Your New Year's Resolution Can Support the News Review

by Cathie Meetre

Many organizations send out last-ditch pleas for money at the end of the year. But this newspaper doesn't bludgeon readers for their hard-earned cash – instead it asks for their time. We want your help, your expertise and your commitment. (Though we'll take your money too, if you insist.)

Key Needs

We had several retirements in 2021, perhaps accelerated by Covid but also in the natural course of things. We were particularly hard hit on our advertising desk where we interact with advertisers in pricing, recording and receiving ads and payments. Our accounting team, the other essential key to our financial health, is also shorthanded. We need an accountant to assist in preparing financial statements and book-keeping help for week-to-week recordkeeping. We need people with some comfort and familiarity with computers, particularly with spreadsheets or with QuickBooks, our accounting system.

Commitment

If you want to do a power of good for this community with a weekly commitment of time between two and six hours, we'd love to hear from you. There is a small dividend payment available to members for each shift they work (we are a worker cooperative) though some members decline to take it. A shift is approximately two to three hours with some members working one, some several, as they choose.

The newspaper is currently working in person in its office in the Community Center, with limits on the number of staff in the room; masks are required and there is no access to the public. The ad desk has specific office hours to take care of the phones but there is some flexibility in when and where other aspects of the tasks may be tackled. Some roles can be done all or partially from home.

Accolades Follow Decades Of Service as Sterling Retires

by Matthew Arbach

Director of Public Works Jim Sterling has retired after 37-and-a-half years as an essential part of the City of Greenbelt. During that time, he has played many roles and applied his expertise in myriad ways especially in the areas of construction, planning and code enforcement. Sterling characterized his career as "a good ride" and was grateful for the "good opportunities" that came his way and the many relationships he developed through his efforts.

Sterling began his career in 1982 as a summer help worker earning $3.37 per hour. In 1984, he returned full-time as a street crew and maintenance worker for the Public Works Department. City Manager Jim Giese offered Sterling a job in administration in 1990 with the position of construction inspector, the city's first, and a duty until 2011. In 2011, he returned to Public Works as assistant director, where in 2014, he became acting director and then director to the present day.

Some of the biggest projects he was part of were the making of Schrom Hills Park, the construction of the fitness wing at the Aquatic & Fitness Center, the skatepark, two renovations of the Old Greenbelt Theatre and his first project, the Centerway reconstruction. Along the way, there was a long list of smaller projects, most of which involved the city's right of way, including road and storm drain maintenance.

Growing Capabilities

The city provided constant educational opportunities to Sterling, helping him keep abreast of the ongoing changes in code inspection through licensing and certifications, many acquired at

Sterling retained to 2021. In 1993, Sterling joined the Planning and Community Development Department, first as a supervisory inspector and then as the assistant community development director

At the 2021 Labor Day Festival, Shaymar Higgs was awarded the distinction of Outstanding Citizen. Younger than most of those who receive this award, Higgs burst onto the Greenbelt arts scene a few years ago by opening a revolutionary art center within Beltway Plaza called THE SPACE. Higgs, who has exhibited his own art at the New Deal Café and the Whitman Walker Clinic in downtown D.C., created THE SPACE to provide opportunities for local people to participate in art endeavors for free. THE SPACE also now partners with the Prince George's County Memorial Library System to provide books and other resources for young bilingual readers, as well as graphic novels and other

Covid-19 Omicron Rampages Through the County and State

by Cathie Meetre

Data for the 20770 zip code specifically are still not yet available due to the Maryland state data security breach that affected Covid data sets. Some numbers have emerged at the county level to give a partial indication of what may be happening here and nearby – and there's no doubt the county is solidly in the red zone for high community transmission and so, most likely, is Greenbelt. On January 4, Maryland Governor Larry Hogan declared a state of emergency giving hospitals in the state more flexibility in staffing and mobilizing the National Guard. Overall, he reported that the number of hospitalized patients had increased some 500 percent in the last seven weeks.

This presents a confusing picture, especially as not all Covid statistics are yet available online to allow visibility into the detailed local numbers. Hogan also said that he was working to accelerate the availability of rapid tests.

Reader Beware

It is vital, if perusing websites on local data, to look closely at the dates. At the time this article was written, the Prince George's County Covid-19 Dashboard mixes data from the last week in November with data current on January 2 – often on the same page. To access the dashboard,

Letters to the Editor

Another Retirement

Katrina Boverman's letter to the editor printed in the December 23 issue of the News Review congratulated three longtime postal workers on their impending retirements. Since that date, many Greenbelt residents came into the Greenbelt Post Office and offered heartfelt, well-deserved thanks to these three wonderful women.

