PSAC Makes Recommendations On Security Cameras to Council

by Diane Oberg

How effective are the city's security cameras? Are there enough of them? If not, where else are cameras needed? It was with questions such as these in mind that the Greenbelt City Council asked the Public Safety Advisory Committee (PSAC) to undertake a comprehensive review of the city's existing cameras, including collecting input from citizens and city staff to make a city-wide security recommendation.

PSAC presented its report at an October 30 worksession, with chair Cindy Comproni and member Stan Zirkin, who wrote the report, presenting the committee's findings and recommendations. The full report is available in the packet for that meeting in the Agenda Center on the city's website (greenbeltmd.gov).

PSAC's Recommendation

Based upon its information gathering, including holding three public hearings to gather residents comments, the committee presented the following recommendation: "PSAC has concluded that some of the existing cameras have to be repaired and repositioned; that there needs to be a

Meeting Focuses on Process For Defeating Maglev Train

by James Giese

Around 200 people attended an informational meeting on Monday, November 27, concerning the proposal to run an SC-maglev train between Baltimore and Washington, with two of the three routes under consideration tunneling under homes in Greenbelt East.

Arranged by Delegate Alonzo Washington and held at Eleanor Roosevelt High School, the meeting provided more information on what those attending could do to stop the train from happening rather than the pros and cons of the SCmaglev proposal, as no proponents of the project made themselves known at the meeting. Washington said that invitations had been extended to Maryland Governor Larry Hogan, who has expressed strong support for the railway; Maryland Secretary of Transportation Peter Rahn; representatives of the Maryland Transit Administration (MTA), the agency currently undertaking an environmental impact study (EIS) for the proposed routes; and representatives of the Baltimore Washington Rapid Rail, LLC (BWRR), the private firm that is to build and operate the railway.

All had declined the invitation.

One person attending did maintain neutrality. He was Dr. Lei Zhang, a transportation engineer professor who is the director of the National Transportation Center in the Department of Civil and Environmental Engineering at the University of Maryland, College Park. Zhang provided some information about maglev train technology and impacts and indicated a willingness to provide more upon request of state legislators or officials, but

American Education

In celebration of American education, these columns tell the stories of selected teachers from the schools serving the Greenbelt community. This week readers will get a glimpse inside Springhill Lake Elementary School. In coming weeks we will focus on the other local public schools.

The stories feature two teachers or staff members at each school; these are coordinated by David Lange, who originated the series and liaises with the schools, and Alice Murray who works with the reporters and is assisted by Brett Fishburne.

Franklin Park's Worksession Shows a Work in Progress

by Diane Oberg

As part of its periodic stakeholders' meetings the Greenbelt City Council met with Franklin Park management on November 29 to receive an update on what's happening within that community. Topics discussed included crime, communications with residents, recycling conditions in the apartment complex and more. On most of these topics, council offered advice on city services and other information that could be helpful to Franklin Park management.

Residents

Franklin Park is a diverse community, said Denise Knight, director of resident services, including undergraduate and graduate students, military, government and Metro-oriented employees. She did not have information on the demographics of the community but noted "we're a melting pot." Between 60 and 65 percent of units are occupied by families as determined by the number of residents. Rents range from $1,199 to $2,249 per month, depending on the number of bedrooms.

Help Needed

When asked whether there is any area where Franklin Park needs the city's help, Knight quickly responded "youth activities." They need more to do, she said.

Crime

Acting Chief of Police Thomas Kemp said that crime is still near a 10-year low. While there has been a slight increase in crime recently, there has been no spike in crimes against people or property in Franklin Park. He mentioned that he will be having another "coffee with the chief" at noon on Thursday, December 7 at Beltway Plaza, although, as was pointed out, many residents will be working and unable to attend.

Another safety issue raised was the adequacy of lighting in the complex. Kemp said that the police perform lighting surveys to identify areas that may be attractive to criminals. Franklin Park has vastly improved lighting and has implemented the department's suggestions, Kemp noted.

Capital Improvements

Aaron Martin, project manager, reported that so far this year Franklin Park has spent $4.5 million on capital improvements. The old laundry rooms, since replaced with a centralized laundry facility, have been secured and there are no plans to do anything further with these buildings.

Martin noted that they are also working to improve stormwater management in the complex where many drainage pipes have

Our Carriers Bring Holiday Greetings

Around this time of year it has been traditional for the youngsters who deliver the News Review to leave holiday greetings envelopes at the homes they serve. The News Review does not pay our carriers much. Your generous holiday donations and expressions of appreciation help make their job worthwhile. Most carriers range in age from preteen to the middle teens. For the younger boys and girls, delivering the News Review is their first job experience. Many of the older carriers started at a young age and continue to deliver the News Review mainly as a service to their neighborhood. It is a learning process for all these youngsters and, in some cases, the instillation of responsibility takes time and patience.

The holiday season affords all of us a chance to show appreciation and to provide encouragement for the efforts of these youngsters and at the same time to show understanding for any failings that may have occurred during the year. Again this year, the carriers will leave envelopes. We hope these envelopes, identified with the carrier's name and address, will be helpful to you as you show appreciation. If your carrier's name or address is in doubt, please contact Karen Yoho, our carrier coordinator, at circ@greenbeltnewsreview.com. If you do not have access to email, please leave a voicemail on 301-474-4131 including your name, address (to identify what route your house is on) and a brief description of your question or issue.

Letters Policy

The News Review reserves the right not to publish any letter submitted. Letters are considered accepted when published.

