

Senior Mobility Worksession Reveals Needs and Solutions

by Kathleen Gallagher

On October 2 all members of the Greenbelt City Council were in attendance to hear a presentation on a report prepared by the KFH Group, Inc. of Bethesda on the Senior Mobility and Accessibility Needs and Barriers Study. Funded by a grant from the Transportation /Land-Use Connections Program of the National Capital Region Transportation Planning Board, the study was designed to identify transportation needs and barriers for older adults and people with disabilities in Greenbelt.

Lucinda Shannon, who gave the presentation, was the consultant transportation planner at KFH who undertook the study. She has special interest and experience in working with transportation for seniors and paratransit and has expertise in the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA).

Three city staff members who worked with Shannon on the study participated in the meeting: City Planner Jessica Bellah; Community Resource Advocate Christal Batey, who heads up the Greenbelt Assistance in Living (GAIL) Program; and Therapeutic Recreation Supervisor Karen Haseley.

In addition, there was representation from many of the organizations that are made up of or work with seniors in the city, including the Senior Citizens Advisory Committee (SCAC), the Greenbelt Intergenerational Volunteer Exchange Service (GIVES) and the Golden Age Club.

Two of the challengers running for city council this year, George Boyce and Ric Gordon, were also present. Shannon said that to identify the needs and barriers faced by older adults and people with disabilities in Greenbelt, they employed two primary approaches: review of the demographic and land-use data and outreach to the community through a survey and focus group meetings with stakeholders. After that, options were developed for addressing needs and barriers that had been identified.

GHI Candidates Forum Offers Conflicting Views on Issues

by Diane Oberg

On Tuesday, October 3 Greenbelt Homes Inc. (GHI) hosted the first candidates' event of this election season. To accommodate the bumper crop of contenders, the event lasted three hours instead of the usual two. Response times were shortened to two minutes for the opening question and one minute for all other responses, causing frustration among many of the candidates. The questions were a mix of those developed by GHI and questions from attendees at the event.

Audience members were asked to address their questions to a specific candidate, and then other candidates were given a chance to respond. Not all candidates had a chance to address the audience questions, thus some views are not reported below. In addition, not all forum questions are reported here. A video of the full three-hour session is available through the city's website.

Voting Age
Candidates were asked their positions on the referendum question to reduce the municipal voting age to 16. No candidate opposed the change in principle but they were split between those who felt council should have simply changed city law to lower the voting age, and those who believe that voters should have a say on such a major change. Several of those who opposed changing the charter without a referendum were concerned that such a change would be petitioned to referendum anyway, where it would stir up greater opposition and divisiveness. Bill Orleans, George Boyce and Ric Gordon said that questions of rights, such as the right to vote, should not be left to the voters with Gordon stating that he would not be here if the 13th amendment had been put to a vote.

Rodney Roberts, Incumbent, Candidate for City Council

Thirteen candidates are certified for the Greenbelt City Council election by City Clerk Bonita Anderson. The biographies are prepared by the candidates and published in the order we receive them.

Rodney M. Roberts

Rodney M. Roberts, 59 years old, is a life-long Greenbelt resident, who lives with his wife, Tara. He attended Prince George's County schools and was active in sports with the Greenbelt Boys and Girls Club. A 1975 graduate of the National Technical Institute, Roberts is sole proprietor of a small business that specializes in on-site repairs of various types of equipment and vehicles (20 years in business).

Rodney Roberts

Roberts attended nearly every council meeting during his four years prior to being elected to City Council in 1991, becoming known as an outspoken and effective community activist. During his 26 years on Council, Roberts has never missed a Council Meeting.

Roberts volunteers his professional skills to groups such as Greenbelt Intergenerational Volunteer Exchange (GIVES) as well as individuals in need. When the New Deal Café was in danger of closing, Roberts worked with a small group of volunteers to install a commercial kitchen for less than $30,000, saving more than $70,000, and giving the Café a new lease on life. It is now a thriving part of the Roosevelt Center. Roberts successfully fought efforts to demolish two single-family homes in Greenbelt, using his own funds and labor to do repairs on one. Both

Answers to our Questions

The News Review once again asked candidates for election to the Greenbelt City Council to respond to questions posed by this newspaper. Answers are limited to 300 words. If an answer exceeds the limit, the answer is cut off at that point. Here are the answers to question 2.

Question 2. What ideas would you put forward or support to increase the connectivity of Greenbelt East, Center and West?

Aaron Marcavitch:

First, in looking at the connection between Center and East, the biggest issue there is the proposal for expanding the Baltimore Washington Parkway and how that impacts the movement of citizens from one side to the other. Safety, both real and perceived, on the pedestrian bridge must also be secured. Second, I would like to see the homeowner's groups in each area meet with each other more often to find mutually agreeable ways to work together. Finally, I believe that without MD Route 193 being reworked, our "Main Street" that connects each of our "Town Centers" will never allow the city to be fully connected. This reworking must include secure bicycle facilities, better sidewalks, improved utility pole construction, safer road crossings, and improved businesses along that right-of-way. This road is our connective tissue. We can't move the Beltway. We can't move Kenilworth. However, MD 193 can be a better connection that serves a wider range of pedestrians, bikes, transit, and automobiles while creating a "Greenbelt Main Street."

Danielle "Li'l Dan" Celdran:

I recognize the unique needs of each neighborhood in Greenbelt. Hosting various city and council sponsored events throughout all of Greenbelt is paramount to building community. I will listen to resident's concerns and ideas of how to enhance their community and help secure city resources to meet their needs.

George Boyce:

With the departure of Konrad Herling, a new member of city council needs to continue to speak with his level of conviction to the vision of One Greenbelt and to the imperative of

Things to Consider

Seven Council seats and 13 candidates.

Check their responses to the News Review questions:

1. Were their answers to the questions published? If not, perhaps they missed the deadline. Not a good sign.

2. Did their answers primarily attack other candidates? If so, does that imply a future difficulty in working together to reach consensus decisions?

3. Were their answers clear and focused? If not, then perhaps future councils would have to wait while they became more knowledgeable.

Where's the Swing

It's the time of year to enjoy the Halloween decorations at the lake. But first a query.

What happened to the swing at Buddy Attick Park? A few weeks before Labor Day, the swing was there and suddenly it is gone. Will it be replaced?

Many people love that swing; parents sit children there while they use the bathroom. Kids especially love that swing. Many times I have seen six or eight little kids sitting on both sides happily swinging in the breeze. Older people like the swing as well; they can sit and relax while watching people on the basketball court or kids running around in the field. Bring back the swing.

Thank You All

Thank you all who attended and contributed to the highly successful Empty Bowls fundraiser held Saturday night at Greenbelt Community Church: great conversation; tantalizing soups, bread and desserts; and an awesome selection of Made-in-Greenbelt-by-our-own-Greenbelt-Potters bowls.

And thank you to our partner chefs at Mishkan Torah Synagogue.

Square Peg In a Round Hole?

Zoning Rewrite Project, Prince George's County: Is GHI to become a 'square peg' in the new zoning regulations' 'round hole'?

Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI) urges the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission (M-NCPPC), in the interest of transparency and with an understanding of our strong interest in protecting our historic town, to release and share without delay the draft zoning and Neighborhood Conservation Overlay Zone (NCOZ) documents relating to Greenbelt, that are being considered for adoption in Prince George's County. Together we have an opportunity to 'get it right', avoiding unforeseen difficulties and untold upset as the new zoning regulations become law; let us please not waste this opportunity through inattention or a desire for expediency.

Over a year ago, on August 8, 2016, GHI sent a letter to Chad Williams, the M-NCPPC project manager coordinating the zoning rewrite project, in which we expressed, on behalf of the 1,600 member-owners of historic GHI, nine planning goals and a number of concerns in regard to the ongoing project Prince George's County Council and M-NCPPC have undertaken to rewrite the zoning regulations in our county.

