Non-partisan Moms Lobby State to Demand Gun Sense

by Elisabeth Kevorkian

On Thursday, January 31, several Greenbelters joined more than 200 supporters of the non-partisan Moms Demand Action for Gun Sense in America for lobbying day in Annapolis. Groups from all Maryland districts requested legislators to support common-sense gun safety legislation.

The focus of the lobbying group was on ghost guns and a loophole in background check legislation. Ghost guns include guns that can be made with 3D printers, which do not show up on metal detectors, are untraceable because they have no serial numbers and may not even look like guns. The loophole concerns long guns used in the shooting at the Capital Gazette.

Franklin Park Church Feeds Families Pinched by Shutdown

by René Sewell-Raysor

The snow started falling last Friday as the volunteers pulled into the parking lot of Rivers of Life AME church, 9200 Edmonston Road in the Franklin Park neighborhood, for the Grocery Giveaway. The pastor, the Reverend Aaron Tinch, has a philosophy: "No one will outwork us," so he was on site first to lead by example.

Shore farmers, Floyd Pugh, Jr. and Kent Ballard had gotten on the road at 4:30 a.m. and were heading to Rivers of Life with 55 cases of chicken. That's 3,000 pounds. It was their contribution to the hard-hit DMV of furloughed federal workers. Although the government shutdown had ended, one of the organizers, Kandice Freeman, president and founder of The Way To Live, Inc., a nonprofit for health and

The night before, the young adults of the congregation had gathered to repackage 350 pounds of rice into family-friendly portions to add to the chicken. Would those who had Greenbelt City Council unanimously agreed on January 28 to spend $130,170 on architectural and engineering designs for remodeling on Cherrywood Lane.

The Cherrywood Green and Complete Street Retrofit Project, as it is known, would add bike lanes, sidewalks and a drainage system that would treat storm water before it flows into Indian Creek, which lies just west of the street.

The city is contracting with Charles P. Johnson & Associates (CPJ) of Silver Spring. Vice President Lee Johnson said in a phone call that he could not discuss details of the contract.

"This is a transformational kind of proposal to rethink Cherrywood Lane," Mayor Emmett Jordan said at the meeting. "I'm hoping that we'll come up with the rest of the money to make this happen."

The city allocated $30,000 from its Fiscal Year 2019 budget and $56,000 comes from a grant from the Chesapeake Bay Trust. Assistant City Manager David Moran said the Greenbelt West Infrastructure Fund had enough money to make up the roughly $44,000 difference.

GES Shadow Puppets Project Teaches Folktales, Community

by Jessica O'Roark

"Shadow Stories," an exploration of storytelling and puppetry, is in full swing at Greenbelt Elementary School (GES) just in time for the Lunar New Year. The project began on Friday, January 18 with "The Giant Turnip," a folktale performed by Beech Tree Puppets that celebrates caring for the earth and working together in community. Despite the two-hour snow delay, all 620 students at the school saw one of the afternoon performances, which features hand-crafted rods and shadow-puppets. The set uses a shadow screen under a garden with shadow puppets showing what happens beneath the earth, including tunneling worms, a sprouting seed and a jolly root gnome.

Since then, fourth-graders have been creating shadow puppets to create and perform in their own mini-shows for the lower grades. They will present "The in Atlanta, Greenbelt residents tackled a greater issue: hunger. The Greenbelt Community Church, United Church of Christ, kicked off the annual Souper Bowl of Caring. The Souper Bowl of Caring is a nationwide, multi-denominational event organized by Church World Service that seeks to raise funds and collect food to feed the hungry. It aims to mobilize the enthusiasm of Super Bowl weekend and turn it into America's largest youth-led effort of giving and serving. During the week leading up to Super Bowl Sunday, young people fight hunger and poverty in their local communities by collecting donations of funds and food and passing them directly to local charities.

In the last 25 years more than $100 million has been raised for local charities. The Souper Bowl of Caring transforms the time around Super Bowl weekend into the nation's largest celebration of giving and serving. Reverend Patrick Walker, senior community engagement specialist with the Church World Service, visited the congregation and shared a message of gratitude for Community Church members for their work to help those in need throughout the year.