All letters must include the letter writer's name, physical address and telephone number. Only the name will be published; the News Review will consider withholding the name upon request.

All letters are subject to editing for reasons of space, libel, privacy, taste, copyright and clarity.

Letters to the Editor

Kudos for Zero Waste At Tree Lighting

Thanks to the Greenbelt Recreation Department for all its efforts to make the tree lighting ceremony in Roosevelt Center truly a zero waste event. As a Zero Waste Team volunteer, I much appreciated all the planning and work that went into making the celebration a single-stream, all-compostable event.

All items distributed at the tree lighting, including the packaging, were fully compostable and therefore were taken to the county's Western Branch composting facility instead of to the county landfill.

I hope that all city departments and programs can build on this approach for future city events. Our community will reap many benefits, including lower disposal fees, from this natural approach to waste management.

Thanks to all who helped make this a superb event. It was great fun to be a volunteer there.

Worth Defending

I would like to thank the Greenbelt News Review for commissioning and showing the movie "Defending Utopia." The movie highlighted Greenbelt as a special place worth defending from forces which threaten to destroy its unique character. As Greenbelt celebrates its 80th Anniversary, the community faces the most threats it has seen in years. These threats include the increased building density, height and mass proposed under the county's zoning rewrite project, the proposed routing of a high-speed maglev train through Greenbelt and the proposed widening of both the BW Parkway and I-495 Beltway.

Of these threats, perhaps the most insidious is the proposed zoning rewrite project. The project has been framed as one of updating and simplifying the existing 50+ year old zoning ordinance. Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission (M-NCPPC) and the county council have promised throughout the project that the new zoning ordinance would not result in the up-zoning of property, i.e. allowing for more density or intensity than what is currently allowed on a property. As the project closes in on the finish line, it becomes clear this promise will not be kept.

For example, the current townhouse zone caps townhouse density at six dwelling units per acre. Under the new corresponding zone, maximum density will be increased to 16.33 townhouse dwelling units per acre or 32.66 two-family dwelling units per acre. In addition, the new corresponding zone will allow for additional height on townhouses (up to 50 feet or five stories) and has no minimum requirements for green space.

What does this mean? In GHI, residential density is currently between 3 to 12 dwelling units per acre with a gross density of six dwelling units per acre. To get a sense of the type of density and lack of sun and green space associated with the new proposed zone, one only needs to go to Greenbelt Station. You will notice crowded conditions with shadows cast across streets and tiny yards. These are the conditions which the original Greenbelt town planners were trying to guard against when they planned a community with lots of green space and where sunlight and views were elements of the original design.

Similarly, it is anticipated that the Roosevelt Center will transition to a Commercial and General Office (CGO) zone. This new zone allows mixed-use development and encourages higher density residential development. The CGO zone permits multi-family buildings with up to 48 dwelling units per acre and there is no building height limitation for commercial uses. This means our sunlit Roosevelt Center plaza may be transformed into a dark canyon, losing its allure as a site for our many festivals.

There are plenty of places where higher density and intensity development is currently allowed. If you do not wish to see the unique character of the historic core of the city transformed into anywhere USA, please submit comments on the zoning rewrite via email to M-NCPPC\(ZoningPGC@ppd.mncppc.org\)). The deadline for comments is December 15, 2017. Please make sure to request lower density in the proposed townhouse (R-MFA) zone as well as requesting that our Roosevelt Center be mapped

More B30 Changes

The B30 bus no longer picks up passengers at both bus stops at the BWI airport. Upon arrival last week the first notification that I found was when I exited the door with my luggage. A green sign that said regional buses were picking up passengers at Door 18 (by the international flight check-in). Eighteen doors later I arrived in time to catch the hourly bus. I walked pulling heavy luggage to the farthest end of the airport to the remaining bus stop.

As of Monday, December 4, the current schedule online was from June and there was no notification of any change. This I believe is meant as a tactic to discourage people from using this bus. There is no change in cost to WMATA when the bus stops just beyond the Southwest Airlines terminal.

In addition, at a meeting with our Greenbelt City Council this autumn, the WMATA representative told us that the June changes with the reduced schedule and no weekend trips had produced good ridership statistics this summer. He added that ridership would diminish in the winter. Now WMATA has found a way to diminish ridership further.

If others know how to influence WMATA to reopen that bus pickup location or are willing to work with a group to achieve that goal, please let me know by Facebook Messenger. I will take no action unless other people value the B30 bus line.

Pickleball Concerns

Pickleball, which has been described as a combination of tennis, ping pong and badminton, is one of the faster growing sports in the country. We have a dedicated group of players here in Greenbelt. For over two years we have been asking to be able to put tape lines down on the gym floor to delineate the boundaries for the game. All the other gyms in Prince George's County in which we play have this tape on the floor or permanent painted lines. The tape does not harm the floor nor is it hazardous to people playing or walking on the court. We have been steadfastly refused in this request.

We just learned that the floor of the Community Center gym, where we play, will be resurfaced this month. Yet we still have no commitment from the Recreation Department that the pickleball lines will be painted or taped on the surface at that time.

The lack of boundary lines is the reason we are not able to grow the sport in Greenbelt. We actually have Greenbelt residents who refuse to play here because of this issue. It is difficult to play a game where you only have a suggestion of boundary lines created by placing pieces of plastic on the floor each time we play. Also, we could fit at least two pickleball courts and probably three in the gym space. This would allow more people to play at once, rather than waiting for others to finish.