It has come to our attention that County Council Representative Todd Turner advocates delaying the implementation of any Neighborhood Conservation Overlay Zone (NCOZ) until after the new 'base' zoning regulations have been adopted; we strongly disagree with this position. Delaying the development and adoption of an NCOZ for historic Greenbelt could have serious adverse effects for GHI. Our fear is that, should the new zoning regulations be adopted with no NCOZ in place, our homes and property could immediately be viewed as 'non-conforming use'; that in turn could result in a number of problems, not the least of which could be denial of permit applications for needed modifications of, or additions to our homes. As an example, we note that the original planned town is designed on a 'superblock' model, and there are no plats or legal boundaries for individual home lots; any permit application that would normally require a lot coverage calculation, therefore, may not be approved without an exception from the County Zoning Appeals Board.

Turner has verbalized that the new regulations "will not change any zoning use," however GHI must have an opportunity to review the new regulations in full detail to determine whether and how our new zone could affect GHI's ability to manage our homes and lands. Whether Historic Greenbelt is a 'square peg' in the zoning rewrite design, and the new zoning regulations are a 'round hole' in which our town may not be a good fit, is a matter that begs for detailed analysis.

GHI has learned that a draft NCOZ is being prepared for Greenbelt, however this document has not been made available to GHI or City of Greenbelt staff for review. We strongly feel that such a review, prior to adoption, is of the utmost importance.

Youth Vote

Let's allow 16- and 17-year-olds to vote in the Municipal Elections.

I would like to bring your attention to the referendum question on voting at age 16 in this November's Greenbelt Municipal Elections. As someone who started the journey thinking that it was a crazy idea, but was convinced by reasonable arguments from the young Greenbelters, I would like to share three thoughts on this matter:

1) Consider the enormous contributions from 16- and 17-year-olds to the city of Greenbelt. This age group provides thousands of

by Konrad Herling

The Eleanor and Franklin Roosevelt Democratic Club, at its meeting of Friday, October 20, 7:30 p.m. at the Greenbriar Community Building, will hear about one possible route to fairer elections in Prince George's County. Charles Smith of Progressive Maryland (PM) will present that organization's proposal to reduce the influence that developers and big money have in our county. PM seeks in its Fair Election Campaign to increase the impact that small donors would have and help make elected officials more accountable to the people that elected them, not to the wealthy.

The Democratic Club has been providing a series of gatherings regarding issues from gun violence, to hunger, to the decline of the coal industry and pro-environmental alternatives presented by the Sierra Club. The October 20 meeting promises to be an interesting meeting, with an opportunity for discussion to follow the presentation.

Samuel Michael Hofberg

Greenbelt resident Samuel Michael Hofberg, 94, died September 24, 2017. He is survived by his wife Maggie, his brother Joseph and a host of nieces and nephews. Mr. Hofberg was a veteran of the U.S. Marine Corps World War II campaigns in the South Pacific and served in the U.S. Navy during the Korean War. He was an active member of Greenbelt American Legion Post 136, serving twice as post commander and for 35 years as the post chaplain.

In 2013, Post 136 recognized Mr. Hofberg's many contributions to the community, state and nation by dedicating its large meeting facility as Samuel M. Hofberg Hall. His enthusiastic attitude was inspirational and he embraced opportunities to collaborate with local churches and synagogues, and local service organizations like the Lions Club, Greenbelt Youth Baseball, the Miss Greenbelt competition and the American Legion Youth Camp in Cheltenham. In November 2015, then Police Chief James Craze made Mr. Hofberg an honorary Greenbelt police officer in recognition of his long-standing support for local public safety agencies.

Every year Mr. Hofberg worked with the Greenbelt community to honor deceased veterans on Memorial Day and to appreciate all veterans on Veterans Day. At the 2015 Memorial Day celebration, he said, "It is important that communities never forget the sacrifices veterans make preserving America's freedom. As a veteran of World War II I've seen, within the hell of combat, what dedication and sacrifice it took for young men to defend our country."

Joanne Mewer Pritchard, age 87, died on September 16, 2017, after a long illness. A memorial celebration will be held on October 20 at 11 a.m. at Paint Branch Unitarian Church in Adelphi. All are welcome.

Joanne was born in Biddeford, Maine on November 28, 1929. She attended Old Orchard High School and Portland High School in Maine, but graduated from Northwestern Sr. High in Adelphi, Md., before attending classes at the University of Maryland. Joanne was working as a waitress when she met the love of her life, Patrick Luke Pritchard, near Portland's legendary Longfellow Statue. They tied the knot on June 15, 1946, and were married 61 remarkably eventful and romantic years, until his death in 2007. After moving to the 6 Court of Ridge in the 1980s, she became involved in Greenbelt activities such as the Writers Group. She enjoyed painting and drawing, growing flowers, helping children learn about art and walking near her beach home in Maine. A dedicated multi-media artist, she created an award-winning collage that was published in the Washington Post. During We're sorry to hear of the death of another of our Greenbelt pioneers. George G. Nielsen, 90, died October 5 at his home in Solomons, Md. Originally from Milwaukee, he moved to 2-K Gardenway in 1938 with his widowed mother, Gladys Nielsen, and two older brothers Revere and Clayton, both now deceased. He graduated from Greenbelt High School in 1944.

Condolences to the family and friends of Joanne M. Pritchard, who died September 16. A memorial celebration will be held on October 20 at 11 a.m. at Paint Branch Unitarian Church.

Our sympathy to the friends and family of former Greenbelter Marvin Jager, 89, who died on September 27, 2017.

Welcome to Cynthia Brown, the new Aquatics Coordinator at the Aquatic & Fitness Center. When in the facility, welcome her to Greenbelt.

Congratulations to County Councilmember Todd Turner on completing the Academy for Excellence in Local Governance, a program in the University of Maryland School of Public Policy Academy Fellows. Turner was one of 90 public officials from across the state who graduated on September 24. The Academy is a collaborative effort between the University of Maryland School of Public Policy, the Maryland

Municipal League, the Maryland Association of Counties and the Local Government Insurance Trust.

Please share your accomplishments, milestones and news in the Our Neighbor column. Send details of your news items to editor@greenbeltnewsreview.com.

News Review Website Gives Insight, Archives and Images

by Cathie Meetre

The Greenbelt News Review's revamped website entered service almost two years ago as Greenbeltnewsreview.com. Moving tentatively into the 21st century, it offers our readers access to almost all the papers back to 1937 and provides a monthly gallery of images curated by 2013 Outstanding Citizen, photographer Eric Zhang.

The website gives information on how to advertise, how to become a member of the paper and how to become a carrier (the paper doesn't discriminate against adults; the ever-cheery John Henry Jones, our oldest carrier, is well into his eighties and proud of it). It tells the newspaper's story from its origin as a Journalistic Club, the paper's transition into the Cooperator, the name change to the News Review and the First Amendment Supreme Court case to today.

Information is provided on how to contact the newspaper with views, ideas and complaints.

The News Review welcomes stories and photographs from individuals – accepting them via email (editor@greenbeltnewsreview.com) in a variety of electronic forms. The paper also welcomes letters to the editor. Not everything received is published – editorial standards are applied to all submissions and limited space in the paper is also a factor in whether or not the item is printed. Stories and photos must have a clear connection with the city or its residents and refrain from personal attacks, scatological language or inappropriate content. Stories may be edited for length and relevance and all submissions are subject to the judgment of the editor.

Each week a selection of stories from the paper is introduced on the website, with links to the paper. Apart from the five posts displayed on the page at any given time, an additional link takes the reader back to all the previous postings. In addition, the site has links to events that are advertised in the paper.