However, another postal worker, Mail Carrier Al Murphy, after years delivering in Greenbelt, most recently in Greenbriar, also retired December 31. Luckily, I had a chance to thank him, but regretfully many on his route were unaware and missed the opportunity to offer their gratitude for his dedicated service and warm, out-going personality.

Let's thank all our unsung public servants who add to the quality of our lives in so many ways.

A small box containing a special necklace is hidden inside the mock ping pong table on Christmas morning -- the last gift to be opened by Carolyn from her husband Til Jolly. As she rips off the wrapping paper from the top, the family giggles. They can see what she can't, the small box taped inside the sturdy center support leg.

Letters Policy

Deadline for letters is 6 p.m. Monday. Submission does not guarantee publication. Letters should be no longer than 300 words (shorter letters are more likely to be published).

Letters may be edited for clarity, grammar, civility and space constraints. The News Review may add a comment from the editor if deemed necessary.

All letters must include the letter writer's name, physical address, and telephone number. Only the name will be published; the News Review will consider requests for the name to be withheld.

West Side Story

Directed by Academy Award winner Steven Spielberg, from a screenplay by Pulitzer Prize and Tony Award winner Tony Kushner, West Side Story tells the classic tale of fierce rivalries and young love in 1957 New York City. This reimagining of the beloved musical stars Ansel Elgort (Tony), Ariana DeBose (Anita), David Alvarez (Bernardo), Mike Faist (Riff), Brian d'Arcy James (Officer Krupke), Corey Stoll (Lieutenant Schrank), Josh Andrés Rivera (Chino), with Rita Moreno (Valentina) and introducing Rachel Zegler (Maria). Moreno, who played Anita in the 1961 version of the film, is one of only three artists to be honored with Academy, Emmy, GRAMMY, Tony and Peabody Awards. She serves as one of the new film's executive producers. The film aims to bring together the best of both Broadway and Hollywood.

Local Blood Drives In January, February

As a result of low blood-donor turnout in recent months, the Red Cross is heading into the holidays with its lowest blood supply in more than a decade.

To help, Greenbelt Recreation is holding blood drives on Fridays, January 14 and February 11. Multiple appointment times are available at each drive, but they fill up fast and walk-ins are not permitted.

Find the drives and sign up at redcrossblood.org/give.html/find-drive. Search zip code 20770 under Find a Drive.

Join a Composting Workout Saturday

On Saturday, January 8, join in a composting work session anytime between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. at the three-bin hot composting station behind Roosevelt Center, alongside the Aquatic Center. This is a chance to burn some post-holiday calories and commune safely with others outdoors. Help build a compost pile and learn about how hot composting works. Elementary through high school kids are invited to join in. There's lots of work to be done.

Volunteers can help chop buckets of food waste donated from the Co-op Supermarket, or mix food with browns and water to get the cook going. Then the buckets need to be washed. Snacks will be provided.

After the cook, when temperatures rise to 130 to 150 degrees, which destroys seeds and pathogens, experienced volunteers will feed the "yummy" mix to red wiggler worms living on the loading dock of the New Deal Café. To help with that (every Sunday), reply to the email below.

To keep food scraps from the landfill where they produce methane, one of the worst greenhouse gases, and learn more about composting, join other composters. Email NewDealWigglers@gmail.com to join in or for more information.

Learn the Talk Of Climate Change

Climate scientist Katharine Hayhoe says the most important thing to do about climate change is to talk about it.

The best way to do so locally is to join the Greenbelt Climate Action Network (GCAN) on Wednesday, January 12 from 7 to 9 p.m. for their next virtual meeting, via Zoom. Watch a short video of Dr. Hayhoe, then participate in a discussion.

During the latter part of the meeting, there will be brief updates on the state, county and local campaigns GCAN is following. The evening will round out with announcements of upcoming events.

Find more information, including the Zoom link, at cheers.org/gcan. On the website, preview the video or read a recent book review of Hayhoe's book, Saving Us: A Climate Scientist's Case for Hope and Healing in a Divided World.

GHI Seeks Member Input in Survey

The Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI) Transition Task Force is seeking members' help to inform GHI's preparation for a general manager leadership transition. Eldon Ralph became general manager in 2011 and has indicated that he has begun to think about retirement.

