pat pointed out that her honeysuckle vines come back every year. “They turn brown and straggly and look like they’re dead, but they’re not” she said. Pat tries to attract as many bees, birds, and butterflies as she can. She mentioned that these creatures especially like daisies, honeysuckle, zinnias, bee balm, asters and salvia. The big step is putting the little tiny plants which emerge from the seeds into the soil.

small you can barely see them, yet they grow into strong healthy vegetation.”

Among these are the “little miracles” of carrots and peppers. Pat uses plastic cups and cuts the bottoms out of them – digs a hole and places the cup inside it. These are the cabbages, Brussel sprouts, cauliflower and tomatoes. But radishes, peas and cucumbers can go directly into the ground. Pat said that tomatoes and cabbages have to be put in a different place every year because of the soil depletion, and also because of the cutworms and caterpillars.

“Sometimes I feel like a servant,” Pat confesses.

tioned that little plants can go into shock when transplanted; it is their most sensitive time. There are the natural enemies to consider. Also the wind or rain can knock them over and the cut worms, bugs and caterpillars can eat them.

As we walked around the garden Pat showed me the beautiful stepping stones artistically created by her grandchildren and the lovely statues she has placed in her flower beds. She mentioned that each statue was chosen to represent the characteristics of her grandchildren. These added another dimension of beauty and joy in the overall plan of the garden. It is truly a very special haven; something Pat has created with the skill of a sensitive and knowledgeable artist.

Sit in the shop on a Friday and you'll see people come and go, hear any number of people chatting and laughing, either with their stylist or other customers or both. Some read magazines as they sit carefully tucked under a dryer. Some stop in just to say hello or get a cup of coffee.

Then there are those who come just to get a shampoo from "angel hands". That's Jenny Arias, Maria's younger daughter, who customers dubbed angel hands because of her heavenly shampoos. She works part-time at the shop and has been popping in and out of there since childhood. Some customers have been coming to Maria's for so long they remember Jenny as a baby. Even more have watched her grow up, marry and have her own children, Alicia and Janelise. They visit the shop too, as their mother did. Maria's other daughter, Laura Wyman, is a career woman. At the age of 17 she announced she wanted the same salary as men make, and now she does. She and her husband gave Maria a granddaughter, Zoe.

Customers

Ten-year customer Catherine Rodrigues Dean lives in Lanham and found out about Maria from people at her church in Bowie and her sister-in-law. Another Lanham resident, Eleanor Hipsley, comes every Friday. When asked for how long, she thought for a minute and said, "Gee whiz, about 15 or 20 years." When asked why, she replied, "Just look at my hair today! That's why." (Later, both she and Maria decided it was time for a permanent.) As Maria brought her a cup of coffee Hipsley said, "Maria gives me service with a smile." She and others, including Maria, laughed. Another 10-year customer, Pat Kelly, who also comes in weekly, added, "Maria makes us all beautiful." Again, more laughter from that corner of the room.

Suddenly Maria whispered to this reporter that the lady coming through the door is Maria Snoddy and she has been coming to Maria's shop for more than 41 years. Prior to opening her salon, Maria Wyman worked for Bernard Brooks, owner of an earlier beauty shop then located on the second floor of Roosevelt Center, over what is now Beijing restaurant. Maria left there in 1976 to open her own, current salon.

Within minutes of Maria Snoddy coming in, Pauline Bordas arrived. The two have been best friends since childhood and each has been a customer of Maria's for more than 40 years. They each are second generation customers. Prior to Maria's Beauty Shop, their mothers went to the salon owned by Brooks and took their daughters there too, where Maria did their hair. When Maria left to open her own shop, the Snoddy and Bordas families followed her to her new, sidewalk-level location.

Snoddy describes Maria as spiritual, kind and sweet. Others agree and say they just love her. Maria says she loves every one of them too, "even the ones who give me a hard time." Everyone laughs, knowing Maria is her same, steady self no matter who or what. Family is how customers describe Maria and other stylists, as they in turn describe customers.

Maria has been stylist to third generation families also, the Chotiners and Maddens. Therese Madden Stringfellow boasts that her mother Kitty was the first person to walk through the door when Maria's Beauty Salon opened in 1976. A more recent person is Lucy, who at the mention of Maria's name said, "wonderful woman." She's been coming for about five years. Her mother, also a Maria customer, sent her there.