A stroll through the archives, organized by decade, is rewarding. The papers in the early years were surprisingly well illustrated with photographs and a glimpse of today's Greenbelters' grandparents splashing in the baby pool, queuing for the movie theater and going about their shopping with a parent. These photos connect today's residents with the past in a continuity that is the foundation of this community. The paper's subject matter and style also reflect the mores of each decade. For example, in early issues, married women are referred to as Mrs. Fred Wilmott (or whatever) – whereas by the sixties the usage begins to change. Any student of Greenbelt history is well advised to start their journey in the News Review's archives.

The paper receives more photographs than there's room to print. Zhang's photo gallery includes the photos that are shown in the paper and more, often providing an additional perspective on reported events, as well as providing a valuable resource that will gradually accumulate to show future generations the

Screenshot of the Greenbelt News Review website

Greenbelt of today.

Photos contributed to the paper should include a caption explaining the nature of the event, the names of any individuals who could be recognized from the picture and the name of the photographer. These are encoded into the photo file's internal attributes so that in the future, viewers can see the context for the photo. Alas, many of the paper photos from yesteryear, stored in boxes, have no information with them and as a result cannot be well-aligned in their historical context.

When images are submitted, they should be emailed as attachments. Emailing pictures directly from a cell phone will reduce the resolution of the picture to the extent that it may not be usable. It is preferable to download the pictures from the cell phone to a computer and email them from the computer as attachments. Embedding the picture in the email itself may also reduce the resolution.

National Library Card Month Celebrated in Greenbelt

On September 25, Mayor Emmett V. Jordan, on behalf of the Greenbelt City Council, issued a proclamation to Prince George's County Memorial Library System (PGCMLS) accepted by Interim Chief Executive Officer Michael Gannon, in celebration of National Library Card Sign-up Month. As the city's proclamation states, "... a library card is an essential resource for all city residents ... and plays an important role in the education and development of children ..."

Also, it continues, the Greenbelt Library's Tugwell Room includes a special collection "of rare and unique plans, documents, artifacts and photos related to Greenbelt and planned communities."

PGCMLS provides an ever-expanding and broad range of services. The library offers Ready 2 Read events and resources to enhance school preparedness, provides homework help with Brainfuse's HelpNow application and gives access to technology advancement and career development with Lynda.com and other online learning options. Resources include computer access, Play-away Launchpads, Educational SmartSpots (free WiFi), passport services and more.

Residents are urged to sign up for a library card. Students can activate their LINK account (virtual library card) using a student identification number to access great library resources for this academic year.

I support the Referendum Question on voting at age 16

As a former high school teacher and grandmother to four young ladies (Anna Avila, Amelia Avila, Piper Mach and Alexa Avila with me above) I feel that 16 and 17 year old young people should be able to vote in city elections. In my experience, many young people are interested in the world around them plus they are studying civics in school. Also, the city's Youth Advisory Committee, Community Relations Advisory Board and Advisory Committee on Education all agree that extending the franchise would benefit the city and our youth.

Absentee Voting, Early Voting Kick Off in City Next Week

by Kathleen Gallagher

It still feels like early days in the 2017 campaign for the city council election, doesn't it? Not much campaign literature out yet—where are those door hangers? And at this writing, not everyone's signs are up. When there are 13 candidates running for office, there is inevitably a lot for most of us to learn about at least some of them. This year, voters have two ballot questions to vote on as well: a binding bond resolution and an advisory question regarding lowering the minimum voting age for city council elections. Everyone who understands those items inside out and backwards, raise your hands!

Not only will the ballot determine which seven of the baker's dozen of candidates will be elected to two-year council terms, but it will also almost surely determine which two will serve as mayor and mayor pro-tem for Greenbelt's 42nd council. It is up to the newly elected councilmembers to elect the mayor and mayor pro tem, but historically the council has followed the popular vote by electing the highest vote-getter mayor and the second highest mayor pro tem.

Most Greenbelt voters will continue to visit with neighbors and cast their ballots in the time-honored tradition at their precincts on election day. Those who prefer to vote earlier or in the comfort of their own homes have two other alternatives. The first day to receive or submit an absentee ballot is next Wednesday, October 18. Early voting at various neighborhood polling places will begin Saturday, October 21.

Any qualified city voter who wishes to vote early or vote by mail may do so. Since the 2005 election, it has not been necessary for a voter to provide an "excuse" for using an absentee ballot. And early voting using machine-readable ballots has been available since 2009.

Absentee Voting

The first step in voting absentee is to ask for a ballot. The voter can print the application form from the city's web site at greenbeltmd.gov, pick one up at the city clerk's office in the Municipal Building at 25 Crescent Road, or ask to have it sent by calling 301-474-8000 or emailing banderson@greenbeltmd.gov. In lieu of the form, a letter requesting an absentee ballot may be sent to the city clerk that includes the voter's full name, Greenbelt residence address, phone number and original signature.

Once received and filled out by the voter, the ballot can be returned by mail or in person. Applications for absentee ballots must be received by the city clerk no later than noon on Monday, November 6. To be counted, absentee ballots must be received by the city clerk no later than 6 p.m. on election day, November 7. Once an absentee ballot has been issued, the voter's name is crossed out on the registration list at the polling place, and the voter may vote in that election only by using the absentee ballot.

Military service members, their families and other U.S. citizens abroad who are covered under the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act may also use the Federal Post Card Application to request an absentee ballot for city election.

Early Voting

Early voting will be held on different days in Greenbelt West, Greenbelt East and Center City, but qualified city voters are welcome to vote early at any of these locations, no matter where they reside in Greenbelt.

Greenbelt East: Voting will be held at the club house at Schrom Hills Park, 6915 Hanover Parkway, on Saturday, October 21, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. and on Sunday, October 22, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Center City: Voting will be available Monday through Friday at the Municipal Building, 25 Crescent Road, from Monday, October 23 through Friday, November 3 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., with extended hours on Tuesdays until 8 p.m.

Greenbelt West: Voting will be held at the Springhill Lake Recreation Center, 6101 Cherrywood Lane on Saturday, October 28, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. and on Sunday, October 29, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.

For additional information on absentee or early voting, call the city clerk's office at 301-474-8000 or visit the city website at greenbeltmd.gov, click on "Government," then "Election Information."

Co-op Month in Greenbelt

by Leta Mach

This is the third in a series of articles for Co-op Month.

Voluntary and Open Membership is the International Cooperative Alliance's first cooperative principle for putting values into practice. In many respects this is because cooperatives are membership organizations and without member support they will fail. Co-ops are open to all people able to use their services and willing to accept the responsibilities of membership.

When a family enrolls in Greenbelt Nursery School, they become members of that co-op. Their responsibilities include participating in every aspect of the school's operation from governance to fundraising to maintenance. After finding a Greenbelt Homes, Inc. home, potential members apply for membership and their responsibilities will include paying their monthly co-op fee that includes taxes, replacement reserves contributions, maintenance, insurance on the structure, trash collection and administrative costs. Volunteers who work regularly become members of the Greenbelt News Review. With as little as $10, people become members of the Co-op Supermarket and Pharmacy. When their capital account is $100 or higher, they become voting members. A critical member responsibility is to shop at the store. Members of the Greenbelt Federal Credit Union also have a responsibility to use the credit union's services and maintain a minimum balance in their share savings account, which makes them members of the financial co-op. When MakerSpace converted to a community co-op early this year, founding members became co-owners for a membership fee of $20 per year.

Cooperatives build a better world by providing their member-owners a variety of services and giving their member-owners a say in how the business is operated. Many surveys have shown that people trust cooperatives and prefer to do business with cooperatives because of the above values and principles.