The task force has prepared a short survey that asks members what they would like to see changed at GHI, what should stay the same and what are key attributes of the next general manager. This feedback will help the board of directors understand members' wishes for the leadership transition and inform the board of what types of candidates to look for and ultimately select.

In addition to helping inform the transition and to encourage and thank members for participating, six survey respondents will be randomly chosen to receive $50 gift certificates to the Greenbelt Co-op Supermarket. To be entered into the raffle, name and address must be entered where indicated in the survey. To foster prompt participation, two of the six gift certificates will be awarded to members who have responded by Friday, January 21.

The link to the Google survey form is: survey.monkey.com/r/WDF7LKM. Paper copies of the survey are available from the GHI administration office during usual business hours. Completed surveys may be returned to the office. Members are requested to complete online surveys and return paper surveys to the office before February 9. Complete only one survey per member.

Jean Smith

Jean Fields Smith

Former Greenbelt resident Jean Fields Smith of Clarksville, Ark., died on December 22, 2021, at age 80. Jean was born in Pittsburgh, Pa., on April 5, 1941, to Charles V. and Doris H. Fields. A resident of Churchill Borough, Pa., she attended Wilkesburg High School and in 1963 earned a B.A. in history at Juniata College. She became familiar with computers working at the High-Altitude Observatory and met Gary E. Smith while taking graduate courses at the University of Colorado. Jean and Gary married in Boulder, Colo., on January 30, 1965, and spent the next few years in San Antonio, Texas, where Gary served in the Air Force.

Gary's career took the family to the Washington, D.C., area where they settled in Greenbelt. Being a homemaker and raising two daughters was Jean's love. She volunteered with the Girl Scouts, produced puppet shows with Gary and played clarinet. An early adopter of technology, Jean bought an Apple IIc to create mimeograph masters to print programs for the Greenbelt Concert Band.

Subsequently earning a B.S. in math education and widowed in 1985, Jean found employment teaching math to homebound students. Later she served as an administrative assistant, first at Foundry United Methodist Church and then at the University of Maryland.

In 1992, Jean moved to Clarksville, Ark., a college town that reminded her of the rolling hills of western Pennsylvania of her childhood. Having converted to Catholicism in 1991, Jean endeavored to learn Spanish to befriend Spanish-speaking members of her new church. For many years she was active with the choir and was a regular reader at weekday masses. Jean also built relationships with international students at the University of the Ozarks.

Jean loved flowering plants and enjoyed taking pictures of beautiful scenery. She listened to audio books and was proficient at handwork such as sewing, knitting and crocheting. In the last few years, she especially enjoyed annual vacations to national parks, cities and other attractions with her daughter Cathy.

Persevering and courageous to the end, her greatest desire was to be a friend to all. She is survived by younger brother John Fields in Bixby, Okla.; daughters Wendy Smith Burch (Jeff) and Cathy Smith in Maryland; and grandchildren Benjamin, Stephanie and Jasper.

A funeral mass will be held at Subiaco Abbey in Arkansas on Thursday, January 6 at 1 p.m. Streaming service instructions for the service will be posted in the online obituary at hardwickefuneral.com. Her ashes will be interred at Arlington National Cemetery with her husband, Gary. In lieu of flowers, donations can be made to Focus on the Family (focusonthefamily.com) or Holy Redeemer Catholic Church (hrclarksville.org).

Sacred Rest: A Unitarian Universalist Sabbath

Rev. Ann Kadlecek with Worship Associate Diana McFadden

The spiritual practice of Sabbath was so central to ancient Israelite religion that it was one of the Ten Commandments from God. While it is still central for many of the Israelites' religious descendants, it can be hard for others to imagine incorporating Sabbath into our demanding, high-tech lives. But what if we tried? What might Sabbath have to offer us, today?

Appointments are not required. The supply of vaccines is limited and available on a first-come, first-served basis. Vaccines for children are going quickly at the PGCMLS clinics and may not be available toward the end of the scheduled clinic time. Dates are: Monday, January 10, noon to 5 p.m. for ages 5 and up, and Tuesday, January 18, from 5 to 7 p.m., ages 12 and up. At the second clinic, flu shots are also offered.

U.S. Passports

The Greenbelt Library, along with five other PGCMLS branches (Accokeek, Largo-Kettering, Laurel, New Carrollton and Oxon Hill), has resumed service as a U.S. Passport Acceptance Facility. Applications are accepted by appointment, so schedule a 30-minute appointment by calling 240-455-5451 or visiting pgmls.info/passport-services. Families with multiple applicants must schedule separate appointments for each person.

