Greenbelt Day 2019

U.S. Naturalization Ceremony Celebrates 22 New Citizens

by Eugene Jesse Nash IV

Este artículo está disponible en español en nuestra página web www.greenbeltnewsreview.com.

Twenty-two immigrants from a dozen countries became citizens of the United States on Sunday during the 10th annual naturalization ceremony hosted by U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services and the Greenbelt City Council in the gymnasium of the Community Center.

Although longtime residents would find this number small compared to previous years, it was a special day for the individuals taking the oath of allegiance in front of their families.

Mayor Emmett Jordan welcomed the new citizens into our diverse, historic town, and he congratulated them on their accomplishment. Jordan then pointed to the two cameramen in the room to announce that the ceremony was being recorded,

Greenbelt Station Dedication Of Central Park, Now in Use

by Gary Childs

Greenbelt Station residents gather to watch the official ribbon-cutting ceremony that declared the park open for use.

Residents of Greenbelt Station can now make use of and enjoy Central Park without travelling all the way to New York City; they have a Central Park of their own right in the middle of their neighborhood. On Saturday, June 1, as part of the Greenbelt Day Weekend festivities, residents of Greenbelt Station gathered at the new, large green space to officially dedicate the park for use by the community. The event was celebrated with a ribbon cutting by councilmembers, the unveiling of a plaque marking the day, and a few remarks given by Mayor Emmett Jordan.

In his remarks, Jordan said that of all the events of Greenbelt Day Weekend 2019, this park dedication is the most important. He said that creating and maintaining green spaces as well as open spaces is a priority for Greenbelt. He added that the city is committed to continuing its support for activities in the park. Jordan also acknowledged and thanked the many people and groups involved in making Greenbelt Station Central Park a reality. He also thanked the community members in attendance and said, “It takes people like you to make it a vibrant com-

Kristin Weaver, chair of the Greenbelt Station Recreation Committee, commented that she wasn’t sure people knew that the park was now available to be used and she hoped that this event would help get the word out. Weaver listed several ideas for activities in the park such as showing movies in the amphitheater at the western end of the space, hosting community parties such as the Greenbelt Station homeowners association summer party scheduled for mid-June, and a myriad of daily informal uses from playing sports to having picnics, to simply sitting and sunning on the green. Other ideas were suggested throughout the course of the dedication such as staging concerts and plays and organizing festivals. Councilmember Judith Davis suggested to Weaver that the community put up a holiday tree and schedule a lighting that could be included as a part of Greenbelt’s Festival of Lights event in December. Weaver said she was “excited to have this space and is looking forward to working with the city” on planning and support of events.

The park was formally

Two Alternative Transportation Modes Take Heat from Council

by Cathie Meetre

On Tuesday, May 28, Economic Development Coordinator Charisse Liggins described the status of the Hyperloop system at the regular meeting of the Greenbelt City Council. The proposed system comprises vehicles running underground from Washington to Baltimore. The project will be carried out by Boring Company, a tunneling company founded by Elon Musk. Boring has not held any public briefings and has relied instead on its website to share information.

City Planning Coordinator Terri Hruby said that a preliminary environmental assessment is currently underway. The Federal Highway Administration will then determine whether the project has enough environmental impact to warrant a full environmental impact analysis. Even if a full analysis is not required, Hruby noted that the project must still be reviewed by the Army Corps of Engineers because its tunnels will pass under navigable waterways.

Hruby noted that this project has the support of the governor. Council asked if the project is contingent on transfer of the Baltimore-Washington Parkway from the federal government to the state. Hruby said she did not think this had been considered.

Liggins described what the project involves and how it will impact Greenbelt. The entire system would be underground with twin tunnels under the Baltimore-

Council Discusses Weapon Disposal, OGT Lease and More

by Kathleen Gallagher

As previously reported, during the first half of its four-hour meeting on May 13, the Greenbelt City Council dealt with proclamations and presentations, including an update from the city’s state delegation on the recently completed and exceptionally busy General Assembly session. The second half, the business portion of the meeting, contained no legislation but continued with the following agenda items:

Disposal of Weapons

Subsequent to earlier discussions about the proper disposal of the Police Department’s firearms when they are deemed no longer serviceable, a draft Standard

Operating Procedure (SOP) for inclusion in the department’s General Orders was presented for council review. It states that the disposition must be approved by the city manager and that decommissioned firearms will be destroyed and reported to the Maryland State Police Firearms Unit.