Once the floor is refinished this year, it will probably not be resurfaced for another 10 years. Since it is mostly senior citizens who play now, we are not willing to wait another 10 years. We are hoping for a positive response from the Recreation Department.

Sen. Muse To Speak To Democratic Club

by Konrad Herling

Nationally, Democrats can celebrate strong victories in Virginia and New Jersey, and our local Eleanor & Franklin Roosevelt Democratic Club membership can share in that cheer. The club, which has grown to over 150 members, will hold its monthly meeting Friday, December 15 at 7 p.m. in the Greenbriar Community Building at 7600 Hanover Parkway.

State Senator C. Anthony Muse will be the guest speaker, the newly elected board of directors will be installed and there will be refreshments.

Muse, a candidate for Prince George's County executive, identifies schools, health care and economic development as his top three priorities if elected. He questions the validity of high test scores of students, and regarding one aspect of economic development, he seeks to find an arrangement where U.S. Census Bureau employees, working behind a fence at their headquarters, be more integrated with the Suitland community.

Muse was first elected as a state delegate in 1994. He ran unsuccessfully for county executive in 2002, but was elected to the state senate in 2006. In an interview, he said he would bring bold leadership to county government. In Annapolis, he has sponsored legislation to secure funding for domestic violence survivors and worked to expunge certain criminal convictions.

Former U.S. Representative Donna Edwards and former aide to President Obama, Paul Monteiro, will speak this coming January and February.

For information see website, rooseveltclub.com, or call 202-321-4207.

Afternoon Campfire Sing-along at Refuge

On Sunday, December 10 from 2 to 2:45 p.m., join a sing-along at the Patuxent Research Refuge. This event is for all ages; parental participation is required. Nature troubadour Stina leads an afternoon indoor campfire sing-along in the auditorium. Get a groove on with fun and silly nature songs.

Public programs at the refuge are free although advance registration is required by calling 301-497-5887. For more information visit the website at fws.gov/refuge/Patuxent. The Visitor Center is on Powder Mill Road between the Baltimore-Washington Parkway and Route 197.

Ma Beverly Datu Teaches Appreciation of Music

by Mary Loutsch

Ma Beverly Datu has been a full-time music teacher at Springhill Lake Elementary School for three years. Born and raised in the Philippines, Datu received her bachelor's degree from St. Scholastica's College, Manila, where she was a double major in piano and music education.

Ma Beverly Datu

perform," says Datu. "So at the beginning of class, I review concepts and then I have them apply what they learned. Depending on the class and grade level, there are times when I have to teach rhythm and melody separately and then put them together."

When teaching rhythm, Datu will often write the patterns herself as each of her classes might be at different learning levels. The students will then clap the patterns together or practice on the percussion instruments in the classroom such as drums and bells. For melody and singing, students will match pitch while Datu plays notes on the classroom's keyboard.

Music class isn't all fun and games, however. Datu also grades her students on homework, participation and tests, but she realizes some students might struggle more with tests or understanding music concepts.

"I always tell my students that I grade effort more than skill," says Datu. "You don't have to be Mozart to get an A in my class to show me that you're putting effort in and trying your best." Datu says her favorite part of teaching music is "When the students perform to the best of their abilities and when they feel proud of what they can do, I'm happy because I know I've made a difference in their lives."

"I love to teach, it's my passion," says Datu. "My mom was an English teacher in the Philippines and when I was younger she would bring me to her class, give me a portion of the blackboard, a piece of chalk and I would imitate her. I told myself that – one day – I wanted to be like her." Datu moved to the United States in 2003 where she taught music class at Tsehootsoi Elementary School in Window Rock, Ariz., for almost 12 years prior to moving to Maryland. She received her master's degree in English to Speakers of Other Languages (ESOL) from Grand Canyon University.

Currently, Datu's students are busy preparing for their upcoming holiday programs – a break from their usual curriculum. Once the holidays are over, the students will go back to learning music concepts such as rhythm, melody, singing and playing instruments. Through teaching these concepts, Datu hopes she can instill a deeper appreciation for music in her students. "I don't think music is music unless you

Through this project, Friedman devised a fun way for students to learn about a new topic and use their imaginations – while at the same time getting students excited about reading and writing. Friedman has been teaching fourth grade at Springhill Lake for nearly two years. Prior to this position, she was a full-time substitute teacher at Ebb Valley and Manchester Elementary in Carroll County. "I really love it," Friedman says of teaching. "Part of why I took this job was because I wanted my own classroom."

While Friedman did not originally pursue a career in education she admits that, "teaching was always in the back of my mind." After receiving her bachelor's degree from Towson University with a double major in history and international studies, Friedman began working at T. Rowe Price. She admits that, "Even when I was working in finance, I was thinking of becoming an employee trainer so I was always drawn to teaching – in some aspect – without even realizing it." Eventually, Friedman decided to pursue a career in education, went back to school and graduated with a master of arts in teaching from Towson University.

Today, Friedman is always looking for new ways to help her students learn. With 29 students in each class, it can be challenging to give every student specialized attention, especially if they are struggling with certain concepts. Friedman accomplishes this feat through small group work and learning centers where students learn and work with specific concepts. For example, right now students can visit the typing center where they use the classroom computer and practice their typing skills. She also has a newspaper learning center where students choose a book to read, and based on the plot and characters of their story, create a newspaper headline. This exercise helps students pinpoint and summarize the main idea of a story.