Donate Sneakers For People in Need

The Board of Congregational Life at Greenbelt Community Church, United Church of Christ (GCC) is collecting athletic shoes by partnering with GotSneakers. This sneaker recycling program helps to keep sneakers out of landfills, where they have harmful effects on the environment. The sneakers are sent to countries where the poor often go barefoot out of necessity. For more information about GotSneakers, go to their website at GotSneakers.com.

A donation box is located outside the Fellowship Center (the small building behind the church) for people to drop off sneakers at any time. GotSneakers will pay GCC a varying amount for name-brand and off-brand laced-up sneakers with no tears inside or outside. The company even pays for cleaning and shipping – all GCC does is collect sneakers.

Budget Optimizes Resources, Keeps City Focused on Needs

by Matthew Arbach

The Greenbelt City Council and staff are looking to create a lean budget, without sacrificing too many of the services and amenities that residents have come to depend on and enjoy. Acting City Manager Timothy George and Treasurer Bertha Gaymon are asking all departments to focus on needs and not wants, as Covid-19 continues to be a major factor in future budgetary projections and plans. Council met with staff on December 22 to begin the discussion on the upcoming budget, to get ready for beginning deliberations in March and to identify the areas they want to prioritize in the coming year.

The current total budget is $37 million, of which 77.8 percent is the general fund, 3.9 percent is the enterprise fund, 12.3 percent is for capital projects and 6.0 percent for the special fund. Of the general fund, public safety is the largest percentage at 33.28 percent, with recreation the next largest at 20.36 percent.

Mayor Emmett Jordan remarked on the increase of the budget over the past five years, due to the city's growing population, increased services and the rising cost of living. An approach emphasizing frugality and realistic economic thinking was the consensus of both council and staff, in light of these conditions, with budget numbers not changing substantially from where they are now, if possible.

While not at pre-pandemic levels, Gaymon has seen an uptick in revenues in all city departments due to the slow recovery from Covid, foremost being Greenbelt Recreation. She did not see any significant negative trends.

Gaymon said that abatements (reductions in property taxes per request from the state by a property owner) stand at $98,000 by the last report, which "was a little larger than was seen this time last year," but still low, now five months into the current fiscal year. She awaits the next state report in April.

Councilmember Judith Davis stressed that if a lean budget is the goal, it will mean ultimately cutting services, with a corresponding cut of personnel. She hoped that city residents, who are eager for these important and popular programs and amenities to continue, understand this hard financial reality. Davis said that making these kinds of cutbacks was the council's hardest job. Jordan was reticent to start talking about personnel cuts at this stage, but added that an extensive review of the situation is in order.

A compensation study was commissioned roughly two years ago which would ascertain current area levels of salaries and benefits for employees. George said that its results would likely be available for the next budget. Council expressed frustration at the delay and were focused on its importance in order to maintain and recruit able and experienced staff.

Federal American Rescue Plan Act (ARPA) funds were a major topic of the meeting. The consensus was that they will be treated as a separate reserve and not be part of normal budget planning. As they are only to be for pandemic-related concerns, the view was that they could be used to augment any shortfalls occurring under those prescribed uses.

Stormwater management was considered a possible use for ARPA funds, as it relates to increased precipitation due to climate change. Resident Molly Lester remarked on the 85-year-old system built by the federal government that will require at-attention in the near future.

Ballfield improvements were advocated for, as they have not been upgraded in some time.

The continuing proposal of a circulator shuttle was broached. While considered a worthy amenity that would enhance the city, most at the meeting deemed it not a good time to budget for this, as it would be an expensive effort in maintenance and manpower. Gaymon asked the council's feelings on possibly raising fees for services, as it would be a good source of revenue. Jordan countered that he was more concerned about raising taxes, with many residents already feeling strained financially. Davis added that, historically, fees were not capable of completely covering operational costs.

Overall, council and staff expressed their desire to "hold the line" on the budget in this still uncertain but cautiously optimistic time for the city.

Black History Month

February saw a number of celebrations and educational programs for Black History Month. The city-sponsored events included an account by the Greenbelt Museum telling of the first Black residents moving into the Greenbelt Homes, Inc. housing cooperative. In addition, there were performances by the Belly Dancers of Color Collective and the Eleanor Roosevelt High School Gospel Choir. Additional articles ran to celebrate the month, including reports on a performance by the Female RE-Enactors of Distinction (FREED). This program told the stories of historical women, acted in costume by the group, which spotlighted the contributions of Black women to American society. Another facet of the celebration was the South African play Solomon and Marion, performed by Greenbelt Arts Center. It portrayed the unlikely friendship between Marion Banning, a recently widowed South African white woman, and a young Black man, 19-year-old Solomon Xaba from rural Xhosa.