Maria doesn't always answer to the name Maria. Customers have other names for her, such as Angel Maria, Taxi Driver Maria, when she picks up nearby customers whose rides to the shop fell through, and Psychologist Maria. She's also Dr. Maria. One customer who had a terrible cough for three weeks would not make an appointment with her doctor, fearing the wait would be too long. With some nudging she gave Maria her doctor's phone number. Maria called and the customer was seen that day and treated. Flying Fingers attests to her speed when the customer has little time. She got the moniker Hair Whisperer after customers teased that she can cut hair blindfolded. Maria laughed, but she tried it one day, just to see if she could. She could.

Maria knows a lot. When asked about appointments, she said, "It's all in here," as she pointed to her head. She doesn't need an appointment book. She remembers names and phone numbers and even styles of customers who have been gone for years.

Over those 40 years, Maria has seen customers die, go to nursing homes, leave to live with their children or move away. Just as Maria doesn't forget her customers, her customers don't forget her. Two of them made extraordinary efforts to tell Maria what impact she made on their lives. Jennifer, who had moved to Germany years ago, stopped in to see Maria when she returned stateside and was passing through Maryland. She said she had to stop by to tell Maria that she "is 15 years late" telling her how much she appreciated everything Maria had done for her. She was equally grateful for the chance to thank Maria in person after so many years.

Jodi was the other person. A few years ago when Maria came to the shop to open up early, she noticed a man and a woman sitting in a car in front of the door to her shop. She thought that was odd because other businesses had not yet opened. She went inside and they followed. Jodi told her that she had moved out-of-state 31 years ago and that for 31 years of her life Maria has been on her mind. She was visiting the area and wanted to stop in to thank her for giving her her first job. The woman's husband piped up, yes, she really does think about her all this time.

Staff

One person didn't get hired when she went to Maria hoping for her first job. Donna Price told her mother she wanted to be a beautician and she was so disappointed when Maria said, "No, honey, I can't hire you." The reason was that Donna was only 11 years old. When she reached high school she was accepted into the 3-year cosmetology program at Laurel High School, from which she graduated in 1985. She went back to Maria, said "I have my license now," and began working there in October of 1985, more than 30 years ago. Even though Donna has moved in and out of the area at times she still has a chair at Maria's. She talks about how she and Maria and the other stylists and customers have gone through weddings, births, deaths, divorces and life's happenings together over the years. Donna now cuts the hair of college-age students and adults she remembers coming to her as children.

Debbie Matlak has been a stylist in three shops for 17 years. Maria's is her third, where she has been the last seven years. "Maria's is more than a beauty shop," she says, "It's like family." This phrase is repeated over and over again by customers and staff. Debbie is adamant that Maria's is her last shop and she wouldn't work anywhere else. Customers take pictures of themselves with stylists, to put in family albums.

Mimi Hui Yim has lived in the Greenbelt area for more than 25 years and has been at Maria's for about five years. She likes everything about the shop and customers and is happy to be there.

Greenbelt Community Lives At Beltway Plaza Event

by Calvin Chao

From an initial dozen stores to approximately a million square feet of retail space, Beltway Plaza has grown tremendously in its 50 years. Now Beltway Plaza is an anchor for the local residents, not only because of its restaurants, retail stores and entertainment opportunities but for its embrace of the Greenbelt community.

Beltway Plaza, along with the Greenbelt News Review and Paradyme Management, is a sponsor of the Greenbelt Community Foundation's (GCF) 10th anniversary celebration campaign, Explore Your Greenbelt. To celebrate, Beltway Plaza is hosting a Back-to-School Community Family Day, Saturday, August 27 from 2 to 6 p.m. on the upper level in front of Big Lots. WKYS Radio will entertain the crowd, Beltway Plaza's own Balloon Clown and Plaza Woman will give away keys to the popular Beltway Plaza Treasure Chest and free raffles will feature other prizes, including a trip to Ocean City. All Greenbelters are invited to attend to have fun and to learn how GCF lives out its mission of "nourishing all of Greenbelt's neighborhoods."

Back-to-School Community Family Day is just another example of the family events found at this key shopping center. As Beltway Plaza expanded, it grew the number of free community activities, from the upcoming Hispanic Heritage Month Family Day on October 2, which features live music, food and games in the parking lot of the mall, to the annual Halloween Trick-or-Treat inside the mall that includes a costume contest for children of all ages.