Friedman shared her ideas for new learning centers that involve more games and creative projects. One is a grammar center where students will play different games that allow them to practice using the correct punctuation in sentences. The other activity, called Host an Event, will have students read a book and design an invitation that the book's main character would send out to the other characters in the book. An example would be if students read Alice's Adventures In Wonderland, they would be tasked with designing an invitation to

Watkins Park Lights Have a New Twist

This year, come out and experience a new twist on a family's favorite holiday tradition, the Festival of Lights at Watkins Regional Park. This year the tree lights are synchronized to dance to seasonal music, a dazzling new lights display.

And while there are new sights and sounds at Watkins Park, some things have stayed the same. Expect to see millions of cheerful lights running throughout the park and one of the state's tallest trees. Also count on hearing some favorite holiday tunes while sampling seasonal drinks like hot chocolate and warm apple cider. This year, as usual, festival organizers are collecting canned goods donations for a local food bank. There is a fee.

The Festival of Lights will run through Monday, January 1 from 5 to 9:30 p.m. at Watkins Regional Park, 301 Watkins Park Drive, Upper Marlboro.

the tea party Alice attends in the book. Friedman mentioned how she would like to start incorporating the computer into these projects, as computer savviness is an important skill in today's society.

These small groups and learning centers make it easier for Friedman to give each student more attention and identify the areas they are struggling with, while at the same time transforming the learning process into a fun and creative activity.

Friedman says her favorite part of teaching is "seeing the kids become successful, or grow in the classroom."

She admits that, "When you see a lightbulb go off and you know that – just because of you – they were able to get a grasp of this concept. That really is the best part."

UMD Honors Roosevelt Alum Monardes, Mentor Bradbury

by Stephanie Selzer

ERHS Alum Montana Monardes and current ERHS teacher, Troy Bradbury

Eleanor Roosevelt High School alum Montana Monardes was one of 19 students recognized as a Philip Merrill Presidential Scholar at the University of Maryland last month.

The Philip Merrill Presidential Scholars program honors outstanding seniors who are nominated by their academic school or college. As a theater major, Monardes was one of just three students nominated from the College of Arts and Humanities.

Scholars were recognized during a November 17 lunch with University President Wallace Loh and the Merrill family. To celebrate the importance of teaching and mentorship, scholars are asked to select one university faculty member and one K-12 mentor to join them for the ceremony.

Monardes selected his former Roosevelt teacher and mentor Troy Bradbury. "He always respected what we had to say and fostered an environment that encouraged creative thinking," said Monardes on why he selected Bradbury as his K-12 mentor.

Monardes was one of the first students to participate in the College Board AP Capstone program at Roosevelt led by Bradbury. The program focuses on critical thinking, in depth research and high level presentation skills.

According to Bradbury, Monardes was a fantastic student. "He was vocal. He was engaged," said Bradbury. "He was not afraid to articulate his responses."

Monardes believes his experiences with Bradbury and the College Board AP Capstone program really prepared him for success in college. "UMD has a reputation for the research that is done here," he said. "And Mr. Bradbury gave us an excellent foundation for how to go about being thorough researchers."

In addition to the luncheon, the Philip Merrill Presidential Scholars program recognizes K-12 mentors by establishing a $1,000 scholarship in their name. The scholarship goes to a first-year UMD student from the mentor's school or district. Bradbury hopes his scholarship will go to another College Board AP Capstone student from Roosevelt.

Monardes is scheduled to graduate in the spring. He plans to stay in the area for now and make use of the connections he has made at UMD. Once he has gotten more professional experience, he hopes to go to Los Angeles and audition for film and television.

Stephanie Selzer is a University of Maryland graduate student in journalism writing for the News Review.

Eagle Scout Project Plants A New Pollinator Garden

by Ilona Horchler

Walk down from the Buddy Attick Park parking lot to the Greenbelt Lake trail, take a right and check out the area at the back of the big field just before the stream. Our bee and butterfly friends have a new home at Greenbelt Lake. At the moment, there's only a clearing with some straw, but in the spring an array of different species of wildflowers will begin to appear, including African daisy, baby's breath, black-eyed susan, forget-me-not and pink catchfly – a beautiful new pollinator garden.

This garden is Jaden Dirksen's Eagle Scout project. Seventeen-year-old Jaden, who has spent most of his life in Greenbelt, is currently a Life Rank scout and just a couple of merit badges away from becoming an Eagle Scout. Jaden joined the Greenbelt Cub Scout Pack 202 in first grade and Riverdale Scout Troop 214 at the age of 12. He enjoys scouting due to the sense of camaraderie, productivity, activity and development of important life skills that scouting provides.

As a resident of Greenbelt and someone who cares deeply for the environment, Jaden had long had the idea of creating a pollinator garden. Jaden really appreciates that his community in Greenbelt is walkable and has a good balance between being quiet and entertaining. Adding a pollinator garden was a way he knew he could contribute to Greenbelt's ecosystem in a long-lasting way. He worked with advisors from the Department of Public Works, especially Brian Townsend, to determine the location and needs. For his fundraising efforts to purchase items such as seed and sand, he received support from fellow Greenbelters. Generous Joe's Joe Natoli helped provide pizza as an extra incentive for scouts to participate. Jaden asked scouts to bring shovels, spades, wheelbarrows, rakes and gardening gloves. He provided a bucket for mixing seed with sand and a few extra shovels and rakes.