On Saturday, October 7, the Greenbelt Elementary School PTA held the 7th annual Rafael's Race under a beautiful sky and in memory of the indelible spirit of Rafael Martins. Rafael was a student at Greenbelt Elementary School when he died from a rare disease called VATER Syndrome in 2009. The 1K fun run/walk and 5K race raises funds that support student field trips at Greenbelt Elementary School and provides a donation to Camp Sunshine, a retreat for kids with life-threatening illnesses and their families. This year, there were 48 participants for the 1K and 47 runners for the 5K. A drawing was held for donated items from Bee Yoga Fusion, Clarice Smith Performing Arts Center, Renee Cooper, Lucy Dirksen, The District Fishwife, Greenbelt Aquatic & Fitness Center, The Newseum, Old Greenbelt Theatre, Spy Museum and Wegman's Woodmore. The Bagel Place in College Park, McCarl Dental Group and Modell's donated items to support the race. Dozens of parents and students volunteered to bring post-race refreshments or served as course marshals along the route which included a loop around Buddy Attick Park. The event raised almost $2,000.

Not unsurprisingly, the youngest areas of Greenbelt were identified in Greenbelt West and East. The part of the city with the highest concentration of residents over 65 is the north end, with the area of center city falling south of Crescent and west of Southway coming in next. The study mapped "trip generators," such as shopping, medical offices and government locations together with residential housing and public transportation routes to create a model of who needed to go where most frequently and what access was available to them. Mayor Emmett Jordan noted that certain types of medical service are one area that people leave Greenbelt to access.

Surveys

Shannon said 178 surveys were collected, which accounts for about 10 percent of the Greenbelt population that is 65 or older. The sample was not statistically based but a strong effort was made to get as many respondents as possible from a range of ages and parts of town. Only 3 percent were aged 90 or above. Those 80 to 89 and those 59 or younger each represented 12 percent. Those 60 to 69 represented 36 percent of respondents while those 70 to 79 comprised 39 percent.

The survey included a wide range of questions about what types of transportation respondents currently use or have never used but would be interested in trying. Simply the listing of all these options suggested many of them had been unknown to respondents, and that limited access to information was one notable barrier to transportation use.

Transportation Barriers

In addition to limited access to information, Shannon discussed five other barriers that had been identified. Transportation services with inadequate capacity to accommodate demand are a barrier because they require trips to be scheduled in advance. She also noted weekend service and service to destinations beyond the range of the Greenbelt Connection can be a problem. Councilmember Judith Davis said the city would love to increase the capacity of the Greenbelt Connection but that more support from Prince George's County is needed for the buses.

Jordan asked about the pros and cons of a fixed-route circulator bus versus a call-a-bus like the Greenbelt Connection. Shannon responded that the Connection meets a very specific need that cannot be met by a fixed-route bus, since users need to be picked up at the door.

Others transportation modes have processes to go through that can be difficult, such as the purchase of senior Smart Cards or going to WMATA offices to qualify for Metro ACCESS. Some have limited hours and services. The study identified some locations in the city with pathways that need maintenance or improved street crossing. In general, there is a shortage of wheelchair-accessible taxi service as well.

Jean Cook, president of GIVES, returned to the topic of information, emphasizing that people are not aware of the range of services available in Greenbelt and that better ways to communicate the information need to be found. Shannon added that the appendices to the report that list resources were intended to be "ready to go" in terms of listing services and might be used for that purpose.

Other than directly addressing some of the cited barriers and needs, Shannon made a number of recommendations, many based on successful programs that have been piloted in other cities. She praised the driving service provided by GIVES volunteers but suggested upgrading the advertising and use of the program. She described travel training programs, run by WMATA, which work with individuals or groups to demonstrate and practice using various public transportation methods.

Another program Shannon discussed that sparked interest among councilmembers was "One Call" Centers, where social service providers are trained to evaluate people's needs and connect them with whatever transportation method might be most appropriate and available. Voucher programs, too, were on the suggestion list, which effectively give seniors a lower rate for transportation use while seamlessly paying the provider the full amount due. Shannon also discussed matching grant funding from the Metropolitan Council of Governments (COG) to enhance mobility for seniors and those with disabilities.

Jessica Bellah commented that one of the big contributions of this study is the information and possibilities it makes available. The problem, she said, is that it would be difficult to absorb many of the programs into current city programs. Implementing them would require dedicated staff. Christal Batey said she also found the data on changes in aging in the city and the types of options people expressed interest in trying very useful for future planning.

The complete study can be found on the city website at greenbeltnmd.gov by searching for Senior Mobility Study June 2017.

Volunteers Offer Landscaping Help on Public Lands Day

by Maryam El-Amin

National Public Lands Day is an opportunity for anyone to volunteer their services to publicly-owned land in their community. This year the City of Greenbelt's event, in partnership with The Chesapeake Education, Arts, and Research Society (CHEARS) was held at Springhill Lake Elementary School on September 30, and was a great success.

Greenbelt Mayor Emmett Jordan and Councilmembers Leta Mack, Edward Putens and Silke Pope got the day started by presenting a proclamation officially recognizing September 30, 2017, as Public Lands Day. Volunteers, including Springhill Lake Elementary School educators and University of Maryland honors students from the Institute of Life Sciences, including Jordan, helped themselves to bagels donated by Bagel Place of College Park. Soon after everyone got to work under the direction of Parks-Horticulturalist Supervisor Brian Townsend and other Public Works employees.

Townsend explained the problem with the soil around the school: it is badly compacted and prone to erosion, which creates runoff and pollutes the Chesapeake Bay watershed. The washed-away sediment was actually visible in the school parking lots.

To fix this, volunteers spread rich mulch made from a mixture of recycled wood waste and compost from Greenbelt's public compost pile. This will help increase water filtration, improve soil structure and promote aeration and fertility. Ideally, the mulch will encourage the growth of new plants and further anchor the soil in place. Volunteers also helped remove some of the sediment from the parking lot, picked up litter and watered several young pine trees that were planted earlier this summer.

In total, 7,244 square feet of eroded soil surface was protected using 16 dump-truck loads of mulch. Eight trees were taken care of while three cubic yards of sediment were removed from the asphalt, to prevent it from being washed down the storm drain.

Homeless

Another sensitive issue was whether the candidates would vote to change the city code so that it can deal with people who have taken up permanent residence in public places after they receive all social assistance.

Emmett Jordan called addressing this issue a balancing act with no tool to address it existing in the city code. Rodney Roberts noted that in trying to address this issue in Roosevelt Center, the city's attorney said that state or federal law will not allow the city to ban people from public spaces.

Orleans called on Greenbelt CARES and the local churches to make an attempt to help but said that homeless people should not be removed as a nuisance. If the city wanted to address the homeless issue the best way is to effectuate an affordable housing program, which council has so far refused to do, he said.

The homeless situation is much deeper, said Gordon. They need housing, jobs, food and clothing. Council should find groups to help homeless people find what they need. Boyce noted that Green Ridge House (the city's apartment building for seniors and the disabled) has a three-year waiting list that is now closed. He noted that homelessness is part of a broader topic of providing services to those in need and stated that the city needs to look at expanding resources as well as services to those with behavioral problems.

Colin Byrd advocated for a city task force with members of different points of view. Judith Davis stated that legislation to throw the homeless out of Greenbelt is not the correct way to address this issue. CARES and faith-based groups do reach out to help but when the person declines such help, there is nothing the city can do.

Danielle Celdran said that some would like to see public services expanded and supported Byrd's idea of a task force. Edward Putens cautioned that this is a very tough, very sensitive issue and noted that he had had mixed results when trying to help two individuals. Leta Mach favored the National League of Cities approach of housing first, then seek to get them any additional services they need. Aaron Marcavitch also favored the housing first approach while saying that Greenbelt needs to get the county involved.