Greenbelt West Kids Enjoy Fun Activities in Summer

Being a firefighter involves a whole lot of running, campers at Springhill Lake Recreation Center’s Summer Fun program learned on July 28. Greenbelt firefighters and police came to camp with demonstrations and challenges. With the firefighters, campers tried running with the hoses and putting out a demonstration fire – very exciting. With the police they tried exercises, sat in the front seat of a squad car and tried on the heavy equipment.

This was the first year for the free camp, co-sponsored by Greenbelt Recreation and Boys and Girls Club of America. The 40 slots filled up quickly. The campers, ages 6 to 12, attended half-days for eight weeks, starting on June 28. Lunch was provided by Prince George’s County Public Schools.

A primary effort in the city was food assistance, especially in areas hard hit by pandemic unemployment. Springhill Lake Elementary was the main Greenbelt site for such distributions as part of the camp’s coordinated efforts.

Three Sisters Garden Thrives On Poetry in the Pandemic

The Three Sisters Demonstration Gardens are located in separate parts of Greenbelt. The Center Garden is located behind the Community Center, the West Garden is located behind the Springhill Lake Recreation Center and the East Garden is in Schrom Hills Park. All three were conceived, developed and implemented by the Chesapeake Education, Arts and Research Society (CHEARS), a Greenbelt-based nonprofit organization committed to learning about the environment and sustainable landscape practices and in promoting ecological stewardship in the Chesapeake Bay watershed.

GHI Has a California Sibling? Meet Atchison Village Co-op

by Amy Hansen

In 1941, as we know in this historic New Deal city, the federal government built defense worker housing. The tale is familiar: a new community of duplexes and fourplexes arranged along curved streets with spacious lawns and super block common areas. Then in 1956, the government wanted out of the housing business. The residents mobilized quickly; they wanted to keep their houses out of the hands of the local developers. They held bake sales and raffles and in only 30 days succeeded in raising $50,000 for the down payment. So far, so familiar.

But wait, this isn’t the history of Greenbelt Homes, Inc. The co-op in question is the Atchison Village Mutual Homes Corporation.

Atchison Village, in Richmond, Calif., remains a housing co-op today, albeit one inside a national park, the Rosie the Riveter/World War II Home Front National Historical Park, to be exact.

The village is highlighted in the Rosie the Riveter Visitor Center, which includes a few pictures. The Atchison Village website (atchisonvillage.org) has links to floor plans and a brief history of the co-operative. An oral history is also available through the village’s collaboration with nearby Mills College.

Accounts of the original settlers sound very similar to the history of GHI in Greenbelt. Read some of their stories at academia.edu/23747886/A_Home_of_Our_Own_The_Stories_of_Atchison_Villages_Longtime_Residents.

making the garden architecturally more interesting by creating entrances into the garden using vines shaped as archways. The garden is filled with small surprises: wicker planters with flowers, hand-painted birdhouses and birds, handmade twig wreaths, a small wicker rocking chair and child-sized tools.

During the pandemic, Levner and others led monthly poetry readings in the gardens. Levner conceived of the event saying, "Nature and beauty come together with poetry." The garden was in full bloom at the time of the readings, with bunches of grapes dangling from grapevines draped over the arched entryways.

Juneteenth Offers Rededication, Explanation and Contemplation

Juneteenth celebrations got off to a great start in Greenbelt West with the rededication of the Three Sister's West Garden behind the Springhill Lake Recreation Center in Franklin Park. Carolyn Lambright Davis runs the Earth Squad for the garden, which involves young gardeners from the community. Lois Rosado, chair of the city's Black History Committee, rededicated the garden by pouring a few drops of water onto the grass. She prayed that, "In the future, all people of the United States can celebrate freedom, as we do today, Juneteenth."

Numerous additional Juneteenth programs were sponsored by the city, including a heritage walk at Greenbelt Lake, Regina's Black Artifacts Pop-up Museum inside the Springhill Lake Recreation Center and a food demonstration: How Much Sugar Do You Consume Daily run by Shaymar Higgs of THE SPACE and sponsored by Beltway Plaza.