Councilmember Rodney Robert said he would not vote to support having the disposition of firearms be limited to the authority of the police General Orders rather than the city council, primarily because the General Orders SOP could change if there was a new chief.

Following a multitude of suggestions for how to resolve the matter, it was agreed to vote on a motion Councilmember Colin Byrd had made to 1) approve the language in the General Order as written, and 2) direct staff to

Wow! An Even Bigger And Better Pet Expo!

Big kudos to our Animal Shelter staff, especially Howard Stanback, for organizing another fabulous Pet Expo! I always enjoy attending and was once again surprised and impressed by how much bigger and better it was than in years past. It seems every year the Expo exponentially improves, which just does not seem possible.

The Pet Expo is such a creative event that fosters responsible pet ownership not just for the whole family but for the whole community. The vendors ran the gamut of services, businesses and organizations, and those in attendance reflect the strong positive relationships our Animal Shelter staff have within our community and beyond. Mother Nature provided a glorious day for the event that offered demonstrations, activities, services, food, lots of helpful information and fun.

I am so proud of the thoughtful detailed care that went into planning the event as well as the day-to-day relationships that our Animal Shelter staff have with so many. I am also proud of our city for having an Animal Shelter and for having such committed dedicated capable staff.

Thank you, Howard Stanback, Lauren Crossed and Nelly Ortiz! And thanks to WAGS (Well Wishers for the Animals of Greenbelt Shelter) for their continued ongoing support of our Shelter.

Maglev Concerns

I have been thinking about how the maglev will be able to operate without being subsidized by our state and federal government. We know that the high-speed commuter train in Japan is supported by the government. I understand that when Germany started to build one it was abandoned because the costs to the government were excessive.

According to David Henley, of Baltimore-Washington Rapid Rail Project, the maglev will be self-supporting.

Each train will have four or five cars with a capacity of 500 passengers. The maglev will run between McPherson Square in D.C. to a stop at BWI and then to Baltimore (three stops). The cost will be about $40 each way. By the time it is built minimum wage may be $15 per hour so that will be three hours pay each way. With an eight-hour work day that leaves two hours income if the passenger does not pay for transportation or parking to embark on the maglev. That amounts to zero income for that day. Therefore I think that this maglev is not for the average commuter.

Financially this does not seem like a good investment for the residents of Maryland. Wouldn't money be better spent on upgrading the Amtrak and Metro systems already in place or even the monorail as is being considered in Montgomery County to alleviate congestion in the Washington-Baltimore area?

Smartphone Frustrations

I sat with Councilmember Leta Mach last Saturday as we listened to various speakers inform the audience about various therapies at the Not Just For Seniors forum as part of our Greenbelt Day Weekend. After this session I asked Leta when Greenbelt was going to get more cellphone towers because too many of us live in dead zones, no zones or limited service areas. Getting more towers is an ongoing discussion. No one wants towers near schools, but as the technology expands we need infrastructure to meet the demand.

I shared with Leta my tale of woe. As a Verizon iPhone user I was sick and tired of not being able to use my 4-gigabyte phone. At home I am lucky to get 2 gigabytes and the number of dropped calls and no calls is staggering. I called Verizon nine months ago and told them that their cellphone service is extremely poor in Greenbelt. I also asked for a "ticket" to be started for the second time, so an investigation could be conducted. Another call was made by me two weeks ago. I asked the associate to review my record of complaints, which date back three years, however, I only asked for a ticket once. Needless to say, I should have been filing tickets for days.

This time, however, many other Verizon-user residents of Greenbelt had also filed complaints. I was told that I was entitled to receive a service extender which enables my phone to actually access 4 gigabytes. Now these extenders can cost up to $250 but because of the wifi service challenges that exist in our area, I received a free one.