Around 13 scouts and some adults came to volunteer on Saturday, October 28. Jaden described the experience of creating the pollinator garden as one that was very enjoyable and a learning experience in management. Two of his scout friends served as his seconds-in-command to help manage the project and motivate the scouts.

The scouts started by clearing rocks and large branches and weeding the area. A couple of adult volunteers went over the area with a rotary tiller. Then scouts planted Newsom Seed Wildflower Mix, which is made up of 75 percent perennial and 25 percent annual wildflowers. Scouts raked over the area and laid straw. The project took about two hours in total, less time than originally expected.

When asked how this pollinator garden will help Greenbelt, Jaden responded, "The bee population in the U.S. is not doing well. One of the main reasons is that flower space is being replaced with grass . . . we need bees and butterflies to pollinate plants. Pollination is important because it leads to the production of seeds that create more plants."

Townsend, who has served as horticultural supervisor for public works for 29 years, played a major role in the realization of Jaden's project. He worked with Jaden for about a month prior to the event and said that this experience gave Jaden a "good opportunity to learn about supervision and planning and to develop important life skills." He said that the scouts seemed to have fun while gardening and learning to care for our green space and that Jaden and his team managed the event efficiently. It was "nice to work with Jaden and it's good for the city. [This kind of event] gets people invested in public parks because, if you feel you've put effort and time into something, you are more likely to respect and care for it."

Sam Ricketts-Stewart said that he learned that "you should always cover seeds with straw so that birds can't get to them." He said, "I definitely wanted to be there to help one of my fellow scouts complete the Eagle rank and help the environment." Andrew Jones said that he learned how to use some new gardening tools and was excited that he was able to explain what community service is to a small child passing by with parents. When asked why he wanted to be there, Andrew answered, "I felt like doing something good. And the pizza was good, too!"

Caleb Carr was also happy to be helping out. Caleb said, "I learned that when a lot of people do something, it's a lot easier to do."

Anyone who would like to congratulate Jaden Dirksen and the scouts of Troop 214 on a job well done can join us for a Holiday Brunch on Sunday, December 17 between 9 a.m. and noon at the Prince George's County Elks Lodge, 6700 Kenilworth Avenue.

longer retention period of information captured by the cameras; that regularized maintenance from an outside contractor needs to be implemented; and that new security cameras should be considered or phased in as finances permit.”

Phase I

PSAC recommended that the changes to the system be broken into phases. In Phase I, cameras at Springhill Lake Recreation Center and Springhill Drive would be repositioned and the pan/tilt feature would be disabled, if possible. In addition, the cameras at the Spellman Overpass have frequent outages and lasting maintenance needs to be done.

PSAC also wants the city to address the “inordinately large amount of time” it takes to repair a malfunctioning camera. To this end, they strongly urged council to add funds in each year’s budget for ongoing maintenance and repair and to hire a contractor to ensure that the cameras are kept in good working order with as little downtime as possible.

Phase II

As funds permit, PSAC recommended that the city should consider installing eleven more cameras in designated areas and that it procure 180/360-degree cameras, which scan broader areas at one time, and make sure those cameras are functional in low light/nighttime whenever possible. The recommended locations include four in the area of Franklin Park and the Metro station, five in Greenbelt East and two in the core of town.

Additional Comments

Councilmembers were pleased with the report but had questions. Councilmember Judith Davis pointed out that council receives a number of requests from Roosevelt Center merchants for more cameras. However, city crime statistics show that relatively little violent crime occurs there. There will never be enough cameras and/or officers to satisfy every demand, so the city has to seek balance when deciding where to place cameras.

Mayor Emmett Jordan called for a comprehensive approach to public safety including both cameras and officers. He also called on residents to understand that when in public they should have no expectation of privacy.

Police representative Gordon Pracht suggested first bringing the current system up to industry standards, including a software system the city can build upon. Dale Worley, the director of the city’s Information Technology (IT) Department, has already obtained a proposal from the vendor used by Hyattsville that is in the $50,000 range to upgrade the camera software and increase storage. It does not cover additional cameras. Beyond that the city needs to have money in the budget every year to upgrade some cameras. Worley told council that the city cannot add any cameras until the upgrades to software and storage are completed.

Councilmember Silke Pope objected to trying to fix an old system, saying that it needs an overhaul instead. Worley agreed, noting that the vendor had recommended the same thing.

Most of the committee’s outreach occurred more than one year ago. Council asked that PSAC expand their study to Greenbelt Station to get a more accurate picture of the needs of Greenbelt West.

Problems Identified

PSAC found definite room for improvement. The problems encountered include lack of any program of regular maintenance, lengthy delays in repairing broken cameras, panning cameras that are too often pointed away from a crime scene until after the evildoers were gone, cameras that do not function well at night, inadequate storage capacity and inadequate training for relevant city staff.

Additional comments from city police included the fact there is often no video of sufficient quality to help police build a case. The police comments noted that when police have access to high quality video, whether from the city’s security or red light and speed cameras or those of businesses or nearby police departments, they are much more successful in convicting criminals than when they have to depend solely on witness testimony. Witness testimony is often challenged at trial for reasons such as reliability of testimony and witnesses sometimes refuse to testify.

Zirkin noted that even with additional cameras, residents still need to use common sense. People should not leave valuables in their cars in plain sight, rather than be shocked when the goods are stolen.

Other Cities

The committee also talked to police departments including Hyattsville and the University of Maryland police in College Park. They incorporated what they had learned into their recommendations.