Well-known to shoppers is the Beltway Plaza Wall of Fame that honors local citizens who have made a difference in the community. Along with the names of local sports figures, politicians and education professionals is a crowd favorite, Andy the K-9 dog and his partner Sergeant Robert Heverly. K-9 Andy received an American Red Cross Real Hero Medal of Courage for his help apprehending an armed carjacking suspect, and was honored posthumously on the Beltway Plaza Wall of Fame. The Greenbelt community and Beltway Plaza continue to recognize outstanding citizens by adding names to the wall three to four times a year.

Another community benefit found at the plaza is information on health and wellness. Avon has offered information about breast cancer and the Wellness on Wheels Mobile Health Clinic periodically parks at the plaza and offers free screenings for diabetes, cholesterol and blood pressure.

The shopping mall not only promotes health awareness but also makes efforts to donate to important causes. The Plaza's Ping Pong Tournament on October 8 donates its proceeds to Parkinson's disease research. Participating in the tournament will be local pro Navin Kumar, who has Parkinson's Disease yet is able to subdue some of its effects as soon as he steps up to the ping pong table for a match. Due to his perseverance and skill, Kumar has represented the U.S. in international table tennis competitions as part of the Paralympic Program. During the tournament he will demonstrate his prowess and accept challenges from all who dare.

Beltway Plaza continues to expand, with new tenants Fallas and 5 Below, more sponsored events such as the Greenbelt Blues Festival and National Night Out and sponsored community groups like the Greenbelt Fraternal Order of Police and Students Against Destructive Decisions. Step by step, the plaza is contributing to the community feel and helping to spread the goodwill.

Both Skaggses Retire after 30 and 35 Years with City

by Jill Connor

Theresa and Karl Skaggs celebrate their retirement from over 30 years with the city at the American Legion in Greenbelt on Friday, August 12. Karl holds up the plaque given to him by his coworkers with a small tractor similar to the one he used to mow the city fields.

On Friday, August 12, Theresa and Karl Skaggs celebrated their upcoming retirement with family, friends, co-workers and employers with tears, laughter and a tiny little tractor. The couple, who met while they were both working for the city of Greenbelt, are both retiring on August 31 after 30 years in Human Resources (HR) for Theresa and 35 years in the Public Works department for Karl.

It was an emotional night because these two employees “embody what I call the Greenbelt way,” said Theresa’s current boss Mary Johnson, the director of Human Resources. Johnson recalled when her home burned down on one of the coldest nights of the year. She turned around in the parking lot to find the Skaggses with a bag of supplies including clothing for her son and a hair dryer for Johnson. “She’s been that for all employees,” said Johnson. “Her title is Human Resources Specialist but she is so much more.” Johnson explained that Theresa has helped every city employee for the last 30 years. “She’s retired over 100 of our employees. Theresa’s been a confidant to many employees, a friend to many employees and always lends an ear,” she said. An example Johnson shared was when Theresa used her own leave to take an injured employee to physical therapy when the employee could not drive. “You can train people in HR but kindness and empathy and being comfortable talking to people, that’s not something you can train in people,” she stated.

“I don’t think there was ever a harsh word,” said Barbara Havekost, Theresa’s first boss who retired 12 years after Theresa started. Havekost also said, “When I left I knew everything would keep going just like it had. Whoever came on behind me, there was no worry.”

Theresa’s irreplaceability is a trait shared with her husband Karl. Jim Sterling, the director of Public Works and Karl’s current boss, talked about his “irreplaceable skill set,” including his ability to find anything on the internet, earning him the title “Mr. Amazon.” Sterling said, “When somebody needs something, everybody goes to Karl. If you need help and want something, he will step up and do it.” This type of behavior earned Karl employee of the year, twice.

Karl’s former boss and former co-worker Bill Phelan, the retired assistant director of Public Works said, “They won’t get another one like Karl.” Phelan talked about Karl’s creativity and talent in producing a variety of projects, including stone benches, the stone patio at the lake, the stone walkway up to the Community Center and the numerous adopt-a-benches around town. When talking about the adopt-a-benches that Skaggs and his co-workers have built, Karl said for him, “It wasn’t just a task. It was somebody’s mother, or somebody’s father, somebody’s family member.”