THANKS

The Greenbelt Pantry extends many thanks to the City of Greenbelt for its generous donations. All donations large and small keep the pantry viable and operational. Thanks again to Father Walter Tappe of St. Hugh's Church, Mishkan Torah, Jordan and Eva Choper, and Carole Siegel.

We are grateful to Henry Haslinger, Councilmember Judith Davis, Janet Kuhn, Neil Williamson and Councilmember Ed Putens. The list is long and I am happy about that, you share from your heart.

Co-op shoppers purchased many "Feed the Hungry" food bags thanks to Bob Davis, the Co-op manager; Hung Le, the plant manager of St. Hugh's Church; and Peggy Compton. Not to forget Ellen Hanyok, Mary and Barry Moien, Cathie Brannan, the Ladies of Charity of St. Hugh's Church, our treasurer extraordinaire Mary Jo Dorsey, and Jean Cook who delivers food to the homebound, Vicki Facht of S.O.M.E., along with Mary Lou Holt and family. Peggy Compton picked up and delivered over 150 bags of "Feed the Hungry Bags" in one week.

Thanks to the Old Greenbelt Theatre and Kathy Labukas for their donations.

Thanks to the Greenbelt Community Church, United Church of Christ, for their great big donation of personal care and hygiene items. The pantry is grateful to Judy Dixon and Suze and Jim Marley for their help.

Happy Valentine's Day, enjoy a warm spring and great summer.

New at Our Co-op

The Co-op Supermarket has been finding new and wonderful foods to offer to all who shop there. I most recently found the new, locally made breads by Roggenart - a wide variety and all of them good and reasonably priced. There is also yummy, new organic hibiscus juice made by a Greenbelter. Other new, locally produced items include a rich West African tomato stew. We all know about the great and growing wine (and beer) selection. And you have seen, I hope, the books and cards by Greenbelt locals available at the Co-op. Where else would you find these products? All at competitive prices.

In addition to finding and stocking new, local products, management at the Co-op is always responsive to customers' requests and suggestions. I have suggested items on several occasions and only once was the Co-op unable to comply. Talk to whomever is in the office, or leave a written request or other suggestion in the suggestion box in the store near the Roosevelt Center entrance, or contact them through the website greenbelt.coop.

Please shop at the Co-op every chance you get. Make it a point to do so. The Co-op is not a corporate outlet answering to people hundreds of miles away. The Co-op is our neighborhood grocery store. The Co-op survives by and for Greenbelters.

Civil War Reenactors At Golden Age Club

by Mary Moien

The Female RE-Enactors of Distinction (FREED) will be the featured presentation at the Wednesday, February 13 meeting of the Golden Age Club. This presentation is open to all Greenbelt residents who would like to attend as guests of the Club. The meeting will be held at 11 a.m. in the Community Center in the second floor meeting room.

The reenactors are a group of women who desire to teach American history that perhaps has been forgotten or overlooked. Greenbelt resident Joyce Bailey and other women will be representing historical African American women in the Civil War era and surrounding decades. These women participated in a meeting last year and were enthusiastically encouraged to return to discuss other women from that era.

FREED is an auxiliary organization of the African American Civil War Memorial & Museum. Its mission is to educate the public and to promote the accomplishments of the African American Civil War soldiers and women who supported their fight for freedom. They engage in reenactments, dramatic readings and various other educational programs in order to share the stories of these distinctive men and women who made major contributions to the educational, medical, artistic and social aspects of the nation.

Thoughtful Discussion At MakerSpace

Are we as stupid as Hollywood thinks we are? Why can't they make a movie that doesn't get the science wrong? Or the history? Must every movie (and book) have a love story? Why do so few movies pass the Bechtel test?

Those wishing to explore this topic should join the group on Tuesday, February 12 at 7:15 p.m. at MakerSpace.

GATe Boot Camp On February 9

Greenbelt Access Television (GATe) plans a Boot Camp in February and the organization's Annual Meeting in March.

"We are trying to simplify things so anyone can get started making their own videos to put on our community channel," said Andy Zmidzinski, GATe's executive director.

Station Manager Phoebe McFarb concurred: "I feel that this boot camp ended up being a really helpful way for students to learn the basics of editing quickly. Once people understand the basics and the parts that are most important to remember in an editing software, it's a lot easier for them to start exploring the rest of the features available."