Those of you with Verizon smart phones who have experienced similar problems, please call and request a ticket and an internal service extender. You are paying for services that are not being received. If you have a different carrier, call them too, if you have experienced similar challenges.

Verizon is moving to 5 gigabytes, which already is in service in Europe and many other countries. So this situation needs a resolution quickly. Verizon will be doing upgrades, so I hope that our city council will work with these wifi companies to determine the most propitious sites for new towers. In the meantime folks, get your internal service extender.

Walking on Water

Walking on Water provides an intimate look into the creation of The Floating Piers, a massive environmental art piece by modern artist Christo. Pooling together 700 hours of raw documentary footage, the filmmaker crawls into the mind of the genius and madman process of managing a 600-man crew, laying what looks on the surface to be a golden carpet across Lake Iseo in Lombardy to give the feeling of walking on water.

As Christo's first piece after the death of his faithful assistant and wife, Jeanne-Claude, he wrestles in his own mind over trivial matters and yells at workers in his own personal, endless, micro-managing pursuit of perfection. The documentary chooses to detail not the hard, technical facts and components of making a structure that floats, but the fascinating and sometimes mind-boggling journey of bringing a vision to fruition.

James Bates

James Bates

James Edward Bates, 91, of Woodland Way, died at Hillhaven Nursing and Rehabilitation Center in Adelphi on June 3, 2019.

Born to Helen Dewey Sedlack and James Bert Bates in Aberdeen, Wash., Mr. Bates was valedictorian of his class at Weatherwax High School in 1946. In his youth he was an accomplished violinist and flautist and enjoyed music all his life.

Mr. Bates joined the U.S. Navy after graduation hoping to pursue a career in music, but ended up stationed in Washington, D.C., where he met his future wife, Frances Anne Woodring. After he got out of the Navy, they married in June 1949 in Seattle, Wash., and Mr. Bates worked on his bachelor's degree in statistics with a minor in Russian at the University of Washington. They returned to the Washington, D.C., area after he finished his degree in 1952. An accomplished mathematician and cryptanalyst, Mr. Bates worked for the National Security Agency, initially at Arlington Hall and then later at Ft. Meade. He received many awards and honors during his career including the Exceptional Civilian Service Award. He retired in April of 1985.

The Bates family first lived in Falls Church, Va., and then moved to Greenbelt in 1953. Both Mr. and Mrs. Bates were active members of St. Hugh's Church where he served for years as an usher. They also worked together at the National Archives, using their extensive genealogical knowledge and research expertise to help others. The Bateses were a founding family of the Woodland Hills community and had account number one at Twin Pines Savings and Loan.

After Mrs. Bates died in 2004, Mr. Bates became active in Project Vote Smart, acting as an ambassador and giving presentations to groups around the area about the organization's work in voter education.

Mr. Bates always had a thirst for knowledge and a quest for self-improvement. Over the years he embraced playing bridge, sailing, ham radio operation, genealogy, learning new languages, computer programming, banjo playing, and crossword puzzles among other interests.

Mr. Bates is survived by seven children: Judith Bates (Steve Weinhold) of Kingsport, Tenn.; David Bates (Elsa) of Mandeville, La.; Richard Bates (Dorrie) of Greenbelt; Robert Bates (Peggy Oriani) of Centreville, Va.; Margaret Bates of Greenbelt; Christopher Bates (Debi) Spring, Texas; and Kathleen Wheeler (Jeff) of Sugarland, Texas. A son, Michael Bates (Linda) of Newnan, Ga., died in 2018. The large extended family includes his 17 grandchildren: Katie Hill (Brian), Anna Weinhold (Bekim Haliti), David Weinhold (Stephanie), Melissa Cruz (Jeffrey), Sarah Ueckermann (Matt), Abby Conner (Paul), Alex Bates (Lauren), Malia Bates, Jimmy Bates (Olivia), Andy Bates, Brittany Wheeler, Hannah Wheeler, Charity Hibberd (Danny), Tim Bates (Kacy), Tony Bates, Amanda Manning (Eric) and Emmy Moffett (Geoff), and 14 great grandchildren (with two on the way). Mr. Bates was incredibly proud of his children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren and enjoyed them whenever he could.