IT Issues

PSAC also talked to Worley, whose staff manages all city cameras except for those at the Community Center and those in and around the Public Works facility. Worley confirmed that problems with the software the city uses are exacerbated by inadequate training by the vendor.

The city has no program of ongoing maintenance, which increases the likelihood of failure as well as increasing the time a camera is out of service awaiting repairs. The IT Department had looked into a service contract when the cameras were new but the price was higher than Worley felt was appropriate for new cameras.

Since then, Worley said, the city has dealt with three different camera vendors and has been disappointed in all three from both a cost and a responsiveness perspective. Recently, his department has talked to Hyattsville and the vendor they used, as recommended by PSAC. Hyattsville is pleased with their vendor; to date Worley is as well.

In response to a question from Pope, Worley said that, with few exceptions, the cameras work but that newer cameras require less storage space for the same amount of information. He said that the city needs a program to systematically replace the cameras.

During preparation of last year’s budget, Worley had proposed adding a “camera system” line item for repair, replacement and maintenance of the system, but that item did not get beyond council’s wish list.

Three Systems

There are actually three sets of city cameras. The Community Center and Public Works each have their own systems of cameras that they maintain. The remaining cameras are overseen by the IT Department.

Recordings from these sources vary widely in quality and police complain that, particularly for crimes against property, the recordings are often gone by the time police have time to work on the case. The retention policies for the different systems differ, even for the cameras for which Worley is responsible. The retention periods range from 7 to 10 days for non-police cameras maintained by the IT Department to 180 days for police video.

Spruce, Fir and Pine Class for Children

On Monday, December 18 from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. at the Patuxent Research Refuge there will be a class on conifers for kids ages 5 to 7. Come enjoy the smell of conifers while learning about why they are still green.

Public programs at the refuge are free although advance registration is required by calling 301-497-5887. For more information visit the website at fws.gov/refuge/Patuxent. The Visitor Center is on Powder Mill Road between the Baltimore-Washington Parkway and Route 197.

indicated that the center could not take a position on the project proposed. Zhang was part of a panel that included Maryland Delegate Tawanna Gaines, whose district includes Greenbelt; and two members of the Citizens Against the SCmaglev Train group from Bowie.

Citizens

Dennis Brady, chair of the group, told of its organization in May and how at the first meeting on the proposal in Bowie, only six people had shown up. By mid-July the group had around 60 members. Now it has over 2,700 and is still growing. This has been done by word of mouth, people talking to their neighbors, he said. The organization’s website and Facebook site provide information about the homes, businesses and other properties that would be impacted by this proposal to tunnel under properties or construct an elevated track on a trestle above or adjacent to them upon a new right-of-way. It also provides advice on what citizens can do to express their views and whom to contact.

Brady said it was important to not just express opposition but to identify environmental concerns to consider when contacting the MTA concerning the EIS. He said it was even better if you claim to be an expert on something. As an example, he suggested that the owner of a historic home could claim to be an expert on historic preservation. If the comments are just negative, they are put in a pile and listed, but if an issue is raised, particularly by an expert, the MTA staff is obligated to look at it.

His group asked to obtain electronic copies of the maps being used for the study, Brady said, but was refused. So members developed their own maps and identified all properties to be affected. Their maps are posted on Facebook.

Brady explained that, of the federal monies passed through the state, about $6 million is for the EIS. The remainder is to be used by BWRR for preliminary engineering work.

Gaines

Gaines, who is on the appropriations committee and would have a say into any state funding request, said that the project has not been presented to the General Assembly. (The EIS is being undertaken by MTA with all costs covered by a $27.8 million federal grant and 20 percent matching funds from BWRR.) She said that the delegates and Senator Paul Pinsky were looking for ways to put an end to the project. There had been an earlier maglev proposal that “we put the brakes on,” Gaines said, and she

Police Blotter

Based on information released by the Greenbelt Police Department, www.greenbeltmd.gov/police. Dates and times are those when police were first contacted about incidents.

Robbery

November 22, 4:15 a.m., 9100 block Springhill Lane. A man approached a person who was about to enter a vehicle, displayed a handgun and announced a robbery. He then took money, jewelry and a knife and fled on foot.

November 24, 6:40 p.m., 8000 block Brett Place. Two men, each wearing a ski-type mask, approached a food delivery person who had gotten out of his vehicle to make a delivery. Both men demanded money. They fled on foot after getting cash, jewelry and two pizzas. The delivery person was not injured.

Intent to Distribute

November 27, 11:46 a.m., 7700 block Hanover Parkway. A 14-year-old Greenbelt youth was arrested for illegal possession of a prescription drug with intent to distribute, removing a label from a prescription bottle and possession of paraphernalia, after an officer observed a suspicious person possibly involved in a drug transaction. The youth was released to a parent pending action by the Juvenile Justice System.

Theft

November 27, 11 p.m., 8000 block Greenbelt Station Parkway. Packages were taken from the front stoop of a residence.

Fraud

November 26, 4:05 p.m., 6100 block Springhill Terrace. A man attempted to purchase a used car using a social media app and was advised to pay for the vehicle using eBay gift cards. After doing so, the vehicle was never delivered and the listing and contact information were removed.

Burglary

November 24, 1:36 p.m., 7500 block Greenbrook Drive. A video game player, video games and a pair of boots were taken from a residence after a key had possibly been used to gain entry on November 21. No reason was given for the delay in reporting the incident.

November 26, 12:12 p.m., 8000 block Greenbelt Station Parkway. A sliding glass door was found partially open in an attempt to breach a residence. Entry was not gained.