The Zmidzinski/McFARB duo, which also benefited from the contributions of George Kochell, intends to hold more boot camps in the future, but the next one scheduled is set for Saturday, February 9, 9:30 a.m. at GATe's studio. The class will cover GATe's Canon cameras, focus, composition and sound.

In addition, GATe is holding its annual meeting Sunday, March 10, at 3 p.m., at GATe's studio. This is a great place to learn more about GATe's operation and who the board members are, and for you to become a member.

Living Plastic Free

On Wednesday, February 13 from 7 to 9 p.m. the Greenbelt Climate Action Network (GCAN) will host a talk on Living Plastic Free by Beth Terry at the Community Center, Room 114. Many are trying to reduce carbon footprints, but do you know your plastic footprint? Although some plastics make our lives better, much of it is a problem – produced from fossil fuels, polluting oceans and beaches and harming health with toxic chemicals. But what can one person do to be part of the solution? Join in an evening of inspiring stories and practical tips about ways to reduce plastic in the home and on the planet. In a humorous, non-judgmental style, Terry will share her journey from self-confessed plastic addict to empowered plastic-free activist and explain why recycling alone is not a way out of this mess.

City Celebrates Black History In Sunday's Diverse Program

by Lois Rosado

Over the years, various departments and co-ops in the City of Greenbelt have arranged Black History Month events. This year, elected city representatives and the Recreation Department are joining forces with community residents and Greenbelt Racial Equity Alliance (GREA) to present a program celebrating Black History Month. The Sunday, February 17 program will feature spoken word artists, the award-winning Step Team from Eleanor Roosevelt High School, an art exhibition from Greenbelt Middle School students and special guest speaker, Dr. Alvin Thornton, chair of the Board of Education of Prince George's County. The program begins at 2 p.m. in the Community Center Gym.

Negro History Week was founded by Carter G. Woodson in 1926 to celebrate the birthdays of Frederick Douglass and Abraham Lincoln, both born in February. Woodson also wanted to dispel the notion that Americans of African descent had no history or culture and made no contributions economically, socially and culturally to the development and advancement of the United States. Woodson once wrote that, "Those who have no record of what their forebears have accomplished lose the inspiration which comes from the teaching of biography and history."

As founder of the Association for the Study of Negro Life and History, Woodson's life work was devoted to demonstrating evidence that Americans of African descent were essential to the financial, social and cultural fabric of the U.S. He also wanted black Americans to be proud of their African heritage and realize the positive impact they have had on American society. A few of those contributors include Garrett Morgan, who created the automated traffic light; Frederick McKinley Jones, who invented the portable air conditioner and later the refrigerated truck; and Dr. Gladys West, inventor of the GPS who was recently honored by the U.S. Air Force at the Pentagon. Thanks to the book and movie Hidden Figures, we are all aware of Katherine Johnson and the many black women employed by NASA who helped launch America's space program.

This year Greenbelt celebrates Black History Month on February 17 at 2 p.m. at the Community Center gym by honoring Woodson for his forward thinking and dedication to ensure that African American contributions and history continue to be acknowledged, studied and celebrated. The program is free and open to the public.

Shining a Light in the Closet

by Jim Link

“Oh, what a tangled web we weave, when first we practice to deceive.” (Sir Walter Scott, 1808.)

Describing the plot of Perfect Arrangement, the rich, clever, hilarious but searing play now at Greenbelt Arts Center, is easy. Set in 1950 in the Georgetown duplex of Bob and Millie Martindale, it depicts the social gymnastics and outright lying necessary for two gay couples, employees of the U.S. State Department, to maintain their marriages of convenience while maintaining their authentic love lives with their homosexual partners. An adjunct, so-to-speak, of Senator Joe McCarthy’s anti-communist Red Scare was the anti-gay Lavender Scare during which homosexual government employees were surveilled and fired for their “sexual deviancy.” Such “sickness” was a threat to national security and a blackmailable offense.

Bob and Millie are married to each other so that Bob can safely be with his partner Jim, who is married to Norma, so that she can safely be with her partner Millie. This cozy perfect arrangement begins to unravel, however, and the domestic light-heartedness dissolves. Fear replaces clever banter; the perfect arrangement goes hideously awry.