The family will be welcoming friends and neighbors at Borgwardt Funeral Home (4400 Powder Mill Rd., Beltsville) from 2 to 6 p.m. on Sunday, June 9.

There will be a funeral mass at St. Hugh's Church in Greenbelt on Monday, June 10 at 10 a.m. In lieu of flowers, those who wish may make a contribution to S.O.M.E (some.org) or Project Vote Smart (votesmart.org), two organizations that were important to Mr. Bates.

Community Church Saves Water, Dedicates Raingarden

by Jane Young

Greenbelt Community Church, United Church of Christ, dedicated its new raingarden on May 19. The church service honored creation and encouraged responsible stewardship of the earth with prayers, music and sermon. As the congregation sang the last hymn, they walked out to the raingarden for an informal tour and discussion.

Guests from the wider community joined the congregation, among them Jodi Rose from Interfaith Partners for the Chesapeake, who inspired and informed with a talk about caring for creation; Mayor Emmett Jordan, who spoke briefly about the importance of raingardens and Greenbelt's leadership in this effort; Councilmember Leta Mach; and Iberia Miles from Prince George's County Alternative Compliance Program.

The raingarden was funded and built through the Prince George's County Alternative Compliance Program.

The church had 100 percent of its Clean Water Act fee reduced through the easily achievable measures of the raingarden. The raingarden is a stormwater management measure that helps control rainwater runoff and prevent pollution.

CEREMONY

After the oath of allegiance, which naturalized citizens must say as a final step before becoming U.S. citizens, each of the immigrants from countries as close as Guatemala to as far as China accepted their certificate of citizenship and shook hands with Jordan and the councilmembers present before returning to their seats and embracing husbands, children, siblings or parents.

Following the ceremony, members of the Greenbelt community introduced themselves to some of the new citizens to share stories.

Councilmember Edward Putens, who has Polish roots, found a connection with German immigrant Melani over both their careers with the Food and Drug Administration and the proximity between their European home countries.

Councilmember Silke Pope, who emigrated to the U.S. from Germany in 1998, also attended the ceremony.

"I think this is one of the best things we do all year; it makes me want to cry," said Councilmember Leta Mach.

Pop-Up Theater Hosts Small Screen Films Just Next Door

by Sandy Rodgers

Pop-up events and stores are trendy these days, and soon theatergoers will get a chance to experience one in Greenbelt at the Pop-up at the Old Greenbelt Theatre at 125 Centerway. The small venue will allow the theater to continue showing its innovative film programs over the next four months as the main auditorium is dark for replacement of the aging HVAC system, new seats and other renovations.

Ongoing work at 129 Centerway will only affect the theater's auditorium. The lobby and concession stand will remain open for patrons to buy tickets and order refreshments to carry next door. With the move from a 363-seat auditorium to a 40-seat microcinema, the theater anticipates selling out shows and recommends pre-purchasing tickets. As an extra perk, theater members can buy tickets two days before the general public.

The Pop-up will continue offering visual/hearing assistance and wheelchair accessibility. Check at the concession stand for more information.

The most popular programming, Storytimes on Screen, School's Out, Monday Matinee, will be held in the Community Center ground floor East Suite.

Questions Remain, as Does Negative Feeling on Maglev

by Eugene Jesse Nash IV

If anything is remembered about the latest SCMaglev Q&A session on Wednesday, May 29, it should be the question by Greenbelt's own: Mayor Pro Tem Judith Davis.

Davis asked how the SCMaglev plans to compete with the Hyperloop Light, another advanced-underground-transit model, in collaborating with Maryland and D.C. bus, rail and air travel providers when the Hyperloop is currently set to finish construction first?

"If they get their foot in the door sooner, why go maglev?" Davis challenged.

David Henley of Baltimore Washington Rapid Rail (BWRR) quickly dodged by firing back the joke, "I'm going to bet you a dollar that we beat them," which was met with a laugh.

He then responded that the hyperloop technology is decades away from completion and that he is confident that there is no competition because he "hasn't seen evidence of their space-aged ability to move dirt around faster than anyone else."