Finances

When asked their assessment of Greenbelt's financial health, none of the candidates indicated that they saw any significant problems. Marcavitch wanted the city to be in a position to lead regarding what can be done about county taxes. He also called for an analysis of city spending and looking to see what could be cut.

Susan Stewart was concerned that if the city does not use competitive bidding for major projects, it could get gouged by contractors. If the city were more careful with spending, she said, it would have the funds to do more for the community.

Council has been quite fiscally responsible, Pope asserted, noting that when funds were tight a few years ago the city did not lay anyone off. She called on the city to be proactive in both cultivating partnerships with existing businesses and encouraging new businesses in order to grow its tax base.

Gordon called for business development to create jobs and bring more money into the city. He also called for Greenbelt residents to have the first option on the jobs created.

Byrd said he has heard from some people with concerns about city taxes. If the budget were stronger, he said, the city could hire more police officers and make them feel more rewarded. He was also concerned about the city's no-bid contracts and asserted that the city does not pay everyone who works for it a living wage.

Jordan said that the city has a list of infrastructure needs, especially repairs to the dam at Greenbelt Lake. Because the city has been conservative in spending, it is in a position to handle these projects.

Boyce pointed out that taxes are going up due to increases in property assessments even though the tax rate has not changed. He said the city needs to get office occupancy rates up, adding that since the last election the office vacancy rate has increased to 35 percent from 28 percent two years ago.

Orleans questioned how some incumbents want to spend money. People who disagree with council's decisions, he said, should be at the council meetings and budget worksessions to challenge these choices. He called on the city to challenge business property tax abatements rather than just going along with the state determination.

Putens expressed pride that the city had not laid off workers during the recession, and Mach concurred. Putens acknowledged that there have been some problems with recruiting police officers. He argued there is plenty of opportunity for citizen involvement in the budget process.

Mach asserted that the city does pay a living wage, a point Orleans later challenged by claiming that the city hires vendors who may not pay a living wage. Mach also noted that the city has a property tax credit that helps citizens on limited incomes. She emphasized a point she said she has made since the start of her council career: "Taxes are not a dirty word," she said. "It's how we get our services."

Davis said that some of the issue with police vacancies is that the city has high standards and turns down many candidates as unqualified. She expressed pride in the renters' tax credit.

Roberts said that sometimes there is spending on things that the city may not need but that overall the city has a very strong tax base. It has over 600 businesses, he said, and its major shopping centers are full or nearly full, although one office complex has a high vacancy rate.

Byrd identified making it possible to broadcast all council meetings and worksessions as a top budget priority for him, saying that he would not attend any out-of-town conferences until after council finds a way to broadcast the meetings. Davis stood by her support for conference travel saying that staff and council need to attend conferences and seminars and that they bring the new ideas learned back to the city.

Zoning Rewrite

The candidates were asked what actions they would take to ensure that Greenbelt's character will be protected when the new zoning goes into effect. The revised zoning ordinance is expected to eliminate the Residential Planned Community zone but add a Neighborhood Conservation Overlay Zone (NCOZ) that will be implemented separately from the zoning ordinance itself.

All of the candidates vowed to protect historic Greenbelt. Jordan urged giving staff and council the opportunity to work through the full process. Davis noted that so far there is only a draft ordinance that the county council has not yet reviewed.

Pope praised the passionate citizens who got 2,000 signatures on their recent petition concerning this issue. Putens said there is not yet clarity about the NCOZ, such as what the implementing guidelines will be. He cautioned that the rewrite has to be done carefully so as to not include something that is later judged to be discriminatory and used by developers' lawyers to get the whole overlay zone thrown out.

Gordon said the city must stand in unison and say it will not allow developers to run rampanant in the city and ruin the historical nature of Greenbelt. Orleans said he did not trust most incumbents to have the resolve to do what's necessary to protect old Greenbelt. Mach promised that she would not allow any change that would destroy the National Historic Landmark status of Greenbelt.

Byrd was concerned by Jordan's commitment to protecting the city's legacy while focusing on a vibrant future. He questioned what is wrong with Greenbelt's past that would prompt Jordan to use a term like vibrant future.

Boyce expressed concern about no one on council having enough business or technical expertise to deal with zoning law. Marcavitch noted his background in historic preservation and expressed concern that if there is a gap between the implementation of a new zoning ordinance and that of the NCOZ it could be a very dangerous time for GHI.

Roberts said that he has been fighting the good fight to protect Greenbelt for 30 years. Stewart described what she had seen in Ohio where a neighborhood had been destroyed when it was taken under eminent domain for a shopping center and said she does not want to see that happen here.

Exploring Page 115: Playing With Words

On Friday, October 20, at 1 p.m. in the Community Center, Explorations Unlimited welcomes Matina Phillips from alight dance theater. She will host Page 115: Playing With Words, a Greenbelt-based workshop series designed to engage participants of all ages with literature, dance and innovative storytelling.

This project is supported by a grant from the Greenbelt Community Foundation. Future workshops will occur elsewhere in Greenbelt. Call 301-397-2208 for more information.

Question 1. What would you like council to accomplish in the next term?

George Boyce: I will lead council to enact significant changes that are low cost, widely supported, and of great benefit to the community. The first set of actions I propose are amendments to the City Charter to promote civic engagement.

- We should allow same-day voter registration during the early voting period. This has been Maryland law since 2013 and it is time for Greenbelt to catch up.
- While we have adopted "no excuse" absentee ballots, we still have a two-step process that requires a form to be submitted to request the ballot. We should reduce this to one step by allowing the submission of an absentee ballot to be sufficient.
- Greenbelt has supported term limits for county council since 1992 and it is long overdue to adopt limits for city council. No one thinks a lifetime appointment to council is acceptable. I suggest a limit of 10 consecutive years is reasonable.
- We should drop voting for seven at-large seats. We should adopt a ranked choice voting system, though I suggest we also switch to voting by wards.

Next, we should make council meetings more accessible & productive.

- Council meetings should start at 7pm, followed by petitions at 7:45 and legislation starting promptly at 8pm.
- Petitions that are published 6 days in advance should be acted on in the same session they are presented.
- Petitions that reach an age of six months should be placed back on the agenda for resolution.

Finally, I will focus on community and economic development issues.

- We should define clear, concise vision and goals.
- We should hire a director of economic development.
- We should hire a grant writer.
- We should form a Science and Technology Advisory Committee.

I look forward to serving on council and working on these and many other important issues.

What is civic engagement anyway?

Civic engagement is the process of helping people be active participants in building and strengthening their communities, whether defined as a place or a shared identity or interest.

Core to civic participation are fair, accessible, and representative elections.

Some changes are easy, while others such as term limits, voting wards, and the voting age require more inspection and analysis.

My research and experience informs me to support all three of these major changes.

Council procedures need to change to engage more residents in regular meetings.

Small changes, like an earlier start time and a focus to respond to citizen petitions are a few first steps to improve participation.

Ten years has passed since the Greener Greenbelt Charrette was held to help generate a vision.

Council needs to renew this effort to envision, plan, and execute actions to protect and enhance Historic Greenbelt, strengthen the living core of Roosevelt Center, and integrate our communities of east and west into a truly Greater Greener Greenbelt.

Greenbelt History in Photos

by James Giese

This is the 19th in a series of articles with photos depicting the early history of Greenbelt.