The newspaper issue of May 25 contains several articles on Juneteenth, including an explanation of the celebration's origins and a reminiscent walk through the historic Turner Cemetery on Greenbelt's Ivy Lane, whose gravesites include the remains of those who died in slavery before the city began.

Evictions Due to Pandemic, Related Loss of Employment

Through the year, many individuals, especially those in service industries, lost their jobs due to Covid-19 closings. Rental communities, in particular, were faced with many families who could not afford their rent. Eviction moratoriums prevented the expulsion of those in this situation and as time went on, assistance programs came online to help. The Franklin Park community was significantly impacted and there was concern that when the moratorium was lifted, many people would summarily be on the street.

Franklin Park management reached out to their community to assist them in getting rental assistance. There were some evictions once the moratorium was lifted (particularly for reasons other than rent default) but Franklin Park remained faithful to those willing to work with them to obtain assistance – going door to door to reach those in need and providing bilingual support for filling in applications.

Assistance to renters and homeowners also came via county and city offices, with Greenbelt CARES actively reaching out to renters and condo owners and assisting with applications. Support to those affected in the Greenbelt Homes, Inc. housing cooperative came from donations from members that helped with monthly fees. In-kind support was also offered to those in need by the St. Hugh's Pantry – including numerous Co-op Supermarket gift cards purchased by residents and by donations for the face masks made available via the Farmers Market by the Greenbelt Mask Makers and others.

Fireflies Sparkle in Summer Evenings in New Sanctuary

May of 2021 saw the opening of the Firefly Sanctuary – a stretch of the Stream Park that runs between Hillside and Crescent Roads behind Northway, where it is dark enough for fireflies to live happily and avoid the siren song of street lights. The Sanctuary became a favorite summer evening stroll for families with kids who, as through time immemorial, raced around to try to catch the magical little sparks of light in their hands. With instructions going out to city staff to avoid mowing the area, and no insecticides or herbicides, the fireflies are promised a protected environment into the future.

Fox and Squirrel in the Snow, An Ecological Tale of Woe

by Jim Gray

On the morning of January 3, after an inch or two of snow had fallen, I happened to see a squirrel digging in the snow for food. A short while later, I looked out the window again and saw a fox stalking the squirrel. When the squirrel saw the fox, he started to run for safety, but the snow slowed him down. The long-legged fox had no trouble with the snow and was upon the squirrel in an instant. The fox quickly put an end to the squirrel and began to eat him. After satisfying his hunger pangs, the fox carried the carcass off for safekeeping. Later that morning, the fox came back again to see if there were any other foolish squirrels available. How greedy can one fox be?

Observation: The squirrel would have been camouflaged really well against the ground covered with leaves, but he stuck out like a sore thumb in the snow.

the University of Maryland and Prince George's Community College. It allowed him to become familiar with all aspects of building. He was ranked as #66 in the nation as a master code inspector.

City Challenges

When asked what challenges lay ahead for the city moving forward, Sterling cited: the need to hire and retain skilled personnel and to make sure they are properly compensated (which the city is addressing with a compensation study), and to invest sufficiently in the city's infrastructure. With additions to the city like Greenbelt Station and the needs of the city's road system, this latter challenge has become more pronounced. Sterling has hopes that the upcoming funds from the American Rescue Plan Act will aid in this effort.

Council Praise

Sterling enjoys high praise from city council. Mayor Emmett Jordan remarked on his "substantial contributions" to the city, how "his wide-ranging skill set and long experience benefited Greenbelters in many ways," and "his low-key practical approach to managing difficult situations." Councilmember Judith Davis remarked on his "knowledgeable advice and leadership skills," extolling his "loyalty to the city and its residents and his quiet, calm demeanor when dealing with others." She said that "it will take several people to fill his shoes." Councilmember Ric Gordon declared him "one of the many staples here in Greenbelt city government," and while he "will be missed greatly," he "deserves this well-earned retirement."

Recreation Department Director Greg Varda said that in his 23 years working with Sterling, "it became quite evident that Jim truly enjoyed serving the Greenbelt community. Through his knowledge and support, the Recreation Department has been able to enrich the community through the many programs, services, facilities and parks that are provided. Jim has always been a team player who could be called upon to handle tough situations without hesitation. His dedication superseded 'doing a good job.'" He thanked him for "making Greenbelt a better place to live, work and play now and well into the future." Varda expressed to Sterling: "You will be missed."

What's Ahead

A Bowie resident, Sterling plans to stay in the area and looks forward to having time for doing some home renovations, to travel a bit and spend more time with his grandchildren. Said Sterling, in retrospect, "I was lucky to be at the right time at the right place."