Karl has also put a lot of time into building and maintaining infrastructure of our community, such as mowing the ball fields, building bus shelters and bridges and renovating the movie theater. Karl said he wanted “to give people a place to sit and think and to find some peace ‘cause the world’s kind of hectic.”

Greenbelt Mayor Emmett Jordan presented the Skaggses each with a plaque, a check and a gift. The city councilmembers talked about Theresa’s friendliness, Karl’s humor and the dedication both showed in their positions. Councilmember Edward Putens talked about how Karl was a strong advocate for the public works employees and department. Councilmember Judith Davis explained how Theresa was always there when you needed her, no matter how busy she was, she was always welcoming.

Theresa and Karl’s direct bosses also gave them plaques and cards. Karl’s third plaque of the evening was presented to him by his co-workers. It featured a small tractor similar to the one Karl drove when he maintained the city fields.

Karl and Theresa share a giving mindset. Karl said, “Ever since I was a kid I’ve got more pleasure out of giving somebody a gift than receiving one and I’m still that way to this day.” Theresa’s mindset is similar. When asked about her job, Theresa said, “It’s like family so you just help as much as you can, whoever you can. You do what you need to do to help them.”

During their retirement they will still be helping out. They are moving to West Virginia to help Karl’s elderly stepfather on the family’s farm. They also have plans to travel and visit family both in and out of Greenbelt.

Theresa said she was too overcome to say much or read her speech or even give it to someone else to read. Karl was emotional when he spoke to the crowd of over 100 friends, co-workers and family. Karl said, “This wasn’t just a place to come to work eight hours a day for the last 35 years. This community raised my family.” Pointing to Theresa, Karl says, “That was the greatest thing the city gave me.”

This article appeared in last week’s paper with the name Skaggs spelled incorrectly.

people over the years. It makes her "feel worthwhile and keeps [her] going." She talks about the many wonderful people who have come through her doors. She says the staff and customers over the last 40 years have all contributed to the success of Maria's Beauty Salon. She always dreamed about one day having her own shop. "It's incredible," she said. They came and came for 40 years and still keep coming.

Donna let it be known that Maria has always had a crush on Elvis. When asked if this is true, Maria quickly and excitedly admitted to it. Then she said something happened to her that she never in her life could ever imagine. She, her daughter and a girlfriend were able to go to an Elvis concert at the Capital Centre in 1997. Their seats were in the first row in front of a walkway coming from a door in the corner, not in expensive center stage. She had no idea of what that door or walkway were for. There was a railing separating their front row seats from the walkway. It was so narrow that only one person could walk through at a time. Suddenly, who appeared but Elvis, walking along the walkway with body guards in single file behind him on their way to the stage. As he neared, Maria reached out and touched the hair on the head of The King as he passed by her. Her girlfriend was so happy she was crying. Maria was screaming and jumping up and down from excitement. So, Elvis fans, do you realize that if you have Maria do your hair, you will then be able to say your hair has been touched by the hand that touched the hair of Elvis. Get your place in line now.

TapIt Water Program Fosters Zero Waste

Greenbelt is celebrating Zero Waste Week from September 1 through 7. Americans throw away 35 billion plastic bottles every year. Say "No" to bottled water and refill reusable water bottles at drinking fountains located in city buildings and local businesses participating in TapIt. Locate TapIt locations at the Public Works booth at the Labor Day Festival with the free smartphone app or a freetapwater.org.

TapIt provides free access to tap water as a more sustainable and healthy alternative to bottled beverages. The City of Greenbelt is proud to provide tap water at the following locations: Aquatic & Fitness Center, Community Center, Municipal Building, Youth Center and Springhill Lake Recreation Center. Participating businesses include the Greenbelt Co-Op, MakerSpace, Generous Joe's, New Deal Café and Beijing restaurant.

is the boy who has a flat tire. As a docent for the Greenbelt Museum, Bob was in great demand to tell the story of the filming of those scenes, how his mother had to wash his shirt every day so he could look the same for the next day's filming. Even in his senior years, Bob always had a role in the Museum's floats in the Labor Day Parade.

Bob joined the Army soon after graduating from GHS and became a paratrooper, serving in the European theater during World War II. After completing active duty as a sergeant, he joined the National Guard, earning the rank of first lieutenant. He was an early member of Greenbelt's American Legion Post 136. After retiring from his 43-year career as a technician in the C&P Telephone Company, he became even more active in the Legion. He was present at every Memorial Day and Veterans Day activity and often brought his collection of Army photos and memorabilia to display at Legion events. He had many friends through his associations with sports and the military and was known as a great talker and teller of stories, especially about the early days of Greenbelt.