The SCMaglev is a proposed train that would take commuters from Washington to Baltimore in 15 minutes through technology that would allow the train to levitate over its tracks by magnets. BWRR is the company trying to bring the concept into a reality. The path of the train would go underneath Greenbelt East.

While the train already has support from Governor Larry Hogan, it is currently in the middle of a state evaluation for its environmental impact before construction can begin. BWRR does not need the approval of the general public, but representatives of the company have reached out to inform the public and take feedback in various outlets over the past five years since the project was first drawn up.

Much of the public sentiment at these outreaches has been negative toward the project with various fears of how the communities around the proposed track would be harmed if it were to be built.

That was certainly the case at the maglev discussion meeting held in Riverdale and sponsored by State Delegate Alonzo Washington.

Henley's hour and a half long presentation and Q&A about the project was heard by over 75 people with residents sliding into the already full room up to 30 minutes after the talk started. Councilmember Colin Byrd also came and stood quietly in the back.

Nearly every single skeptical question and negative comment brought up by residents was met with an overpowering ovation, causing the meeting to go on 30 minutes over schedule.

Still, all listened to the few who stood in support of the maglev train. One proponent was Greenbelt resident Joyce Wineland who spoke of a time when she was trapped in Newark Liberty International Airport for eight hours after her connecting flight to Washington got delayed numerous times. Had there been a maglev, Wineland said, she could have been home considerably faster, in a more comfortable and environmentally safe manner.

State Delegate Alonzo Washington answers questions.

Moments later, New Carrollton resident Helen Williams expressed an emotional sentiment that resonated more audibly in the audience that night.

"I'm wondering what the incentive, the human incentive that some see it necessary that this has to be pushed through like this. I see the quality of life plummeting because of the loss of trees ... who needs to get anywhere in 15 minutes?" Williams posed.

The sound of clapping hands temporarily drowned out the speaker's attempt at a response.

Then calling the train "God's work" Henley said that the mission of the project is not solely quick travel, but also efficient travel from Washington to Boston, which he argues would bring the U.S. up to speed with the technology of fast trains in other countries.

Throughout the night, Henley addressed multiple concerns that have been repeatedly brought up by those concerned about the project.

The tunnel boring sounds and vibrations at an average depth of 130 feet underground will not be noticeable, he said. If they do get too loud, sensors will notify the builders and shut off the machine. The train itself should never sound like anything more than a "Whoooooosh" as it exits the tunnel in a location proposed to be north of Eleanor Roosevelt High School.

Heads shook in disbelief along with hushed murmurs when Henley continued that the air quality of the county will be better when commuters opt for the fast train over driving.

For those concerned about the 200 trucks hauling dirt away from the tunnel each day when the tunneling starts, Henley said "construction projects are not good neighbors," and that while they would be a "temporary nuisance," they would eventually leave.

Henley said he has "no way to project" what the train might do to property values in Greenbelt and surrounding communities. But, he expects that the train will bring 3,000 jobs to the state.

Washington said that he was happy that the event provided more information about the project, but saddened that it also unearthed a lack of trust in the Maryland government from the state's own citizens.

"These folks don't feel like they can benefit from this, and I agree with them," Washington said.

Washington Parkway. Boring maintains that the project will have very little environmental impact. It says that its structures are low profile and wouldn't interfere with anything around them. The company also says that the vehicles used in the loop are battery-powered modules that produce zero emissions. Councilmember Rodney Roberts pointed out that no transportation alternative produces zero emissions. Power must be generated to charge the batteries and used to construct the vehicles. Roberts said that claiming a zero emissions system was simply deluding the public.

Liggins played a video clip from Boring's website. The clip showed what looked like a regular car being lowered on an elevator into the ground. It then shot off through a tube perhaps 12 feet in diameter and was lifted out of the tunnel on an elevator to the surface at the other end. Councilmembers wondered about the slowness of loading and unloading cars one at a time causing underground traffic jams.

The system has not yet been fully tested, according to Liggins. She noted that development was moving faster than the website conveyed. Information available to the public on the website is always a step behind the actual state of the project.

The company is using a test track about a mile long that runs under the Las Vegas Convention Center. It isn't clear how long testing will last because the Hyperloop project is not yet classified as either a rail or road project, which affects federal agency jurisdiction.