City Notes

Refuse/Recycling collected 26.94 tons of refuse and 13.76 tons of recyclables. No yard waste or metals will be collected Friday, January 7, due to accumulated snow.

Horticulture/Parks installed a new wooden bench along the path behind the Schrom Hills Park softball field. Park rangers continue coverage of all city parks, seven days a week, from morning to dark. With Covid-19 surging, Recreation staff rescheduled for minimum person-to-person contact, recreation center services are minimized and rentals of the Schrom Hills Park community room have been rescheduled.

Delivery of frozen meals to homebound seniors continues uninterrupted.

At the Community Center, Public Works cleaned office chairs, shampooed carpets and waxed office floors.

Eight cats, six kittens and three dogs spent the holidays in the Animal Shelter and 53 Dog Park permits have been issued.

Prince George's County Fire/EMS conducted Water Training at the Aquatic & Fitness Center.

No evictions information was included this week.

Mary Ann Canter led the group that proposed the firefly sanctuary to Greenbelt as a way to make saving the fireflies a permanent endeavor. She said that the main cause of the dwindling number was habitat loss, and the sanctuary has been created to provide a suitably protected space.

Brood X Cicadas Emerge

A welcome diversion from concerns about Covid-19 and threats to American democracy was the mass emergence in mid-May of Brood X periodical cicadas, last seen here in numbers in 2004. A bonanza for hungry birds and other critters, the cicadas were a delight to kids and adults who'd not experienced this natural phenomenon before, as well as to many who had. Their abundance inspired a few Greenbelters to try eating them and many residents to photograph them. The cicadas were mostly gone by late June, leaving behind their carcasses and exoskeletons plus patches of brown leaves in the tree canopy, caused by female cicadas slitting the twigs to deposit their eggs. The next mass emergence of these periodical cicadas should occur in 2038.

go to princegeorgescountymd.gov/3397/Coronavirus, then find the link to COVID-19 Dashboard under COVID-19 Case Data.

Data for this article were drawn from the dashboard's "current status" page on January 5 at noon and can be found by clicking on the bottom right of that page to go to the "Daily Updates" link. This brings up a PowerPoint briefing dated January 3 and hospitalization numbers are current as of January 2, with other data lagging a few days behind.

Key Metrics

The county uses several key CDC-based metrics to judge the severity of the situation. Of these, the average daily case rate and the percentage of positive tests are now both at the fourth and most critical level, with an average recent daily case rate of ~294 (a daily average of cases over seven days, per 100,000 population) and positive tests at about 26.5 percent. But in keeping with the lowered severity resulting from vaccination and the possibly less severe effects of the Omicron variant, hospitalization utilization parameters were only at the medium level (the second step of four) with approximately 40 to 50 percent capacity still available.

The state of emergency seems out of synch with that statistic and possibly means that Prince George's County is doing better than some areas. Data are also available for Montgomery County through January 4. Numbers indicate that though case rates are extremely high, hospital/ICU utilization is in the 'Low' category - lower even than Prince George's.

Hospitalizations Up

At the beginning of December, under 100 people were hospitalized with Covid-19 in the county. But by the last week of the month, there were three days with around 300 hospitalized. December 31 reached 314 and January 2 was 302. The rate of new cases, running about 150 per day at the end of November, and already influenced by Delta infections, rose to a total of 2,000 to 2,500 individuals per day in the county for the last few days of December as Omicron surged.

This acceleration was much sharper than the concomitant rise in hospitalizations, meaning, fortunately, that though more county residents are infected, a much smaller proportion so far seems to have become seriously ill. Hospitalizations and deaths generally trail cases and may continue to increase for a while even if infections were to tail off - though there's no evidence of a downtick yet and New Year's gatherings may yet stoke the boiler.

Beds Steady

There continues to be rightful concern about hospital capacity but, so far, the county is holding steady. Counts of available county beds are available through January 2 and the supply seems to have plateaued even as Covid-19 hospitalizations rose - presumably from managing the flow of other procedures. There are 656 regular medical/surgical beds and an additional 160 beds that can be pulled into use. As of January 2, Covid-19 and other in-patients occupied 479 beds of the total 962 - with Covid patients representing just over half that number. None of the emergency capacity was in use. Similarly, of the county's 123 ICU beds, 95 were in use (half of those for Covid patients) with another 43 emergency ICU beds available, of which 12 were in use. At the moment, at least, for those who get sick, there's a bed to lay their head.