The entertaining hour-long first act skillfully keeps the audience unprepared for the explosiveness of the 40-minute second act. Hidden motives come to light, recriminations fly and the characters’ hitherto unsuspected moral complexity becomes apparent before the climatic ending.

Ronda Ansted as Millie is brilliant as an earthy lesbian posing as the uber-feminine, frilly, high-heeled, pearl-clutching, subservient wife to Bob. It’s a hoot to see her doff her hostessy gown and kick off her heels after her straight guests, Theodore and Kitty Sunderson, have left, to revel in her red pedal pushers and bare feet. Ansted has great comedic timing and is a master of the quick switch from her authentic, comfortable Norma-loving self to the inauthentic, devoted wife.

Jon Meeker as her hubby Bob is charged with the mission of rooting out homosexuals. Quite zealous at it, he is the “chief inquisitor” with more than a touch of self-loathing, who may be happier in his straight role than as Jim’s lover. Meeker is excellently conflicted.

Win Britt is quite solid as Jim, the wounded lover whose faith in Bob is shaken and who panics when his wife Norma threatens to leave him and explode the whole charade. Susan Harper as Norma is excellent as the aggrieved employee, accused of exculpating homosexuals by falsifying their files. She yearns to have a baby, but in 1950 what’s a lesbian to do?

Bob Singer and Janice Coffey are wonderful as Theodore and Kitty Sunderson. Theodore is Bob’s boss and is ominously determined to solve the mystery of the misplaced files, not realizing that Norma may be the culprit. Wife Kitty is hilarious as the clueless, shallow straight wife whose life is consumed with shopping, proper manners, recipes, pastry shops – anything to smother her aching loneliness.

Which brings us to the wondrous, troubling Barbara Grant, played by Joy Cecilly Gerst, as an unjustly accused employee who decides to fight her dismissal. No spoilers here, but because Barbara has compromising information from Millie’s distant past and is very aware of the gay quartet’s double life, she is the very dangerous fly in the ointment, the moral center of the play, a threat to business as usual and hope for the future.

Long-time collaborators, director Ann Lowe-Barrett and producer William Powell, have teamed up again. Powell credits Lowe-Barrett with choosing a magnificent play but also expertly shaping this show into a winner. Lowe-Barrett claims that gay-bashing is still current today. “Many people still face the dilemmas we see played out here,” she says. This production is both an education and a delight. See this winner on Fridays, February 8, 15 and 22 at 8 p.m., Saturdays, February 9, 16 and 23 at 8 p.m. and Sundays, February 10 and 17 at 2 p.m.

GAC Partners with CASA In A Perfect Arrangement

by Kara Bundy

The Greenbelt Arts Center (GAC) is partnering with Court Appointed Special Advocates (CASA)/Prince George’s County for their current production of Perfect Arrangement. The play addresses gay issues in the 1950s and a portion of the proceeds from the show will go toward addressing the needs of vulnerable youth in foster care, many of whom are LGBTQ.

CASA recruits citizens from the community and provides intensive training and supervision so that they can become advocates for abused and neglected youth in foster care. Empowered with a court order, volunteers not only provide information to the court to aid in making informed decisions that are in the best interest of the youth, but also become a positive, consistent person in the youth’s life.

CASA’s main goal through this partnership with GAC is to bring attention to the need for more volunteers to advocate on behalf of the 500 young people living in foster care in Prince George’s County. On Monday, March 11 at 6 p.m., an information session will be held at CASA’s offices in Riverdale for those interested in learning more about becoming a CASA volunteer. The next training will start in April. To RSVP for the information session or request more information, email recruitment@pgcasa.org or call 301-209-0491.

Perfect Arrangement runs weekends through Saturday, February 23. After the show on Sunday, February 17, there will be an opportunity to talk with the cast and John Stoltenberg a radical feminist activist, author and editor about the Lavender Scare, LGBTQ issues, acting, comedy and more. This will be facilitated by Dr. Adria Williams, a clinical psychologist with a practice in Greenbelt. For more information visit greenbeltartscenter.org.

December 2015, the project “serves to provide a clear path for transforming a too-wide street into one that better serves multiple modes of transportation, minimizes paved surfaces and optimizes stormwater management.”