November 26, 7:40 p.m., 6000 block Springhill Drive. The door lock assembly of a residence was tampered with in an attempt to enter a residence. Entry was not gained.

November 28, 7:45 p.m., 8000 block Brett Place. A tool bag and tools were taken from a residence after entry was gained by forcing open a basement window.

November 28, 8:22 p.m., 8000 block Mandan Terrace. A bicycle, two laptop computers, a guitar and a drone were taken from a residence after entry was gained by breaking out a glass basement door.

November 29, 3 p.m., 7700 block Hanover Parkway. A vacant residence was entered after a dining room window had been broken out.

Vehicle Crime

Fifteen vehicle crimes were reported and consist of one incident involving possible tampering and theft, nine thefts from vehicles, two attempted thefts from vehicles and three incidents of vandalism.

An officer on routine patrol on November 26 in the 9200 block Springhill Lane observed what he believed to be a tampering in progress. One of the persons involved entered a vehicle described as a white Chevrolet Impala bearing Virginia tags and used it to flee after it struck another police cruiser responding to the scene. A second person fled the area in a vehicle described as a grey Honda Accord, also bearing Virginia tags. Investigation revealed that three tires and rims had been taken from one vehicle. The investigation is ongoing. The officer was not injured.

Four tires and rims were taken from one vehicle in the 7700 block Hanover Parkway, three tires and rims from another in the 9200 block Springhill Lane (described above) and two tires and rims, again from one vehicle, this time in the 7700 block Lakecrest Drive. An attempt was made to steal tires and rims in the 200 block Lakeside Drive.

Six thefts involved the breaking out of windows. A backpack was taken in the 7800 block Mandan Road, where two other vehicles were broken into but nothing was taken. Power tools, front headlights and fog lights were taken from the same vehicle in the 8100 block Lakecrest Drive. In the 5700 block Greenbelt Metro Drive packaged food was taken from one vehicle and a hat, boots and GPS unit from another, in addition to its ignition having been tampered with. Medication, personal documents and a pair of earrings were taken in the 7500 block Hanover Parkway. A purse was taken from an unlocked vehicle in the 6100 block Breezewood Drive.

Three instances of vandalism were reported. A front passenger window was broken out in the 9100 block Edmonston Road. In the 6100 block Breezewood Drive four tires on one vehicle were flattened, side mirrors broken and two windows broken out. A hood was dented in the 7800 block Hanover Parkway.

felt that they would be able to do it again.

Pinsky said that he and the delegates had intended to organize a meeting, but that Washington had beaten them to it. He asked audience members to raise their hands if they had ridden Metro in the past week. About half said they had. He then asked how many had ridden Amtrak to Baltimore, and there was almost no response.

Pinsky felt that the governor should be doing more to provide the needed funding for Metro and claimed that Hogan was preventing an area-wide funding agreement from occurring. The maglev would be expensive to ride and of no benefit to working people, he contended. Instead of spending money on public transit needs, he said the governor wanted to spend it on widening highways such as the Baltimore-Washington Parkway.

Delegate Anne Healey also spoke at the meeting. She said that she served on the Transportation and Environment Committee of the Maryland legislature. Her committee was involved in state policy relating to transportation, while Gaines's committee would appropriate funds, and they would work together to deal with this project. She criticized the recent hearing at Bowie State College where there was a large turnout. Those with specific questions had to go to different tables to find the right person to answer them appropriately.

Eminent Domain

As a franchised railroad, BWRR has the power of eminent domain to acquire land for a right-of-way, Healey noted. She thought the legislature should look into whether this power should be taken back from the railroads.

Responding to a question from the audience, Bill Boone (a geologist and co-organizer of the citizen group) said that originally, tunneling was planned to be 60 to 90 feet underground, but now the planners were talking about 100 to 120 feet. He said the tunnel would be approximately 43 feet in diameter and he did not know the dimensions for the thickness of its walls. He estimated that the tunnel would be some 50 feet below the basements of homes. (Two of the proposed routes would tunnel under homes in Greenbelt East.) He also noted that, while tunnels would be bored, it would be necessary to do trenching when the tracks emerged from underground to be elevated, and he had no information on the distance it would take for such a disruption. (One of the proposed routes would emerge from underground in the city's forest preserve.)

Boone also said that originally it was planned to tunnel only 40 percent of the route, but it now had been increased to 70 percent. He thought the original $10 billion cost was now at $17 billion. Based on those estimates, he had calculated that it would cost $50 to $80 billion to extend the line to New York City and $250 to $300 billion to construct a line to Charlotte.

Birds

Susan Stern of Greenbelt was concerned about the magnetic waves generated by a maglev, noting that birds relied on a magnetic field level for migration. Zhang said that the engine would generate twice as much as the earth's strength, which is much less than a television set. But he could not answer the question because his group had not studied that effect on birds.

Greenbelt resident Paul Downs asked Brady how his group had gotten people active on this issue. He said it was through word of mouth and providing information on the internet as to whom to contact. The group has also prepared suggested letters to write and listed the names of suggested recipients.

Brady also said that originally this was a NIMBY (not in my backyard) thing, but the more they looked into it, the more they felt it was an economic issue. There are much better ways to spend these funds, he thought, including a next-generation Acela train, which can do 240 mph.

One questioner asked why there had been no press coverage of this issue. Washington noted the presence of the Greenbelt News Review and Greenbelt Television at the meeting.

collapsed. Council suggested he look into the county program for retrofitting stormwater management facilities.