Successful In-person Craft Fair, Plans Underway for Next Year

by Anne Gardner

On Saturday, December 4 and Sunday, December 5, the Community Center and Youth Center were once again filled with color and life for Greenbelt Recreation's 50th annual Juried Art and Craft Fair. It was almost like the before times, but not quite. Last year, the craft fair moved entirely online. This year, more than 70 vendors participated in person, online or both, offering a wide range of handmade art and crafts, with live music both days. Everyone was masked and the booths were spaced at least six feet apart, with HEPA air filtration units running in the smaller spaces. There was no food or drink for sale.

The vendors were delighted to be back in person and reported very good sales. Comments from the vendor survey included: "I had a fantastic time!" "It was so nice to meet everyone in the community and engage with them in person about my crafts." "It was just lovely to be back. It was wonderful to be in person." "It was a fantastic event this year." "It's always a joy to participate." "My favorite event of the year!" "It was an absolutely wonderful event." "Marvelous!"

Greenbelt residents and others from further afield were also enthusiastic about the return of the in-person event. Susanne Bittle traveled from Bel Air for the show and said, "I was very pleased and delighted with the quality of arts and crafts at this year's in-person show. The layout for the vendors was well spaced and gave the crowd plenty of room to move around and feel safe during this time of year. It was well worth coming to the show."

To fit the usual number of booths with the wider spacing, this year the craft fair was spread throughout the gym and the ground floor east area of the Community Center as well as the Youth Center gym – where the craft fair was originally held, back in the 1970s. Both vendors and customers reported a preference for the new spacing. Beside the need for Covid-19 precautions, it made people feel less crowded and rushed, so they could spend more time browsing at each booth and chatting with the artists.

There were live musical performances both days in both gyms, with Hot Club of DC (gypsy jazz) and Celtic Harp in the Community Center and Transatlantic Crossing (fiddle tunes) and Seth Kibel's Klezmet (klezmer) in the Youth Center. Vendors and customers alike appreciated the festive atmosphere that the music brought to the venues.

Sales were lower for the online portion of the craft fair, perhaps because customers were eager to attend the in-person event where they could actually touch the crafts and talk with the artists. However, some customers appreciated the opportunity to watch the videos and browse the artists' websites before attending the in-person fair to shop.

Planning is already underway for next year's fair, which will be held in-person only on December 3 and 4. Following vendor and customer feedback, the booths will be spaced at least three feet apart – and more if necessary, depending on public health conditions at that time. Applications will open in January and will be posted at greenbeltmd.gov/arts. For more information, contact agardner@greenbeltmd.gov.

Artists and the admiring public flock to the Greenbelt Art and Craft Fair which was spread out between the Community Center and the Youth Center.

Winter Wonderland Offered Festive Evening, Food, Fun

by Christian Horchler

Boy Scouts of America Venture Crew 746, a co-ed program for young adults ages 14 to 20, held a fundraiser, a Winter Wonderland, on Saturday, December 18 from 5 to 9 p.m. at Mowatt Memorial United Methodist Church. The Crew thanks the church for hosting the event and everyone who supported it – it was a massive success.

A Winter Wonderland included a beautiful lit walk through the woods, hot cocoa around campfires, live music playing in the woods, snowflake art, a live nativity scene, joke-tellers and an informational display detailing what the Venture Crew is all about. Santa Claus was there, showing up on the Greenbelt Fire Department's vintage fire truck. The Christmas caroling choir did an amazing job, despite the cold.

The Well-Wishers for the Animals of Greenbelt Shelter set up a beautiful winter-themed canopy and brought one of their friendly dogs. Another canopy displayed how people light up the season in a variety of different cultural and religious ways. The Greenbelt Community Emergency Response Team volunteered at the event to ensure the safety of the guests. There were no first aid incidents to report.

Sponsors included Home Depot, Wegmans and members of the Greenbelt City Council who were key in the creation of this event. Without them, the event would not have been possible.

Families, neighbors and Venture Crew members were all happily involved in coordinating this great event.

Most importantly, thanks to everyone – nearly 200 people – who attended the event. What a great crowd. It was truly an honor planning and hosting the event.

Hopefully, a Winter Wonderland will happen again next year, with even more fun and festive spirit. Happy holidays to all.

Carolyn Bourne and Gabriel Horchler play the roles of Mary and Joseph, with two cute little sheep in the live nativity.

A painted door welcomes visitors to Santa's Workshop.