Bob is survived by his wife of 65 years, Doris Sommers; sons Gary of Middletown, Md. and Randy of Elizabeth City, N.C.; daughter Jody Sommers of Annapolis and Atlantic Beach, Fla.; three grandsons and two granddaughters. At the memorial service, Randy told of wanting to be a paratrooper like his dad, influencing his choice to join the Army Special Forces and become a Green Beret. Grandson Kyle (Gary's son), who was a member of the Army honor guard at the service, has served in Afghanistan and is currently training to be a helicopter pilot.

Open Mic Newlyweds Celebrate at New Deal

James Riordon, who has hosted a monthly open mic at the New Deal Café in Greenbelt since 2000, and Martha Heil, co-host since 2006, celebrated their courthouse wedding at an open mic on August 11.

Riordon has lived in Greenbelt since he bought an apartment in Greenbriar Condominiums, across the hall from then mayor Judith Davis. In 2006, he and Heil bought a GHI home. They now live in one of GHI's freestanding units.

The couple are both science writers, he for the American Physical Society and she for the Maryland NanoCenter, both located in College Park. He was the president of the D.C. Science Writers Association in 2008.

Their wedding clothes reflected each other's interests. The groom wore Betabrand's Haeckelohla shirt, a tribute to the drawings of Ernst Haeckel, a 19th century biologist and Darwin contemporary, whose drawings of embryos helped establish evolutionary biology. This is a nod to the bride's work in upholding the teaching of evolution in public school classrooms through service on the board of the National Center for Science Education.

The bride wore a dress with a design of the data from the Laser Interferometer Gravitational-Wave Observatory (LIGO) experiment, which Riordon promoted when the papers announcing the results were published by his employer earlier this year. He also launched the Einstein@Home distributed computing experiment, in which LIGO data is sent to participants' computers for analysis to find gravitational waves. The experiment detected gravitational waves created by the Big Bang.

He stayed with the Maryland Boychoir through the eighth grade, the same year he reprised his role in Amahl and the Night Visitors, this time at the Kennedy Center with the Washington Opera. "That was probably the best thing I had done up to that point," Edwards reflected. "It was a completely professional production, amazing sets and costumes, live animals, and at the time I thought it was neat, but I also thought it was normal. Now I look back and I think, wow, I did not understand how big of a deal that was!"

After university, where he majored in music, Edwards did contract work with Tokyo Disney Resort for five years before joining the Sea Chanters in 2006. All group members have jobs in addition to singing: finance, public affairs, planning national tours, etc. Edwards is in charge of programs. He has also been able to bring in some of his own arrangements and compositions; although the Navy Band has professional arrangers, there are opportunities for group members to create their own pieces.

"There are 11 United States Navy Bands throughout the world," Edwards said. One of those bands is in D.C. Its mission is to support the President and other high-ranking government and military officials, providing musical support at ceremonies, public concerts, funerals and events. The communication manager for the U.S. Navy Band, Senior Chief Musician Melissa Bishop, explained by email that the chorus also "participates in public outreach activities for the Navy, representing the sailors deployed around the world, around the clock. Throughout their history, the Sea Chanters have remained true to the Navy's watchwords of pride and professionalism, and they continue to flourish as a vibrant ensemble." The Sea Chanters mount a tour once a year to a different region of the country; in Spring of 2016 they were in New England and in 2017 they will tour the Upper Midwest. The tour "is probably one of my favorite things we do all year," said Edwards. "We get to perform for every kind of person across the U.S.; it's definitely a great honor."

For young people interested in music or theater, Edwards encourages them to "do as many different kinds of music – and if you're into acting, as many different types of plays – as you can; while you have the chance to do it, do it! When you walk into an audition, they want to hire someone, and it might as well be you. If you can walk in there with a lot of experience under your belt, that's only going to help you."

While Edwards didn't originally plan to join the military – he turned 30 in boot camp – he found that "it's the perfect fit" for him. "I get to sing good music every day with people I like, I get to serve my country and I get paid for that!"

Come to ERHS on September 1 for a free concert by the U.S. Navy Band's Sea Chanters. Doors open at 6:30 p.m. Tickets are first come, first served.