Martin warmed the hearts of at least a couple of councilmembers when he reported that they are considering adding a dog park for residents. First, however, management is working to resolve the large number of unauthorized pets. If done as a public-private partnership serving Greenbelt West, the city could enforce requirements that dogs be vaccinated and comply with other city regulations.

Maintenance

Council asked about areas in which it has received complaints from residents, including roaches and the time required for urgent repairs. Knight said roughly 10 percent of units have roach issues. To address this, Martin said, they have hired a new pest control contractor who has assigned two of its supervisors to work on-site. Whenever a unit is treated for roaches, they treat the entire building so the infestation cannot just relocate to the next unit.

Water damage issues are addressed immediately, Martin said, noting that they have replaced "miles of pipe." Pipes and dry-wall are replaced on the same day. Foundation cracks are rare, he said and mold issues are addressed as soon as they are reported.

Communications

Franklin Park does its mass communications with residents via email, Knight said. Paper just ends up in the breezeways, so that they would have to pay staff to both deliver the notices and to pick up the debris. That was true also of News Review deliveries. Franklin Park is now "delivering" the paper through an email blast to residents. They have an extensive database of about 3,200 for the roughly 2,800 units. Council explored several ways in which Franklin Park could possibly send out city information through this same process.

Annual Inspection

The city conducts annual inspections of the complex to ensure that it is being maintained in accordance with city regulations. Martin said that the inspection is behind schedule due to time spent waiting on clarification of certain issues as well as turnover in both city and Franklin Park staff. The city's inspector in the Department of Planning and Community Development, Anthony Crump, in an email, reported that management is making repairs in response to resident complaints on a timely basis but that tenants sometimes refuse repair staff access to their units.

Other Issues

Council commiserated with Franklin Park over the difficulties of collecting recycling. Although Franklin Park has conducted education and improved their collection facilities they are still faced with tenants putting a "lot of junk" into the collection bins, which contaminates the recyclable material and increases the refuse collection costs that feed back into tenants' rents.

Recreation Center

Ric Gordon asked why the meeting was not held at the Springhill Lake Recreation Center instead of the Community Center so that more residents could attend. He said he knew of people who could not attend because of the distance involved. A video of the meeting is available on the city's website (greenbeltmd.gov).

One issue with having events at the Rec Center is that residents are parking their vehicles in the center's small parking lot, including commercial trucks. This has caused problems with the city's recreation program, including the senior exercise class, as participants get to the location and find no place to park. As a result of the conversation, the city will look into installing signs restricting parking to Rec Center users and Franklin Park will send notices to the buildings where residents are most likely to find parking in the Rec Center lot convenient.

Torpedo Factory Show Sparks TV Spotlight for Sally Davies

by Cathie Meetre

Earlier this year, the News Review reported on Greenbelter Sally Davies' art show at the Torpedo Factory in Alexandria. Her successful show ran for a month and was featured in our paper on July 6 (available from our archive, greenbeltnewsreview.com/issues/GNR20170706.pdf).

Many stopped by and admired the vivid and original paintings, but one visitor turned out to be especially significant: a producer of Maryland Public Television's (MPT) Artworks show, hosted by Rhea Feikin. The attraction was the large canvas paintings Davies exhibited.

MPT was interested in her technique, subject matter and unique viewpoints and requested her material be included in the PopUp Gallery segment, which is a regular feature of the show that occurs part way through each episode. Davies describes herself as "on cloud nine" and is looking forward to watching the show when it screens. She notes that, "Apparently, artists are featured by invitation only, so I feel very honored to be asked." Davies' neighbors on Research Road and her family members in England and Canada are all poised to watch the episode, either on TV or when it streams, so it's becoming quite the international event.

Episode 608 will premiere on December 14 at 8:30 p.m. on MPT. Check the channel guide for reruns. Check the MPT website to stream the program at mpt.org/programs/artworks-season6/.

Greenbelt FOP Hosts Shop With a Cop

The Greenbelt Fraternal Order of Police (FOP) announces that their annual Shop with a Cop will take place on Saturday, December 16 at the Target store in Beltway Plaza.

This program partners children from the community with Greenbelt police officers, allowing the kids to purchase Christmas presents for themselves and family members. Each child is allotted a budget of $200 and is accompanied by Greenbelt police officers and department volunteers to make their purchases. The children are then brought back to a present-wrapping party where they can enjoy lunch while they wrap their gifts. Children are selected to participate through nominations by their elementary school.

This will be the FOP's 11th year conducting Shop with a Cop. To date the program, which is funded through corporate sponsorship and community donations, has been able to assist more than 200 children.

Donations to fund this program are accepted by mail to Greenbelt FOP, P.O. Box 94, Greenbelt, MD 20768 or dropping them by the police station in an envelope marked Greenbelt FOP/Shop with a Cop. For further information, contact Scott Kaiser at 301-474-7200 or at Skaiser@greenbeltmd.gov.

Potter Helps Boy Mold His Own Pot at Festival of Lights

Angela Shearer demonstrated the potter's wheel on December 2 as part of the Festival of Lights. Shearer is a Community Center pottery student. Jane Young reported that her grandson, Clay Martin, was especially entranced. When the other children and most of the crowd were gone, he asked Shearer if he could touch the clay. To his delight, she helped him mold his own pot. He plans to give the finished pot to his grandpap, John Lippert, for Christmas.