The Farm Security Administration (FSA) employed a number of photographers who became noted for their work or journalistic career. One of them was Carl Mydans who travelled the country for FSA and took photographs at the Greenbelt site in 1935 and 1936. Mydans, born May 20, 1907, grew up in Medford, Mass., and took up photography while attending Boston University. He took reporting jobs with the Boston Globe and Herald before becoming employed by the FSA where he documented the conditions of American workers. His photographs of the Greenbelt project during 1935-36 constitute the bulk of photographs from that time period in the Library of Congress files. He also travelled through New England and the South documenting the devastation to the poor in rural America by the Great Depression.

In 1936, Mydans joined Life magazine as one of its earliest staff photographers. He photographed images of life and death throughout Europe and Asia during World War II. In 1941, Mydans and his wife Shelley, also a Life photographer, were captured by the Japanese in the Philippines and held until December, 1943. Mydans returned to Life, taking photographs in Italy and France.

Mydans's most famous photograph was that of General Douglas MacArthur wading ashore on his return to the Philippines in 1945. Another memorable photograph of his was that of MacArthur and other U.S. military top brass watching a Japanese delegation signing the official surrender documents in September, 1945 on board the USS Missouri.

After the war, Mydans and his wife headed Life's Tokyo Bureau. He also covered the Korean War and remained with the magazine until its demise. He returned to its masthead upon its later short-term revival.

Mydans died August 16, 2004, at age 97 in Larchmont, N.Y.

Of the many photographs Mydans took at Greenbelt, I like best this one of a hod carrier who brought mortar to brick and concrete block layers. There will be more of Mydans photos in future installments of this series.

Residents Show off Homes On Annual Solar Tour

by Carolina Velloso

Six Greenbelt houses were featured in the 27th annual metropolitan Washington, D.C. Solar and Green Home Tour on Saturday, October 7.

The tour showcases solar and environmentally efficient homes in the D. C. area. Over 40 homes participated in this year's tour, according to the official brochure.

Around 30 people visited each of the Greenbelt homes, though that number has been higher in the past

"We had about 50 or 60 people (come through) one year," said James Lippert.

Lippert and his wife Jane Young are longtime participants in the tour. They installed a photovoltaic (PV) setup, or solar panels, in 2002. Their home also features other energy efficient systems such as ductless heat pumps, a heat pump water heater, a solar cooker, LED lights and ultra-efficient ceiling fan blades. They also own an electric vehicle, which they charge with their PV system.

Lippert is a former member of the Mid Atlantic Solar Energy Society and chairs the Greenbelt Advisory Committee on Environmental Sustainability. Young is also part of the committee, and they have helped put other solar-powered Greenbelt homes on the tour.

"Jane and I would go around and knock on people's doors when we knew that they had solar collectors on their roofs and said, 'Would you like to be on this home tour?'" Lippert said.

Investing in solar and energy efficient systems carries many benefits, noted by the brochure. The cost of installing a PV system has dropped 70 percent over the last 10 years, he said, and these systems drastically lower a home's energy use.

Homeowners who install energy conservation systems in their homes can take advantage of federal, state and county tax credits and incentives. The federal Investment Tax Credit (ITC) of 30 percent is available for solar panels. Additionally, the state of Maryland has up to $1,000 for solar panels and $500 for a solar hot water heater. Prince George's County also offers rebates of up to $5,000 for solar panels, $5,000 for space heating and $1,500 for water heating, according to the Department of Energy.

This was Martin Murray's first year participating in the tour. In 2015, he and his wife attended an informational meeting organized by MDSUN (now Solar United Neighbors of Maryland), a non-profit that advocates for the benefits of solar energy.

Murray and his wife agreed, saying, "This really makes sense, we should do this."

Murray installed solar panels in May 2016 after partnering with other local homeowners to purchase and install PV systems at a discount. Murray also used federal, state and tax credits to further lower his costs. He said he will begin to see a return on his investment in about six years.

He admitted, however, that, "We weren't really interested in making money in the deal."

The homeowners said that the tour was a good way to spread awareness about the advantages and importance of going green. Young also emphasized that making homes more energy efficient is only a small part of what citizens can do to be environmentally conscious.

"Not everyone is going to want to do everything, but everybody can do some things," she said.

The tour was sponsored by the Sierra Club, the 2017 Mid Atlantic Solar Energy Society and the American Solar Energy Society.

Carolina Velloso is a University of Maryland graduate student in journalism writing for the News Review.

homes have been renovated and returned to use as beautiful and efficient homes.

In 1991, Roberts proposed and worked through to implementation, a community policing program that included the City's first bicycle patrols, to foster a better relationship between citizens and police.

Roberts was a leader in the citizen movement that resulted in the City's acquisition of 184 acres of woodland, part of the original "Green Belt." Roberts' continued advocacy resulted in the 2003 passage of a city ordinance establishing a Greenbelt Forest Preserve consisting initially of 225 acres.

Roberts testifies on behalf of the City before State and County officials concerning development, transportation, recreational, environmental and fiscal issues. In 2004, his testimony secured $648,000 in Open Space Funds for the purchase of 10 acres known as the "Sunrise Property" in Greenbelt East, one of Greenbelt's newest forest preserves. Roberts consistently opposed yearly tax increases for non-essential hiring and other items. Roberts is one of the longest serving members of the Council of Government's Transportation Planning Advisory Board, with nearly 26 years of service. He is also City liaison to the Youth Advisory Board and Forest Preserve Advisory Board. Roberts is a member and former chair of the Committee to Save the Green Belt and a founding member of the Greenbelt Foundation for the Arts.

advancing plans for community and economic development throughout the city. I ask Greenbelt residents to hear my voice and elect me as one of the challengers who will bring fresh ideas and renewed energy to the council.

One Greenbelt can be defined by physical connectivity but most would agree that this should serve as a catalyst to development of a stronger, more vibrant community. We can envision a future where the road network and transportation options have been redesigned to serve residents and main street businesses rather than the commuters of the region. We know this is true because we have seen such a future, of a "Greenbelt Road Boulevard", described several times including by former Advisory Planning Board member Jeff Lemieux and by challenger Aaron Marcavitch. I stand with them.

Building a friendly main street will be neither quick nor easy and certainly it cannot succeed at any stage without support from every level of government, businesses, and residents. Most important, someone on council must be proactive and tirelessly push the project. As a driver for business growth and for the health of the community, creating a new main street is a wise investment.

In the short term, we should continue to explore options to operate Konrad's circulator bus that would focus on Greenbelt locations of people, services, and events rather than transporting people to metro. Beyond working on transportation issues, I encourage more events focused to bring residents to every part of town. We should create area challenges and have neighborhood teams compete for community pride awards. Together we can build a Greater Greener Greenbelt.

Rodney M. Roberts:

Let's face it, when it came to maintaining the physical connectivity of Greenbelt, someone dropped the ball. Roads and highways were built through the city with apparently little thought of the divisions that were being created, both physically and socially. Being able to walk, bike, or drive easily from one part of Greenbelt to another is one of the bedrocks that our community was founded on, it is very important. I believe what is more important is that we all actually feel we are a part of Greenbelt, with all of the benefits, services, opportunities and protections regardless of what little corner of Greenbelt we may live in. This is why as a member of city council I have worked hard for the equitable distribution of city services, recreational facilities and other resources. I voted against postponing the expansion of the Springhill Lake Recreation Center as well as using the funds for that project in other parts of the city. This is why I have been advocating the purchase of a certain piece of property in Greenbelt West to get rid of an eyesore and provide much needed recreation space. This is why I worked hard to help bring the new post office and forest preserve to Greenbelt east. This is why I worked hard to keep the New Deal Café and Greenbelt Theater in Roosevelt Center from closing. This is also why I believe the current discussion about zoning changes and density in the county and Greenbelt must be about all of Greenbelt, not just one part of it. If re-elected

I promise I will continue to use my vote to represent and benefit all of the citizens of Greenbelt.