Launch Site

Greenway Center Drive in Greenbelt is a projected boring machine launch site. A shaft would be made in the ground and boring machines lowered into it. This also makes it an egress point for waste produced by the machines. It will result in a constant stream of dump trucks over the period of construction.

Councilmembers expressed concern that this heavily loaded traffic would tear up the roads and cause a noise problem for residents. Once the project is up and running, the launch sites become maintenance facilities and access points.

Staying in the Loop

Musk has apparently barred his team from meeting with the public. Council expressed concern at what appears to be the company's unwillingness to deal with the concerns of residents affected by the project.

Councilmember Judith Davis suggested that Musk is trying to get this project done before maglev. She went on, "[Musk] is having a fun time with his money and he's getting the camel's nose under the tent for the full Hyperloop later ... [Moving] a thousand people a day isn't going to make a dent in transportation."

Roberts stated categorically that he "wanted them to come out and tell us and give us the details." Although private money is funding the project, Roberts opined that if Boring wants to use public resources (such as space under the parkway) then the public deserves to be involved.

Councilmember Edward Putens felt that council must do the right thing and have a public hearing. He wondered, therefore, what exactly council expected to accomplish during the current meeting.

Hruby explained that the purpose of the meeting was to explore where the city stood on the issues. She noted that although the project was privately funded, significant time and effort was being expended by Greenbelt in considering the Hyperloop. It was not true, therefore, that there was no cost to the public.

Davis made a motion that the city declares itself a party of record and informs the Boring company of the city's concerns.

Hruby will draft a communication to Boring for the Consent Agenda on June 3.

State Board of Public Works

In a related matter of transportation infrastructure, Mayor Emmett Jordan suggested sending a letter to Peter Franchot, Maryland State Comptroller, regarding potential funding of the state portion of the maglev development. Council is concerned that the board may approve the expenditure even though the evaluation is not complete.

Franchot is one of three members of the State Board of Public Works. The other members are the governor and treasurer of the state. This board is responsible for the expenditure of all capital appropriations and the superintendence of nearly all state public works projects.

Roberts questioned whether it would be illegal for the board to make such a resolution in advance of the completion of the process. Council requested that Hruby draft a suitable note for this topic to be discussed further at the next regular council meeting.

Relics Perform at GCC

On Saturday, June 8, Greenbelt Community Church United Church of Christ will host a Relics concert and dance. The event, set for 7 p.m., will take place in the church social hall. Refreshments will be sold. The freewill donation will go to the Prince George's Special Olympics.

A 16-year-old and two 17-year-old nonresident youths were petitioned for fourth degree burglary and trespass by officers who responded to a report that three people jumped a fence onto the property of a closed swimming pool facility. Parents were notified and action by the Juvenile Justice System is pending.

The man was transported to the Department of Corrections for a hearing before a district court commissioner.

A rear passenger window was broken out and a laptop computer removed in the 6600 block Lake Park Drive.

Windows were broken out in two vehicles in the 6800 block Green Crescent Court and the 7200 block Hanover Drive, in addition to a door handle being vandalized in the latter.

transferred by the developer to the city in December 2018, in time for the Greenbelt Station community Christmas party. During the council meeting where it was discussed, councilmembers urged community leaders and HOA representatives to work with the Greenbelt Recreation to collaborate on the ways in which the city could provide resources and support for future Greenbelt Station events held in the new park.

Greenbelt Recreation staff served lemonade and cookies after the formal part of the program.

draft a council resolution that would reflect the statement of the General Orders SOP as council policy. That passed as two motions, both of which were seconded by Councilmember Leta Mach and adopted unanimously.

Theater Lease Agreement

Council voted unanimously to approve a lease agreement with the Old Greenbelt Theatre to cover use of city facilities over the four-month period the theater building will be closed for renovation. Although the lease agreement was not provided, a summary indicated that it would cover, at various times, use of the gym and the space formerly occupied by the Adult Day Care Center at the Community Center.