The city doesn't have a timetable for the construction described in the designs, but it has a deadline to meet. When the Chesapeake Bay Trust awarded the grant in July 2017, it required Greenbelt to spend the money by June of this year.

“The step right now is to get the design work done,” Moran said in a phone call. He noted that identifying funds for construction would be a future step.

The city issued a request for proposals in October and received five, which, according to a memorandum from Community Planner Judith Howerton to City Manager Nicole Ard, was a good response rate. CPJ made the most affordable offer.

Howerton said the city's target date for the completion of the designs is May 24.

Loan

Columbia Bank offered Greenbelt just over $6 million to finance the construction of Greenbelt Station Parkway. The offer is for a 20-year term and includes a fixed 3.71 percent interest rate for 10 years.

Representatives from Greenbelt's bond counsel and financial adviser updated council on responses to a request for proposals (RFP) for the loan.

Jennifer Dierksen of Davenport and Company, the city's financial advisor, said, “Columbia so far has been very good to deal with and we hope to close very soon on this loan.”

John Stalfort of Miles and Stockbridge, the city's bond counsel, said he was expecting a fixed interest rate for seven years.

Columbia Bank was one of two banks to respond to the city's RFP.

Landscaping

The city introduced for first reading a resolution to pay P2 Maintenance Services $46,990 for lawn mowing and landscaping.

Councilmember Rodney Roberts said he would vote against the bill. “I think these jobs should be going to young people here in Greenbelt,” he said. “There's plenty of young people here who could use a job in the summertime.”

Seven companies responded to a January 18 request for proposals from the city. P2 Maintenance, of Laurel, submitted the lowest bid.

Centerway Businesses Closed By Sunday's Water Main Break

by Amy Hansen

Businesses in Roosevelt Center were shuttered for part of Sunday, February 3 when an eight-inch water main broke on Saturday night and required the services of Washington Suburban Sanitation Commission (WSSC) to fix it.

WSSC crew came out on Saturday at 7 p.m. to assess the damage. They could see that a pipe was letting water leak out over the sidewalk near Chef Lou's bakery and Cedars of Lebanon restaurant. Fortunately, the temperatures remained above freezing so the area did not become a skating rink. Nor was the water flooding the businesses.

On Sunday, the crew returned with the plans of the area showing where the pipes were set. At 11:10 a.m. they turned off the water to the businesses at Roosevelt Center as well as the city's Aquatic & Fitness Center. By 12:30 p.m. they had fixed the pipe's break and water was restored.

WSSC spokesperson Lyn Riggins said the cause of the break was probably both cold weather and age. The pipe, she said, was laid in 1937 so it wasn't surprising that it was having problems.

Greenbelters Melissa Thompson, Elisabeth Kevorkian and Lauren Cummings, part of the group made up of districts 22, 23 and 25, met with Delegate Tawanna Gaines and Senator Paul Pinsky as well as with staff members of Delegates Anne Healey and Alonzo Washington.

The day included speeches and training in the House of Delegates Office Building as well as a group photo in the building's rotunda and a rally and press conference. The day concluded with tired but inspired supporters sharing their experiences.

In addition, more than 500 cans of food were donated by students and staff at Greenbelt Elementary School through their student government sponsor and third-grade teacher Tamia Perry. About 200 more food items were collected at the Furlough Potluck the church hosted on January 27.

As part of this special event, donations – monetary and non-perishable food – are being accepted through February at the church office.

pre-registered brave the snow? As the crowds thinned, slowed by the weather, two Rivers of Life trustees, Rodney Harrison and Charles Grace, jumped into action. They went to the neighborhood clinic and told patients that there was free chicken and rice for families. They approached parents and guardians picking up students who were being released early from Springhill Lake Elementary School because of the snow. The Franklin Park leasing office offered to send out an email to alert residents to the grocery giveaway. Families picked up generous bags of food, enough for two to three meals.

Tinch, the supply pastor at Rivers of Life, was bundled up against the weather as he passed out meals to families and invited them to come and visit next Sunday. He and Freeman finished each other's sentences about the chance meeting which led to this moment. “We had attended a Sustainable Farming Conference at the University of Maryland and struck up a conversation with the two Eastern Shore farmers. They are as passionate about an equitable relationship between farmers and consumers as we are, and here we are,” they finished.