Silke Pope:

Despite our efforts over the years to improve connectivity between different parts of the City, the City Council continues to wrestle with this issue. A major hurdle we must overcome is the physical division of the city by several major roads. I believe the city has made positive changes. Roadway banners, the City website and the News Review announce upcoming events throughout the city. The city intentionally schedules events in different sections of the city to draw residents from one section to another. But, we can do more.

A major issue is transportation. Not all residents have a car, so it can be challenging to travel from one section of Greenbelt to another. We have public transportation, but we need more creative solutions to increase the forms of transport throughout our city. If we could partner with local merchants or create public/

Mishkan Torah Seeks Donations

On Sunday, October 29, Mishkan Torah Synagogue will hold its annual Rummage Sale. Mishkan Torah is seeking gently used items including clothing for men, women and children; books; toys; and small household items. The items should be in relatively new condition. Donors will receive receipts as the donations may be tax deductible. Please check questions relating to deductibility with your accountant or tax advisor.

Items may be brought to the synagogue between October 16 and October 19, and October 22 through October 26. Donations are a wonderful way to find a home for those items you find while downsizing or in a pre-holiday cleaning. Mishkan Torah is located at 10 Ridge Road.

volunteer hours to the city, the equivalent to tens of thousands of dollars in wages. They often work as interns for our summer camps, making them affordable, as well as in many other capacities. These young people fill many paying jobs, including lifeguarding at the pool, where they are responsible for saving lives. If we trust them with our kids and our lives, why should they not be trusted with a vote in city elections?

2) The youth vote brings a different point of view: a lot of people have told me that we should not let 16- and 17-year-olds vote because they do not know anything about life and have not had to support themselves yet. It is certainly true that young people have not gone through the life experiences that we (older people) have. But this is exactly why their opinion is valuable. As we go through life, we pick up not only experience but also a number of biases. We often think that things should be as they used to be or as they have always been, as if having done things a certain way for a long time was some sort of certification. Young people think differently. During the Brexit vote, the younger voters voted 75 to 25 percent to stay in the EU. In our last presidential election the young voters electoral map would have given us a different result. My point here is that not only we should let 16- and 17-year-olds vote but we actually need their vote and we need to do everything we can to engage more young people in the civic process.

3) The youth vote has been diluted over the years due to the life expectancy increase. When this great nation was born in 1776, the average life expectancy was 35 years of age. That means that when our democracy was designed, most of the vote was the youth vote. Currently the average life expectancy in our country is close to 80 years of age. The youth vote has become a small percentage of the overall electorate. By lowering the voting age to 16 we would be compensating a tiny bit for this enormous change in voter demographics, at least in municipal elections.

So I encourage all Greenbelters to vote for the charter amendment. But don't take it from me. On Sunday, October 15 at 2 p.m., there will be a presentation by two youth representatives at the Greenbelt Community Church. Come and listen to them speak for themselves. At the very least we owe them that.

Safer Internet Selling, Buying

This week's Police Blotter describes two thefts that occurred when sellers and buyers met to finalize internet sales. The Greenbelt Police Department reminds and invites the public to use the Police Station as a safe place for completion of legal online transactions. Meeting there might also deter those persons planning to carry out possible scams. Sellers and buyers can meet in the station's lobby or just outside to finalize transactions. The lobby is open and available for use 24 hours a day, 365 days a year.

The Greenbelt Police Station is located at 550 Crescent Road. For more information contact George Mathews, public information liaison, at 240-542-2116.

RE-ELECT RODNEY ROBERTS

NOVEMBER 7

Answer to Greenbelt News Review Question #1

What would you like Council to accomplish in the next term?

First, I want the trail from the new Greenbelt Station Development to the Metro Station to be completed. I want the long put-off expansion of the Springhill Lake Recreation Center to be started. Also in Greenbelt West, I would like the City to find funds (a difficult task now that all of our open-space funds have been used on construction projects) to purchase a certain piece of property to rid the area of an eyesore and provide needed recreation space. I want a new police chief named and the rest of the force to be brought up to its authorized strength. I would like our new police chief to provide a written plan for an ongoing training program that would focus on how to deal with difficult situations while avoiding the use of deadly force. I want the council to work with all stakeholders to protect all of Greenbelt from excessive zoning densities that may be created through the county zoning rewrite. I have many more goals, but this would be a good start.

The Department is offering a reward of up to $1,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of a suspect in any of the unsolved crimes reported in the blotter.

private partnerships to implement circulator routes that stopped at popular destinations for shopping, recreation and events, I believe more residents would travel to different parts of our city.

Expansion and improvement of the bike lane system would encourage movement between the sections of the city. Greenbelt Road is overloaded with traffic and is not pedestrian or bicycle friendly. Finding attainable solutions to this problem could help to bring residents together and encourage movement between different parts of the city.

Expanding car share programs and implementing a bike share program within the city would also be a way to help connect the sections of the city by providing more ways for people to overcome the current impediments to travel between East, West and Center Greenbelt.

To move forward, we must continue to make connectivity a priority. Actions speak louder than words. Through a creative use of partnerships and resources, we can and will find a way to make this happen.

Emmett Jordan:

It is often said Greenbelt is divided by roadways into three sections. I think that our city is complex and that there are actually 9 or 10 distinct neighborhoods in Greenbelt.

No doubt, the state highways constitute physical barriers. But I am cautious about making broad assumptions or generalizations about differences in attitudes, opinions, and values between the City's neighborhoods. I think the differences have more to do with levels of civic engagement and integration than with the physical barriers.

However, I will limit my comments to the question: physical connections within the city.

I will continue to tirelessly advocate on behalf of pedestrians, bicyclists, and bus riders. I spearheaded efforts to develop the City's bike pedestrian master plan while serving on the Advisory Planning Board (prior to serving on Council). I will push for better mass transit service (longer hours and better frequency) from WMATA and the County. The County 11 bus, with minor route adjustments, could easily function as a circulator bus.

Three years ago, I helped to secure funding from the US Fish & Wildlife Service to plan a "complete and green street" upgrade for Cherrywood Lane. The project will improve the walkability and bikeability of Cherrywood, while diminishing its impact on the environment (adding trees in the median and improving stormwater management). We continue to look for funding to build out the project. A similar plan could be developed for Hanover Parkway, improving the linkage between the Spellman Overpass, the Post Office and Ora Glen Lake, and extending to Schrom Hills Park and beyond.

Another effort I have spearheaded is a partnership with Berwyn Heights and College Park to conduct a joint planning exercise. Next year, a panel of experts from the Urban Land Institute will work with us to re-imagine Greenbelt Road near Beltway Plaza.

Bill Orleans:

Historic Greenbelt's core, the site of its government and public functions, its important cultural amenities, and its original small commercial center should continue as the city's focus. Developments to the west beyond what was Edmonston Road, now Kenilworth; to the east and then south beyond Greenbelt Road; and more recently even further west, have been developed not to the original plan, but to meet the prospective profits of separate property speculators. It is unfortunate that when Greenbelt's original geography was sold in the '50s (and new geography annexed) there was not more of an effort to secure new development with the original plan in mind.

What is, is, however.

"Connectivity" has become a bit of a cliché, but I support the concept anyway; although it should be asked, why does one need to go east or south or west or even to the center of town? Essential purchases are available in each. The answer, of course, is to participate in the city's governance and to benefit from its amenities not found elsewhere in town.

For those of us with a car, a 10- to 15-minute trip can get one from any end of town to another. For those of us without a car, Metrobus, The Bus, & UM Shuttle serve much but not all of Greenbelt; each has deficiencies. For those requiring accessible transportation, all providers meet some but not all needs. Greenbelt GIVES can meet some but not all demand.