GHI Letter to WSSC

An item was added to the agenda that reflected a request made to the mayor by Steve Skolnik, president of Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI), that the city take further action to reopen discussions with the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission (WSSC). GHI and the city have had a lengthy standoff with WSSC regarding its attempts to unilaterally revise a longstanding agreement of the three parties that defined maintenance responsibility for certain pipes running throughout GHI.

Initially, no action was to be taken on this item, since it was not clear precisely what was wanted by GHI. In an effort to move the matter forward, however, Councilmember Judith Davis made a motion that a joint letter be sent to WSSC from the city and GHI requesting another meeting, with an understanding that both GHI and the city would have legal representation present. It was also understood that further action was not precluded if WSSC was not responsive and that this plan could be revised if GHI was not amenable. The motion carried 6 to 0, with Byrd abstaining so as not to require his colleagues to fill him in on decades of background on this subject, given the lateness of the hour.

Three items were added to the agenda by Byrd, of which one received favorable action.

AARP Designation

Byrd made a motion, seconded by Roberts, that the city seek an AARP Age-Friendly Community Designation. Davis said Community Resource Officer Christal Batey had supplied a detailed memo to council recommending against pursuing the designation since it would not only be costly to achieve and maintain but would involve significant staff time. Davis said Greenbelt is known to be age-friendly, and the designation would not add to that. She and Mach agreed they would not support the motion. Councilmember Silke Pope agreed but asked that the reasons be explained publicly.

Resident Betty Timer spoke to say it is not evident to a lot of people that the council is engaged in planning for the future of its older residents. A benefit of the AARP designation, she said, is that it requires attention to be paid to such priorities. Councilmember Edward Putens suggested referring the question to the Se-

June 8 Event on Gun Violence Awareness

National Gun Violence Awareness Day is Friday, June 7, and Wear Orange Weekend will be held June 7 to 9, to raise awareness about gun violence. Prince George's County Moms Demand Action for Gun Sense in America will host a free screening of the movie Newtown on Saturday, June 8 at 10 a.m. at the Old Greenbelt Theatre. The Peabody award-winning movie documents three years after the horrific mass shooting in Newtown, Conn., that took the lives of 20 elementary school children and six educators. It shows how the small town became a traumatized community fractured by grief and driven toward a sense of purpose. Seating is limited, RSVP to kflamm47@gmail.com or 530-903-6685. Don't forget to wear orange.

nior Citizens Advisory Committee (SCAC). City Manager Nicole Ard intervened to say that staff had thought the SCAC had already seen the information and would now send it on to them.

National Film Registry

At an earlier meeting of the city council, resident James Thompson had asked councilmembers to attend a viewing of "You Nazy Spy" he was sponsoring at the Old Greenbelt Theatre. He had requested that council support nomination of the film to the National Film Registry for preservation. Byrd wanted council to agree to send a letter making this request, but other councilmembers wished the matter to be postponed until after the viewing.

Co-op Rays on the Roof

Byrd had also added this item to the agenda, asking that council adopt a motion to commit $1,000 for two solar panels for the Greenbelt Co-op Supermarket's fundraising campaign. The motion was made by Mach and carried unanimously.

Babe Ruth Baseball: Greenbelt Squad Steals One from Bowie

by Ian Gleason

The choices a manager makes when putting together a lineup card for a baseball game can seem insignificant at the time yet they always seem to have a way of coming up at the most pivotal points of a game.

The Greenbelt Senior Babe Ruth team started their season with a home contest against the Bowie Blacksox this past Friday, May 31. Eric Weaver started on the mound for Greenbelt and spread four runs out over the course of a night's work. Solid defense and a heads-up play by Hector DeLaRosa at third base kept the game within reach. Greenbelt bats remained mostly silent throughout the evening. Heading into the final inning Bowie led 4-0. After loading the bases, left fielder Solomon Douglass lined a first pitch fastball off Cejay Hopkins up the middle scoring two. Two at bats later, Evan Wasniewski battled into a full count and walked on a pitch just off the plate bringing Greenbelt within one of Bowie.