Tinch, new to Greenbelt, has a simple philosophy. “We want to learn and identify the needs of the community. We believe everyone can serve.” He pointed to one of the volunteers. “This is my Payne Seminary classmate and concert pianist, Karl Van Richards, who stopped by to visit before his performance tonight.” He laughed, “See, everyone can serve.”

Eleanor Roosevelt Wrote Advice Columns for 20 Years

by Nicole Hudgins

Snow and sleet didn't stop an enthusiastic audience from going to the Community Center the evening of January 17 to hear a fascinating lecture by historian Mary Jo Binker concerning life advice proffered by Eleanor Roosevelt. A consulting editor of the Eleanor Roosevelt Papers and adjunct professor at George Mason University, Binker also signed copies of her book about Roosevelt's popular advice columns. If You Ask Me: Essential Advice from Eleanor Roosevelt chronicles the First Lady's career as a columnist in the Ladies' Home Journal (1941-1949) and McCall's Magazine (1949-1962). Before, during and after World War II, Roosevelt addressed questions from men and women all over the country.

Binker was brought to Greenbelt by the Friends of the Greenbelt Museum (FOGM) to give one of an ongoing series of talks free to the public. Greenbelt Museum Director Megan Searing Young was on hand to welcome attendees from the University of Maryland, the Library of Congress and the community, who remember when Roosevelt was America's First Lady. Roosevelt's If You Ask Me column was "a window onto what people were concerned about" from the Depression to the Cold War, said Binker. From mothers worried about their sons' whereabouts during the war, to children anxious about a Russian attack on their homes, Roosevelt worked as a one-woman help-line during times of tension and anxiety. Americans wrote in with concerns about the economy, political divisions within families and women in the workplace. Binker suggested that her "warmth, humanity, and timeless relevance" are arguably a beacon for our own times.

Not unlike today's social influencers, Roosevelt enjoyed a flourishing post-White House career in the media, earning top salaries for her newspaper, radio and television shows. She even had to cope with hostile comments from those who criticized her children, her advocacy for working women and the Democratic Party.

Although published in women's magazines, many letter-writers were men. One man wrote to the columnist asking if he should help his wife wash the dishes. More relevant to today was a mother's angst over whether to let her son play football.

Binker told the audience that in addition to traveling around the country to learn about Americans' problems and concerns, Roosevelt "was a kind of unofficial ombudsman," funneling questions to an array of different government offices and experts. And, she was doing all that while working as an appointee to the United Nations, leading such projects as the drafting of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

founders of Beech Tree Puppets and a Greenbelt resident, students have learned about the history of shadow puppetry, rehearsed their parts and practiced projection, enunciation and pacing. “The students have much to juggle all at once,” explained Hass. “They need to focus on keeping their puppet flat on the screen, move it like their special character would move, and at the same time say their lines in an interesting and intelligible way. Often, they get excited, speaking so fast they run their lines together or they might pull their puppet away from the screen, which makes the character suddenly disappear. But practice makes perfect,” she said with a smile.

There are four fourth-grade classrooms at GES. With about 30 kids in each class, one of the challenges is coming up with a show in which everyone can meaningfully participate. “The Chinese folktale show has up to 15 roles, so the teachers create two casts for each classroom,” says Hass. “This works really well because the casts take turns learning from doing the part and then observing someone else do their part. I like to get feedback from the students about how the other cast can improve.”

Then each cast performs for one or two other classrooms in the lower grades. “This is my very favorite moment because suddenly the students rise to the occasion with the addition of an audience. Everything we practiced clicks and they experience the magic of making a story come to life.”

Greenbelt Association for the Visual Arts (GAVA), a non-profit who partners with the PTA of GES, won the Jim Cassel Award to fund this project. GAVA has a long history with GES. Barbara Simon, founder and director of GAVA, who died in June of 2016, had been a resident visual artist at the school for decades and brought many local artists into the school. GAVA continues to create art workshops with teaching artists, the school admin-

Artists Construct Meaning, Memory Using Family Photos

by Nicole DeWald

Who among us hasn't cringed upon seeing certain images of ourselves in family photos? Artist Robert Cantor has a solution for that. Ironically, the retired software developer chooses to forego the convenience of digital photo editing in favor of photorealistic oil painting. Cantor faithfully recreates the compositions of black and white family photos from the 1960s, with a twist. Using meticulous layers of paint and glaze that take months to apply, Cantor replaces images of himself – and his two brothers – with depictions of ceramic animal pencil sharpeners from his extensive personal collection. A cat with an accordion serenades a snowman. A blue pony with extravagant eyelashes looks back coyly over its shoulder in front of a giant pumpkin.