An expanded Greenbelt Connection, a "circulator" as framed by one member of council (for more than 10 years) could fill in the gaps of other services providing trips into the core and back, from "Greenbelt Station" (and the Greenbelt metro station) to Greenspring allowing more residents to benefit from activity in the center of town and late into the evening.

Edward Putens:

For perspective, let's first acknowledge what we have already accomplished.

One footnote in Greenbelt history is that I was the first City Councilmember elected from Greenbelt East. Now three of the Council's seven members are from Greenbelt East. More important, all Council members are oriented to all parts of the city.

Some trends don't get news coverage. There are now more people from Greenbelt East and West on City committees--and in other civic organizations. More people from Greenbelt East are using the Greenbelt Connector bus service, though it should be publicized more. The management of Franklin Park has improved coordination with the City on behalf of its residents.

Moving forward, particular attention should be paid to Greenbelt West, where participation in city elections has always been low. However, the new Greenbelt Station development at the City's west end is a success story. It's growing fast and has many residents already participating in Greenbelt's civic life.

Here are two more things the City could do. (1) Provide a welcome packet for new residents, through realtors, homeowner associations and rental offices. (2) Bring arts events to an outdoor venue (painters, musicians, crafts, etc.) in each of Greenbelt's three main sectors, but inviting all City residents, working through our Arts Advisory Committee and Community Center artists in residence.

In the end, connectivity depends on decisions by residents, not just the City government. Everyone who hasn't yet voted in Greenbelt elections can help--by voting, by volunteering, by following city developments through the News Review. You are as connected as you choose to be, and you live in one of America's well-known high-participation cities.

Susan Stewart:

Many communities suffer from broken city layouts that keep residents divided and isolated. Ironically to fix that problem, many of them look to the layout of Old Greenbelt for inspiration. Our original plans deliberately included walkable sidewalks to our center marketplace, park areas, and schools, connecting residents to everything they need, while you wave at friendly faces walking past.

Imagine a project that radiates that feeling of connectivity and friendly faces, outwards to the rest of our city. The community can design a unifying walking path, whose goal is to beautify the city and connect all our residents, shops & offices, amenities, and schools. Utilizing already existing sidewalks, adding way-finding signs and points of interest displays, this path would guide you across the busy highways (which must be made safer for crossing), encouraging exploration of all parts of our city. Public art and gardens would adorn the path, while bike shares can make travel more convenient.

I've seen paths like this in cities protecting the ability for students to walk to their schools safely. I've seen paths like this connecting limping historic downtowns to new residences, bringing in more foot traffic and revitalizing businesses. As for budgeting, I've seen these paid for not just by a city budget, but by grants from non-profit organizations. Donations of money, labor and materials are obtained from local businesses, as well as proud residents donating, fundraising, and volunteering to make it happen. In fact, the planning & seeking of money itself was part of what brought those communities together.

While there are many other ideas to pursue—a shuttle bus, better biking lanes, or simply finishing the sidewalks we already have left unfinished—I have seen nothing more fruitful to bring a community together than a unifying walking & biking path project.

Leta Mach:

For the many parts of Greenbelt to connect, people must meet, share their lives, respect and help their neighbors. Our role is to help these connections occur and to prevent obstacles. The key is people – finding ways for people to meet and get to know each other.

I feel the most productive and important thing to do is seeing that all Greenbelt children can attend Greenbelt schools. Friendships among young people spread to parents and continue into adulthood. And, most important, through connections in their school, people will learn that they are members of the Greenbelt community.

There are other ways we make connections that I continue to support. These include signage in all three areas of the city, council and advisory board meetings, recreation programs and festivals throughout the city. I would also highlight and promote programs and organizations that bring us together such as the programming at the Old Greenbelt Theater and encourage people to participate and enjoy these activities.

To help citizens learn about their city, we can also improve the filming of council meetings wherever council meets.

One idea I put forward that was implemented during our 75th anniversary celebration is the Three Lakes Walk. By walking from Schrom Hills Lake to Greenbelt Lake and then to the small lake at Franklin Park people physically experience and get to know all parts of the city.

We must also address physical barriers and improve roads particularly Greenbelt Road and Cherrywood Lane and implement more of the pedestrian and bicycle master plans. I would like more overpasses or underpasses although funding may be difficult.

I would not support counterproductive things that further divide us such as widening the BW Parkway. Finally, I would not divide the city by creating districts. All council members must represent all of Greenbelt.

Judith Davis:

Increasing connectivity to all areas of Greenbelt requires further outreach and infrastructure changes. The City already has done a great deal, such as equitable police patrols, festivals in the three parts of Greenbelt, and a requirement for event signage to be posted in the three areas. More can be done.

Continued progress needs to be made in connecting trails, sidewalks and bike lanes so that one can safely and seamlessly travel from one section of Greenbelt to another. Safe crossings of major highways need to be provided. Having a circulator bus was studied several years ago—the concept should be revisited. Better publicity of existing forms of public transportation would help. Classes and other forms of education or support could be used to do this.

Council should increase the number of work sessions, especially budget work sessions, it holds in all areas of the City. A portable sound system and means to tape these sessions must be provided. Town hall meetings in each of the three Greenbelt areas could be held once a year. Key staff members and Council would be there to address issues. The City and its departments already utilize several social media modes to reach out to our citizens—this needs to be expanded and promoted. Recreation classes and CARES services need to occur in all parts of the City in suitable places with adequate parking and transit access. The Welcome Bags given to new residents is a great idea, but a stronger follow-up plan is needed to ensure the bags are actually distributed. Our volunteer coordinator should continue to recruit people from all over the City.

As a councilmember, I will personally continue to attend city and civic events throughout the City to reach out and to listen to our citizens as I have always done.

Colin Byrd:

Obviously the United States now has a divisive president, but, in Greenbelt, we also have a divide -- a sharp geographical divide. Many Greenbelt residents, including Old Greenbelt residents, feel that our city's leaders have neither united Greenbelters throughout the city nor heard the voices of people in Greenbelt East and Greenbelt West. I was a delegate to the 2016 Democratic National Convention. We held up signs saying "Stronger Together" as we cheered on the Obamas, Bernie Sanders, and our nominee, Hillary Clinton, because our dream was and continues to be for a nation divided to be united. These are my values. We will realize the dream of a united Greenbelt. This November, we can finally make "One Greenbelt" a reality and a governing principle. Because of the 300-word limit, I will give you just one example: the question was about connectivity. Well, the irony of the matter is that connectivity in Greenbelt has reached a crisis point in part because the city bus, aptly titled Greenbelt Connection, literally burst into flames. That was tragic, so one of my first priorities in office will be finding a more durable, safer, state of the art, permanent replacement for the previous bus. Together, through expanded bus transportation (including a circulator for popular places), infrastructure investment (overpasses, underpasses), jobs, walkability, bikeability, and cross-community groups and partnerships, we will finally make it so that every Greenbelter, from Mandan Road to Greenbelt Station, shares in the prosperity of Greenbelt and truly feels a deeper sense of community. But another underappreciated part of connectivity is communication, so also share your ideas with me. Some of Greenbelt's establishment politicians don't want to hear the voice of the people. Well, you can reach me at 301-957-5014. And, if you vote Byrd, your voice will be heard.

Annual David Craig Memorial Tennis Tournament Winners

by Theresa Henderson

The Greenbelt Tennis Association (GTA) held the annual David Craig Memorial Doubles and Singles Tennis Tournament on September 30 and October 7. The tournament supports the scholarship fund that is presented annually to an ERHS student by the David Craig Memorial Scholarship Fund organization. The weather was outstanding for both tournaments – but with a temperature difference of 15 degrees. The small turnout of participants was counterbalanced by their enthusiasm and graciousness. Well done, players. For more information about GTA, see greenbelt.com/tennis.