This set the scene for the dramatic finish. The lineup choices made prior to the game provided Greenbelt an opportunity with two of their fastest players on base: Matthew Baravechia on second and the speedy Douglass on third. After the first few pitches of the next at bat, Douglass took off for home after Bowie's catcher nonchalantly relayed the ball back to Hopkins on the mound. Douglass slid in just before the tag. Amid the excitement on Greenbelt's end and the frustration of the game being tied on Bowie's end, Baravechia rounded third base and headed for home as the catcher again relayed the ball back to the mound. Two runs scored without putting the ball in play and a green wave poured out of the home dugout—an exciting start to a promising season.

Greenbelt Day 2019

Pet Owners, Vendors Attend June 1 Pet Expo Block Party

by Fatemeh Paryavi

Vendors and pet owners alike came out to the Greenbelt Dog Park to kick off another Pet Expo Block Party hosted by Greenbelt Animal Control and sponsored by the city, and the nonprofit group Well-Wishers for the Animals of Greenbelt Shelter (WAGS), on Saturday, June 1.

The event attracted nearly 200 pet owners and pets who ventured to the park in order to meet new people in the community, to buy merchandise, to learn more on properly taking care of their pets and to vaccinate pets.

Howard Stanback, an animal control officer at the Greenbelt Animal Shelter, said that it has been about eight or nine years since the expo first started. He continued that the expo started as a means to educate people on different pet-care techniques, connecting the dog-owner community with one another and promoting small pet care businesses.

The expo included different vendors and educational demos including a mobile adoption truck and a K-9 demo by the Hyattsville Police Department. The event also hosted a stand which sold vaccines for a discounted price of $10. Stanback mentioned that most rabies vaccines cost around $30.

Fatima Herrera, owner of a 2-year-old husky, said that she came to the event to meet new people and get her dog vaccinated for the year.

Kimberly Young, a manager at the All Dogs Club daycare facility and a vendor at the event, said this was her first time at the event. It was nice to see such a large community of dog-owners and to connect with other businesses and pet owners, she said. "Dogs are an increasing part of everyday family life and they're extremely important to a lot of people, so providing the best care and the best quality services for them is very important. I'm hoping we can help a lot of people in this area who have pets," said Young. "Making more dogs happy, that is our goal. You know, for the pets and dogs alike," she added. She noted that their facility helps educate owners on proper exercises for their dogs, diets and socializing for pets.

Another vendor, Bryan Sirotkin, agreed with Young saying that he liked the event and socializing with the pet-owner community. He continued, saying that "I like meeting people." Sirotkin has his own photography company with a focus on photographing different animals.

Juanice Johnson went to the expo with her dog, Angel, hoping to "have a good time while we're out here." She continued that she had decided to attend the event for educational purposes and that she wanted to "learn different things for my dog."

Johnson said that she was excited for the vendor giveaways and prizes and that she was looking forward to getting something for Angel while they were at the event and perhaps to go to the event next year as well.

Raiders End Baseball Season

by Patrick Gleason

While the Eleanor Roosevelt Raiders baseball season ended with a 11-1 defeat at the hands of the Sherwood Warriors, the squad has much to be proud of and much to look forward to. Led by head coach Andrew Capece, the Raiders earned the regional championship on May 17 with an 11-2 victory over the Parkdale Panthers. With a strong pitching performance from Brian Bailey, Jr. the Raiders coasted to the win; however, their previous victory, a 4-2 triumph, over the Flowers Jaguars proved much more difficult.

With ace Todd Murphy on the mound, the Raiders looked to avenge their playoff loss last year, again facing Jaguar pitcher Tremayne Cobb, Jr. Roosevelt struck first when junior Christopher Jones and senior Derek Ohringer crossed home on a passed ball and a throwing error. Then junior DJ Pigrom, unleashed a triple—a drive which reached the right field fence—and ended up scoring after another Flowers' miscue. Pigrom is joined by a nine-member junior class, including centerfielder Chase van der Have and third baseman Cejay Hopkins, who supplied the Raiders with a double in the state semi-final; the juniors along with rising players from an undefeated junior varsity team should help the Raiders continue their success. Even with the graduation of Ohringer and fellow seniors Solomon Douglas, Josiah Parker, and Diego Araiza, the Raiders will be primed for another deep playoff run in 2020.