Cantor's paintings are featured in the current exhibition at the Community Center Art Gallery, Upside Down House: Paintings by Robert Cantor, Maura Doern Danko and Amanda Demos Larsen. A reception will be held on Friday, February 15 from 6:30 to 8 p.m.

Cantor's uncanny images reflect our contemporary understanding of memory as an active process of re-creation. He notes, "the presence of these toys . . . makes it impossible to ignore the artificial nature of these nostalgiating memories." The substitutions "bring memories to life in ways which sometimes seem more immediate and real than the original snapshots." Greenbelt CARES Clinical Supervisor Teresa Smithson notes that this imaginative engagement applies not only to our construction of specific memories, but also more broadly to our understanding of family itself. She notes, "one's notion of family is a unique and dynamic process – melding one's personal memories with the narratives of other members, and the larger culture."

Danko

For artist Maura Doern Danko, shared authorship is an explicit and multi-leveled art-making strategy. She creates impressionistic paintings based on childhood photos of herself and her sister. Rendered with soft, lush brushwork, her figures include iconic characters such as the girl scout, the ballerina, the first communion recipient and the child nearly immobilized in her snowsuit. In arrays of figurative, Masonite cut-outs, these forms co-exist with others that are more private in their specificity, more elusive in their ordinariness. Danko has reproduced many of the images as stuffed paper and cotton dolls, sending them out into the world to have new adventures entirely beyond the artist's control. She notes, "there is a fluidity of time that emerges." Friends, family members and strangers alike were asked to send the artist digital video clips which she then used to construct a short film; a digital QR code is provided in the gallery.

Additional works from Danko on display include elegant sketches of family members on small wooden blocks, and mail-art dioramas enabling family members to travel in well-appointed cardboard boxes. A sample painting is provided from the artist's Pink Gingham Project. Danko recreated images from family photos on pieces of pink gingham from her childhood curtains which were then inserted into the landscape. Digital video of these works was used to create another short film.

Larsen

Artist Amanda Demos Larsen paints from family photos that she creates expressly for reference. The exhibition includes four figurative works depicting the artist herself, her husband and children, and the children's cousins. Knowingly or otherwise, these actors are participating in Larsen's evocation of multiple narratives situated simultaneously in both the experiential and symbolic realms. Her stories are at once personal, spiritual and scriptural. In John, Amanda and Apple (He Did Eat), the artist holds a knife and hands a slice of fruit to her husband; her eyes are cast downward, his expression is ambiguous and the air is electric.

In Amanda, Toys and Shoes (Afraid to Look), the artist dons her sandals against the prominent "sacred ground" of a living room floor textured with the flotsam and jetsam of daily life. Smithson, of CARES, commends the artist for her exploration of the revelatory capacity of the mundane. "Families' small moments and routines . . . tell a lot about who they are and their relationship to each other." These details are so important, she notes, that they are explored as early as the intake interview in a family counseling context.

Larsen's featured works also include three new still lifes, which she considers a natural extension of her portraits. She notes that these works "revolve around the themes of childhood, birth and family. While they recall still lifes from art history, they juxtapose objects from my own child rearing and childhood with symbolic and traditional objects." In one composition, a tiny toy elephant – a matriarchal species – strides confidently forward between a golf ball and a bottle nipple, with a juggling ball bearing down on her from behind. If this elephant never forgets, perhaps it is because she is constantly rebuilding her memories out of the bottle caps, pennies, Cheerios and other matter that lie at hand.

"Upside Down House: Unconventional Family Portraiture" by Robert Cantor, Maura Doern Danko and Amanda Demos Larsen is on view through Friday, March 22. The art gallery is open daily when not reserved: Monday through Saturday, 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. and Sunday, 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. For additional information, call 301-397-2208. In case of inclement weather, call 301-474-0646 for schedule adjustments. Greenbelt Arts programs are supported in part by the Maryland State Arts Council.
